"BITS" Says:

By Robt. Hendricks

The "G" in box scores of baseball must stand for the same thing that the "G" on masonic emblems stand for— you can't find out what either means unless you'r one of the boys.

Now, you can "bum" a cigarette with ease—most of the boys have gone back to school.

LEWIS HUNLEY IS FREE MAN

Middlesboro, Ky,—Lewis Hunley, 22, of the Junction, near here, charged with the murder of his farther, Mose, on the day after Christmas, is a free man.

At the hearing of the charges against him before County Judge VanBeber in the Middlesboro court house, Monday afternoon, Judge VanBeber dismissed the charges, on motion of County Attorney Walter B. Smith,

The dismissal of the charges was on the grounds of justifiable homicide.

It was brought out in the evidence that Mose Hunley the father of the boy, had been beating his mother, when Lewis stepped into the room. Lewis attempted to placate his father, who was beating Mrs Hunley with a stove poker.

Mose, it is said, ordered his son out, and threatened him with a gun. Lewis then fired at his father with a double-barrelled shot gun.

It was reported that officers found the body of the father, lying on the floor, with a poker in one hand and a pistol in the other.

Mrs. Haynes was a devouted Christian,and despite her advanced age she never lost interest in affairs pretaining to the Church. Her interest in other affairs was as great as her church interest. She was never in arrears witn her taxes and she never missed an election after women's suffrage was voted.

Bridge Party

One of the very enjoyable social events of the Holidays was a bridge party, given by Mrs. Jeff Newman at her home on Joshlyn Avenue, last Saturday afternoon.

After five progressions were played Mrs. Bill Richards held high score and was awarded a deck of cards. Mrs. Claude Legg held low score and was presented a lovely hand painted chiffon handkerchief.

A delicious plate luncheon was served consisting of chicken salad, cranberry sauce, crackers, oat meal cookies, and coffee. Mrs. Lillie A. Pennington graciously assisted Mrs. Newman in serving the following guests:

Mesdames Kate Stover, W. C. Hall, Walter Livesay, Richard Orr, T. H. Olinger, George David, Elmo David, "Bits" Hendricks, Bill Richards, Montague Anderson, Claude Legg, E. E. Fry, "Chub" Hall, Edna Reasor, Eugene Barton and Clarence Collins.

J. C. Noel and wife were dinner guests Thursday of Mrs. L. A. Pennington, Mrs. Noel's sister, and her nephew Harold Wilson.

French Price

Another of Lee County's octogenarians and early pioneer passed away last Friday evening at about 11:15 o'clock when French Price 81, expired of an attack of pneumonia and lung congestion.

Mr. Price, "sister" as he was better known by all—young and old alike, was born and raised in Lee County. He became a member of the M. E Church, South, a number of years ago and was very active in the church's welfare, being a member of the Board of Trustees of the church property.

He is survived by two brothers, John, of Johnson City, Tenn, and George of near Pulaski.

Funeral rites were conducted from the local M. E. Church, South, with the Rev. C. F. Watkins in charge, assisted by the Revs. D. W. White and W. B. Moore, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Burial in the Cecil Cemetry at this place.

LEE TEACHERS TO CONVENE

The second meeting of the study course on curriculum revision will be held at Pennington High School auditorium Monday night January 9th. On Tuesday night January 10th, the meeting will be held at Jonesville High School auditorium and Wednesday night January 11th., the meeting will be held at Rose Hill.

Topic number three will be discussed by Professor K. S. Tyler, Principal of Calvin High School. The fourth topic will be discussed by Professor A. D. Yeary, Principal of Ewing High School.

At the last series of meetings only about one hundren and fifty teachers attended. For this series we hope to have not less than one hundred seventy-five teachers present. We would like to have every teacher in attendance at one of these three meetings.

GARDEN NOTE FOR JANUARY

Winter Plowing—Is your garden still unplowed! The longer you delay this important operation, the less it will profit you. Plow now and give your soil the advantage of fall plowing; put it off until later and you lose all these advantages. Why delay when you pay? Plow now!

Manuring — Give your soil a chance to grow good vegetables. Just before plowing, apply a liberal amount of manure to your garden. It will help to put your land in good shape for spring working. An application of 20 tons per acre is none too much.

Burn Rubbish — After plowing take a few minutes to clean up all refuse along the edges and in the corners of your garden. Such trash provides a cozy winter home for garden pests. Burn this rubbish and you save yourself much future trouble.

Watch Vegetable Storage — Watch the vegetables in storage. Be sure that those in pit storage have sufficient protection. Make a note of your mistake in cellar storage so that you may correct them in the future.—Extension Division News, V. P. I

Howard "Ras" Anderson car salesman for Stone Gap Motor Co., Big Stone Gap has recovered from an attack of flu during the holidays due to the fact, so states Jack Hawks, his illness was caused by reading too much in the Grit.

The States in which lynchings occured and the number in each State are as follows: Arkansas, 1; Florida, 1; Kansas, 1; Ohio, 1; Kentucky, 1; Louisiana, 1; Texas, 1; and Virginia, 1.

Federal Aid Cut Threatens Tax

Washington, D. C.—"American land owners face a serious hazard in the stampede of Congress to 'economy at any price' "declared C. H. Morefield, President of the American Association of State Highway Officials, in a statement issued to'ay. The proposal to make drastic cuts in Federal Aid to State Highways was specified by Mr. Moorefield as a potential danger to the owners of property.

"Decreases in Federal Aid, coupled with the practice of gas tax diversion within individual states, will inevitably throw an increased burden on the already over-burdened property owners," Mr. Moorefield stated. "As Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde recently pointed out, decreased road income means defaulted bonds which, in turn, will force the states to increase property taxes in order to preserve their credit.

"To safeguard present highway investments and to continue the much needed extension of highways, the congress must continue the appropriation for each of the fiscal years of 1934 and 1935."

200 Lives

Violence accompanying the New Year's holiday celebration took close to 200 lives in tee United States, a United Press compilation of fatalities showed Tuesday.

Half of the violent deaths over the week end were attributed to the automobile. Gunplay, breaking out in scattered instances, took more than a score of lives.

Some were victims of bandits. Others died in brawls and shootings for revenge.

The contrast of the happy New Year's celebrations and their own plight was too bitter for a good number of citizens. They took their lives by their own hand.

Poison liquor took 10 victims. Fires killed five. Two died in Pennsylvania of freezing. An explosion took a victim in Texas. Thirteen victims in that state resulted from homicide or suicide.

Texas had the heaviest violent death toll with 24, Michigan was second with 21. Chicago had the most motor fatalities with 10, followed by Texas with 8, Michigan 7, New York City, 7, and California 7.

Then there's the Scotchman who buried his face in his hands just before he died, to save burial expenses.

Farm News

W. R. Fletcher, Pennington Gap, has worked out a splendid substitute for a gate. It is a plan that relieves the need of a gate for driveway. He made a kind of cattle guard pit for the driveway and placed over the pit discarded boiler flue pipe which are about 3 in. in diameter. These were placed about eight in. from centers which allows a space of some six in. between. The pit is similar to that of a railway pit. No stock ever attempts to cross this pit. The piping furnishes a solid and comfortable drive surface for the car. No opening nor shutting burdens. Mr. Fletcher thinks that farmers could arrange the same kind of pit and cover the top with locust poles 3 1-2 in. diameter and serve the same purpose as the flue pipe. The everlasting opening aud shutting of gates for a much used driveway to ones house is burdensome. A good farmer was ruined when Mr. Fletcher went into merchandising.

John Trent, Flatwoods, sold two crops turkeys this year, one of his own growing and one grown at lower farm on shares. Mr. Trent has been in the turkey business long enough till "luck" does not go against him. He has charge of "luck" and the turkeys too. He has breeding stock of high quality.

Robert Land, Sugar Run, succeded in growing 250 turkeys this year by the brooder method. Much praise is given this method in recent years from other sections of the country. When the price of turkeys was attractive a few years back, this method sprang to the front as the only one worth while. The low price at present is not much attractive with any method.

J. O. Woodard, Jonesville, is proud of one gobler on his farm. It is the bird that took second prize at the International Stock Show, Chicago, December 1931. Mr. Woodard has been a breeder of turkeys for a number of years and knows the value of keeping his stock as good as the best. Hence he purchased the above gobler after the show last year for his flock.

Mrs. Jack Flanary, Wallens Creek, placed on the market 225 of her own growing this year. Some weeks before marketing, her birds had slowed down in their appetite. The agent suspecting that worms destroys the appetite of turkeys, suggested worm treatment with a big tablet for each turkey. In a few days they were trying to devour their feeder, when she approached. Worming turkeys three to four times a season is urged all the time by the agent.

In 1931 ten car loads turkeys were shipped from the county. In 1932 some fifteen cars were made in the county. The price taking a lower trend will discourage many turkey growers. However, one should keep in action. Low prices are favorable for one thing only: that is to force thousands of growers out, which allows the price to go up, thereafter. Many growers made the mistake this last year of holding too many birds back for the last market. One should remember that seldom both markets are good. One almost always breaks, and this is a guide. The government report on turkeys this last year was 13 per cent increase. More and more, farmers are realizing that government reports on crops and livestock is not guess work.

Resolutions of

The Jonssville Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Jonesville, Virginia.

Whereas, the Reverend Dr. I. S. Anderson, of the Presbyterian Church, has passed to his final reward, we feel that the forces of Christianity in this community, and all people among whom he lived have been made to feel the influence of his devotion and sincerety in both his private and public life.

We believe that the Cause of Christianity has lost one of its most valiant and valuable public advocates, at a time when the services of such a sincere laborer is most needed.

Furthermore, the circle of friends of the Jonesville Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which Dr. Anderson conducted a regular monthly preaching service, will cherish the memory of so humble, devoted and sincere servant of God, for by his life and inspiration many have been led into the path of righteousness.

Therefore, Be it Resolved:

First: That we extend to Mrs. Anderson, the wife of this faithful servant, our heartfelt sympathy.

Second: That we are determined because of his noble example, to endeavor to hasten the realization of the Kingdom of God among men, looking to his Master for victory in the name of Jesus Christ the Lord.

Third: That a copy of these resolutions be presented to Mrs. I. S. Anderson, and that a copy be sent to the local newspaper for publication.

Signed: The Jonesville Methodist Episcopal Church South, Representative Committee,

I. E. Cregger, Pastor

W. L. Davidson, Chairman Board of Stewards.

IS IT right to assume that your customers know that you welcome telephone orders?

It is not enough that nearly everyone has a telephone nowadays.

It is not enough that you have the best of telephone equipment in your store or office.

Your customers need to be reminded that the telephone wires are open pathways to your door. Invite them to use this easy method which is the quickest and often the best way for them to reach you.

Keep your telephone number before them in your advertising. On your letterheads. On your bills. On your envelopes.

That is one road to more and better business for you.

A bolt is a thing like a stick of hard metal such as iron with a square bunch on one end and a lot of scratching around the other end. A nut is similar to the bolt only just the opposite, being a hole in a chunk of iron sawed off short, with wrinkles around the inside of the hole.

Facts On Motor Oil Consumption

The average car running forty miles an hour consumes oil twice as fast as the same car at thirty miles an hour. When you step on the gas and run at fifty miles an hour, you use four times as much oil as at thirty miles an hour. At sixty miles an hour, oil is consumed nine times as fast.

These facts, according to C. D. Diggs, District Manager, of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, are known to comparatively few motorists.

"To be on the safe side, "Mr. Diggs, says, "it is seldom wise to run more than a thousand miles between oil changes. Not only has oxidation lowered the lubricating and protective qualities of the average oil by that time, but in spite of air filters, oil filters, and other devices, enough fine road dust has come in through the breather tubes and the carburetor to cause dangerous frictiou and wear and higher consumption of oil. The faster one drives the more often the oil should be changed".

The average car, according to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, is driven about 7, 500 miles a year. "When you are tempted to skimp on oil", says Mr. Driggs," think over the following facts, and remember that oil costs a lot less than repairs".

"If your crankcase holds five quarts of oil, and one quart of oil is consumed every two hundred miles. your total oil bill for a year would be less than $18 00, with motor oil at 25c a quart, providing it is changed every thousand miles, you save only about $3.00 a year, the lowest premium you could possibly pay on insurance against big repair bills".

Side Quit Hurting, Got Stronger, Well; CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntsville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am very cheerful when I am well and don't easily get nervous. I knew I ought to take something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well."

Cardui is sold at drug stores here.

On The Way Out?

The school superintendents of the nation, in annual convention have disapproved contests and declared for their eventual abolition, regardless of sponsorship, unless their social and educational benefits could be proved. One protest among many is that of a committee which for seven years has held tournaments between a score of states to determine a so-called national high school debating championship. The committee's action will find little support in this State, for the Virginia High School League controlled by school officials has consistently opposed the extension of c ntests over long intervals and wide areas.

Similarly Virginia principals have taken the lead, through their State organization and the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges, in invesigating the proper place of interscholastic games in the educational program. Apparently they endorse the superintendent's position and intend to promote in their cooperative league only contests which contribute definitely to educational results. The program and workings of the league as presented in its bulletins should be gauged by this standard. Copies will be furnished free to readers of The News by the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

In Memory

Could we today unroll the parchment or film of the life of Mrs. Eliza Bartley Haynes the scroll would lengthen far beyond the expectation of all who would be observing.

We would think and see the dim vistas of the past, growing into moderation of later days and on and on until we could see the touch of modern life. A picture which would equal to a combination of romance, poetry, drama and tragedy in a single setting.

More than 102 years, more than ten decades, yea, more than a century would be unravelled and seem only a passing version.

On August 13, 1830, in what is now the town of Rose Hill "grandma" Haynes first saw the natural light, and reveled in the pleasures of childhood, after a "little while" her parents moved a few miles south and settled in the native forest, made a home, help build a church and school building combined, "a meeting house," which was named Speaks Chapel for her mother's family, the Speaks who like her father James Bartley had come as sturdy, industrious, conscientions progressive citizens.

In this atmosphere she grew to womanhood a strong christian character knowing naught but to support the church and help to build an environment for proper community development.

She was married to Johnathan Haynes March 19, 1850.

Their home was an open portal to the ministers and travelers who came their way.

Through the days of the civil strife she kept her family in the home and was practically unmolested.

She was the mother of fourteen children six of whom survive, John of California, J.A. of Sabetha, Kansas, Mrs. Mary Richardson, of Guide Rock, Neb., Mrs. Martha Noe, of Westmore, Kansas, Mrs Rhoda Shipley and Mrs Amand Minton, of Rose Hill, one sister Mrs. Fannie Bales, Powhatan, Kansas is all that is left of a family of ten.

Two years ago about 150 of her relatives celebrated her 100 birthday in Powhatan, Kansas.

Her 102 years, 4 months, and eleven days of stewardship here, leads us to consider the "why" for this longevity.

Honor thy father and mother that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

This she did by her life of usefulness, her steadfastness of faith, and persistence in the path of virtue, truth and honesty.

A life of rural simplicity, enough of the temporal things of life to relieve worry and anxiety. She was never lured by the transient thing of modern civilization, innocence and the sweet gift of great patience kept the furrows of time from her face. Coupled with these things that were conducible to long life was the untiring devotion and constant care of her daughter, Mrs Minton who for 22 years has been home maker and nurse, for 14 years she watched by the bedside constantly.

She listened to the hymns while mother lay abed and sang. She heard as did many others the expression of perfect submission:—"I am ready, just waiting for the call to come home."

Grandma never lost interest in the church, or "the children," who are scattered from Washington, D. C. to California, Arizona, Texas, Kansas, Ohio and perhaps the other states of the union.

She fell asleep quietly at 3:00 a. m. Christmas morning, this being 103 Christmas that had dawned on her mortal life.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. L. Paulson and Rev. Brooks of Tazewell, Tenn., at Speaks Chapel Church, and the body interred in the Bartley cemetry.

The veil is not drawn and we cannot see through, "Be ye therefore ready," we hear and there'll be no more parting, no sickness and death, no sorrow, not even a tear.

Extra VALUES

GUM-DIPPED CORDS
The Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process transforms the cotton cords into a strong, tough, sinewy unit. Liquid rubber penetrates every cord and coats every fiber, guarding against internal friction and heat, greatly increasing the strength of the cord body, and giving longer tire life.

TWO EXTRA GUM-DIPPED CORD PLIES UNDER THE TREAD
This is a patented construction, and the two extra Gum-Dipped cord plies are so placed that you get 56% stronger bond between tread and cord body, and tests show 26% greater protection against punctures and blowouts. It sets a new standard for tire performance on high speed cars.

NON-SKID TREAD
Tough, live rubber specially compounded for long, slow wear. Scientifically designed non-skid gives greater traction and safe, quiet performance.

"AFTER FLU

Scalf's Indian River Tonic Built Me Up"

If you feel down and out, nervous and weak, appetite poor, restless at night, why not give Scalf's Indian River Tonic a trial? Thousands of people have been made happy by the use of this wonderful medicine. Scalf's Indian River Tonic is compounded from 26 herbs and six other well-known medical ingredients which make up a medicine of 32 ingredients of marvelous value. Thousands testify to the unusual merits of this preparation. Below is just one among the many testimonials we receive from time to time. Read what this Ohio man says, then apply this information to your own needs.

Mr. T. R. Fannin, Portsmouth Ohio, writes:

"I suffered a bad case of mumps followed by a severe attack of bilious fever, also had "flu" in the meantime. All this left me so weak that I lay for weeks unable to help myself. I was very thin and pale and had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep. It just seemed that I could never regain my strength. My mother had been taking Scalf's Indian River Tonic and had received such great help that she advised me to try it. The first bottle seemed to take right hold of me. It was not long until I was able to work. I kept on the treatment and worked hard every day and still gained strength until I was as strong and could do as much work as I ever did in my life. This has been over a year and I am still well and hearty. I believe Scalf's Indian River Tonic is the best medicine in the world. It did more for me than I had hoped any medicine would be able to do."

"BITS" Says:

By Robt. Hendricks

Farm News

John Spencer, Flatwoods, had ten shoats treated by the agent for worms. This was done by the 16 to 1 treatment, which is oil of chenepodium 1 part to 16 parts castor oil. The dose is one ounce to the hundred pounds placed in the stomach with a tube and syringe. These worms usually bother pigs and shoats from 20 lbs. to 75 lbs. They come from eggs expelled from the hog on the ground. One veterinarian lately estimated the number of eggs from one of these hog worms and he found 17 million in the belly of one worm. If the shoat has 25 worms, it will expell 425 million eggs on the hog lot, which eggs live two or three years in the ground. When the next litter of pigs come along and nurse the sow mother, they get the eggs off the teat, and also from the ground as soon as they begin to crack corn. These eggs soon hatch in pig and make him rough haired, pot belleyed and stop growing.

The agent has some bunches of calves on worm treatment in the county. The worm that gives calves the most trouble is the twisted stomach worm and is found in the fourth stomach It is the same worm that is found in sheep. All sheep owners now treat their flock for these worms. The remedy is, for calves, copper sulphate 1 per cent solution given in doses from 4 to 8 ounces The worms develop or propigate on pastures, but the calves may come to the feed lot for wintering with these worms, and keep spreading from the feed on the ground etc. Advise with the agent about treatment.

Dr. George Young, of Dryden, has one of the best grading parlors in his tobacco barn in the county. It faces the north. The windows are two sash wide and 22 feet long. This gives plenty of light. That is what it takes to grade tobacco right. Many farmers make a serious error in grading their crop in the loft almost in the dark. They may strip their tobacco, but it cannot be graded from such poor light. Dr. Young and Mr. McConnell, who has charge of the tobacco crop on the Young farm have just marketed their 3 1-3 acres.

The bank deposit from this crop showed $1,058 00 5,268 lbs. at 20c per pound. Plans for both the tobacco barn and the grading room was furnished by the agent.

CARTER WILL GO TO ROANOKE

Norton, — J. T. Carter, manager of the C. and P. Telephone Company of Virginia for this area since 1928, will be transferred shortly to the Roanoke office. He will be succeeded at Norton by Ralph M. Pettit. of Lynchburg, whose appointment has been announced by Loyd M. Griffin general commercial manager of the company in Virginia.

Mr. Pettit has been located at Lynchburg as manager since February 1, 1929, and was manager at Winchester for two years before coming to Lynchburg. Previously he had been located at the company's offices in Washington and Baltimore. He was educated in Washington city schools, completing the education in the McKinley Manual Training school. He entered the employ of the telepnone companp in July, 1919.

Mr. Carter succeeded F. C. Whitehead as manager here in August, 1928, Mr. Whitehead going to Roanoke. Mr. Carter has not only been efficient and popular in his official capacity, but he has been enthusiastic community worker! As president of the Kiwanis club for 1932, Mr. Carter directed many undertakings for the improvement of the community, commercially and otherwise. He was vice-president of the club in 1931 and has served of many important committees working for the betterment of the town. He has also been active in Red Cross work.

It was chiefly because of Mr. Carter's faith and persistence that the Kiwanis club has weathered the depression. Two or three times in the past year, when it seemed that the club might disband, President Carter pumped new interest into it and succeeded in increasing membership and attendance. On the first of this year he turned over to the new president, R. S. Graham, an organization of high "going-concern" value.

Ralph M. Pettit Appointed Manager

Appointment of Ralph M. Pettit as manager of the C. & P. Telephone Company of Virginia for this area vice J. T. Carter, transferred to other duties, has just been announced by Loyd M. Griffin, general commercial manager of the company in Virginia.

Mr. Pettit comes to Wise County from Lynchburg where he has been located as manager since February 1, 1929. He was manager at Winchester from January 1, 1927 to the time he was transferred to Lynchburg. Previously he had been located in the company's offices in Washington and Baltimore.

Mr. Pettit was educated in Washington city schools, completing his education in McKinley Manual Train-School. He entered the employ of the telephone company July 7, 1919.

JOHN BAILEY BUILDS HOME

John Bailey, world war veteran of Keokee, is now comfortably located in a handsome new seven room residence he reaently erected on a tract of land he purchased a few months ago from the Robert E. Litton tract near Dryden. He owns 140 acres and is preparing to do some farming this spring and summer. Mr. Bailey has also put in a water line extending from a point high on the mountain to his home, a distance of about four thousand feet.

C. C. Bowers, of Appalachia, is preparing to build a residence on a 87 acre tract on the opposite side of the road from Cleveland Reasor's place, both of whom made purchases from the Litton farm. They have also just completed a water line to their property from a point on the mountain. Mr. Bowers is likewise preparing to do much farming this year. He intends to place a reliable tenant on the farm and give it much of his personal attention.

J. J. Clarkston, of Keokee purchased 46 acres from the main tract at the auction sale and will probably build some time in the future. However he intends to farm nearly all of his tract this year and is now making preparations for it. The Litton farm is one of the most attractive places in Lee County.

Miscellaneous Shower

Heart dice was the feature of entertainment. After the game and social hour refreshments were served.

Richmond—Reports of the seal sale throughout Virginia indicate a sharp decline in this revenue used to fight tuberculosis according to a statement issued by the Virginia Tuberculosis Association, 38 counties and 11 cities reported their sales to date were $36,086 85.

While many of the tuberculosis organizations which have made their preliminary reports have shown a decrease in their seal sales as compared to those of 1931, an increase in the sales was made by the city of Alexandria, and Carroll, Fluvanna, Henry, Loudoun and Washington Counties.

The patients and staffs at Blue Ridge and Catawba Sanatoria raised a total of $110.74 in addition to the sales in counties and cities.

Piedmont Sanatorium for Negro patients always conducts a vigorous seal sale at that institution, but no report has yet been received from that source.

The Executive Secretary of the Virginia Tuberculosis Association stated that more interest and enthusiasm than ever before has been shown by the hundreds of volunteers who are conducting the seal sale and that the decrease in returns is entirely due to prevailing economic conditions It is believed that Virginia will in the final summing hold her own with other States in the nation wide sale. She stated that several of the local tuberculosis organizations had been compelled to use the proceeds of the seal sale during December because their treasuies were empty and they were paying the board of patients at the sanatoria who would have to return to their homes if these funds were not drawn upon. One letter sent to the headquarters at Richmond by a County Chairman was from a man who had received a dollars worth of seals and said he was holding them in the hope that he might "get a dollar from somewhere to buy them" as he realizes the great need for work in his county.

The State and local tuberculosis organizations urge all who have not already contributed to the seal sale to remember that it may be too late to use the seals on packages and greeting cards, but that the tuberculosis season is never closed and that poverty and malnutrition are causing heavy demands for the relief of the tuberculous.

Tobacco Prices Advance at Abingdon Va.

Sales opened this morning with all grades higher, the bidding was spirited and it looked as if better days are just around the corner. At Neal-Dixon and Bane's Warehouse the entire floor averaged $17.26 per hundred weight, it was nothing unusual to hear farmers say that it was the highest sale they had seen since the market opened.

BOWELS

Let Dr. Caldwell help whenever your child is feverish or upset; or has caught cold.

His simple prescription will make that bilious, headachy, cross boy or girl comfortable, happy, well in just a few hours. It soon restores the bowels to healthy regularity. It helps "break-up" a cold by keeping the bowels free from all that sickening mucus waste.

You have a famous doctor's word for this laxative. Dr. Caldwell's record of having attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby is believed unique in American medical history.

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from your druggist and have it ready. Then you won't have to worry when any member of your family is headachy, bilious, gassy or constipated. Syrup Pepsin is good for all ages. It sweetens the bowels; increases appetite—makes digestion more complete.

Voluntary Cut

Richmond, — Jan. 7th., Governor Pollard today called into conference the heads of all state departments for the purpose of formulating plans to carry into effect his order for the second ten per cent cut in state appropriations paid from the General Fund.

Departments and agencies supported by special funds were not included in the law which imposed upon the Governor the duty of reducing appropirations when necessary to prevent a deficit in the state treasury. However, it is learned that T. McCall Frazier, Director of the Division of Motor Vehicles, has voluntarily cut expenses by $72 252.00 or ten per cent for the full fiscal year in addition to the ten per cent imposed by the General Assembly and as a further economy measure has increased the working day of all emyloyees of the Division one half hour. They now work from 8:30 a. m to 5:30 p. m. This is the first State Department to adopt this method of cutting expenses.

Get Up Nights?

Make This 25c Test

Use this easy Modoc plan to drive out impurities and excess acids which cause irritation that results in leg pains, backache, burning and getting up nights. DR. KELL'S the bladder physic containing buchu, juniper oil, etc., will flush the kidneys pleasantly and effectually as castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c box of genuine Dr. Kell's from your druggist. After four days, if not relieved of getting up nights go back and get your money. You are bound to feel better at once, cleansing and you get your regular sleep.

Appalachia Woman Rejoices

Says: "I Believe Scalf's Indian River Tonic is the Best Medicine in the Whole World"

Mrs. F. G. Adams, 217 Spruce Street, Appalachia, Va., says: "I had suffered from stomach trouble for 6 years and had spent lots of money for treatment until I thought nothing could be done for me. My doctor had me go to a hospital but I didn't seem to improve any there. Everything I ate hurt my stomach. I could scarcely sleep. In other words, I was so sick that I felt I would rather be dead and out of the way.

"One day, while I was on my sick bed, a boy brought me a paper telling of Scalf's Indian River Tonic. I decided to try it and before I had finished my first bottle I could tell I was better. I have taken about 24 bottles and I don't feel like the same person. I feel that Scalf's Indian River Tonic is the best medicine in the whole world and I am glad to pass the message on to others, feeling sure it will benefit them as it has me. I am praising Scalf's Indian River Tonic and advising my friends to give it a trial."

RESTFUL SLEEP for FRETFUL, FEVERISH CHILD

— With Castoria's regulation

When your child tosses and cries out in his sleep, it means he is not comfortable. Very often the trouble is that poisonous waste matter is not being carried off as it should be. Bowels need help—mild, gentle help—but effective. Just the kind Castoria gives. Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for children's ailments. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then relaxed comfort and restful sleep! Genuine Castoria always has the name:

WINTER PLOTS A WICKED CRIME

THE VICTIMS: Those Motors Using Ordinary Oil that Drains Away from Heated Working Surfaces.

GET THE "hidden quart" in time

THE QUART THAT STAYS UP IN YOUR MOTOR AND NEVER DRAINS AWAY

* The Germ Process (exclusive Conoco patent) imparts to this motor oil that peculiar ability to penetrate and combine with metal surfaces. Of the first filling about one quart will "hide" itself up in your motor's precious working parts. This hidden quart-never-ever drains away. It becomes a part of the motor itself; worth its weight in gold.

CONOCO

The One Oil that Gives You Perfect Protection for Winter's Worst Days Ahead

Drip! trickle! drip! through long night hours, ordinary oil drains away. When the pump quits, ordinary oil quits, leaving the motor's parts high and dry. You touch the starter. The motor roars. The pump strains at the sluggish oil. It is only a few minutes till circulation is completed. But, in the meantime, working surfaces only partly lubricated are in contact, while the motor makes three to five thousand revolutions. This causes 50% of all motor wear.

Prevent this loss. Choose not merely a quick oil, but an oil that never leaves. Choose the oil with the "hidden quart that penetrates and combines with the metal surfaces of the motor itself. In the emergency of an empty crankcase, users have driven many miles, without damage, on this "hidden quart alone. This proves that your motor need never suffer while waiting upon the pump. Don't remain in doubt. Drain and refill with the "hidden quart oil today.

VA. EDITORS TO MEET IN NORTON

The mid-winter meeting of the Virginia Press Association came to a close at Roanoke Saturday morning after a three day session, and fixed Norton as the place of the annual meeting which will be held some time during the month of July. This will be the fartherest point west in the state of Virginia that the association ever met during the history of the organization. They usually hold their annual meetings in the eastern part of the state.

The invitation was extended by the Norton Kiwanis Club thru Press Atkins and Bruce Crawford, Norton editors, who are both members of the club and the association as well. And according to the decision of the association to meet in Norton, Pres and Bruce evidently carried their part of the program to the letter.

James C. Latimer, of the Farmville Herald, secretary of the association, announced the selection of Norton as the place of the annual meeting, following a meeting of the executive committee late Friday afternoon. It is the custom to alternate the annual meetings between the Tidewater section and the western part of the state. He said this would be the first time the association ever met as far west as Norton.

John Carmichael Holmes

John Carmichael Holmes son of Eugene C. and Naonic Huff Holmes, of Jonesville, Virginia, departed this life November 28, 1932, at the age of fourteen years. He joined the Christian Church at Pennington Gap, Virginia, was baptised by Rev. T. C. Horne and remained a loyal and devoted christian to the end.

A beautiful life has passed on leaving behind in the hearts of his classmates and friends, memories of manliness and right living which are everlasting. His smiling face and ever cheerful disposition were an inspiration to all who knew him a perfect gentleman in the truest sense of the word, was a tribute often paid J. C.

May his Mother, Father, sister and friends find comfort in the hope of a life beyond life, where ties broken on earth shall be reunited. "Forgive our grief for one removed

Thy creature whom we fonnd so fair,
We trust he lives in Thee and there,
We find him worthier to to be loved."

AGED VETERAN STILL SPRY AT 87

Middlesboro, Ky. — A taxi drove up to the bus terminal. An old man, with heavy white hair, flowing widely from under his big hat, began to get out. The taxi driver opened the door and offered to help him.

"Ye don't have to help me. I can make it," the old man said, cheerfully, as he poked out two canes, shuffled his feet out, and got to the ground.

"Now, let me see when my bus goes," he said. The taxi driver found it would be going in an hour. He suggested to his passenger that he might sit down in the waiting room and rest until his bus came.

"Oh, never mind me. I'm all right, I'll sit down when I want to," replied the old man, as he threaded his way into the waiting room, with his two canes tapping the floor.

Other passengerr waiting around in the station perked up at the virity of the distinguished old gentleman who did not care to be coddled, as though he was an invalid.

"I'm one of Robert E. Lee's boy", said the veteran. "I was with Stonewall Jackson, you know." Then the thing was lit. He was off on to a war story.

The veteran was A. D. Ayers, 87, of Caylor, who had been to Middlesboro, Ky., to visit his daughter and he was now on his way back.

He rattled on, with one comment after another. Someone asked him if he was gassed during the war.

"I wasn't in the World War," he replied quickly. "No, we stood up and fit like men in the Civil War. We went right out in the open and took our medicine."

Referring to the veterans of Lee county, "Colonel" Ayers said, "There's jist twelve of us left. We have a reunion every year, Mrs. Judge Orr sees to that. I have attended thirty-eight out of forty-three reunions we have held."

Then "Colonel Ayers" went on to pay a tribute to Mrs Orr, who "is the best friend the old soldiers have in Lee county." She never fails to see to it that you are made happy and comfortable on every occasion. She never fails to speak to you. She is a mighty fine woman."

The Book Sampler

If we Americans wanted a political novel, there would be a question as to whether it would be done by a politician or a writer. England combines both qualities in the person of Harold Nicolson, whose kook is "Public Faces."

The author, who has already bestowed immortality on Lord Curzon's valet in "Some People," sets forth to the accompaniment of muted merriment trivial incidents that nearly cause a war in 1939 Not by frenzied efforts of diplomatists but by equally trivial happenings is war averted. The characters are excellent, and if treated facetiously, they are accorded a certain amount of mitigating sympathy. By all means read the book for it contains a plot that would do credit to E Phillips Oppenheim, a literary suavity that does credit to the husband of V. Sackville—West, and a sense of humor that would do credit to anyone.

The small Connecticut town of New Winton, existing in the imagidation of James Gould Cozzens, will become a realisy to readers of his book, "The Last Adam." The inhabitants, sheriff, selectmen, hired men, the rich family, the younger generation, the Democrat in a Republican community—as seen from the angle of old Dr. Bull who has helped most of them into life or smoothed their passing from it—rise from the pages to form a closer acquaintanee. You will remember them as old friends when the plot, such as it is, is forgotten. You will remember clear-cut New England customs that will outlive those of softer Southern neighbors. And it will be well to get your first editions now and sit back to watch the rise of this young novelist who has already written two Book-of-the-Month selections and won notable American literary awards.

First Things First

Only two states in the Union spend for education a smaller proportion of the total collections of federal, state and local taxes than Virginia. In expenditures per teacher Virginia ranks a poor third to her neighbors with a total of $410 per teacher, as against $510 in Maryland and $717 in North Carolina. Education's 14 per cent of the tate budget in 1930 -31 contrasts sharply with the 24 per cent spent for education by all local, state and federal governments If one-fourth of Virginia's funds instead of one-seventh were devoted to education, every county could be assured a well trained teacher for each standard class, a well trained supervisor, and a nine months' session for every school.

Facts like these demand consideration when the use of public moneys is determined. A sense of value which will put first things first can be expected to revise upward the share of state support of the school. An interesting summary of tax facts in leaflet form may be obtained by readers of The News upon request addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

John Everett Gilbert

John Everett Gilbert, son of John B. and Eliza Gilbert, was born in Lee County, Virginia, January 15, 1890.

On December 20, 1914, he was married to Miss Alice Gilbert, of Kenvir, Kentucky.

He became a Christian in boyhood and joined the Pennington Gap Baptist Church. The last year or so of his life he became interested in the re-opening of old Antioch Church, in his community.

In the few hours of life that remained to him, he spoke to loved ones and friends, declaring that death was near and he was unafraid. He also invited bystanders to make peace with their God.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Gilbert; four children: Vivian, John Everett, Jr., Virginia Dare, and Eugene; one brother, James Gilbert, of Pennington Gap; two sisters, Mrs S. C. Lambert, of Pennington Gap, and Mrs. R. L. Wynn, of Morristown, Tennessee.

Governor Takes Second Cut

Richmond—Setting an example with a second voluntary cut in his own salary of $1,000 Governor Pollard this week assembled in his office the heads of the several state departments to arrange a second ten per cent reduction in the operating expenses of the government. This meeting which was postponed at the last moment from last week, was presided over by the executive in person and lasted for the better part of two days, at the end of which time Governor Pollard made his announcement to the press.

According to the governor this second ten per cent cut will fall largely upon the salaries of department heads and employees, such cut to range from five to ten per cent. Workers receiving not more than $1,200 annually, or $100 per month, will not have their pay reduced, according to the program worked out The reduction in pay will go into effect immediately and will be reflected in the salary vouchers received on January 15.

The last General Assembly inflicted the first ten per cent cut in state pay rolls. This was followed by a second ten per cent reduction in salaries and operating expenses ordered by Governor Pollard last summer. The second ten per cent reduction ordered by the governor and the third, when the initial ten per cent cut by the General Assembly is considered, becomes operative this week. During this period of retrenchment the governor has reduced his own salary from $10,000 to $8,000.

With the cut declared last summer, the aggregate salary reduction to individual state employees will range between 15 and 26 per cent. The cut in appropriations, effective as of January 1, will net $785,000, which, with the first cut, will reduce budget expenditures by approximately $2,400,000 for the biennium.

The credit of Virginia ranks at the top. She is among the few states whose finances do not show a deficit. In the words of Governor Pollard:

"Virginia believes that the state should live within its income. Virginia is not increasing taxes.

It is believed by some that the federal government at Washington could profit by Virginia's example under the administration of her present executive.

South Sea Mystery Will Be Broadcast

Nearly 150 years ago a fully manned English warship sailed for the island of Tahiti in the south Pacific ocean in search of breadfruit trees to be planted in the West Indies.

Nothing was heard from it until four years later when the captain and some of his officers came home in a rowboat. Mutiny, romance with the Tahiti women, and murder all entered into the story which the captain told.

This unusual yarn, as well as the story of how another British warship finally found the mutinous crew after years of search, will be broadcast Wednesday night, January 18, by Carveth Wells, well known globe trotter and radio entertainer for Continental Oil Company. The program will be heard over 23 N.B.C. stations.

Local listeners can hear the Carveth Wells broadcast by tuning in on station W. M. A. Q. Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

Hearing March 1 in Power Case

Richmond — Charles B. Cooke, consulting engineer, told the state corporation commission that the Old Dominion Power Company's cost of supplying power to coal mines in Lee and Wise counties last year was $120,000 more than the income received from such consumers.

The power company, defendant in a petition brought by the Virginia Coal Operators' Association for a 10 per cent power rate reduction, rested its case at the conclusion of Co ke's testimony. The hearing will be continued on March 1 with cross examination of the power company's witnesses by A K. Morison, counsel for the coal operators.

Cooke, who with L. W. Zapp, another consulting engineer, submitted most of the testimony at today's hearing, told the commission that present power rates are too low to meet emergency costs. Both asserted that the valuations, methods of depreciation and analyses of operating costs are submitted by coal operator's witnesses, Douglas Terpstra and W. A. Hiddleson, were "unsound, erroneous, and worthless" in the establishment of a rate base.

A A. Tuttle, vice president and treasurer of the power company, said that for the year ended October 31, 1932, the net income of the Old Dominion was $7,-264.03, and asserted that if the company had paid the same rate for purchased power as it is paying at the present time, the income statement would have showed a deficit of $52,-254.97.

Carson Hangs Up Latest Record

Richmond — As a climax to his long list of outstanding achievement in the interests of Virginia William E. Carson, chairman of the state commission on conservation and developement, has been named trustee of the Presidential Summer Camp on the Rapidan, which property has been deeded by President Hoover to the Commonwealth of Virginia to become a part of the Shenandoah National Park area.

But for the foresight and tireless efforts of Mr. Carson the Presidential Summer Camp would never have come to Virginia. And the location of the camp constituted a material and vital step towards establishing the Shenandoah National Park here.

The completion of the Skyline Drive' the scenic roadway along the crest of the Blue Ridge mountains, is another major project for which Mr. Carson is altogether responsible. The Camp, the Park and the Driveway will throughout future years continue to attract tourists to Virginia from all sections of the nation and of the world, bringing unending millions of dollars to the State.

The accomplishments of Mr. Carson in his work for Virginia have multiplied so rapidly and have been referred to so often that it is at times difficult to properly correlate and appreciate them in their entirety. The erection of historic markers throughout Virginia has become so popular with tourists that states all over the union have copied this program with almost exact imitation.

The success of the Yorktown Sesquicentennial and of the National Colonial Monument at Yorktown can each be attributed very largely, if not entirely, to Mr. Carson. Few men who ever lived in Virginia will leave such a record of actual achievement behind them as will William E Carson, of Riverton.

Had Not Walked For Two Years

Now Able to Run and Play Thanks to Scalf's Indian River Tonic

The makers of Scalf's Indian River Tonic know it is good, but they marvel, as well as well as others, at the unusual testimonials which come in from the grateful users of this Master Medicine. The following letter was sent to their office a few days ago. Mrs. Theressa Szaley, Winding Gulf, W. Va., writes:

"My daughter, Irma, now five years old, had been very weakly and sickly from birth. She had a bad heart, was nervous, had kidney trouble and rheumatism of the joints. Her feet and hands were badly swollen all the time. My husband and I paid $800.00 to one hospital in Detroit, Michigan, besides other great expenditures for various treatments. All of which did Irma apparently no good. In all her life she had only walked about a month and had not walked at all for two years when a representative of the New Scalf Medicine Company advised me to try Scalf's Indian River Tonic for her. I refused to do so, telling him I had tried every treatment I could hear of and had received no results. But in a few days I began to consider how sincere this man had seemed so I sent to the Winding Gulf Commissary and bought a bottle of the medicine. I kept her on the treatment for several weeks. Then she began walking again and has now been able to walk for five months running and playing uphill and downhill, as if she had never been sick. Being able to run is a new sensation of real joy to her. The Bible tells us that the Lord made the herbs and that they were good. The maker of Scalf's Indian River Tonic must have found the best of the Lord's herbal kingdom and put them into that wonderful Indian River Tonic of his."

TWO FACING MURDER TRIALS

Gate City—Garland and Reuben Compton are scheduled to go on trial here this week charged with the murder of Elbert Collett near Wood, last May.

Collett was fatally wounded as he and another man approached a truck backed up to a pasture field containing cattle, Collett inquiring of four men a bout the machine what they were doing. Preliminary hearing witness claimed the men ran a short distance and opened fire on Collett.

A truck brought to Gate City on the day following the shooting was identified by several of the witnesses testifying in magistrate's court as that which was seen in the vicinity of the shooting before and after it occurred. The man said to have been with Collett at the time failed to identify either of the Compton men as among the four about the truck when Collett was shot.

J. Frank Sergent, prosecuting attorney, said he would ask Judge E. T Carter for a special grand jury to consider charges of robbery against Charles Peters, 19, who was bound over to the January term of court by a magistrates' court at Fort Blakcmore.

Guernseys Go To Second Place In Va.

The 1930 Dairy Census, just released, shows that registered Guernseys came up during the ten year peorid from 1920 to take second place in Virginia among dairy cattle breeds

In 1920 the line up of the breeds was Holstein 4160; Jersey 3223; Guernsey 1696; Ayrshire 25 and Brown Swiss had none. By 1930 breed preferences had changed, Holsteins are still first showing an increase to 5756; Guernseys come into second place with 5288 head; Jerseys decreased to 2959; Ayrshires increased to 82 and Brown Swiss to 35.

It is very interestina to note that the Virginia farmer is favoring the Guernsey breed. The Guernsey is also the only breed to show an increase in every state in the Union.

During the 1920-1930 decade, the Guernseys increased in the United States 152 6 per cent., the Jerseys 53.1 per cent., and the Holsteins 22.9 per cent. The actual figures show Holrteins increased from 528, 621 to 649,739; Jerseys 231 834 to 354,939; Guernseys 79, 446 to 200,721; Ayrshires 30,509 to 48,236 and Brown Swiss 8,283 to 25, 734.

Correction

In last week's issue a mistake was made in the death announcement of the late Jimmie Lloy saying he was the son of the late Alec Lloyd, he was the son of Alfred Lloyd of Station Creek. His mother was Rebecca Litton Lloyd.

This correction was furnished by Geo. W. Russell of this place.

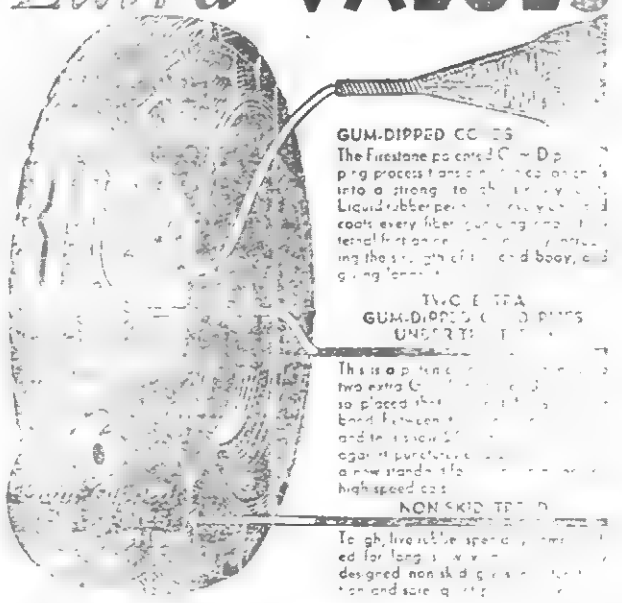
Extra VALUES



GUM-DIPPED CORD
The Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process transforms each cotton fiber into a strong, tough, flexible cord. Liquid rubber penetrates and envelops each fiber, cushioning the internal friction generated by the high speed of the modern car body, and giving longer mileage.

TWO EXTRA GUM-DIPPED CORD PLIES UNDER THE TREAD
This is a patented Firestone feature. Two extra Gum-Dipped cord plies are placed under the tread. Between these and the road is a layer of tough, resilient rubber—a new standard of safety for high speed cars.

NON-SKID TREAD

SEVERED HAND FOUND ON TRACK

While walking along the Southern Railway tracks at Intermont yards early last Friday morning, G. W. Hartford, conductor, saw a glove lying on the ground. He picked it up but was astonished to find it contained three fingers and a portion of some one's right hand. Hartford made a report to the Appalachia authoritier and it was only after inquiring at all the hospitals in Wise and Lee counties that they were able to find who the severed hand belonged to.

It developed that Henry Moore, a young colored man residing at Arno, was a patient in the Stonega hospital, having lost a portion of his hand. He claims he fell after stepping into a hole, to the ground and his hand caught on the rail while a train was passing by. However railroad men knew nothing of the accident until the dismembered portion of the hand was found that morning. Moore said the accident happened about six o'clock the previous evening. Authorities are inclined to believe Moore was hobbing at the time and fell off a moving train. A companion hurried Moore to a taxi and he was rushed to the hospital.

PENNINGTON IS SWAMPED

Calvin defeated Pennington Gap's cagers 25-11 at the M. E. Church gymnasium here Friday night. Failure to pass the ball and long chance shots were chiefly responsible for Pennington's low score.

Burton led Calvin on the offensive. Only two men who started the game failed to finish, both being displaced by the foul route. They were David, of Pennington, and Flanary, of Calvin.

Powell Valley News Changes Hands

With this issue the announcement appears in another space of the sale of the Powell Valley News by Mrs. J. P. Hendricks, widow of the late Col. J. P. Hendricks.

The new management wishes to make their announcement also to the public. The ownership and complete control and management of the Powell Valley News and its job printing establishment now belongs to M. S. and B. C. Culbertson, of the Pennington Hardware and Furniture Company of Pennington Gap.

The new management wishes to express their pride in becoming the owners and managers of the Powell Valley News, the enterprising paper of Lee County. For a peorid of 10 years Col. J. P. Hendricks published the News with efficiency and success and did a great service to the subscribers and reading public of the County.

It is going to be the policy of the new management to continue this service in both paper and job printing, and they solicit the confidence of the public and their patronage, that has been given its predicessor.

The new management also wishes to say that the Powell Valley News will be expanded and made to comply more fully with the needs of a Lee County paper. In this undertaking, they feel that such an effort cannot be successful without the full confidence and cooperation of the public.

Farm News

One of the best car loads of cattle to leave Lee and Hancock County is now being fed out. These cattle were placed on feed 1st of October, and will continue till 1st April or perhaps longer. The feeders and owners of this choice bunch of baby beeves are: Rhea Fugate 2 head; Billey and Hugh Parkey, 11 and 7 years old, 1 each, W. S. Parkey 2; M. W. Kesterson' 2; R. D. Fugate, 2; N. B. Richmond 2; Lester and Chester Mc Daniel, 14 and 16 years old 1 each, C. D. Fugate 2; Vince Parkey 2; Kinard Fugate 2, Miss Anges Parkey, 2; Clarence Shipley, 2; a total of 28 head. These baby beeves ranged from 600 to 7oo lbs. when placed on feed. They are all choice individuals, selected from the best herds of Lee and Hancock county with a view of early maturity. Many of the calves have been placing on 70 to 80 lbs. per month. With two to three months more to be added, it is expected to have them in high stage of finish. The rations for the calves run about: corn crushed 8 parts to 1 part cotton seed meal. Many have added bran and oats to the ration. The calves are eating from 1 1-2 gallons to 2 gallons feed twice per day. In addition to the grain ration, hay is provided, in clover and alfalfa. Few are using a mixed hay and clover and timothy. It is being arranged to have a fat cattle show the day before shipment perhaps Ewing. The agent has secured the services of the Animal Husbandy Department, Kenneth E. Litton, Blacksburg to do the judging. A large attendance at this fat cattle show is expected. The two counties of Lee and Hancock are noted far and wide for their qualification as beef cattle counties. The show is expected to attract visitors from many surrounding counties of both Virginia and Tennessee. It is expected that the finished weights of these baby beeves will range from 900 to 1200 pounds.

At the time these cattle were selected and placed on feed the out-look for a tolerable decent market was thought possible. The downward trend in recent weeks, has indicated a slug gish sale, regardless of the high quality and finish if they had to bel placed on at the present time However, as mentioned, it is intended to withold these calves till the first of April or longer, if necessary, which by that time will effect a more favorab'e trend it is believed.

Bonny Blue

Despite a rainy dismal day there was an unusual large attendance at Sunday School, Sunday morning. Several of our regular members have been confined to their homes with "Flu" but the "Flu" epidmic is almost over now, and we hope to have our Sunday School back to normal again soon.

This section of Lee County and particulary Bonny Blue are looking forward to the first meeting in this year of the Lee County Young Peoples Union the Union will be entertained by Pennington Gap, also the program will be furnished by the Pennington League. This meeting will be held at the M. E. Church, South, Friday night, February 3rd at 7:30.

The address of the evening will be by the Rev. W. P Eastwood, presiding elder of Big Stone Gap District

Everyone who attended the special Missionary Meeting, Monday reported a grand time. Ethel Wyatt, Opal Fleenor, Eloise Holmes and Joe Gibbs, Jr., were the young people who attended the meeting at Big Stone Gap, Monday, January 23rd. Rev. E. L. Crump, the pastor was also present.

The Bonny Blue Cardinals defeated Flatwoods Independents in a fast basketball game here Friday night 51-36, before a large crown. Horton and Pickle led the scoring for Bonny Blue, while Thompson was continually breaking up passes of the opposition and working the ball into scoring position. Ruffell was best for Flatwoods. Overton, Ruffell's teammate, received an injured hand and was forced from the game after leading his team on defense.

The Bonny Blue Cardinals gained another star in their crown, when they defeated Eagan strong Tennessee team in a fast moving game here Saturday night. Last year Bonny Blue suffered two straight defeats at the hands of Eagan, but the Cardinals came back with a lust for revenge this year and bowled Eagan over by a large score. We expect great thing from the boys this season, and we hope they come through with a clean slate for the championship, The Cardinals play Lincoln Memorial University, Harrogate, Tenn., Saturday night, January 28, 7:30 p. m., at Bonny Blue.

Mrs. Benton has been ill at the Lee General Hospital for the past few days, her many friends are trusting that she may return home soon.

The Book Sampler

Whose heart does not thrill at the thought of a good mystery! And there are still sure to be chill evenings before spring breaks, then damp ones later when she does arrive, when one can sit quietly in the chimney corner and enjoy a good problem tale.

S. S. Van Dine has written "The Kennel Murder Case" which depends on Philo Vance's expert knowledge of Chinese ceramics and Scotch terriers for a solution. Some do not care as much for this volume as for some of his preceding ones, but there is a locked door in it that will make you think Then there is "Murder of a Lawyer's Clerk" by J. S Fletcher, so-called "dean of mystery writers." Mr. Alfred Snowe is found senseless murdered, but the end proves that there was method in someone's madness. See if you cannot arrive at the conclusion before the clever detective who has to trace clues from the quiet English countryside to the British Museum and back. More of romance is contained in "The White Cockatoo" whose setting is a ... little French hotel ... is a man and a girl; death striking from a creaky ... vator; an old rosewood piano as receptacle for a secret. Incidentally, Margaret G. Eberhart, whose book this is, began her career in crime three days after her wedding. The Adirondacks in a winter's storm with communication at a dead stop is a ... place for murder. ... murders there are ... in "Anonymous Footstep" until the author, John M. O'Connor, allows an unexpected climax

Other mysteries have borne the test of time: Jack Woodford's "Find the Motive", a corking tale written last summer by a Richmond man; "The Tragedy of Y" by Barnaby Ross, a Drury Lane mystery. (Drury Lane is not a place; he's a person. Then there are "The Trunk Call Mystery" by J. Jefferson Farjeon and "Cut Throat" by Christopher Bush, sufficing for an idle hour or two.

Borrow the books from the Extension Division, University, Virginia if you wish thrilling diversion in story form.

Baby Found In Shoe Box

Harlan, Ky.—The body of an infant baby was found in a shoe box on the Pineville road, near Loyal, by some school children Tuesday morning. The box was near the home of Mrs. James H. Howard, who immediately called Sheriff J.H. Blair. A coroner's inquest was held before Squire J. B. M. Howard. Five witnesses were heard in the case, and the verdict was rendered, stating that according to the evidence, it was the belief that Magaline Pike was the mother of the child. No arrest had been made late last night.

Ewing Bank Year Satisfactory

Ewing—Stockholders of the Peoples Bank of Ewing at their annual meeting here recently re-elected incumbent directors and officers for the year 1933 and heard reports of satisfactory business and earnings for 1932 The officers elected were: W. T. M. Thompson

Thomas Monroe Thompson, 70, died Sunday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Milford Bush. He had been in failing health for some time, but was up and about as usual, until Sunday morning. Death was thought to be due to a paralytic stroke. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Standefer, of Kansas, two daughters, Mrs. A. W. Johnson, Mrs. Milard Bush of Ewing, four sons, Burgin, Frank, both of Ewing, Lon and Claude, both of Sneedville. Several grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, with other relatives and a host of friends, also mourn his passing.

Funeral services were held at the home Monday morning by Rev. Arch Buchanan, following which the body was taken to Mulberry Gap, for burial in the family cemetery.

TOBACCO NEWS

Abingdon, Va., Jan. 25, 1933.

The Abingdon Tobacco Market closed its auction sales for the season, Tuesday afternoon, January 24th, 1933.

Sales for the closing day, 81,724 pounds. Average $13 31. For the season, 7,071,864 pounds. Average for the whole $14 68. Money for the whole $1,037,831.53.

Biggest day in poundage during the season, Jan. 5th 422,104 lbs. sold that day. Largest week in poundage was the week ending fiscally Jan. 6th with 1,945,722 pounds sold that week.

Highest day's average of the season was on Jan. 10th of $17.00 per hundred pounds. Highest weeks average was the week ending Jan. 13th, which was $16.17.

The Warehouse of Abingdon are justly proud of their seasons average of $14 68, for it shows a gain of 66.9 percent over last seasons average and slightly over 70 percent higher than the combined average last season of all the 43 Burley Markets of the world. Year after year it seems the demand for Burley Tobacco is growing. The main reason for this is the superior burning qualities of Burley. This is why the standard brands of Cigarettes are composed so largely of Burley, as the Cigarettes now sold will almost smoke themselves. Light one, lay it aside and see. The more Cigarettes smoked, the more the Manufactures sell.

The writer has had many letters from farmers in this section asking him about the "Blue Mold". He is only a "swivel chair" farmer, if you know what that means, but he does know that it was the principal cause of Georgia's Tobacco Crop being reduced from 103 million pounds in 1931 to 12 million in 1932. Of being reduced in South Carolina from 78 million to 36 million, and being reduced in North Carolina 40 percent. It seems to affect only the young plants in the plant beds. All over Eastern North Carolina last season where the writer was located, farmers having sown the usual sized beds, were scouring the whole country for plants, and those who had increased the size of their plant bed's were selling their surplus plants at huge prices. This "Blue Mold" hasn't so far crossed the Appalachias, but as an ounce of precaution is worth a pound of cure, if we were farming even in this country, we would plants beds twice as large as heretofore (as this is the smallest cost of tobacco production) burn the beds good, and "play safe."

We knew all the Warehousemen of Abingdon before we came here—knew their standing on all the Big Markets—but had no idea they had such well equipped Warehouse as they have here. Did not think a town the size of Abingdon would have such splendid Warehouses, on account of its size; but then things are not always what they seem. So we thought of this little piece of poetry (or dogueral if you choose to call it as such) which goes something like this:

"You may mark it on the palings as a mighty risky plan,

To make your judgment by the clothes that covers up the man,

For in going thru the low grounds we discover as we go,

That the meanest kind of shacks will hide the biggest nubbin in the row.

For they catches little minnows in the bottom of the sea,

And the biggest kind of possum up the smallest simon tree.

For in going thru the world we often come across,

J. Tennessee Smyth

James Tennessee Smyth, son of Edward M and Minerva P. Smyth, was born in Elk Knob section, Lee County, Virginia, July 30, 1849. He died January 19, 1933.

Although he had been in declining health for several years, the illness that caused his death was brief. He suffered a stroke of paralysis January 14, from which he never recovered sufficiently to regain his wonted strength.

About 1872 (or 3) he was united in marriage to Miss Susan Ellen Barker, who fell on sleep some four years ago. To this union were born nine children, seven of whom survive: Z P. Smyth, Appalachia, Mrs. Lula Brown, Pennington Gap, Mrs. Minerva Tritt, Dryden, A. L. Smyth, Appalachia, Joseph T. Smyth and Mrs. Belle Drummond both of Pennington Gap, and Arlington R. Smyth, Chattanooga, Tenn.

He was converted in 1895 and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South at Smyth Chapel. All who know him declare him to have been not only firm in the faith of Christianity but also most active in the practice of the principles of human brotherhood.

Services were conducted from the late home Saturday, January 21, 10:00 a. m by his pastor, the Rev. C. F. Watkins.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Collins and three small sons, and Mrs. P. H. Larmer were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Collins Friday

MAN KILLED BY TRAIN FRIDAY

Tom Griffin, Sr., aged 88 years and a resident of Big Stone Gap, met instant death Friday afternoon at 1:20 o'clock when hit by the west bound Southern Passenger train No. 1 out of Bristol on the trestle that spans Powell's River between Big Stone Gap and Appalachia. Partially blind and almost totally deaf owing to his advanced age, Mr. Griffin probably did not see or hear the approaching train or heard the warning screams of his daughter, Mrs. Sam Collier, who was walking by his side. He was caught under the engine and carried a distance of over two hundred feet, his head being badly mangled. The train was in charge of Engineer Bob Odle and Conductor Walter Jarrett.

Mrs. Collier claims she grabbed at her father's arm in a desperate effort to lead him from the trestle, but missed and she hurried back and jumpek off the track barely in time to save herself from the approaching train. Owing to a short curve just off the trestle or bridge a train is only visible for a short distance.

Mr. Griffin was returning home from a visit to another daughter, Mrs George Rose at Linden, having left Big Stone Gap early that morning in company with Mrs. Collier. They had just left the highway and decided to cross over the railroad bridge, it being much nearer by that route to Mrs. Collier's home at the Hosiery Mill in the east section of Big Stone Gap, where the aged man had been staying since the death of his son, Tom Griffin, Jr., which resulted from pneumonia on January 11th.

One-Third Drivers Met Permit Law

Richmond — Only one-third of the automobile drivers in Virginia have thus far obtained state drivers' licenses under the new motor vehicle code, the motor vehicle division disclosed recently.

The records show that 315,783 licenses to drivers have been issued. There are at least 1 000,000 persons who operate cars in the state who must obtain licenses before July 1.

Only 970 applications have been turned down to date due to physical disability.

Inspectors reported 2,873 special examinations and 3,010 examinations of minors. There has been 398 examinations by oculists and optometrists. Licenses issued to non-residents total 492.

Applications were said to be coming in at a rate of about 1,000 per day.

Arizona Broadcast Features Coronado

Scenes and events dating back almost 400 years into American antiquity, as far back in fact as Coronado's march through Arizona in quest of the fabulons Seven Golden Cities of Cibola, will be presented in the regular weekly Continental Oil Company broadcas Wednesday night, February 1, over 23 N. B. C stations.

Following a general description of the beauty and richness of present day Arizona, Carveth Wells, famous globetrotter, presents some interesting historical facts by means of a fake interview with the ghost of Coronado. The spectre of the Spanish explorer comes jungling into the scene astride his favorite mule. The ensuing dialogue is both realistic and illuminating.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station W.M.A.Q. Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock

Dear Sirs: As a miner, I know the value of a dollar. So, by repeated attacks of lumbago, eight years ago I was laid off from work three months from the effects of an attack. A fellow worker told me about 6 & 3. I immediately began taking it. I used three bottles and have no signs of a return of my trouble since, remarkable but true.

Schools At Work Together

The annual inventory by Virginia high school principals of their organization for the direction of interscholastic competition has revealed a necesity for comparatively few changes in the twentieth year of the state wide program. A one act play contest last year was endorsed as a permanent activity. Protection of athletes by forbidding participation in both the quarter and half mile race was re affirmed. There was no wavering, in spite of the usual appeals, on Virginia's pioneering stand against state championship in sports. The age limit for athletic participation was made identical with the legal school age. Committees were set up to study awards, select a debate question, and to work out a special association of schools in three valley counties.

To plan for the future control and direction of the League a committee representing principals, superintendents and officials of the state department was authorized.

All these acts of the executive committee, scheduled for disposition at the council meeting February 18, are recorded in a brief bulletin which readers of The News may obtain by request to the Extension Division, University, Va

Mother-In-Law Takes The Place Of A Mother

"I Really Believe Scalf's Indian River Tonic Saved My Life," Says Young Mother

Mrs. Anderson writes: "When our first child was about two years old, I began having sick stomach and dizzy headaches. I also had indigestion. My Doctor said he thinks that I had malaria and treated me for that disease, but I grew worse and had been up only a few minutes at a time for two months. I felt as if there was no hope that I could ever be well again.

One day my mother-in-law brought me a bottle of Scalf's Indian River Tonic and asked me to try it. I followed her advice and great were the results. By the time I had taken three doses, I was feeling better and by the time I had taken a bottle I felt like a new person. I really believe Scalf's Indian River Tonic saved my life.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Sterlin Anderson,
Balkan, Ky.

Work Relief Money Gets Roads For Lee

Ewing Making Three Miles Highway. Twenty-two Projects In County

The Work Relief Money for Lee County road work is giving a good account of itself. To date some 22 projects are under way and and likely two are three more to be started. The projects todate are: Ewing on State Highway, C. D. Fugate foreman, 80 men.

E. O. Robison, Martins Creek south of Rose Hill, 30 men. Clyde Sexton, South Rose Hill, 20 men near Flatwoods; Hunters Gap, west 15 men. Osborne Valley, Blackwater, B. L. Peters, 15 men. Flours Gap Blackwater, E. R. Wallen, 15 men. Sugar Run near Hubbard Springe, H. M. Chadwell, 10 men. Ocoonita road, E. R. Statzer, 20 men. Russell's Store, Hagan, G. A. Bales, 10 men. Hardy's Creek, Burg Sexton, 20 men. Pocket east, O. E. Jones, 30 men. Skagg Hill, Pennington Gap. J. F. Carpenter, 30 men. Bundy near Calvin, J. C. Capps, 15 men. Stout's Store east Stickleyville, Sam Hobbs foreman, 15 men. Jasper on Lovelady road west toward Stickleyville. H. Carr Bailey, 10 men.

Very good progress has been made on all these projects. From one to two miles has been covered by these crews on each project. Perhaps the most outstanding project in the county is Ewing west, under foreman C. D. Fugate, who has had 80 men each week. He has two miles nearly graded, which which is entirely on a new survey where traffic is not disturbed. The citizens in the west end of the county have ambition to see the State Highway finished to Cumberland Gap, Tenn. It is great relief to secure the aid of the Work Relief money to futher this ambition, so that travel can be made more comfortable in passing throngh Lee county. Mr. Fugate reports that he has moved dirt for 30 cents a yard.

On Skaggs Hill, under J. F. Carpenter, a good surface has been made. The large bluff of rock is now being removed by steam drill etc. Many miles in the county will be surfaced, graded and drained, by the Relief work, if weather and funds provide. Two or three other projects is to be added in a few days. On many of the roads worked, the travel has been held up and made burdensome. Complaints have been heard accordingly. Yet the work has to go on in mid winter, for the money is to be spent for relief in mid winter and not summer.

Green Hands Get Initiated

On Friday, January 27, the green hands of the Agriculture class of Pennington Hi were initiated.

The following officers carrying out the initiation were:

S. L. Carpenter, Advisor.
Chas. Cecil, President.
Fred Smith, Vice-Pres.
Ralph Smith, Secretary.
Sherman Keel, Treas.
Howard Zion, Reporter.

The ones receiving the green hands initiation were:

Clyde Arnold
Clyde Myers
Paul Myers
R. S. Orr
Jack Parsons
Junior Parsons
J. C. Smith
Tip Smith
Jack Stacy
Fred Milhorn
Lawrence Moore

Two officers were also initiated, Howard Zion and Sherman Keel.

After the smoke cleared away and the boys got their nerve back the class decided the Father-Son banquet would be given sometime in February.

Cardina's Win Two More Games

The undefeated Bonny Blue Cards won their 13th game by triumphing over Calvin 36 to 33 in the News-Sentinel Lee County League.

The Cards appeared sluggish, being ragged in both offense and defense. Cross with 12 points, led for the Cards, while Burton starred for Calvin with 16.

In Saturday's game the Cardinals continued their long string of wins by adding the 14th victory, defeating L. M. U. by score 41 to 34. The Cards played quite an improved game tho not quite approaching their usual form. Tyler Horton, again returned to the top with leading honors of 15 points. Pickle followed nicely with 12. Wasson was indeed the star for Lincoln. A large crowd attended.

Charles Wax Signs With Sox

Charles Bayford (Soapy) Wax, catcher for the Pennington club in the News-Sentinel Lonesome Pine League last season, has been signed by the Chicago White Sox.

Wacks signed a contract with the White Sox a few weeks ago, but it was not until Chicago officials had invested his college and minor league experience that they announced he had been acquired.

Wacks, who lives at Norton, has received instructions to attend the White Sox Spring training camp.

Wacks is a husky-built young man, having played football for two years at V. M. I. as well as being an outstanding baseball player there.

Last season Wacks led the Lonesome Pine League in hitting, having an average of 410. He was also the outstanding receiver in the league. He possesses one of the best throwing arms of any player in this section.

Wacks was recommended to the White Sox by Manager R.P. Stewart. He has been in communication with Chicago officials for several weeks.

The Mountain Empire Magazine

To Continue As A Quarterly Publication During 1933

The Winter Number of the Mountain Empire Magazine is now being mailed from the office of Southwestern Virginia, Incorporated at Wytheville. This number is the fourth quarterly issue and complete one year of publication. The first issue appearing as the Spring Number. The second or Summer issue was a Bicentennial Number featuring the Virginia State Commission on Conservation and Development. The third or Autum Number featured the Virginia Blue Grass Trail. The one now being mailed features the Educational Institutions of the great Southwest. Throughout the four quarterly numbers a central or key article by Associate. Editor F. B. Kegley has been run. Mr. Kegley devotes his entire time to research work for the magazine, and being qualified as he is, will insure the most accurate coverage of the actual history and facts about Southwestern Virginia possible to prepare. His articles are logical in their approach beginning with origins. They are continuous in their scope but not serialed, that is, each is complete in itself but together they will form an accurate history of Southwestern Virginia, such as is not now in existence, Mr. Kegley will continue these articles indefinitely until the complete story of Southwestern Virginia has been told.

The directors of Southwestern Virginia, Inc., in regular session voted to continue the magazine as a quarterly publication for another year with the thought of converting to a monthly thereafter. The comments on the magazine received from within and beyond the territory served by Southwestern Virginia, Incorporated have been most gratifing. It reaches a very select circulation roster. Each number is printed by the Stone Printing and Manufacturing Company of Roanoke and no expense is spared to produce the best in the way of photographs and cuts.

The four outside front cover views in the order of their appearance were: The Culbert Limestone plant; New River showing the N. & W. Railway and the Lee Highway; a section of the Golf Course at the Roanoke Country Club; and a typical Trout Stream, such as can be found in Lee, Wise, Scott or in almost any of the nineteen Southwestern Counties. The outside back cover page has been given over to attractive views of Natural Tunnel, Mountain Lake and the Pinnacle. The Magazine is unusual in that it is dedoted entirely to the section and contains little advertising. Special numbers on the various counties in the section will be run at odd times until all counties are included. One extra issue will contain a roster of world war Veterans.

The subscription charge is $1.00 per year. Four regular and possible two exta numbers will be published during the year 1933 beginning with the Spring Number. No subscription will be receivable, after the Spring Number has gone to press. The Board of Directors have extended the life of the magazine exactly one year and no subscription for the year can be accepted if it does not reach the Mountain Empire or Southwestern Virginia, Incorporated in time to be included in the year's contract with the printers. No copies will be available at news stands and no reserve supply retained for later distribution.

Bonny Blue

Mrs. H. C. Benton has returned home from the Lee General Hospital where she was confined for several days.

A large attendance was was present at church Sunday night. Perhaps they realized beforehand that Rev. E. L. Crump had an interesring sermon in view.

L. M. Rayburn is the proud owner of a new automobile.

Coach Sewell Shanks, of the Bonny Blue Cardinals says, his boys are out to win, and don't we believe him.

Calvin went down to defeat by a close score in a hard fought game here last Friday night. Calvin played a splednid game that deserved praise. The final score was 36-33 favor of the Cardinals.

Everyone who saw the L. M. U. game here Saturday night, witnessee one of the most thrilling events of the season. From the time the game started until the final whistle, it was a terrific battle. Horton that fast moving Carson-Newman star led the victory march for the Cardinals playing in the limelight with Pickle another chap who is showing up good this season. Virgil Payne came in strong for the scoring lead in the second half. Wasson the hard playing boy from L. M. U. led for his team. L. M U. was defeated 41-34. A large crowd of Cardinal fans witnessed the fall of the Harrogate team.

Bear In Virginia Mountains

Richmond— Announcement of the recent killing of bear in the Virginia mountains has been received with seeming incredulity in many sections of the state. Considerable editorial comment has followed such announcements from editors outspoken in their skepticism.

Official records at the office of the State Department of Game and Inland Fisheries reveal the fact that bear are numerous in many Virginia counties, as many as 340 having been officially reported killed in Virginia in the year 1932. During this year bear were reported killed in the counties of Amherst, Bath, Bedford, Bland, Botetourt, Highland, Nelson, and Rockbridge. As many as 50 bear were reported this year as killed in Alleghany county and the same number shot in the county of Augusta. There were also 55 bear reported killed in the Dismal Swamp section in Nansemond and in Norfolk counties.

Bear are said to be quite numerous in the mountains of Rockingham County. Game Warden Wade C. Fawlecy reported as many as 118 bear killed in Rockingham county alone during the months of September, Octobery November, and December, of 1931, and January, of 1932.

During the epidemic of forest fires which occured in Virginia in 1930 the bodies of several bear were found burned to death in Alleghany county and a report of this made by game wardens.

There are several game refuges established by the state in the Shenandoah National Forest, and quite large one in the western Augusta vicinity. These asylums for wild life are marked with large metal signs, painted yellow with black lettering, setting forth the boundaries. Not long after these signs had been put up it was found that they had in many instances been torn down; and this was reported by the game warden to the board of county supervisors The warden was thereupon instructed to arrest the culprit.

The supervisors were astonished to learn from the warden that it was no human agency which had destroyed the signs, but that these had been torn down by bears. The signs were thereupon removed from the trees, against which they had been nailed, and were suspended from wires, out of reach of bruin.

Bear in the Virginia mountains are of the black bear variety and range from 200 to 500 pounds in weight.

Miss Thyra Herndon, who has been on the sick list, is able to continue her duties of teaching school.

J. T. Smith

On Thursday morning at 7 o'clock, January 19, 1932 after a stroke of paralysis which caused much suffering for five days, the death angel visited the bome of J. T. Smyth and called him away to join his wife and two sons who had gone before.

Mr. Smyth was born near Elk Knob, July 30, 1845. He was 83 years, 5 months and 19 days old.

He was married to Susan Ellin Barker of Dobson, N. C., January 1, 1874. To this union were born nine children, six sons and three daughters.

The death angel had visited this home three times before and claimed two sons, Edward G. 19, S. Logan 30 and his wife Susan E. The children who survive are: Dr. Z. P. and A. L. Smyth of Appalachia Mrs. Minerva Tritt of Dryden, Mrs. Lula E. Brown, Joseph T. and Mrs. Belle Drummond of Pennington Gap, Arlington R. Smyth of Chattanooga, Tenn., and 13 grandchildren.

God in his wisdom has recalled, the boon his love had given.

He was a devoted Christian father and husband. He has gone away from us now but his works will follow him and his influence for good will endure forever. The entire community will miss him. He will also be missed as father and peace maker of the school nearby and most of all by his daughter and son, who were in the home with him.

When we look over his life, and the bright side, knowing how sad it is to give him up and at the same time appreciate the glorious influence that will follow him, we are constrained to say a beautiful life ends not in death.

Funeral services were conducted at the home by Rev. C. F. Watkins of Pennington Cap, at 10 o'clock January 21, the body was laid to rest in the family cemetery by the side of his wife and two sons.

A large crowd of relatives and friends who were grieving their loss were present to pay their last respects to the loved one, who has gone on where all will be reunited in that home beyond the grave.

The flower bearers were: Mrs. Lola Habern, Mrs. Edith Smyth, Misses Edna Tritt, Hazel Smyth, Mabel Orr, Marie Tritt, Ella Sue Tritt, Maurine,Smyth, Evelyn Myers Alemeda Lee Drummond, Magdaline Parsons, and Lorena Smyth

The beautiful flowers from friends and neighpors was a tribute to one so well loved by all who knew him. May this home be united in that home beyond the sky.

To the sorrowing ones we extend our heartfelt sympathy bid them sorrow not as those who have no hope, for soon they will meet on that bright shore, where sad parting come no more.

Thy work here on earth is done, Jesus has come and called thee away.

You'll say:

"Whoa, Engine! what's got into you?"

Here's gas to excite motors. It makes them quick on the trigger . . . fast on the move. Choking is hardly required for a quick, snappy start and a take-off like a quail on the wing.

Even old motors . . . wheezy, snorting, complaining motors . . . cut capers you just can't believe. If you doubt it, just try it. It's like rich, racing blood injected into old veins.

This gasoline is so new . . . so "different" . . . so quick, fast, powerful, and economical, it's hard to give it a name. Perhaps YOU can. When you FEEL your motor's response, it may come to you like a flash.

Ask at any Conoco station for the new bronze-colored, high-test gasoline —and an entry blank. Help name it and describe it. You may win a part of $10,000.00. You are SURE to win a grand, new thrill, and that is worth a heap. Make the test TODAY.

Half Million Must Be Licensed

Richmond—The Division of Motor Vehicles is making preperation for the renewal of automobile licenses. It is estimated that approximately 275,000 license tags will be issued by the Division and its 105 branches between March 15, the date the tags go on sale, and April 1, the expiration date of the 1932 tags.

It is also estimated that approximately 500,000 Operators must be licensed by the Department before June 30 if the operators wish to secure the Operators' license without cost. The law requires that each operator of a motor vehicle have an operators' license after June 30. The law also provides that the fee of fifty cents be paid for each license issued after June 30, 1933. All operators' license will expire on June 30, 1934. The Department is preparing approximately 400,000 license application blanks which will go in the mail to reach the owners by March 15 at which time the new license will go on sale.

Along with the application for license is enclosed a folder of suggestions, and instructions, together with an application for Operator's license. All automobile owners are requested to use the Operator's license application at once if they have not previously filed their application. If they have secured their Operator's license they are requested to pass the application along to someone who has not secured their license.

The Division of Motor Vehicles is soliciting the co-operation and support of every owner of an automobile and of every operator of a motor vehicle with in this state, and ungently requests that they file their applications with the Department or one of its branches so that there will be no last minute rush around April 1 for the automobile license tags, or the last minute rush around June 30 for their operators' licenses.

Carson Tells of His Commission

Richmond—W. E. Carson, chairman of the State Commission on Conservation and Developement, appeared this week before the Senate Economy Committee, where he discussed the activities of the several bureaus of the commission. He brought to the attention of the committee the state's advertising and publicity program, showing how this had increased the tourists trade throughout Virginia.

With a comparatively small sum limiting its advertising, there has nevertheless been brought into the state through tourist travel, said he, between $30,000,000 and $50,000,000 annually. To have Virginia realize from this source of revenue proportionately with other commonwealths, it would be necessary, said he, to expend an amount of money sufficient to advertise as Florida, California and other states have been doing for years.

Chairman Carson gave also the history of the Colonial National Monument, the Shenandoah National Park, the Skyline Drive, the location of the President's Camp on the Rapidan, the restoration of the George Washington Mill, the statistics gathered over a peorid of years to estimate the potential development of hydro-electric power on the water course of the state and the taxable values already created by developements in this line, as well as the supply of water for the towns and cities in the Commonwealth.

The erection of historical markers on the highways, which has received the most favorable comment through the Nation, was completely covered by the Chairman.

The Division of Geology and Topographic Mapping of the state, the Chairman said, is one of the most important and necessary projects of any of the state activities. It is necessary for any industrial plant or developement to know the topography of the country before establishing a plant. This Division has been the cause of a number of large manufacturing plants locating in Virginia.

The Division of Parks and Landscape Engineering is performing a very necessary work, said Mr. Carson. Lectures have been delivered to the Garden Clubs of the state and a definite program of beautification arranged for them by this Division. A number of schools and colleges have been given lecture courses on this subject, said he.

Four Boys Confess Wrecking Of Train

Norton—Four boys ranging in age from 8 to 10 yrs. have confessed before Juvenile Judge, J. T. Hamilton, that they were responsible for the wreck on the Interstate Railroad last December which resulted in the death of Frank Muneyhun, fireman, and the serious burning of John Henry Jarvis, engineer. Because they are under the statutory age of fourteen, Judge Hamilton paroled them to their parents, with instructions to report to him monthly.

One of the boys admitted that he broke the lock with a 10-inch rock, and the other three joined him in turning the switch half way. This testimony was corroborated by other youthful witnesses. Thirty minutes later, a big Mallet engine pulling 29 loaded coal cars plowed through the open switch, wrecking the engine and half dozen cars. Moneyhun was scald to death and Jarvis badly burned.

Relieved By Taking Cardui

"I was weak and run-down and suffered quite a bit with pains in my side," writes Mrs. Nick Barranco, of Beaumont, Texas. "I was nervous. I did not rest well at night, and my appetite was poor.

"My mother had used Cardui with beneficial result, so I decided to take it. I surely am glad I did, for it stopped the pain in my side and built up my general health. I took seven bottles in all."

Danger to Highway System

Philadelphia — Serious impairment, if not actual stagnation, faces the great highway system of the United States in consequence of the widespread diversion of motor funds to other than good roads purposes, according to J. Borton Weeks, President of the American Motorists' Association.

"The sinister aspects of diversion are fast becoming apparent", said Mr. Weeks, in a statement here today, "and there are country-wide indications of a motorist revolt against continued use of motor funds for any purpose except highway extension, improvement and maintenance. T is revolt cannot come too soon if the highway program is to be saved.

"There are in the United States approximately 3,200,000 miles of road, of which only 128,000 or four percent, are paved. Roads classified as 'improved' total 700,000 miles. From these figures it can readily be seen that the task of building the highways in the United States has hardly begun. Diversion not only seriously interferes with the upkeep of present highways, but postpones far into the future the ultimate completion of the country's road system.

"In utter disregard of the country's need for more highways, various states last year diverted to other purposes more than $120,000,000 contributed by motorists specifically for roads. Motor fund raiders probably will divert even more this year unless motors make a determined stand against it "Effects of diversion are already apparent in badly maintained roads in some states. Such highways become a liability instead of an asset. The economic loss through damage to motor vehicles and injury to their occupants is enormous.

"Another danger to the impairment of credit which will result if there are any defaults on interest or principal on the many millions of highway bonds now outstanding. These bond payments, in most cases, are to be made from gasoline tax and license funds which are being diverted to other uses. Obiously, any such impairment of credit would seriously embarrass roadbuilding programs of the future."

Books To Own

To devotees of mystery fiction a new Van Dine detective story is something of an event, and rightfully so, for the creator of Philo Vance is rather generally recognized as a master of his art. Enthusiastic admirers have hailed him as a worthy successor to Poe and Doyle— "the greatest detective-story writer discovered this century." Sales of the series have been enormous, each new book outselling its predecessors. Over two years have elapsed since the publication of "Scarab Murder Case", the fifth of the Philo Vance stories. And now on Friday the thirteenth, appears in book form the latest account of that remarkable criminologist, "The Kennel Murder Case".

Like other Van Dine stories the setting is New York City and its environs. The body of Archer Coe, wealthy collector of Chinese cermics, is discovered in his bedroom under circumstances that clearly indicate suicide, the only door is securely bolted on the inside, all windows are locked, a discharged pistol is clasped in the hand of the deceased, and a bullet has penetrated his right temple. While Markham and Heath are inclined to regard the case as a typical suicide, Vance is quick to sense something peculiar about the situation. Confident that Archer Coe was not the type to kill himself the detective points out several inconsistencies, particularly the position of the body, its clothing, and the circumstances under which it was found. The arrival of the coroner soon confirms Vance's suspicion. A hasty examination reveals a slight fracture of the skull, a broken rib, and a mortal wound from a stab in the back. Curiously enough, the victim is wearing a dressing gown which shows no trace of the stabbing, while the coat and vest bearing the mark of the dagger are hung in the closet.

At this point the butler interrupts to report the discovery of a wounded Scotch terrier behind a curtin in the front hall. Since no one in the house had ever seen the dog, Vance regards it as a most important clue inevitably connected with the murderer. Halting the investigation long enough to rush the dog to a veterinarian, Vance returns to question the inmates of the house.

As usual in a Van Dine story, the investigation centers around a small group of characters more or less in close contact with the victim. Alice Lake his ward, maks no effort to conceal her dislike for him. Raymond Wrede, a suitor for her hand, also hated him because of his opposition to the match. Even his own brother, Brisbane Coe, has little affection for him. Also under suspicion is Signonr for the Milan Museum of Oriental Antiquities, temporarily in the house while negotiating for the purchase of a part of the Coe collection. Liang Tsung Wei, the cook, and Gamble, the butler, complete the household.

With his usual skill Mr. Van Dine leads us to suspect first one, then another of the group as new and seemingly contradictory clues are uncovered. Not until the murderer himself has perished by a sort of poetic justice is the solution finnally revealed.

"The Kennel Murder Case" is a typical Van Dine story— ingeniously planned, intensely interesting, consistently plausible. and excellently written. It does not attain the degree of suspense developed in "The Bishop Murder Case", nor does it maintain the fine balance of suspicion among characters that distinguishes the "Green" and the "Scarab" murder cases. It does provide what appears to be a hopelessly complex situation, a murder under circumstances so mysterious and contradictory as to prelude solution. Interest centers chiefly around the modus operandi of the crime, rather than the criminal himself. When the secret of the bolted door is revealed, the rest of the solution is somewhat anticlimatic.

Earlier Philo Vance stories have disclosed the detective's astounding knowledge of chess, mathematics, criminology, Egyptian art, and other specialized fields. The latest addition to the series shows him a master of Chinese ceramics, as well as an authority on Scotch terriers. The book is dedicated to the Scottish Terrier Club of America.

Next week Lambert Davis will review "Ann Vickers", Sinclair Lewis's first novel since the awarding to him of the Nobel Prize in Literature. These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

School News

Supervisor of Secondary Education, visited the school Thursday morning. He made a complete inspection of both buildings, visiting each teacher and observing a part of the classroom work. Mr. Blair seemed very much pleased with both the general condition of the buildings and progress of studies. He suggested that we get more books for the library.

Mr. Burke also visited St. Charles and Calvin High Schools.

The Lee County teachers have been attending the third and last meeting of the study course in curiculum revision.

Mrs. Pearl Ewing, in her discussion on 'Organizing Instruction', attempted to show the wide variations in the way subject matter is organized, and to show that organization centers either around units of subject matter, or around child experiences, which involve desirable activities.

In the talk on selecting subject matter, Miss Seluda Sewell explained the fact that regardless of the point of view from which the curiculum is constructed, subject matter has an important place in the educational process. Hence selecting suitable subject matter and relating it to the learning process are important curiculum problem.

Mr. Hobbs, Principal of Flatwoods High School, discussed the different types of tests for measuring the outcomes of Instruction. Mr. Hobbs said that in general, teachers are too limited with respect to the type of measurment employed and the purpose for which the results are used.

About sixty-five percent of the county teachers have attended these meetings.

Mr. Wynn, representive of the American Bible Society, gave a very interesting chapel talk, Wednesday moruing. He used as his subjeet, 'Be Sure Your Sins Will Find You Out'. Mr. Wynn told a very interesting story from the Old Testament.

Mr. Darby, representative of the Fredricksburg State Teachers College, visited the school Thursday and talked to the Senior girls.

Prof. Bradbury and the Chemistry class started spring cleaning by giving the laboratory a cleaning up.

The home economics class entertained themselves by giving a party Tuesday night, in the home economics room. Tea and cake was served. Several games were played. Music by Fern Kelly, tap dancing by Alta Blair Fry. Prizes were won by Alta Blair Fry and Jewell Luntsford, who was a guest at the party. Virginia Lewis was hostess, some of the girls impersonated the high school faculty.

St. Charles

The JuniorSenior high-school banquet was the feature social event of the week, presented Friday night at the St. Charles high school auditorium.

A feature program of entertainment with noted magic tricks was presented by Rev. E. L. Crump, of Bonny Blue. Prof. Wygal and Miss Erma Shufflebarger teachers, rendered short talks expressing their regrets in saying good bye to the Seniors within a few weeks.

A delightful luncheon was served and every one reported a lovely time.

Attorney V. C. Dotson rendered a very successful service in Abingdon Circuit Court last week getting a damage suit reduced from $7500 to $500. He returned home Thursday.

Add Rogers, former Lonesome Pine League catcher for St. Charles, returned home last week from quite an extended visit in Bristol.

The local fire department had a rush call to Benedict Sunday night but it was not necessary when it was found the water supply was ins ufficient One building was destroyed.

The Bonny Blue Cardinals who are writing new pages of basket ball history with 14 victories and no defeats thus far each week has a tough battle for Thursday night when they meet the Rogersville, Tenn. team, the Bonny Blue Teachers will help boost the card of entertainment Thursday by playing the Pennington Gap girls. Saturday night the Cardinals will take on their first wise county team, an aggregation from Coeburn which is also slated a hard battle.

It is rumored that the Cardinals may play the Woco Peps, of Knoxville, perhaps Emory and Henry and probably other stong teams from neighboring states in the near future although this statement has not been verified by the management of the Cards.

Unusual large crowds have been attending the Bonny Blue games recently since it seems that no competition has been able to check their record victory drive.

Harlan Road Being Surveyed by State

State Survey Being Made on Harlan Road From Pennington to Kentucky Line on Stone Creek. Six Weeks Work by Skilled Engineers. Kentucky Side of Harlan Road in Rapid Progress. Four Steam Shovels to be at Work in Sixty Days in Kentucky.

Road Finished to Cawood and Near Completion to Crummice Creek. Will Be Finished to Lee County Line By July 1st This Year From Kentucky Side

The Virginia Highway Commission has placed a crew of engineers on the Pennington to Harlan Highway and expect to be engaged for a peorid of six weeks completing same. The work is in charge of J. B. Logan, of Big Island, and assistants F. R. Sowers, Floyd, F K. Preston, Richmond, and Lym E. Grier Mr. Logan bears the reputation of being one of the best locating engineers on the Virginia force and the highway from Pennington to the Kentucky line deserves the best service the State has, since the Harlan highway has as much or more possibilities and resources as any highway in the state It not only taps the greatest coal field in the South but, has under way the development of a through interstate line from north to south. It is expected as soon as the survey is completed on Stone Creek that construction work will begin immediately, through the Lee County Work Relief Committee Registration. Some 80 men were registered and approved in the three mile limit of Stone Creek. It is thought that the R. F. C. highway work will proceed for two more months yet, providing Lee county gets its allocation of funds thought due it.

Rapid progress is being made on the Kentucky side of the Harlan highway, being completed to Cawood and near completion to Crummie Creek. At the present time two steam shovels are at work on the Harlan project One of these shovels is on Cranks Creek, south of the Black Mountain. In sixty days the Kentucky officials will have two more shovels on this line and mean to complete the project to the Lee county line by the 1st. of July.

Lee Citizen Speaks on "Old Days"

Caylor— Littleton Callihan, 79, years old, spoke to a large audience at Mount Carmel Church, Wednesday night, on "The Good Old Days." He contrasted the ways of living during his boyhood with these of modern times. He showed the opportunities in reach of the modern youth, in contrast to the lack of opportunity in his day.

He was asked many questions by the audience and answered them in a manner which produced many laughs, as well as helpful thoughts. Despite his 79 years, Mr. Callihan is active and works every day and, he says, has done so most of his life. He is full of plans for a busy summer on his farm on Dry Branch.

Lee County Schools Will Run 8 Months

Lee County Schools will continue for a period of eight months, through the courtesy of the County Board of Supervisors, who gave their consent for the Board to hold schools open, in order that pupils may receive full credit for year's work.

Due to the shortage of 10 percent cut in all fee's coming from the state, ordered by Governor Pollard recently, the school board ordered all teachers to arrange their work in such a way, that they might cover as much as possible in seven months, since this reduction by the governor had so diminished our funds making it impossible to operate the schools for full eight months term, and allow pupils to receive credit, and after receiving a letter from State Superintendent Dr. Sidney B. Hall, stating that at a meeting of the State Board of Education held upon January 23, 1933 they authorized the Department of Education to accredit high schools which maintained an 8 month's school term, provided the elementary schools also are maintained 8 months, and knowing that we would run short of funds to operate that length of time. I thought possibly that it would be advisable to read the letter to the Board of Supervisors, since they would be our only means of reaching the 8 months term, and they readily granted their consent for the School Board to continue them.

Thanks to the County Board of Supervisors, I feel they have the interest of the County's youth at heart and will help us to keep our schools going, during these perious and trying times.

Dr. Hall also stated, in his letter, that the County would have a cut in funds of approximately 25 percent for next year, from the state, which means our state appropriation will be reduced next year by around $20,000.

George Kale, Gates City, and Sexton Willis, Hayni, were designated first and second alternates, respectively to Johnson.

All candidates were directed to appear for the March 7 entrance examination with a view to admission to the academy on July 1.

Young Republican Club To Meet

The Young Republican Club will hold a meeting in the Pennington High School Building, Monday, February 13th, at 8 p. m.

Ten Reasons Why One Should Join American Legion

1. The blue and gold button of The American Legion testified service for God and country in war, and service to community, state and nation in time of peace. (PEACE-TIME SERVICE.)

2. You are making it possible to obtain your objective of every disabled ex-service man and his dependents taken care of by our government. (REHABILITATION.)

3. By belonging you are helping to carry out the great Child Welfare program that the Legion is sponsoring. (CHILD WELFARE.)

4. You are backing the greatest principals of Americanism by combating un-American principles, supporting patriotic education among the children and our citizens and making our communities better places to live in. (AMERICANISM.)

5. You will help teach sportsmanship and higher ideals to the youth of America through the Legion Junior Baseball, Boy Scout and School Medal Awards program. (JUNIOR EDUCATION.)

6. You will help in our great National Defense program for adequate national protection and through cooperation with the R. O. T. C. and C. M. T. C. programs. (NATIONAL DEFENSE.)

7. Every piece of legislation beneficial to ex-service men has found the American Legion behind the wheel. (LEGISLATION.)

8. You become a member of the most democratic organization in the world. No rank in the Legion, no race, no creed. Honorable discharge and service during the World war the only requirements. (NON PARTISANSHIP.)

9. You join up with a real bunch of "he men" who served side by side with you, through thick or thin; whether you were a millionaire or not, you were their buddy. (COMRADESHIP.)

10. Individually you and I can do little; collectively in the 10,653 Posts with over a million members we can accomplish any thing that is worthy. (ORGANIZATION.)

Letters to the Editor

Radford, Va.
Feb. 4, 1933.

Editor Powell Valley News:
Pennington Gap, Va.
Dear Sir:

Since returning to my home in Radford, Va., I have had an irresistible impulse to give further expression to my gratitude for the many kindnesses shown me by your paper and all the Ocoonita congregation. The meeting could not have been what it was without the hearty response of all forces. But the very happy expressions of kindness shown me in the home of Rev. Tip Burchette, wife and son, Prof. Arthur Burchette, and in other hom s, touched me deeply and will make the memory of my 10 days stay iu Ocoonita one of the richest of a life time. Also Brother Caner Johnson meant so much to me in the work.

May God's blessings rest upon the good people of Ocoonita. I love them all as Jonathan loved David.

I will thank you very much if yon will give space to this attempt to express my gratitude to all my friends in around Ocoonita.

Very truly yours,

Why We Seldom Tell the Truth About Ourselves—Explained by Prof. Laird, Colgate University Psychologist, in The American Weekly, the Magazine Distributed With Next Sunday's Washington Herald advertisement 6-1t

Convict Three In Virginia Killing

Stuart— Three of five men indicted on murder charges in connection with the slaying of Patrick County Constable, R. B. Sheppard were under penitentiary sentences Saturday, ranging from life imprisonment to thirty years.

Court adjourned yesterday after meting out a 30-year sentence to William Waller and a 35 year term to his brother, Sam, and next Thursday, will begin trial of Harvey Vernon, another of the quintet, and reputed 'king bee bootlegger'. James Midkill will be the last to come to trial.

Oral Burk, the first of the quintet to face the jury, was sentenced to life imprisonment. Later, testified as a defense witness in the case of William Waller, he said he fired the shots which killed Sheprard and wounded Town Sergeant Joseph Francis.

Bonny Blue

The Young Men's Bible Class held their regular monthly meeting at the recreation building monday night. Several business matters were discussed which, the president, Carson Roberts, hopes, will greatly improve the class.

Clarence 'Babe' Brabson, well known local boy, proposes to bring to Sunday School an old lady who has never attended in her life. 'Babe' plans to bring her here by taxi, as the lady lives several miles from here. This act of kindness was suggested by The Young Men's Bible Class.

Rev. J. Wiser, representative of The American Bible Society at Richmond gave a lecture here. Tuesday night, on the history and distribution of the Bible. Approximately 300 people attended the meeting.

170 were present at prayer meeting Wednesday night.

Rev. Wiser, of Richmond, preached here Sunday night.

J. H. Miles, Robert Knowles and Mrs. T. Payne are doing very nicely at Lee General Hospital.

Truman Ely, formely of this community, now of Chevrolet, Ky., was a business visitor here last week.

P. L Barrow has returned home again, after an absence of two months.

Joe Gibbs Jr. was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Nolan of Pennington Gap, Sunday.

F. M. Mize, of Jonesville, was a caller in Pennington, Saturday.

Our Fifth Estate

Edmund Burke first marked the existence of a Fourth Estate when he pointed to the reporter's galley and declared the public press was more important than the other three estates of lords temporal, lords spiritual and the people. A protagonist of science proposes a Fifth Estate, the workers in scientific research. This Fifth Estate, like Burke's, is numerically feeble, and insignificant, probably about 100,000 persons. It sits in the gallery not even as interpreters but as mere onlookers; it has no political influence. Yet it has 'recast civilization' in laboring to bring home to every man the wonders, the significance and the underlying harmony of the world; to the end that all undertakings may be better ordered, all lives enriched, all spirits fortified.

One center of such research in Virginia has issued its seventeenth annual report of published works. Besides incidental writings, important inquiries in the fields of letters and the humanities, and in natural, social and medical sciences, are presented. A copy of this 107-page bibliography will be sent upon request of readers of The News addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Pioneer Spook Heard on Radio

Were the ghost of Buffalo Bill to meet and speak to some modern mortal, says the explorer, Carveth Wells it is likely that the conversation would be very similar to that heard next Wednesday night, February 15, in the Continential Oil Company radio program over 23 N B. C. stations.

While taking his hearers on an imaginary ramble through Colorado, the "Treasure State," Wells meets the specre of the famous pony express rider and showman near his burial place on Lookout Mountain. They talk of old days and new days; compare the stagecoach to the automobile, and examine the Cody rifle, "Lucretia Borgia," which brought down 4,000 buffalo. Even facts about prehistoric Colorado are included in the broadcast.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station W. M. A. Q. Wednesday night at 9:30 p. m.

L. & N. Veteran Is Dead

Louisville—Capt. Joseph Doody, 73, pioneer railroad conductor in Eastern and Southeastern Kentucky, died Sunday. Capt. Doody, with the L. & N. since 1883, was on the first train that went thru Cumberland Gap to Norton in 1890. He was buried in Louisville, Ky., Tuesday.

Pennington Gap Girls Defeated

Pennington High School girls fell short in the final moments of their game with the Bonny Blue Teachers last night, and lost 34 to 29. Reasor and Curry with 15 points each, led for the Teachers, while Sprinkle with 17 points, was best for Pennington. Rhea and Adams were outstanding on the defense for the visitors, while Iva Engle played best defensively for the Teachers.

Lineups follow:

Teachers	Pos.	Penn.
Reasor, 15	F	Sprinkle, 17
Smyth, 4	F	McElroy, 9
Curry, 15	F	Reasor, 3
Thomas	G	Rhea
Payne	G	Adams
Bryson	G	Daugherty

How to train BABY'S BOWELS

Both bottle-fed or breast-fed, with no tendency to be constipated, would thrive if they received daily half a teaspoonful of this old family doctor's prescription for the bowels.

That is one sure way to train tiny bowels to healthy regularity. To avoid that fretfulness, vomiting, crying, failure to gain, and other ills of constipated babies.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is good for any baby. For this you have the word of a physician. Forty-seven years of practice taught him just what babies need to keep their little bowels active, regular keep little bodies plump and healthy. For Dr. Caldwell specialized in the treatment of women and little ones. He attended over 5,000 births without loss of one mother or baby.

A Doctor's Family Laxative

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go, get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acidity. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

Guy Pennington

Guy Pennington, about 18, of near Robbins Chapel in Lee county, who slipped and fell on a rock while working in the Calvin community on January 8, finally succumbed at 2:45 a. m., Monday, January 30, after a long battle for his life in the Norton Hospital. Fred H. King, Norton Funeral Director, took the body to Robbins Chapel Monday where funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon, interment following in the nearby cemetery.

Three days after his fall, young Pennington developed an abscess on his bruised hip. The infection spread rapidly to other parts of his body, creating other abscesses, which in turn polluted the youth's bloodstream. Blood-poisoning set in in short order, being complicated further by the consecptive development of menipgitis and encephalitis, When he was rushed to Norton Hospital on January 11, medical authorities entertained little hope for his recovery, but until the morning of January 30, young Pennington waged a game, but losing battle for his life.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Rowlett motored to Jonesville last week to visit their daughter, Mrs. John Cridlin. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Cridlin, who was joined by Mr. Cridlin for a week end visit here.

Mrs. D. V. Richmond spent one day last week with Mrs. Lucien Humphreys, at Gibson Station.

R. D. Fugate and N. B. Richmond were among those who attended a banquet given by a number of tobacco growers in Middlesboro, Ky, recently.

Jim Richmond, who is attending the U. of Ky, at Lexington, Ky., spent the past week end at home.

Miss Beulah Southern, of L. M. U., visited Mr. and Mrs. H. C. T. Richmond Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bailey spent Sunday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Bailey.

Mrs. D. V. Richmond spent Thursday with her mother, Mrs. C. D. Fugate at Hagan.

Misses Lucille and Fannie Orr, Dryden, spent Sunday night with Misses Mae Reasor and Elizabeth Bailey. They were returning from a week end visit with relatives in Knoxville, Tenn.

John Coppock, of Knoxville, Tenn., was the guest last week of Clarence Carder, son of Rev. and Mrs. M. H. Carder.

The Book Sampler

Ann Vickers stood on a corner in Book-Land looking for some social abuse to berate when a blindly walking man stumbled into her It was Theodore Bulpington taking a holiday from H. G. Wells' lastest book, 'Bulpington of Blup'. 'Why don't you look where you're going?' Miss Vickers demanded with all the assurance of the only female progeny of the only American Nobel Prize winner. Besides she was naturally self-assured. 'Living in the present and right thinking is what you need. You're imagining again.' No wonder her army officer had jilted her if she jumped at people like that, thought Bulpington. 'Do not blame me,' he apologized, 'H. G. Wells did it. Of course, it was decent of him to give my unhappy youth an escape in a more important other self, but he made me a poseur in the end just to lecture at me. He just had to instruct someone. Isn't Sinclair Lewis reponsible for your own muddled state?' 'No-' said Miss Vickers, 'I could never be other than I am. I had to get ahead, and I had to get a love. They don't go together somehow.

Unnoticed, a gentle, pretty brunette had joined them. 'Yes, they do,' broke in Fru Suzane. 'Look at me. Marriage made me somebody instead of a baker's daughter. And I've found that it pays to be virtuous'- this pointedly in view to certain rumors as to Ann Vickers' past.

'But what about your man?' Zola - Henri Barpusses's creation - was blundering to someone's rescue. Ever since the Dreyfus case Zola was like that 'His dishonesties were worse than lack of position. I don't mention infidelity as I'm a disciple of naturalism myself. But-!'

Ann Vickers liked him for that. Besides he had a good physique. 'Yes. Isn't it better to live as I do than to wander through the pages like Suzanne? Could she have won the Danish Prize for Johannes Buchholtz without a mean villainess and a lot of folk-customs?' Zola felt that matter were becoming complicated. Suzzane would proably cry; Bulpington was dreamiug again; and Ann Vickers had a way of, when she liked people, letting down her hair. Zola didn't care to be another outlet for her executive career. 'I don't know,' he said. I have troubles of my own. I've lots more life than most characters in biographies; the publisher claims I've been revitalized- glandular operation, proably. But after all, I'm only a shade of someone else.' He gazed anxiously up the street. Sacre! Here comes Emile Zola now, and he mightn't like me. It's always most fatal for a subject to meet himself'- and Barbusse's Zola vanished in the other direction

John W. Green, Jr.

John W. Green, Jr., son of J. W. Green, Pennington Gap, was born September 6, 1917, died December 20, 1932, age 15 years, 3 months, 14 days. The accidental discharge of a gun with which he had gone out to hunt caused his untimely death.

Even in the dark hour of grief one thought stands out bright; John had chosen the better way of life. Last July, during a revival at Friendship Baptist Church, near his grandparents home, he was converted, joined the church, and was baptized by the Rev. Dewey Jones, pastor of that church.

He was a remarkable boy, in that he was more mature in thought and action than the average boys of his age. He was very devoted to his father and the members of his home here, but he was very especially attached to his aged grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Smith, with whom he spent much of his time in their home near Jonesville, and while they are crushed and heavy hearted over his going, they can console themselves with the thought that it was largely their unswerving Christian influence that led John to be the devoted Christian boy that he was.

Also John gave them all the comfort, companionship and helpfulness that was possible for a boy of his age, in this their aged and lonely days, spending much of his vacation time and week ends with them, and always attentive to their needs and comfort. Even the night before his death he read aloud the story of Mathew of the birth of Christ; retired, then, before dropping off to sleep called to his grandmother to know if "there was anything she wanted."

It is hard to give up such a one in the bloom of youth, but—

"Jesus, while our hearts are bleeding,
O'er the spoils that death hath won;
We would at this solemn meeting,
Calmly say, Thy will be done."

W. B. Moore, Pastor Christian Church, Pennington Gap.

Seek new Highway In Wise County

Big Laurel— A peittion is being circulated in northwest Wise county praying the establishment of a new state highway starting at Scott Robinson's store on U. S. 23 where the Tasse postoffice used to be located on Indian Creek and cross Indian Creek Ridge to Big Laurel a distance of about four miles. If this road is established work on it will probably start immediately and before the county's R. F. C. funds are exhausted. It will serve a large number of people on what is known as the Hash Hollow and give short route from Big Laurel and the Guest River section to Jenkins and other east Kentucky points.

Millions Of Baby Chicks

Richmond, — Poultry raising and the selling of eggs and baby chicks has become easily one of the outstanding industries in the present day agricultural development of Virginia, representing today around 15 per cent of the total farm cash income. In 1931 the poultry industry brought about $12,000,000 into Virginia, and while in 1932 this amount had decreased to around $9,000,000, the industry proportionately held its own much better than other farming activities.

The poultry business in Virginia is becoming highly standardized and is now largely assisted by state agencies. A standardization program on poultry is conducted under the supervision of the Virginia Department of Agricultural College, at Blacksburg.

Many of the larger poultry houses in Virginia today are equiped with electric lighting systems, which has the effect of keeping the hen on the job day and night. Under this high power program the number of eggs secured from the best layers is really remarkable.

Local hatcheries cater, of course, to the needs of the producers supplying the big Eastern markets, located in larger metropolitan centers. These demands, strange enough, frequently differ. In New York, for instance, the preference seems to be for the pure white egg secured from the Leghorn, while in Boston the brown, or buff egg is preferred, which is the product of the Rhode Island Reds and other heavy breeds.

Literally millions of eggs are shipped annually from Virginia to out of state cities such as the two mentioned, where they supply not only the demands of the hotels, but likewise, are disposed of by the hundreds of thousands to drug stores and other soft drink emporiums.

According to Hollis Shomo, of the State Division of markets, each Virginia State Certified Hatchery, as well as each Virginia State certified Poultry Flock, is constantly under supervision. A Virginia Certified Hatchery is not permitted to set any eggs other than those produced by a Virginia Certified Flock. The eggs they set must weigh not less than 24 ounces to the dozen, thus insuring the purchaser of a high grade product.

A number of hatcheries in this and other states, says Mr. Shomo, are advertising for sale blood tested and inspected chicks, which work is not being done under state supervision and is not recognized by the Division of Animal Industry, of the Department of Agriculture. Such hatcheries are not under state supervision and it is reported in some cases all of the birds in all of their flocks are not tested.

It will be well for poultry men and farm owners, says Mr. Shomo, to remember that the few cents additional they pay for a good chick of known origin is cheap insurance, that the good pullet will easily lay enough additional eggs during the first month of production to more than justify the few additional cents expended for a chick of quality.

Project Work

Ewing,—The following is an original outline made by Harry Thompson, in his work as a student in Vocational Agriculture, in the Ewing High School, under Prof. W. H. Starnes, instructor.

He must have an interest in his work.

He must make clear and definite plans.

He must have a thorough knowledge of the work to be done.

He must follow his plan.

If raising poultry or livestock he must begin with purebred stock.

If raising grain or potatoes he must select the best seed available.

He must keep an accurate record of all work done.

He must not allow himself to become discouraged; to do so is to be beaten before he begins.

When marketing his products he should arrange them in a manner so as to make them attractive and carefully guard them against injury.

He must market his products when he can get the most for them.

CHILD need REGULATING?

CASTORIA WILL DO IT!

When your child needs regulating, remember this: the organs of babies and children are delicate. Little bowels must be gently urged—never forced. That's why Castoria is used by so many doctors and mothers. It is specially made for children's ailments; contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. You can safely give it to young infants for colic pains. Yet it is an equally effective regulator for older children. The next time your child has a little cold or fever, or a digestive upset, give him the help of Castoria, the children's own remedy. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

School News

John Gibson was visiting the High School last week.

It seems as though Chas. Cecil, Morgan Richards and Robert David are letting their thoughts wonder away from their books, their Senior class rings are missing which to my notion is a pretty bad sign.

The Parent-Teachers Association held their monthly meeting Friday.

Miss Mary McNeil's room won the clock, which is presented by the Parent-Teachers Association every month to the class having the most Parents present at the meetings.

Miss Martha Gibson and Saluda Sewell of Pennington Hi faculty motored to Bristol Saturday.

Miss Boots Richards, Margaret Mathews, Maude Grubbs and Virginia Lewis of the home economic class served luncheon to Miss Sewell and Miss Fugate Tuesday.

The Senior class have selected a very attractive pennant which they will present to the school.

Rev. Sullen Dosser conducted chapel exercises Tuesday and Wednesday morning.

It seems as though Angus David is practicing to be a travelling missionary, the way he keeps moving around from one seat to another.

With prospects of an eight month term of school Hi school baseball is getting under way. Coach Rhea will have a fighting bunch of ballers several experienced boys will be on the turf doing their bit and helping the young canidates to make a winning club. Expected canidates are: Howard Zion, Clell Bailey, Dwight Smith, Sherman Keel, Elmo Keel, Elmo David, R L. Lundy, Coy Pridemore, Bascum Wilson, Olin Wynn, Kennith Skeens and Ralph Smith. Several more is expected out when they begin passing the O'le "Pill."

The Hi School faculty and students want to express their many thanks to those who has contributed in any manner last year for the improvement of our atheletic field.

Prof. Bradbury reports that the prospects for the girls basketball team is the best that he has had in several years. Seeing them work out a few evenings ago, I have come to the same conclusion. Outside of a few rough edges they are very trim.

Honor roll of Pennington High School. A complete chart of the examination grades and averages for the first half of the year of 1932 and 1933 show the highest number of pupils to make the honor roll in the history of the school.

Miss Betty Ann Graham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Graham, Ben Hur, and Miss Gail Chinsky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Chinsky, Pennington Gap, tied with highest honors with an average grade of 95 25 with Miss Beatrice Keith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Keith, Pocket was a close second with an average grade of 95.

Meteor Strikes Lee County Farm

Jonesville—Lee County has had a "heavenly visitor."

On Monday night, Henry Tonker, farmer living near here, heard a tremendous explosion, like the bursting of a huge steam boiler, or the blowing out the bulkhead of an ocean liner. Immediately following the tremendous reverberation and continuing for some time, there was a constant rumbling, apparently from deep down in the earth, as though the celestial missile had sizzled as it cooled.

A meteor had fallen on the farm of Tonker, and penetrated the earth to a great depth, how deep, no one is able to tell from the signs where the earth was hit.

Neighbors are speculating on the meteor, as to what it is, and where in the heavens it came from, how long it was in coming, and the great depth to which it went into the earth.

A. Frank Litton, of route 2, Pennington, was a visitor in Jonesville, Monday.

British Agent

The author is a Scot who began his career on a plantation in Malaya. He records briefly but interestingly this part of his life as an introduction to what follows. After a dangerous and romantic love affair with a native woman of high caste, and a complete physical breakdown, he returned to England with no very definite plans for the future, though he was less than twenty-five years of age.

At a very loose end, he decided to take the examinations for entrance into the diplomatic service, and, having been successful, he was sent as a junior to the supposedly unimportant post at Moscow, just in time to establish himself before the outbreak of the war. He had not been there long before his superior was compelled, because of bad health, to take a vacation, and Lockhart, almost before he knew it, found himself in charge of one of the most important stations in the whole British diplomatic service.

With the overthrow of the Tsar and of Kerensky, and the emergence of the Lenin-Trotsky authority, Great Britain refused to recognize the de facto government and Lockhart's status was reduced from an official to an unofficial standing. Day by day the muddle became more muddled and Lockhart's position more precarious. Finally, deserted by his own people and suspected by the Russians, he found himself arrested for conspiracy against the Bolshevists and incarnated in a most unpleasant jail. As the German Ambassador had been murdered by Red soldiers only a few days before, the Briton, in his private capacity, found his case not a reassuring one. Fortunately, he managed to secure his release and escape from the country, but only just in time to evade a sentence of death passed upon him. The story concludes with his passage of the Russian frontier.

It may be of especial interest to Americans to learn that the most complimentary picture which Mr. Lockhart draws of the foreigners in Russia is that of Col. Raymond Robbins.

Next week G. B. Lancaster's 'Pageant', a novel of Tasmania, will be reviewed by Malcolm MacLeod. These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Books To Own

When all the stories that all the diplomatic representatives of the great powers have to tell concerning what really happened between 1910 and 1920 are told-if these stories really are told- we may have a truer idea of what went wrong in the world, and we shall certainly not have much cause for congratulating civilized man for his ability to utilize that faculty which has caused him to designate himself complacently as homo sapiens. The narrative of Mr. Lockhart, agent of the British government at Moscow from shortly before the war until well after the Bolshevists had established their control, reflects sadly little glory upon anyone concerned with international relations during that period, and surely Mr. Lockhart had an excellent opportunity to observe, Some of his criticisms, it is true, are fully open to more pleasant interpretations, whatever the facts may be, but many of them are too obviously valid to be explained away.

Since 'British Agent' is concerned especially with what went on in Russia, Mr. Lockhart's indictment of the allies would appear to be conveniently summed up under three counts: a failure to understand Russia, a lack of a consistent policy on the part of several individual nations, and, therefore, a total lack of a policy common to the allies. All this led to unintelligent approaches, a succession of reversals, and much acting at cross purposes. A glittering example is the allied intervention in Siberia with the purpose of undermining the Bolshevists and the reestablishment of the western front. With Napoleon's 1812 fiasco plainly recorded in most high school histories, the allies advanced to the onslaught with some 1,200 troops, after months of argument and preparation. Yet a man attacking Gibralter with an air gun might be in danger of a lunatic asylum.

Aside from the interest that one feels in 'British Agent' on account of its diplomatic revelations, the book presents a most diverting story of personal experiences. Based upon that rare but always effective combination of an interesting personality interjected into a series of exciting adventures against a background of epochal events, the author makes the most of his story. And if he spares few among his fellow actors, he does not hesitate to record his own follies, both of public and private nature.

Burley Tobacco Growers are requested and invited to attend a meeting at the Court House, Jonesville, Wednesday, February 15 at 1:30 p. m. The purpose of the meeting is a discussion of Plant Bed Disease and Remedy on Tobacco Beds.

Prof. Jamet Godkin, Plant Pathologist, of Blacksburg, will be present to lead the discussion. Last year the Eastern Coast in the Fire Cure Tobacco District the disease known as Blue Mould struck their tobacco beds and reduced the crop severely. It is thought possible that the same disease might strike the Burley District here and cause great loss to Lee County farmers. Prof. Godkin will go into the subject thoroughly. County Agent Koger will add to the subject of Out-Look for Burley tobacco 1933.

There will be other speakers present. All Farmers are invited to be there for the information that may be of interest to them.

Jonesville Court House Destroyed

Fire Broke Out in Top of Building. Believed to Have Been Caused by Defective Wiring. Monday, February 13th, at 1 o'clock While Court was in Session.

Noted Building of Lee County Erected in 1870. Was Three Years in Construction. All Court Records Saved. The Big Vaults Keep Records Safe From Fire. $30,000 Insurance on Court House

When the Door to the West Vault was Opened Next Day, Out Jumped A Mouse that Had Survived the Fire Unsinged

Lee County has to mourn once more for a destructive fire in the county seat of Jonesville. The Court House was found aflame at one o'clock Monday while court was in session. The overhead structure was discovered to be in a great roar, and a yell of "fire" was sounded by former Commonwealth Attorney, E. E. Skaggs. The crowded court room was emptied in a few brief moments. Fire was licking down out of the cupola and stairway as the last of the crowd descended the stair way. A considerable number of deed books were removed by those making their exit.

The doors to the big vaults, were all properly closed and the building was dedicated to ashes as the citizens of the county stood outside helpless and in consternation. The fighting fire squad of St. Charles was phoned for in a S. O. S call. They came finally, but the building was almost reduced to bare brick wall and smouldering coals. No water was applied.

The cause of the fire is of course, not known. The best and almost reliable conclusion is that it was due to defective wiring of the light currents through the garett of the building. Some evidence of disturbance of blowing fuse plugs previously the past months and also recent disturbance of raidos in the near by neighborhood indicate a crossed wire. Certain it is not known where the fire originated. It was first discovered over the Judges stand and immediately throughout the top of the building. Some hold to the theory that it might have caught from the flues. This is not believed possible. The chimney carrying the furnace was built

Junior Class Entertains Seniors

The Junior Class of Pennington High School entertained the Seniors with a banquet Friday evening, February 10, at seven o'clock. This, being the first of its kind given in the history of the school, was especially enjoyed. The agriculture room was beautifully decorated with potted plants and illuminated with lazy burning candles, which added a soft glow of cheer. The tables were arranged in a 'V' shape, while overhead was a canopy of blue and white, the Senior class colors. Valentines served as place cards.

When the guests had found their places the assembly was called to order by Robert Guy Pugh, president of the Junior Class, who acted as toast master. The invocation was given by Thelma Kelly. Olin Wynn gave the address of welcome, followed by a song by the Junior Class. Dwight Smith, president of the Senior Class, responded to the welcoming address. After the main course was served Mrs. Black, the music instructor, gave a delightful piano solo. This was followed with a toast to the faculty and visitors by Sue Richards. Prof. Bradbury responded on behalf of the faculty with a clever verse. Hazen Witt entertained the party with a violin solo. Following this the climax of the program was reached when Lillian Howard gave a most pleasing toast to 'Our School, Pennington High.' Before closing her talk she expressed especial thanks and appreciation to Miss Martha Gibson, class sponsor, for the many helpful things she had done, not only in making this a successful affair, but in all other activities of the class. Thanks were also expressed to Miss Janie Fugate and the Home Ec Department for serving this banquet. The evenings entertainment ended with the entire group singing the school song during which bright colored serpentines were thrown about the room adding a most pleasing effect to the gala occasion.

Ewing Man Has Interesting Picture, Ewing School

Ewing— D. V. Richmond has on display in his store a picture which is of interest to a great many people. It is a picture of the students and teacher of Ewing school of several years ago. The picture was made over thirty years ago, and it is very unusual that out of the forty six in the group, only one had died, to January 23, 1933. The picture is very plain yet, and the faces easily recognized, although many were very young when, as those of many of our leading citizens of the present day. Mrs. Emma N. Edds, who is teaching this year in the Rose Hill School, was the teacher, whose picture was included in the group. The students are:

Blue Diamond To Have Banquet

Bonny Blue— According to a special report from officials of the Blue Diamond Coal Company, every employee of the Corporation at both Bonny Blue and May Flower Mines will be present at a special banquet which will take place at the Bonny Blue Gym, Saturday night.

A big time and a big supper will be had for all, no depression chatter will be eked Saturday night when the food plates of capacity tonnage begin to float over the linens.

Only employees of the Company will be present, of course, which will be a large family.

A. J. Wolfe, of Big Stone Gap, was a visitor in Pennington Friday.

Virgil Wacks To Prepare Story

Virgil Wacks, Universal News Reel and Curiosity Photographer, received a request from Universal this week asking that he prepare a story of his past photographic experiences accompanied by some personal snap shots to be used in a large Motion Picture Publication which will go to press soon telling all phases on motion picture news reel work and the past experiences of Universal Cameramen, both free lance and staff men. This will be the first publication of its kind giving the entire inside story of the newsreel and of those who make it.

Universal Pictures and the Chicago Daily News who are in charge of the news reel department in a recent statement expresses their appreciation to the press publication for selecting Universal newsreel upon which to base and build their puplication.

Together with pictures and stories of the cameramen's most thrilling newsreel experiences, Graham McNamee, the noted news caster and the seventy-two largest newspapers of the nation will have a place in the periodical.

The idea of the book will be to give the theatre going public and everyone that is interested in news in any respect an insight to the adventures of the wide awake news chasess in all four corners of the earth who bring them news of the greatest type.

W. M. S. Meets

Ewing— The W. M. S. of the Ewing M. E. Church South held its February meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. T. Ritchie. Mrs. W. E. Blessing was leader for the afternoon and presented the following interesting program: Hymn— 'Jesus Calls Us', by Society; Prayer— Mrs. C. H. Browning; Scripture Lesson, Phil. 3: 7-14— Mrs. H. C. T. Dean; Talk on Scarritt College— Mrs. W. E. Blessing; Scarritt Hymn— Society; Playlet, 'Mary Porter Home From College', given by Mesdames R. H. Blessing, H C. T. Dean, C. H. Browning, W. E. Blessing and H. T. Ritchie; Stewardship— Mrs. Browning; W. M. S. News— Mrs. Ritchie; Business; Closing Prayer, Rev. C. H. Browning.

Bonny Blue

Quite a number of Bonny Blue folks have been attending the revival, now in progress at the Pennington M. E. Church South.

The rough weather held the prayer meeting attendance down to a small margin, only 70 were present Wednesday night.

One of the high lights in the history of Bonny Blue will be the banquet to be given here Saturday night, February 19. This banquet will be by far the most elaborate affair of its kind to be given here. The invitation list will include all the employees of the two mines, with the expenses being entirely paid by this company. This dinner will be given as a reward for a perfect safety record of three months.

School News

A complete check of the Seniors records show that the class of 1933 has maintained a very high standard of scholarship for the four years work. The race for highest honors has been very keen with a number of students finishing the completion. Miss Beatrice Keith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Keith, Pocket, has the highest average in the class for her four years work, which entitles her to be Valedictorian of her class.

Miss Ruby Harber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Harber, Dry Branch, has the second highest average which entitles her to be Salutatorian.

Miss Pauline Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Turner, Pocket, has third highest average and will be class Historian.

Miss Keith's average is 92.58.

Miss Turner's average is 92 27.

Other students having high averages for the four years now are:

Hazel Zion 91.95
Laura Burgin 90 59
Mary Ella Gibson 90.50
Helen Rhea 90.46
Walter Campbell 89.75

Mable Reed who came to Pennington from Scott County has a very good record. However, part of her grades were in letters and we were not able to get her exact average.

"Virginia Plan" Reccomended

Richmond, Feb. 4—Probably the highest compliment paid any body of law-makers and any state executive in recent years has been conferred upon the last general assembly of Virginia and upon Governor Pollard by federal leaders at Washington in recommending Virginia's budget plan to President-elect Roosevelt and his advisers for national use. The plan in question empowers the state executive to reduce appropriation levels, when such action is deemed necessary, in order that a deficit may be avoided. It is the opinion of Governor Pollard and of Director of the budget, J. H. Bradford that the plan is applicable as well as to federal as to state government.

Under her budget-balancing plan Virginia stands today among the very few states in the union whose books do not show a shortage. There is a constitutional inhibition in Virginia against the issuance of bonds, which is equally responsible for the fact that the state's books show a balance. With a negligable state debt, the credit of the Commonwealth ranks at the top, and her success; under the guidance of Governor Pollard is bresting the years of protracted depression, has at length brought Virginia to the attention of the national government.

From New York to Alabama several of the leading secular papers have recently devoted extended editorial space to an examination of what has become known as "The Virginia Plan" in balancing the state's finances. The Manufacture's Record last December carried an illuminating article from the pen of Governor Pollard dealing at length with the vital factors entering into "The Virginia Plan."

During a recent visit to Richmond, commenting up on the public notice given Virginia and Governor Pollard by men and papers commending Virginia's fiscal policy, former Governor Byrd expressed the conviction that too much credit could not be paid to the past general assembly or to Virginia's present executive for their joint activities in preventing a deficit in the state's treasury at this time.

In the judgement of many Roosevelt leaders the national government could not do better than to study and apply the Virginia Plan to federal use. With the Glass banking bill occupying the attention of the nation and The Virginia Budget-Balancing Plan being recommended for national use Virginia seems indeed to be returning into her former place as a leader of government.

Shoots 2 'To Save Brother'

Harlan, Ky.— Details of a gun fight in a remote section of Harlan County, Ky., Sunday, in which one man was slain, one wounded, and another perhaps fatally beaten, were revealed for the first time today, with the surrender of James Hensley, 21.

Oscar Smith, 30, was shot to death, Alfred Long was wounded, and Enos Hensley was beaten in a fight for which officers have been unable to find a cause.

James Hensley said he wasat home, 20 miles south of here, when he saw Long and Smith dragging his brother, Enos, across the field and beating him in the head with a pistol.

James said he grabbed a shotgun and ran to his brother's aid shooting both men. He said he didn't know what the trouble was between his brother and the others, 'as they had been good friends.' Smith was a brother-in-law of Long.

James Hensley surrendered last night to Deputy Alfred Simpson at Wallins, Ky., and was brought to jail today. No charge has been placed against him.

Shorthorn Cow Has Five Calves

All members of the quintet were fully developed and well formed, and although they died, exposure was held to have caused their deaths.

Three males and two females comprised the infant lot. M. L. Pierce and Ben Clark, of Chilhowie, took pictures of the family group.

Southern Maid Dairy Products Corporation, Acquires the Business and Properties of Large Dairy and Ice Cream Concerns In This Section. Three Quarters Million Dollars In Property Involved In Merger

Annoucement is made that the Southern Maid Dairy Products Corporation has purchased the business and properties of the Southern Refrigeration Company, the Holston Creamery Company and the Southern Ice Cream Company. The new concern will operate plants at Bristol and Appalachia, Virginia, Kingsport and Johnson City, Tennessee, Bluefield, Welch and Williamson, West Virginia, and in addition to this will maintain distributing stations at Elk Park, North Carolina, Rogersville, Tennessee, Galax and Pulaski, Virginia.

The new concern will manufacture and distribute a complete line of dairy products including milk, both pasteurized and unpasteurized, raw milk, grade 'A' milk, butter, ice cream and ice, and will maintain large cold storage service at Johnson City, Bluefield and Welch.

All of the plants will be equipped with the latest and most modern machinery, which will assure a product of high and uniform quality.

The Southern Maid Dairy Products Corporation is owned by firms and individuals living in the territory in which the plants acquired have been serving for many years The new management is composed of practical and experienced dairymen. The new concern will give employment to a large number of men coming from throughout the territory it serves.

The Southern Ice Cream Company, Southern Refrigeration Company, and the Holston Creamery Company have during the years of their existence spent hundreds of thousands of dollars for labor, milk and milk products produced in this section. This merger will offer an unlimited market to the dairymen. The management expects very shortly to be producing as much as one million pounds of butter per year, and will depend upon the local producers to furnish cream for this product.

The merging of these concerns is a constructive move in consolidating the businesses and properties of the large dairy interests that have been serving this territory for many years. Milk and milk products of a very high quality will be used, which will be offered for sale in finished products under the trade name 'Southern Maid' which has been so extensively advertised throughout this section. It will be the aim of the management to give to the customers a product of very high quality. The products will be distributed throughout the territory extending into a large part of East Tennessee, a part of Western North Carolina, throughout Southwest Virginia, Southern West Virginia, and into Eastern Kentucky.

The directors are as follows: E. G. Otey, Executive Vice President, Bank of Bramwell, Bramwell, W. Va.; J. W. Godsey, formerly Vice President, Holston Creamery Company, Bristol, Virginia; Scott Litten, President, Dixie Splint Coal Company and Banner Coal Company, Clinchfield, Virginia; R. J. Cornett, Formerly Secretary-Treasurer, Southern Ice Cream Company and Southern Refrigeration Company, Johnson City, Tennessee; J. L. Godsey, Formerly Vice President and General Manager, Southern Ice Cream Company, Bristol, Virginia; W. C. Godsey, Formerly President of Holston Creamery Company, Bristol, Virginia; W. E. Bust Unveiled To General Johnston

Richmond— A brilliant assemblage gathered saturday at the state capitol building to witness ceremonies incident to the unveiling of a bronze bust of General Joseph E. Johnston which was presented to the state by relatives of the distinguished Southern leader. The bronze stands in the hall of the old House of Delegates and is a copy of the well known bust by Edward V. Valentine. Invocation was had from the Rev. Dr. Beverly D. Tucker, the bust was unveiled by Miss Louisa Bowen Sargeant, after which donors and kinsmen of the general were presented and a reception by Governor Pollard held in the capitol rotunda to those attending the ceremoniss.

Robert M. Hughes, of Norfolk, a kinsman of General Johnston, delivered the oration, taking as his subject 'Joseph Eggleston Johnston, Soldier and Man'. Governor Pollard presided over the exercises and delivered the following tribute to the Confederate commander:

Now for the twelfth time in the past two years we have assembled within these walls to do honor to the memory of Virginia's great men. Let us hope that the recital of their deeds has enlarged our knowledge of Virginia's glorious past and has inspired us with renewed determination that the future shall be worthy of the past.

What we have been trying to do has the approval of the wisdom of the ages There are passages in the ancient book of Esslesiastes which approves our course. It reads:

'Let us now praise famous men the Lord hath wrought great glory by them through his great power from the beginning—they have left a name behind them, that their praises might be reported—and their glory shall not be blotted out. Their bodies are buried in peace; but their name liveth for evermore. The people will tell of their wisdom; and the congregation will show forth their praise.'

And then the writer, as if to glorify by contrast, adds:

'And some there be which have no memorial; who are perished as though they had never been; and are become as though they had never been born.'

The man we honor today is the great Cofnederate General, Joseph Eggleston Johnston.

In arranging these ceremonies in nothing have I been more careful than in the selection of orators well fitted by training, by environment and by interest to draw graphic pictures of the lives and characters of Virginia's great men.'

Relieves Women's Pains

Here is an example of how Cardui has helped thousands of women: "I was very thin and pale," writes Mrs. F. H. Scott, of Roanoke, Va. "I suffered from weakness and a severe pain in my back. This pain unnerved me, and I did not feel like doing my work. I did not care to go places, and felt worn, tired, day after day.

"My mother had taken Cardui, and on seeing my condition she advised me to try it. I have never regretted doing so. I took three bottles and it built me up. I gained in weight, my color was better and the pain left my back. I am stronger than I had been in some time."

Cardui is sold by local druggists.

Information On Production Loan

The Crop Production Loan to Farmers will be in operation again for 1933 as for the past two years. The bill of $90,000,000 has just passed Congress and signed by the President and has now become a law. Heretofore, this section has been served out of Washington. For this year it will be served out of Baltimore.

A County Committee will be set up of three members. This has not been done at this date. This service will be given to farmers in Florida and south of us first since their crops are now on. Next will be Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama etc, and next Tennessee, Virginia etc. Also, it has been the policy of these loans not to give them out very far ahead of planting time.

Farmers taking advantage of this loan have to certify that they are not able to obtain finance from local sources; that if they do not get this loan, they will not be able to make a crop etc. A crop lien is taken for the security of this loan. It not only takes a lien on the crops financed but all the crops on that farm or any other farm or farm operation he might be doing.

How Used. A farmer can buy fertilizer for his crops, and seed and also some finance for feed for his team or tractor. He cannot buy grass seed with this loan, for grass seed is a two year crop and this applies only to the summer crop to be grown. He can buy soy beans or cow peas or sudan or millet and fertilizer for all these to make summer hay, or sow spring oats for summer hay and fertilizer.

The loan papers consist of 1st, an application., 2nd, two lien pap ers, 3rd, a voucher, 4th, a note. All papers have to be properly filled out and signed and two members of the County Committee recommendation to the application, before the loan is approved. The loan is granted by the Agriculture Department, or the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, of Baltimore.

The County Agent is authorized to fill out applications and advise on the crops to be financed and aid in shaping the papers for the committee and expediting the work. As soon as the Committee has been made and papers sent out for this work, the agent will notify the public. At present, this has not been done,

M. V. Koger, County Agent.

Cowles Kelly, who is attending school at Bluefield College, was called home last week on account of the serious illness of his grandmother, Mrs. W. Y. Tucker at Appalachia.

Court House Burns

in recent years entirely out side of the court house walls. Just how a spark could blow through the 16 inch thick wall of a solid brick chimney, and then jump through a solid 16 inch wall of the building, is not explainable. Also it was not possible for sparks to drop from the top of the chimney. The roof was metal. Snow and sleet had been falling, and such a stunt for sparks to climb out the top of a tall chimney, and sneak down through a solid sheet iron roof when the rain and sleet was keeping it moist, is not explainable.

This building was begun for erection in the year 1867. The contractor for the building was William Graham, whose two brothers Tom and Marshall aided in the structure. These brothers were the sons of Johny Graham, for many years the foremost stone builder in Lee County. He was an Irish immigrant, and married a Yeary of Lee County. The woodwork structure was made by J. M. Whitehead and Morton Jaynes. Old George Gull, (col.) was the hod carrier. It is said that he carried morter for many thousands of loads up the ladder to fill the walls solid.

The present court house was erected on the same ground of the previous building. The previous building was burned by the Yankies in the Civil war. They came to Jonesville before day one morning and by sunup the court house was aflame. Wm. Wynn, of Jonesville, was a boy 12 years old and is the only living person that witnessed the Civil war destruction of the Lee county court house and also witnessed the present one Monday. The Yankies set the house with turpentine, Mr. Wynn claims. H. J. Morgan, the clerk of the county at that time was thoughtful enough to remove the court records the day before to a cave on Powells River and protect them from destruction.

No dispositoin has been made yet as to a start for a new Court House. The Board of Supervisors are called for extra session Monday February 20, to see about collection of the $30,000 insurance.

The different officials are now located in the place where the Citizens Bank was and in the rooms up stairs over the building.

The School Board lost all of their office equipment that was on the fourth floor. The Board had $1500. insurance on their equipment.

The Commissioners office was also completely destroyed including about 3 months work of the commissioner that was reduced to ashes.

Mr. Fred Howard, deputy treasure, said he put all of the books and records in the safe as if he were closing up for the night. Mr. Howard also saved Mr. E. E. Parsons shot gun.

St. Charles

The one and only event that will bring the population of St. Charles to the side walks in record time aroused the whole neighborhood Monday— the violent screams of the fire sirens, which called the local fire department to Jonesville to aid in the court house fire. Those responding to the call were:

Bill Snap
Virgil Q. Wacks
Joe Wilson
Toy Haines
Smyth Owens
Mack McCullough
Alfred Greene

Four other firemen were invited from Pennington Gap, they were:

J. A. Penniugton
Oscar Allison
Charles Robinett
Chester Garrett

The department made the run in 28 minutes despite being delayed twice, once in Pennington and once in Ben Hur.

The younger set seems to regret the Jonesville fire to a large extent— too bad, the marriage license blanks were destroyed.

The big depression party at the high school Tuesday night was quite a success.

The joke of the week is 'What base ball pitcher in the Lonesome Pine League applied to the Knoxville Smokies for a tryout stating his own record and hopes for the season' this has the whole neighborhood baffled. Ha let ter appeared in the News Sentinel in Bob Wilsons sport column, Monday.

Base ball parks usually have a tendency to expand, this is quite opposite to the local park at the present writing. it is growing smaller and smaller as the high waters are completely carrying away the surface in left center field.

Kidney and Stomach Ailments Relieved.

Scalf's Indian River Tonic Has Been A God-Send To Me, Says W. Virginia Woman.

Mrs. Theresa Szalay, Winding Gulf, West Virginia, says, I want to tell what Scalf's Indian River Tonic did for me. I had suffered from kidney trouble since a girl and had severe pains from indigestion. Gas would rise from my stomach and press against my heart and I was so extremely nervous that I could not bear to have a clock in my room. I am the mother of three children and always before the birth of a child I would be confined to bed for months, most of the time, but now I am taking Scalf's Indian River Tonic and doing all my work even to my washing and scrubbing and I am expecting soon to become a mother again. My kidneys and stomach are not troubling me and I just wish to say that Scalf's Indian River Tonic has been a Godsend to me.

Scalf's Indian River Tonic is for sale by PENNINGTON PHARMACY, and LEE DRUG CO., Pennington Gap, Va. ST CHARLES PHARMACY, KEMMERER-GEM COAL CO. UNITED COLLIERIES, BENEDICT COAL CO., and V. I. C. Home Economic Students Contest

High school girls of this city, and throughout Virginia are to be given the opportunity to win a university scholarship.

Local teachers of home economics have just received an announcement of the 1933 National Meat Story Contest, in which the scholarships, together with other prizes, are offered to students writing the best essays. This contest is sponsored by the National Live Stock and Meat Board, which works closely with the U. S. Department of Agriculture and leading colleges and education on the subject of live stock and meat.

The contest, the tenth annual event of this kind, is said to be attracting wide attention throughout the state on the part of girls who are studying meat in their school work. Hundreds already have enrolled.

These enthusiastic students are seeking up to the minute information on the relation of meat to health, the value of meat in the low cost diet, the selection and preparation of meat, as well as facts about the industry from a national and world viewpoint. It is stated that more than 100,000 home economics students have participated in this contest since its inception.

The contest closes March 15. It will be judged by nationally known home economics authorities. Last year the chairman of the judging committee was Miss Frances Swain, president of the American Home Economics Association.

For purpose of competition, the United States is divided into districts, Virginia being in the southern district. Winners in each district are awarded university scholarships and other prizes. Miss Catherine Caroline Busey of Clearbook was the winner in last year's contest.

Virginia teachers, who are cooperating in every possible way, assert that state wide interest in this contest increases each year. TLey point out the excellent opportunities offered by scholarships and stress the fact that knowledge gained in writing meat stories should be of practical and permanent value to every entrant in her future profession as a homemaker.

3rd Coal Company Starts In Buchanan

The third coal operation in Buchanan county, whose rich deposits were given outlet by the branch line the Norfolk end Western railroad built from Devon, W. Va, to this place has begun loading coal. It is the Buchanan County Coal Corporation, headed by J. W. Strickler, R. L. Page, Sam Polen and other well known men of McDowell County, West Virginia.

Winter Number S. W. Virginia

Richmond, — Virginia's many natural wonders, her works of art, her artists and her scenic beauty are featured in the winter issue of "Virginia, First in the heart of the Nation," the state advertising magazine issued quarterly by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce to carry the story of Virginia all over the world. Every three months the magazine appears filled with new and unusual pictures of Virginia beautiful, and of new Shrines, new works of art and new things to see in Virginia. Its distribution is international.

The winter number devotes five pages to the beauty of the famous caverns of Virginia and another to the Natural Bridge. Several scenic pictures of the Natural Bridge National Forest around Lynchburg and Bedford are a feature of the magazine and a full page is devoted to new works of art placed in the Virginia capitol, while feature pictures of hunting in mountains and swamp and of foxhunting in Piedmont Virginia have full representation.

Shenandoah National Park in Virginia is not forgotten and two pages are devoted to the beauty of this area and of the new Skyline Drive. Richmond's recent port developement distinguished guests recently stopping in Virginia, straightening of James River for navigation, the Virginia seafood industry in winter, the tobacco industry at Petersburg, Virginia's splended military schools and some of her women's colleges, all have their place in the magazine. Space is devoted to showing unique and interesting farm experiments which have proven successful and another to some remarkable rjding and drill pictures at Virginia Military Institute.

New Production Record For Chevrolets

Chevrolet built 64,594 new cars and trucks in January for the largest single months production since July of 1931, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the company, announced today.

The figure exceeds by 2,500 units a estimate made ten days ago. The January total compares with 52,465 units in January of last year, and with 40,056 in December. Production held at a steady rate of 2,500 cars a day for most of the month, with half the company's assembly plants operating six full days a week, Mr. Knudsen stated.

Of the January total, 58,400 units went to domestic dealers, and the remainder into the Canadian and overseas markets, Mr. Knudsen said.

Despite the high rate of operations for the domestic market, no overaccumulation of stocks in dealers hands resulted, due to the heavy demand for new 1933 models for immediate delivery. By the end of January dealers had delivered at retail about 55,000 of the new 1933 cars which were first announced December 17, Mr. Knudsen stated.

Operations will ease somewhat in February, a normal seasonal trend with the company, but the total promises to run at least 55,000 units on present schedule setups, Mr. Knudsen declared. Last year's February total was 42,000 units.

The increased plant operations are in line with the expanded program which Chevrolet has embarked on for 1933 over last year. The company expects to sell from 450,000 to 500,000 cars this year as compared with 378,000 in 1932, Mr. Knudsen said. He added that he expects the industry generally to do better this year than last.

Factory payrolls are now about 34,000 men, with an additional 23,000 working for the Fisher Body Corp., exclusively on Chevrolet-Fisher bodies.

There was a bad fire at Jim Wilson's farm last week. The blaze was put out before any damage could be done by the volunteer fire department.

Children's Home Society of Virginia

The Children's Home Society of Virginia had 1011 children in its case at the beginning of the year after placing 105 in free homes and securing legal adoption of 31, it was reported at the Annual Meeting of the Society held in St. Paul's Church at Richmond on Wednesday, February 15th.

Case workers who cover the entire state reported the results of 13,244 visits made during the year in behalf of children, and the acceptance for care of 44 new children during the year. At the Richmond Receiving Home of the Society, an average of 64 children was kept throughout the year.

Plans for a state wide financial campaign to be held May 1st through the 15th to raise $75,000 to carry on during 1933 were discussed and adopted Due to the difficulty of raising funds in 1932 and the fact that the children in care of the Society had to be provided for, the year ended with a deficit of $9,280. To take care of this deficit and provide for operations in 1933 the sum of $104,000 will be required.

Amounts provided through the Community Funds of Richmond and Roanoke bring the total amount down to $75,000 to be raised in the campaign which will be conducted throughout the state excluding the community fund cities that have already provided for the Society.

Officers elected for 1933 were as follows: President, Albert Sidney Johnstone; Vice Presidents, Edmund Strudwick Jr., and the Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, D. D.; Secretary, F. D. Preston; Assistant Secretary and Secretary to the Board, Miss Winifred G Crenshaw; Treasurer, W. A. Roper; Counsel, Robert T. Barton; Chief of Medical Staff, Basil B, Jones, M. D.

"Hickory Lodge" Credit to Virginia

Richmond, —Among the many public spirited citizens of Virginia whose more or less private activities are making for the ultimate welfare of the state may be mentioned T. M. Gathright, of Covington. For thirty years one of the dreams of Mr. Gathright's life has been to create a mammoth game sanctuary in the counties of Bath and of Alleghany. His dream has at length materialized, so today what is known as "Hickory Lodge", embracing upwards of 30,000 acres, stands out as among the greatest game habitats in America.

This property, located near the Virginia Hot Springs and not far from the Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs, of West Virginia, stretches for seventeen miles along the Jackson River, one of the pret tiest streams in the Old Dominion. It contains 175 miles of riding trail, 52 miles of automobile road, 176 miles of wire fencing, 180 driveway gates, 65 miles of telephone lines and two fire lookout stations with towers.

There are 8,000 acres of hardwood timber, together with 3,000 acres of rich river-bottom fields, cultivated primarily for food and cover crops for game birds, on the property. It likewise contains 850 salt licks which are being used actively by deer. Forty-eight bushels of grain are distributed on the game feeding trails weekly during the fall and winter months.

Game breeding stock on this preserve at the beginning of this year was conservatively estimated as follows: quail, 950; turkey, 650; grouse, 4,200; doves, 3,000; deer, 1,400. Wild guineas and ringneck pheasants are not carried through the winter but are raised in captivity and liberated during the late summer and autum.

The preserve is located far enough north for grouse, ringneck pheasants, deer and black bass; far enough south for wild turkey, quail and wild guineas; far enough west to enjoy a delightful high altitude climate, far enough east to be overnight, by train, from one half the population of the United States. Mr. Gathright is one of the leading sportsmen in the south and has for years worked in close cooperation with the Virginia state department of game and inland fisheries.

DIZZINESS
relieved by Black-Draught

"I decided to take Thedford's Black-Draught, as I had been having bilious spells," writes Mr Chas. E. Stevens, of Columbus, Ind. "When I get bilious I feel sleepy and tired and do not feel like doing my work. I get awfully dizzy. I know then that I had better take something. After I found how good Black-Draught is, that is what I have used. I guess it rids me of the bile, for I feel better—don't feel like I am dropping off to sleep every time I sit down. That, to me, is a very bad feeling. Now you can get Black-Draught in the form of a SYRUP, for Children.

Virginia's Road Work Will End Soon

Richmond— State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley, today said primary system road construction for the fiscal year will come to an end in the 'very near future.'

The stop will be 'due simply to lack of funds', he said.

He explained that many factors have entered the situation, but he said the holiday would be due mainly to the loss of $1,400,000 by the change in the automobile tag time limit to April instead of January.

While this loss is really to the maintenance account of the department, he said, it will have to be covered by such funds as would otherwise be available for road construction. He asserted that roads already built must not be allowed to go to pieces.

The Commissioner expressed determination that his department shall close the fiscal year without a deficit even if the construction program has to be stopped for the remainder of the year.

Chevrolet Sales Now Increasing

Chevrolet dealers reported delivering 16,820 new cars and trucks to consumers in the last ten days of January, bringing the total of retail sales for the month to 39,701 units, compared with 35,199 in January of last year, H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Campany announced here today. This is a gain of 12.8 per cent.

January sales were the largest since June of last year, and the last ten day sales were larger than any reporting peorid since June 20, just prior to establishment of a federal excise tax and compare with 13,438 sales in the last ten days of January, 1932, a gain of 52 2 per cent, Mr. Klingler announced.

To date over 50,000 of the new 1933 models have been placed in owners' hands since announcement of the new line despite the fact that a field shortage existed. With field stocks at normal now, he said he expects February sales to score a considerable gain over February of last year.

In the first ten days of January dealers delivered 10,162 units, in the second ten days 12,713 units and 16,826 in the last peorid, the increasing reflection the availability of car for delivery, Mr. Klinger stated.

He said the National Automobile Show sales indicated the upturn experienced all over the country during January. At the Chicago show, just closed, Chicago Chevrolet dealers sold 1,052 new units during the week of the show as compared with 710 in auto show week last year, a gain of 48 per cent; and secured 1,756 prospects ascompared with 1,323 in the like 1932 show week. Comparable results were obtained in New York, and at other automobile shows already held through the country, attendance, interest and his company's sales generally are running higher than at any time since 1929, according to the Chevrolet executive.

Geology Of The Historic Peninsula

Richmond— The historic Peninsula of Virginia has long been famous for its unique history and the beauty of its landscapes. The recent creation of the Colonial National Monument has directed even greater interest to the 'Cradle of the Republic' and has attracted increasing numbers of visitors to Tidewater Virginia.

The history of the tidal rivers— the magnificent James and the lovely York, of the landscapes, and of the shell marls and other rocks in the cliffs at Yorktown is equally as fascinating to students of geology and to others who wish to understand nature. To interpret these features to visitors and to students, Prof. Joseph K Roberts of the School of Geology at tha University of Virginia hae recently written for the Virginia Geological Survey a non-technical account of the Peninsula, He discusses the various formations and mineral resources and interprets their origin. Especial attention is given to the finely preserved fossil shells which are abundant in some beds. In all, 123 different species of fossils have beeu collected. Thirty of the common forms are illustrated and described. Photographs illustrate other features.

A copy of this book may be obtained free by residents of Virginia from the Virginia Geological Survey, University, Va. Ask for Bulletin 37 on 'The Lower York-James Peninsula.'

Two Are Wounded In Virginia Quarrel

Fairfax— Two persons were wounded when the smoldering ill feeling between the prominent Ritchie and Oliver families of Northern Virginia, flared anew Sunday.

Lewis Oliver allegedly shot his estranged wife, Barbara Ritchie Oliver, 26, and Wilmer Holbrook, 27, at the home of Mrs. Oliver's father, A. C. Ritchie. Mrs. Oliver's right shoulder, neck and part of her head were shot away. It was feared she would fail to recover. Holbrook was wounded in the legs. His condition was not serious.

The ill feeling between the two families which has already cost the life, had its genesis in the marriage of Oliver and Barbara Ritchie. Oliver's father, the late State Senator Walker T. Oliver, died on last November 23 from a fractured skull, allegedls received in an encounter with Lewis Ritchie, brother of his son's wife.

Oliver was held in the Fairfax County jail.

R. Bandy as substituted Trustee, which said resignation of Louis Breiling as Trustee and request for substitutionary appointment was executed on October 7th, 1932, and the orders entered by the Judge of the Circuit Court of Lee County, Virginia, on October 26th, 1932, and November 26th, 1932, respectively, are of record in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Lee County, Virginia, to which reference is hereby made: and The Union Central Life Insurance Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, the holder of the indebtedness secured by said deed of trust, having declared the whole amount of said debt due and payable and, upon request of The Union Central Life Insurance Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, to foreclose said deed of trust and sell said property under the power and authority thereby given, notice is hereby given that the undersigned Substituted Trustee will, on Saturday, March 25th, 1933, at 11:00 o'clock A. M., Eastern Standard Time, in front of the courthouse door at Jonesville, Lee County, Virginia, sell said property at public auction, in bar of all homestead and dower rights and the right of the equity of redemption, to the highest and best bidder, for cash in an amount necessary to defray the cost and expense of said sale, delinquent taxes, if any, and the balance of the indebtedness unpaid and owing by virtue of said deed of trust.

This February 21st, 1933.

T. R. Bandy, Substituted Trustee.

Distribute License Tags

Richmond,—The Division of Motor Vehicles is distributing the 1933 license tags to the 107 branch offices in the State. The 1933 tags can be secured from any of these branches beginning March 15. License applicatians have been prepared by the Department and are awaiting mailing, which will go on March 10 so that they will reach all owners by the time the tags will go on sale. The license rate on passenger cars remains the same as in previous years, namely; seventy cents per hundred weight.

The truck license fees have been increased on the larger vehicles, the fees being:

Tons	Price	Tons	Price
1	$15 00	5 ½	$300.00
1 ½	20'00	6	350.00
2	30.00	6 ½	450.00
2 ½	50.00	7	550.00
3	75 00	7 ½	650 00
3 ½	100 00	8	750 00
4	150.00	8 ½	850.00
4 ½	200.00	9	950.00
5	250.00	9 ½	1050 00
		10	1150.00

The fee for dealers license tags is $35 00 for the fist two sets of plates and $7 50 for each additional set, after the original two sets.

The motor vehicle owners in the State have had three months use of the 1932 license tags without cost which has been a considerable saving to them.

The 1933 license tags issued on and after March 15 will expire on March 31, 1934.

The Department is preparing to issue 1933 plates for the majority of the vehicles in the State during the renewal period, as it is felt that all owners will purchase their license tags immediately upon receipt of their applications instead of experiencing the last minute rush as in previous years.

Two Harlan Men Are Killed In Gunfights

Harlan, Ky., — Harlan county's 1933 homicide total mounted to six today as two men were shot to death in fights near Cumberland, Ky., 25 miles east of Harlan, Ky., at 5 p. m. A third person was possibly fatally wounded and Austin Halcomb, 45, was jailed here in connection with the deaths.

Roscoe Creech, 25, and T. N. Freeman, 45, were those killed. Sterling Freeman, 24, son of T. N., was shot in the head and chest with shotgun slugs.

Feeling was reported running at a high pitch in Cumberland section by Chief of Police Palton Hall, who spirited away Halcomb to Harlan, Ky, immediately after he was arrested at the home of Burley Clark in Sand Hill community on the outskirts of Cumberland, Ky.

Hall arrived here with his prisoner at 8:30 p. m., and advised Sheriff John Henry Blair to keep a close guard over him. Hall said he feared violence from relatives of the slain men and for this reason brought Halcomb here in preference to keeping him in Cumberland, Ky., jail.

Lee Court House Plans Submitted

All plans submitted today were rejected at least temporarily. The board plans to visit other county seats in an effort to find a modern structure to copy. The new courthouse is to cost approximately $60,000. It is to be built on the site of the old structure which mysteriously burned.

The loss is estimated at $75,000. Most of the important court house files were saved, although some valuable papers and school board files were destroyed

Insurance on the building amounted to $30,000.

B. Wynn, of Jonesville, was a visitor in Pennington, Tuesday night.

A Mistake

It was a big mistake when one of the papers mentioned that Helen would go back to her husband for she says, single life for her.

The Parent-Teachers Association will meet at the High School auditorium Friday evening March 3, at 7:30 p. m.

A very interesting program has been arranged followed by a social hour. You are urged to be present.

DISTRICT K TEACHERS MEET ON MARCH 24th

Dungannon— The annual meeting of District K of the Virginia Education Association will be held at Clintwood, and not at Norton, as was previously announced. Announcement of the change of the place of the meeting was made Monday by Professor C. B. Warren, Principal of Dungannon High School and President of District K. The meeting will be held on the date originally scheduled, Friday March 24.

The change in place of the meeting is due to the fact that the Wise County teachers lost so much time because of the epidemic of influenza in December that it was thought unwise for them to lose any more time.

The theme of discussion at the Clintwood meeting will be 'School Finance and Curriculum Revision.'

Among the prominent speakers who will address the teachers at the conference are Dr. Sidney B. Hall, Superintendent of Public Instruction of Virginia; Dr. J. W. Raines, of Berea College; and Miss Lucy Mason Holt, of Ocean View School, Norfolk, President of the Virginia Education Association.

District K consists of the following counties: Lee, Scott, Wise, Dickenson, Buchanan, Tazewell, and Russell. Officers of District K are C. B. Warren, of Dungannon, President; Miss Suluda Sewell, of Pennington Gap, Secretary.

The program provides for two general meetings, one in the morning and one in the evening, and eleven group meetings in the afternoon.

ROAD WORK AGAIN STARTED

Hamp Crizer's crew of men started back to work Monday on the new State highway that is being built in the east end of town. He has been unable to work for the past six or eight weeks on account of bad weather.

The bridge across Cane Creek near Caner Garrison for the new road has already been completed.

Boy Slayer Held In Collier Death

Trenton, Ga, — Grady Jeffrey, 14 year old Dade county school boy was held without bond today on charges of inflicting fatal stab wounds on his teacher, V. C. Collier, native of Lee County, here February 16.

The widow, Mrs. Collier, returned here Monday morning after accompanying her husband's body to Big Stone Gap, where funeral and interment took place

Judge C. C. Pittman, in disallowing bond following a habeas corpus hearing, said of the case in which the student stabbed his teacher while being whipped in the school room:

"I do not think the time has come when a boy can select the way in which he is to be punished. It is the duty of parent or teacher to discipline the school and they can not always be in the same temper. A boy who kills his teacher because he gave him a paddling will have to stay in jail until the grand jury turns him out."

Following the trial, Judge Pittman said Georgia law permits teachers to whip pupils, that the teacher "has the same right to punish a pupil as the parent has, and further has the right to select the method of punishment."

Melvin Gifford, 13, testified the boy insisted on "taking his whipping standing up" to which the teacher objected, grabbed him by the back of the neck and threw him down.

Eloise Barton, the second witness described Collier as "about five feet tall and not very heavy." The accused boy weighs 89 ponnds and is 4 feet 8 inches tall.

Under Georgia law, the death penalty can be asked for the boy despite his age, Judge Pittman asserted. The law presumes, he said that when a person reaches the age of 14 he is responsible for his acts.

Press Association To Meet At Norton

Farmville—A call for suggestions, ideas and requests for subjects to be discussed at the summer convention of the Virginia Press Association has been sent out by J. C. Latimer, secretary of the association, to association members.

The annual summer gathering will be held at Norton, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 20 to 22, with the Norton Kiwanis Club representing the town as hosts.

Selection of Norton was made by the executive committee of the association at the eighteenth midwinter meeting held in Roanoke January 12 to 14.

Invitations were extended for the meeting from the University of Virginia who asked that the sessions be held there coincidentally with the university's annual institute of public affairs, from Leesburg and Norton.

The committee accepted the Norton invitation. and placed the Leesburg invitation on file for the 1934 meeting.

The meeting at Norton will mark the fourth time the association held its convention southwest of Roanoke, and the first time the extreme west section of the state has entertained the association.

Mr. Latimer and president J. P. Rowe, Jr., of the Fredericksburg Free Lance Star, are now engaged in drawing up the program for the summer meeting.

It is expected that the program will continue the custom of devoting at least one afternoon to the association's "Know Virginia" tour, during which members are conducted through points of historic interest and of modern progress in the vicinity of the point where the convention is held.

Buckles, Fred Robinette who has been working there a little over three years will continue with the new firm.

MUSICAL COMEDY TO BE PRESENTED TUES.

Over 1000 in Sunday School

The drive for 1000 in Sunday School Sunday went over big with about 1200 attending Sunday School. This is a good record for a town with a census record of 1570, but let's not just go one Sunday and quit, let's go 52 Sundays to the year.

Bonny Blue

The St. Charles dramatic club presented a splendid play at the Bonny Blue School House Tuesday night. The play was a three act comedy, entitled 'Go Slow Mary'. Some of the best talent in St. Charles composed the cast.

The cardinals plan to play Rogersville, Tenn., here Thursday night and the Woco Pepa, of Knoxville, Tenn., March 4th. These two teams promise plenty of trouble for the boys.

Mrs. Theodore Hatmaker is recovering from a serious operation at the Lee General Hospital.

Wallace Wilson is suffering from the loss of two fingers, received in a mine accident here last week.

Dungannon Traffic is Blocked By Slide

Dungannon— Traffic on State Highway Route 122 at a point a few hundred yards east of the bridge over Clinch river at Dungannon was completely blocked Monday by a landslide, which buried the road under a mass of earth and stone to a depth of fifteen or twenty feet for a distance of about 125 feet. Loosened by recent rains and freezes, a section, almost an acre in area, of the steep mountain slope by the side of the road gave way about midnight Sunday and slid into the road, carrying with it trees. A State Highway road crew, under the direction of H. H. Holmes, State Highway engineer, is removing the debris. The slide was sufficiently cleared from the road Tuesday to permit the passage of traffic.

Sheriff Giles Captured Two Stills

Sheriff R. F. Giles, captured two stills, two men and one gallon of liquor on Wallins Creek, Tuesday, February 28th, one 15 gallon still and one 25 gallon still.

The musical comedy 'Molly's Idea' will be presented Tuesday night, March 7, at 8:15 o'clock.

There are over a hundred of Pennington's best actors and actresses working to make this play the best that has ever been presented before the local public.

There will be a prologue taken from Victor Hurbert's 'Toyland'. There will be over fifty children in this very beautiful part called 'Baby's Birthday Party.

Molly Minton, Miss Ruth Quinley, has been left the ownership of the hotel for four days out of the week. Five old maids who had been in love with Molly's Uncle Johnathan before he died, are to run the hotel for the other three days. While Molly is in charge she is to have the privilege of making these old maids modern. While they are in charge they can make her old fashioned.

In order to attract guests at her hotel Molly advertises that a certain Sir Jerry Scott of London, who is rich, handsome and single, and who has come to America incognito, is to be a guest at her hotel. She decided to dress Maggie, one of the old maids, like Sir Jerry Scott. Miss Mary McNeil is to take this interesting part.

In the meantime the real Sir Jerry, Guy Quinley, having read in the papers that he is to be a guest at the Plaza Elite arrives under the allias of John Brown. He is furious because he has been blackmailed. He meets Molly not knowing she is the manager and falls in love with her.

The second act opens with the arrival of Oscar Caveman. Jack Moore, and his secretary, Miss Sue Bruce, who are after the Amethyist that Sir Jerry is supposed to carry around in his pocket. He mistakes Maggie, who is dressed like Sir Jerry, for the real Englishman and kidnappes her. The action from here on is fast and exciting to the limit.

Mr. T. R. Moses, a graduate of the University of California, is the director of this play and he promises the audience a big surprise next Tuesday night between acts of this interesting entertainment.

The proceeds of this play will go towards supporting the clinic of the Crippled School. The local Red Cross is Sponsoring it for Pennington Gap.

State Commission Highly Commended

Richmond— Among the many activities of the State commission on conservation and development to attract widespread approval is the work being engineered under direction of Dr. H. J. Eckenrode of compiling a photographic record of old Virginia houses. Dr. Eckenrode has been employed in this work for about two years. He has already secured 800 pictures of 450 different places, the photos being taken of the buildings both externally and internally Many of these pictures are of structures hitherto absolutely unknown, exhibiting singular and unusual architecture lines, and which in a few years would have disappeared utterly. So far these photographs have been confined largely to eastern Virginia but, beginning with this coming summer, the work will be carried into the western section of the state.

Commenting on this work, and on the great value it will prove to posterity, Harold R. Shurtleff, director of the Research and Record Department of the Rockefeller restoration work now in progress at Williamsburg, after consultation with Walter Macomber, associated with the directing architects there, has just written William E. Carson, chairman of the commission on conservation and development, as follows:

"Although this letter is written by me as a purely personal expression of opinion and not as an associate of the architects who are in charge of the restoration of Williamsburg I think you will be interested knowing that Mr. Walter Macomber and I have had a chance to look over the work of photographing old Virginia houses that is being done under your Commission by Dr. Eckenrode, and both think very highly of it indeed.

"He has already obtained many photographs of interesting types of early Virginia houses that have been hitherto unknown except locally— in some cases the types he has recorded are absolutely new to us and are exceeding interesting— and whose architectural record might be lost to posterity for good if they had not thus been recorded.

"I am very much impressed not only with his selection of the type of old houses whose appearance should be preserved, but by the great thoroughness with which the work is being done.

"As you undoubtedly know a great deal of this type of Virginia architecture that is so interesting to students of colonial architecture and so attractive to tourists who come to Virginia is fast disappearing, so that any attempt that is being made by the Conservation Commission or its agencies to mitigate this loss in any way, I should think, be of great advantage to the state."

The Book Sampler

February publications of significance include the new Sears Roebuck Catalogue, which you have to send to Chicago for, and Shaw's 'The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God', which you have to borrow or else buy with the feeling that you are contributing funds towards the continuance of Shaw's round the world cruise.

Shaw's last book was 'An Intelligent Woman's Guide to Socialism and Capitalism'— a post Beatrice Webb, ante technocracy scheme for running the world, that Shaw addressed to women in the same spirit that the devil offered the apple to Eve when he really wanted Adam to eat it. Shaw now starts out with a none too intelligent, rather bigoted, black girl, who has been converted by a missionary She has, besides her Mission in Life, a knobkerry, a Bible, a slight resemblance to Shaw, and no clothes. With these she sets out into the jungle to look for God. She meets a Fundamentalist, with whom she argues; she chances across a Scientist who believes that God is 'an unnecessary and discarded hypothesis'; she meets an Arab, a conjuror, Peter(with a church on his back), Micah the Phophet, and Ecclesiastes All these she threatens with her knobkerry as soon as she is persuaded that they are impostors. Finall she meets an Irish gardener that looks like Shaw. Then she gives up looking for God and settles down to raise her picaninnies and cultivate her garden.

A less heretical and less amusing book is Philip Guedalla's 'Argentine Tango', a travel book about South America. It touches on a lot of unimportant things entertainingly, and discusses important things like how Latin are the Latin Americans, or what do they think of the Monroe Doctrine.

These and other newest b oks may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia

The County Executive Plan

The reorganization of county government is one of the chief problems to which Virginia will devote its attention during the next decade. In a time of financial crisis governmental forms will be subjected to unusually close scrutiny, and thorough overhauling will be required to relieve the county of its unwelcome reputation as 'the dark continent of American politics'.

Virginia's legislature took a long stride toward needed improvement by passing the optional forms act permitting the voters of a county to choose between three forms of government, the present form and the county manager and county executive forms. Albemarle voters in mass meetings have endorsed the county executive form and submitted the necessary petition for a special election. Adoption of the change is confidently expected, and other counties will proably speedily follow suit.

To aid in the campaign against inertia and lack of information on the part of the public, the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League will debate the county executive form of government next year. Loans of reference material already compiled may be obtained by application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

The hired girl had been sent down to the brook to fetch a pail of water, but stood gazing at the flowing stream apparently lost in thought.

'What's she waiting for?' asked her mistress, who was watching her.

'Dunno,' wearily replied her husband. 'Perhaps she has not seen a pailful she likes yet.

'Very well,' said the angry wife, 'now I have a Frigidaire—see what you can do about a mechanical secretary.'

Championships Stay Dead

Virginia high schools asserted a claim to national leadership two years ago when they abandoned many state championships in major sports. It was a difficult step to take: championships stimulate interest, intensify competition, help to increase receits But these things are irrelevant to the educational aims of athletics, and the view prevailed that sports programs should be free from any exploitation of youth.

The first test of this policy developed last fall. An exceptional football team, denied championship ranking although its record would have brought that distinction in previous years, asked reconsideration of the ruling. But a committee of the state high school organization, canvassing every possible method of establishing championships, decided sportsmanship, academic accomplishment and percentage of pupil participation could not be combined with the discarded factor of scores to set up state championships that would serve strictly educational purposes. Hence district championships only are to be recognized.

Discussions of this policy and other activities of the Virginia High School League at its annual council meeting, reported in leaflet form, will be sent free upon request addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

John S. McNeil

John S. McNeil, 65, former moderator of the Powells River Baptist Association, died Friday at Lee General Hospital here. He had long been a prominent farmer in this section.

Funeral services were conducted from Home church Sunday at 2 p. m.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Minnie Quillen; a daughter, Louise McNeil, of Bristol; three sons, Guy, of Bristol; Dr. Glen McNeil of Richmond, and Davis McNeil, of Jonesville; four brothers, Dr. C. E, of Pennington Gap; William, of Tazewell; B. W., of Birmingham, Ala., and A. C. McNeil, of Rose Hill, and one sister, Mrs. Parrott, of Jonesville.

Papa, Mama, and son, Willie, were crossing the ocean. Willie had done something for which his mother thought he needed correction, but not feeling equal to the occasion she turned to her husband.

'John,' she said, 'can't you speak to Willie?'

Guide (in insane asylum): 'This is one of our most pathetic cases. He went crazy trying to check up on all the John Smiths.'

Visitor: 'A historian?'

Guide: 'No, he was a hotel detective.'

Study Made of Food of Foxes

Richmond— During the past three years the number of foxes is said to have increased materially in all sections of the state. This information, secured from the state department of game and inland fisheries, will doubtless be of interest not alone to the large number of fox hunters in the state, but likewise to sportsmen interested primarily in the shooting of game birds, and to farmers generally.

For the past twelve months the state department of game and inland fisheries has been engaged in having the stomachs of foxes analyzed in an effort to determine just what elements enter most largely into the food of these animals. While this work has not been completed, it will not be amiss here to outline the result of similar investigations carried on by the United States Bureau of Biology at Washington.

The findings of this federal bureau indicate that there is no great difference in the character of food consumed by the red and the gray fox, both living upon practically the same diet.

Where rabbits are common the fox is sure to make of them one of its major foods. There is no doubt, says the biological bureau, that the fox is one of the controlling agents of rabbits, which are injurious in some parts of the country and potential pests everywhere. During the months of winter rabbits compose about 30 per cent of the food of the fox. Mice form another important element in its diet. Several species are taken, including meadow mice, white footed mice, house mice and others. Native rats, where common, are also important among the rodent foods. Rabbits, mice and native rats make up about 50 per cent of the total diet and stand out as staple foods of the fox.

The fox is not averse to taking small birds, especially such as secure their food from the ground, and occasionally it preys on poultry. In a recent study of the contents of 82 gray fox stomachs it was found that small birds composed little more than six per cent of all the food. Game birds were found in only three of these stomachs and contributed little more than one per cent of the total food.

The vegetable diet of the gray fox fluctuates with the season and depends to a great extent on crops and wild fruits. In fall and early winter such fruits as apples, persimmons and grapes are important elements, beechnuts, peanuts and hickory nuts are also significant. When corn is available it is also taken, unharvested ears probably furnishing the greater part. The vegetable diet comprises about twenty per cent of the food.

Miscellaneous animal foods include insects, chiefly grasshoppers, caterpillars and beetles, which are taken frequently, but probably never reach an important percentage of the food. The average proportion of insects in the food does not exceed five per cent. Small snakes, turtles and frogs are taken infrequently and are not to be classed as staple diet. Carrion itself is hot shunned by the fox, but most likely is resorted to when the animals are hard pressed.

Scott County Boy Is Slain

Gate City, — In what Sheriff O. B Darnell was told was a "drunken brawl" Woodrow Falin, 19, was shot to death and Ransome Falin, 40, was painfully wounded this afternoon on the banks of Clinch River at a point about thirteen miles from here, in Sloanetown.

Sheriff Darnell jailed Clarence Falin, 27, and quoted him as submitting he shot both of the men. He also held Martin Falin in jail as a material witness.

Still drunk, Clarence told officers he shot the youth and as Ransome Falin started to run, reloaded his gun and shot him, the sheriff said. Other members of the party said there had been "a falling out" over the division of liquor.

Doctors needed a full hour to treat Ransome Falin before his removal to jail and estimated there were about 25 shot pellets lodged in his back and legs.

Sheriff Darnell took Hobart Williams, 20 year old son of a deputy, with him to assist in the arrests after Clarence Falin reputedly had threatened to kill any officer who comes up here

The youth went to the rear of the house and the sheriff in the front, arresting their prisoner with no trouble. Clarence's wife and two children were at home.

It was thought a preliminary hearing would be arranged as soon as funeral services are conducted for the dead youth.

Of the party of six at the scene of the shooting, two were not taken into custody Milt Falin, at whose house the drinking had alledgedly been in progress, and another man also named Falin.

Post Office Inspector: 'Of course there is. It's a very serious offense to send threatening letters. Have you any idea who's doing it?'

Dubious Person: 'Sure. The Woofus Furniture Company.'

Engineers Surveying Pocket Power Plant

Norton— Engineers representing the State Corporation Commission were in Norton the early part of the week, studying the Pocket power plant of the Old Dominion Power Company, one of the vital issues in the valuation case brought by the coal operators and now pending before the commission. The engineers who returned to Richmond Tuesday, were C. I Smith and F. A. Saunders

Other engineers who have been here making studies in the case are: Cecil L. Reid, of Richmond, and E W. Brown, of Louisville, Ky., here on behalf of the power company, and Charles M. Means, of Pittsburg, Pa., and James A. Erskind.

The coal operators have offered testimony to the effect that the Pocket plant can produce enough power for the Old Dominion customers, and all connections with Kentucky power plans for distribution purposes are not necessary to serve Virginia patrons of the company, and therefore the cost and maintenance of this equipment should not be included in any valuation on which rates are based The company denies that the Pocket plant can take care of the Virginia load.

Books To Own

"Erie Water" is the third novel by Mr Edmonds, and, like his others it deals with the Erie Canal. In "Rome Haul" dealt with the boom times on the canal; in "The Big he told of the canal country in the days of the Civil War; in his latest work he describes the digging of the ditch. Thus the three novels, taken together, form a Erie Saga, though, of course, each story is quite complete and independent in itself The Trilogy, however, is a valuable contribution to historical fiction and, quite apart from any literary quahties, it is well worth reading for the insight it gives [illegible] ten phase of [illegible] development

'Erie Water' [illegible] novel, near [illegible] as most contemporary stories. Perhaps it is a little too long for its [illegible] interests, for the story drags a bit now and then, not badly, to be sure, and it never becomes boring. But condensation would have helped, few themes are great enough to span out beyond the three hundredth page, just as few sermons are good enough to stretch into the second half hour.

"Erie Water" is somewhat panoramic in its method. The reader is treated to a mingled assortment of scenes depicting the westward movement along the Great Western Turnpike of dissatisfied folk from the eastern seaboard; the diggers at work; the rough and tumble living and fighting among the workman; the first boats going through; and many varied episodes from rural and town life along the right of way.

In all of this mixture of people and of activity the unifying element is furnished by the canal itself; whether the characters of the novel love it, hate it, or are merely indifferent to it, the canal is the thing that gives point and purpose to the whole. And in handling of such an arrangement Mr. Edmonds has been rather more successful than some of his contemporaries. He has avoided very skillfully the two great dangers of this method; he has neither destroyed the interest of his readers in the human creatures on his stage, nor has he produced the impression of too much ado about very little indeed.

After the canal, the chief actors in Mr. Edmond's romance are the young Jerry Fowler, on his way to the west to make his fortune, and Mary, the redemption girl, sold into service into service to pay her passage from England. Overcome by the friendlessness of the girl, Jerry buys her from the captain who had brought her over, and the two start off together. But the money to buy land has gone to redeem the girl, and Jerry decides to remain in the east. He gets employment [illegible] and the canal [illegible] mean every [illegible] even interposes [illegible] Mary and [illegible] skillfully the auth[illegible] strates how the [illegible] the people changed from their early and [illegible] their later beef [illegible] canal was the bringer of new heavens and new earth, crowding all other interests and faiths into the background The [illegible] came to stand for [illegible] about to [illegible] Jerry is only [illegible] present a very brief [illegible] ent is of no [illegible] opportunity [illegible] [illegible] man interest

The [illegible] speaking Mary [illegible] there [illegible] or, perhaps, [illegible] ambitious she [illegible] the secured, [illegible] her own; she rejects [illegible] elder and less [illegible] ple which has learned that the race is not always to the swift. He [illegible] wife drift apart but [illegible] man nature asserts itself, as always, and in the end sanity is restored

'Erie Water' presents no startling novelties, and is not likely to revolutionize the American novel, but it is a seriously written and pleasantly readable piece of fiction that is a credit to its author and is likely to hold its place for some time to come.

Baseball season started out with a 'bang' this week. Around 25 boys have reported for practice.

The county has been divided into two groups, Pennington, Dryden, St. Charles and Calvin are in one group. Flatwoods, Jonesville, Rose Hill Blackwater and Ewing make up the other. The winners of each group will play the championship game fields day at Jonesville.

March 11th, Deep Springs at Pennington

March 18th, Flatwoods at Pennington

March 25th, Jonesville at Pennington

April 1st, Pennington at St. Charles

April 8th, Dryden at Pennington

April 15th, Pennington at Calvin

Coach Oscar Gibson is well pleased with his base ball prospects this season, and will turn out a fighting team, all we need is plenty of rooters to yell.

Olin 'Breezy' Wynn says his arm feels like a million dollars, well I hope so, because a south paw will sure look good on the mound for Pennington Hi.

Prof. Bradburry's ideas of having a good girls basketball team is down several points after seeing them play Deep Springs. They lost by a score of 34 to 4.

Miss Pauline Cross, of Bonny Blue, spent Sunday night with Miss Christine Adams. Miss Adams returned the visit Tuesday night.

Ross Myers and Virgil Payne, old timers at Pennington Hi, were visiting the school last week.

Miss Iris Adams was visiting the school Monday afternoon.

The honor students of Pennington Hi entertained with a very interesting program in chapel Thursday 23rd, as follows:

Presiding, Betty Ann Graham and Gail Chinsky

Song(America), School

Devotional, Vincent Tiller

Life of Washington, Sue Richards

Extracts from Washington's Writings, Beatrice Keith

Poem(The Cherry Tree Story), Ottey Cottrell

Rev. Crump, of Bonny Blue, conducted chapel exercises Tuesday morning. The program was opened by the Sophomore class with a song. Rev. Crump's little boy responded with a very nice song. Rev. Crump then decided to have some fun of his own. He called up a boy from each class and gave each a balloon, the one that burst his balloon first won the contest. You should have seen the hot air that escaped in such a short time. Rev. Crump also played the role of an artist and take it from me he sure can use crayons. The program was closed with a prayer by Rev. Crump.

The 1933 Senior class pennant has arrived and is hanging in the auditorium. 'Boy' are those seniors proud!

Monthly tests started this week and you can just imagine the disappointments and prayers.

Allen and Hudson Hartley are absent from school this week on account of illness.

James Boatwright won out with honors for being the biggest gas bag in school. We are certainly proud of him.

New Chevrolet Improvement

New to the automobile industry on the 1933 cars is the mechanism which makes possible starting the motor accelerating it with only one pedal operation.

This device is known as the "Starterator" on the 1933 Chevrolet, the first car in the industry to introduce it.

The new development has a particular appeal for the feminine driver because it eliminates one more manual control to bother with; and it add measurably to the safe operation of the car because if the engine should stall in traffic it may be restarted simply by depressing the accelerator without having to remove the foot from the pedal, the hands from the steering wheel or the eyes from the road ahead.

The Starterator linkage is so designed that when you press down on the pedal, the starting motor circuit is closed. The instant the engine fires a vacum is produced in the intake manifold. This vacuum operates a diaphram which disconnects the starter mechaniam, and thereafter the pedal operates as an accelerator only.

The device is one more step toward the goal of creating as nearly an automatic car as possible, Chevrolet engineers point out

St. Charles

A new epidemic has recently struck the neighborhood, the jig saw puzzle fever, it is spreading with vast speed.

With the organization of the Lee County Hi School base ball league and the warm Monday morning sunshine, gloves, bats and base balls became numerous on the Hi School field.

Several of the Lonesome Piners appeared on the field last week for a brief workout, among them were: Cowboy Barker, Clarence Young, Add Rogers, Letty Scott and others.

The local dramatic presentation of "Go Slow Mary" by local cast was accepted with fine success at the Friday evening performance. Miss Marie Thomas, who played the lead as Mary, again received noted comment for playing the part so well. Other members of the cast stepped out receiving much comment.

The town council will meet Monday, March 6th, to decide more definitely up on the construction of a new town hall. The building will probably be a two story concrete block structure.

Many basket ball fans from the neighborhood and from Bonny Blue is expected to attend the Cardinal Woco Pep Cage game in Knoxville Saturday. It is rumored that a big dance will be held at Sterchi Park in honor of the visiting Virginians.

Coach George S. Shanks is planning a short visit to Rogersville, Tenn., this week.

A correction is offered here to clear a mistake of last week. Clarence Miller purchased the Myers and Munsey pool room but Claude Myers will remain in the barber shop accompanied by J. D. Standefer.

Bonny Blue Store Burglarized Monday

Bonny Blue, — When store employees came to work Tuesday morning they discovered someone had looted the store, and several boxes of shoes, suits of clothes, neck ties and vaulable pieces of jewelry were missing. The thieves also took a Winchester shot gun along with the other lootage. A correct estimation of the loss could not be obtained Tuesday morning, but it is believed by many to be in the vicinity of a thousand dollars or more. The robbery probably occured between 12 and 1 o'clock Monday night. Incidentally the thief or thieves choose a period when the night watchman, Luke Peters, was away from the store on his other rounds. The entry was made through a side window on the store roof.

D B. Holmes, camp officer at Bonny Blue, is in charge of the investigation but no arrests have been at the time of this writing. Mr. Holmes has not stated if any clues have been obtained as to the whereabouts of the burglars.

Excitement is Cause of Death

Dungannon—Frank Wesley Wing, 57, prominent lumberman, member of the town council and former mayor of Dungannon, died suddenly at 8:15 o'clock Friday morning from acute dilation of the heart caused by over exertion in battling a fire which early Friday morning destroyed two local business houses.

Mr. Wing, a native of Pensylvania, but for the past 20 years a resident of Dungannon collapsed and fell dead while working with other men to prevent spread of the flames. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Tillie Wing, four sons, Myron, Burdette, Maurice and Earl Wing, all of Dungannon, and one daughter, Mrs. K. W. Crabtree, of St. Paul.

The fire is belived to have originated from a defective flue in the Dingus Hardware Company building, and spread rapidly to the adjacent McConnell fertilizer store, resulting in considerable damage to both buildings and the loss of practically the entire contents of each. The hardware building and stock was owned by O. B. Dingus and the fertilizer store by George H. McConnell. The fire also destroyed part of the furniture and equipment in the office of Dr. O. E. Blevins on the second floor of the hardware building, and S. T. Choate, local agricultural agent who had rooms in the same building, reported the loss of clothing, books and other articles.

The loss of the hardware stock and building was estimated at $10,000, and that of the fertilizer storo at approximately $1,000. Each was partially covered by insurance, it was said.

Woco Peps To Meet Bonny Blue

St. Charles,—Ross Reeder's Woco Peps the champion basket ball team of the south will journey from Knoxville, Tenn., to Bonny Blue Saturday where they will battle the Bonny Blue Cards in the last and final game of the season. The Woco Peps is a show within themselves with the most remarkable offensive attack the Virginia people will have the opportunity of seeing perhaps in many years.

The Woco Peps have defeated every team in the south with the exception of the Fort Wayne Hoosiers, the Bonny Blue Cards have defeated every team they have played in both Virginia and Tennessee with exception of the Woco Pepe at Knoxville, Tenn., last Saturday night, by the score of 71-24.

It is widely believed by folks in Knoxville that the Peps could easily take the noted Emory and Henry Quint for a ride. The superior offensive attack, Sterchi to O'Neill to Greenblot will mean a goal on most any competition.

If you are at all interested in seeing the best in all Southern cage loops parade the court with supberb offense and defense attack plus a passing combination that is quite out of the ordinary with most perfect accuracy. Then make up your mind to see the battle Southwest Virginia's best the Bonny Blue Cards at Bonny Blue Saturday night at 7:30 in last and final game of the season.

What Leisure Might Mean

The present productivity of the machine age could, if it were properly directed and controlled, provide mankind with an abundance of goods for his sndsistence needs at a minimum cost in labor. The very fact that there is no apparent prospect of proper direction and control reveals the lack of balance in the world's development. Inventiveness has outrun the sense of social responsibility. Reduction of labor for bodily needs calls for increasing effort to recognize and attain higher levels of life's possibilities.

'Nothing less than a complete transformation of our social system', says one critic, will free men's energies from the greedy competition of commercial conflict. 'Mankind is endowed', writes another, 'with limitless capacity for creating beautiful and useful things in varied and beautiful forms.' That transformation and release of that capacity for creation can come about only through understanding and effort. Education is the key to all progress.

Facilities of continuing education have been developed in Virginia for the benefit of all citizens. They are worth knowing about. Readers of The News will be furnished full information by the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

The Book Sampler

Alfred Kreymborg has been poet, dramatist and critic, as well as a force in the growth of culture in the United States. He has been one of the prime movers in the American Renascence. A native of New York, he now writes 'I'm No Hero', a novel of 'modern life in New York as it's lived by the man in the street'. Pre-publication criticism calls it a 'glorified kaleidoscope'. It is kaleidoscopic but is not glorified: Mr. Kreymborg's talents as a playwright prove his undoing as a novelist. He overdoes smart conversation, and his summing up of data in order that the story go on is truly congressional. In spite of the fact there is excitement enough in bank robbery, Wall Street failure, collapse of dreams of material success, reconstruction, suspense in the simple love story to capture and hold the attention, there will be two opinions as to this book: the lenient will hope that Mr. Kreymborg tries again; the just will wish that he had stuck to his knitting and left novel writing alone.

Florida, whose beauties have been sung heretofore by real-estate agents and managers of seasonal hotels, finds another advocate in the person of Majorie Kinnan Rawlings. Her Florida is that of the backwoods, her people simple, dignified and oblivious to the outside world. The phraseology of her book is odd and suggests the Cracker drawl—even the title, 'South Moon Under', is scrubfolk idiom. And it is a strangely vivid tale she has to tell.

Stephen Leacock's biography of 'Mark Twain' is a rare product: it is a book about a humorist who did not want to be known as a humorist, by a humorist who doesn't want to be considered a humorist. The result is a brief, appreciative and readable essay on a delightful man by a delightful author.

Harlan Man Is Killed By Train

Harlan, Ky.— John Smith, 60 years old timberman for the R. C. Tway Coal Company, at Tway, a mile west of here, was killed Friday when a Louisville and Nashville passenger train struck a truck he was driving at Catron's Creek, near his home.

The truck was hurled through a bridge over a creek near the railroad tracks. Smith is survived by his wife and six children.

Actor: 'And the audience, my boy, were glued to their seats.'

Rival: 'Ah! That was a neat way of keeping them there.'

Ewing Faculty Entertained

Ewing— A most clever and delightful event of the social life in Ewing was the Progressive Dinner, served on February 22, honoring the Ewing faculty. The progression was in the style of a military advance, taking fort after fort, as each home was visited. H. T. Ritchie, as 'Commander In Chief', led the 'advance'. The first 'fort' was Fort Richmond, No. 1, H. C. T. Richmond's cafe, where soup was served. March was then made to Fort Fugate, No. 1, the home of T. B. Fugate, where a salad and coffee was served. After the appointed hour of 7:30 had arrived an attempt was made to 'Cross the Delaware', and almost as much difficulty was met by some, in trying to decipher the names necessary as a password, as was met by the forces of the real George Washington. Miss Kathleen Yeary, posing as a very dainty and picturesque colonial lady, and Porter Richmond, in military uniform, as very stern sentry, guarded the bridge, over which the party was at last allowed to pass, and to storm Fort Dean. Here sandwiches and grape juice were served and torpedoes, of home made candies, were distributed. The next 'fort' in the line of march was Fort Fugate, No 2, the home of W. C. Fugate, where a delicious menu of chicken, ham, vegetables and hot chocolate were served. After considerable delay, conversation, and destruction, to the menu, the party then advanced on Fort Richmond, No. 2, the home of D. V. Richmond, where dessert consisting of ice cream in the red, white and blue bricks was served, with cake, coffee and mints.

Each hostess had made her home and her part of the meal most attractive by the use of flags, hatchets, cherry trees and other decorations suitable to the occasion. At a late hour 'retreat' was signaled and the party retired to their several homes.

Those enjoying this delightful occassion were:

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Yeary
Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Hyatt
Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Starnes
Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Browning
Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Ritchie

Horse Falls Breaks Man's Leg

Rose Hill— Bert Hensley, of Caylor, suffered a broken leg Saturday when the horse he was riding fell on wet pavement between Ewing and Rose Hill. Mr. Hensley's leg was caught under the horse. When the accident occurred, he was on his way to attend 'Jockey Day' which comes the fourth Saturday of each month at Rose Hill.

Ewing Scouts Report Two Meetings

Ewing— The boys of the Ewing Scout organization are active and are holding regular meetings on each Tuesday evening. At the meeting on February 21, only two had not passed all of their tenderfoot tests and they hope to pass them soon. All boys present at that time passed one of the Second Class requirements by going the mile at the Scout pace in 12 minutes. Both indoor and outdoor games were played. Duard McDaniel's Patrol won highest points and Johnny Johnson, a member of that patrol, had highest Individual points.

At the meeting on February 28, Johnny Johnson was late, losing six points, thus putting Duard McDaniel ahead on indvidual points. Harry Thompson brought meat and potatoes and Denham Bays brought potatoes, to be used in passing the Second Class test of cooking. The Scout Master took the boys out to build fires and cook. Because of high winds the fires had to be put out and this test will be completed later. Harry Thompson was leader of Curtiss Martin's Patrol, in Curtis's absence. The Patrols have not yet been named.

New Chevrolet Shown Saturday

Directly on the heels of the most successful new car program since 1929, the Chevrolet Motor Company announced Wednesday that a companion car to the present series, to be called nhe 'Standard Six' Chevrolet and priced considerably below the present range, would be shown throughout the nation Saturday.

About 15,000 of the new models will have been built and dispatched to Chevrolet dealers for a simultaneous national showing, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, stated.

The new 'Standard Six' is built for business use and for that group of private owners who want a car without the deluxe features and extra long wheelbase of the present Chevrolet Master Six, he stated. He emphasized that the new line would offer the lowest priced, full size, six cylinder enclosed models the industry has yet seen— and would be ideal for severe utility use.

A new and slightly smaller Chevrolet has been rumored in trade circles since April of 1932, a circumstance which Mr. Knudsen attributed to the fact that the new line of cars has been under development for two years. It will be a quality line throughout, machined to the same close limits as the present Chevrolet and built of the same raw materials, although it will have a slightly shorter wheelbase and will lack some of the features and improvements of the present Master Six line.

In bringing out the new car, Mr. Knudsen said his company is simply producing a supplementary line which will open up new markets and further entrench the company in its position of leadership. He added that he expects the new Standard Six to account for about one-fourth of the company's total production and sales in 1933.

'Automobiles,' said Mr. Knudsen, 'like most everything else, are worth just so much a pound Naturally, with a shorter and lighter car, we can reduce the first cost as well as the cost of operation.

'There is a growing need for a car of this type among fleet users. Similarly, salesmen who are not furnished company cars, and have to buy their own, will welcome tha 'Standard' model. They want dependable, economical transportation coupled with a reasonable amount of style. But primarily they want a quality car of low first cost and low operation and maintenance costs.

'With our present 'Master' model we have conducted tests on the proving ground showing a return of as much as 22 miles to the gallon of gasoline with certain models, making the 'Master' one of the most economical Chevrolets ever built. Yet with the new 'Standard' car we will be able to better even this high mark with a car properly serviced. Similarly, the cost of maintenance will be lower, as will insurance rates and registration fees.

'We feel that with the 'Standard Six' we will greatly expand our market among people who buy transportation primarily. Undoubtedly many private users will select the 'Standard' for personal use, but we expect the bulk of our business from the large fleet user and the commercial traveler.

'We think that the market is ready for a car of this type at this time. We have experienced an improving market for a number of months past, and have consistently run ahead of last year since we announced our Master Six model in December.

'We are now coming into the spring season, best for the sale of automobiles. In addition to that, the great number of fleets of cars purchased in 1928 and 1929 have reached an age, because of the high mileage they pile up in commercial service, where they will have to be replaced this year or they will fall to pieces. They have gone so far that it is more costly to run than to replace them.'

The 'Standard Six', Mr. Knudsen said, would follow very much the lines of the present car. Details, he said, would not be disclosed until Saturday.

Addition of the 'Standard Six' places Chevrolet in a unique position in the industry, it is pointed out. The company is already off to a flying start to its third consecutive year of leadership in the industry, and the new car will further solidify its relative position. The company now manufactures commercial cars covering 90 per cent of all trucking needs. The 'Standard Six' will be adaptable to practically all fleet markets, and the Master passenger car line has a potential of more than 60 per cent of the entire passenger car business done by the industry.

Virginia Tuberculosis Association

Behind the human record of service rendered by the Virginia Tuberculosis Association during the last year in response to the increasing demands that came from every section of the State, the financial statement as reported at the recent annual meeting in Richmond reveals an exceptional record for unsurpassed economis and for efficiencies in carrying on the Association's activities that left it at the end of the year with no indebtedness and with a small surplus on hand.

This surplus, amounting to $931. was reported following an audit of the books by A. M. Pullen and Company C. P. A., and the Association's finance committee consisting of J. Vaughan Gary, Chairman, Thomas C. Boushall and Albert S. Johnstone, ordered that the entire financial report be made public, as reflecting so mething of the splendid accomplishments for the year in the face of continuing difficulties.

The total seal sale from the 17 Virginia cities and the 100 counties which participated amounted to $75,-716.72, which after disbursements to the National Tuberculosis Association of $3,785, and to the various local associations of $54,-064, left a balance for the Association of $17,866. Other income from memberships, donations and interest brought the total income to $18,353.

All items of expenses are covered under four general heads, the total for these amounting to $17,421, divided as follows:

One— Health Education, which includes educational campaigns, distribution of tuberculosis literature, lectures, motion pictnres and other activities in the dissemination of information on the care and cure of tuberculosis, the sum of $5,486.

Two — Administration, which includes the maintenance of the office, correspondence with local organizations of the Association and all the necessary records and booking, the sum of $2,474.

Three—Seal Sale, which provided for the organization and direction of the sale for the State, including furnishing free the Christmas Seals and posters to all city and county organizations, the sum of $5,607.

Four—Organization and field service, which provided for the org nizing of volunteer groups in 100 counties and some of the smaller cities, furnishing assistance of trained workers in planning tuberculosis campaigns and carrying out particular projects, the sum of $3,853.

These figures reveal in a general way the Association did in terms of money, but only those in close contact with the daily activities can appreciate how firmly the foundations for enlarged and better work have been laid, or how devotedly unselfish are the volunteer workers throughout Virginia who responded to the appeals that come for help.

2 Harlan Men "Shoot It Out"

Harlan, Ky.— John Blanton, 30, was shot to death and Orville Gross, 35, police chief of Wallins, was seriously wounded in a pistol fight at Wallins, eight miles west of here Thursday afternoon.

Gross was brought to the Harlan hospital here for emergency treatment. He was shot twice in the abdomen and once through the arm. His condition Friday was serious, and hospital attendents said they were doubtful if he would survive.

Gross and Blanton 'shot it out' on the streets of Wallins, Ky., but no details of the shooting had reached the sheriff's office. Gross's condition will not permit him to make a statement.

Blanton's death brings the homocide total to nine in Harlan county for 1933.

Minnesota Great State Says Wells

How many people know that Lindbergh, Kellogg, Sinclair Lewis and Gallicurci are natives of Minnesota and that this unusual state of more than 11,000 lakes was visited in 1362 by Viking explorers, hundreds of years before Raddisson, LaSalle Marquette were born?

The foregoing are but a few of the unusual facts about the "gopher" state to be presented to radio fans throughout the nation by Carveth Wells, Continental Oil Company radio entertainer, in his regular Wednesday night broadcast on March 15.

To provide historical spice, Wells resurrects the ghost of Hiawatha and learns why this great war chief deserted his people.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station W. M. A. Q. Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

Books To Own

'Revolution: 1776' by John Hyde Preston, should be welcomed as a spirit purging dose of what was real and tasty in our fight for independence. It should be flung in the teeth of those academic physicians who fed us in school days with sugared pallets of American history.

We who have sickened at the wonderboys of U. S. legend and have relegated the words 'glory and honor' to the vocabulary of the politician may now read an unbiased, refreshing account of our nation's birth and growth, perhaps, a trifle sorry at having viewed it with boredom. 'Revolution: 1776' is spirited, honest and juicy. Its anecdotes present authenticity with rare sparkle.

Mr. Preston begins at the stirring of revolutionary spirit in New England of 1768 and sweeps through the terrific days of its ascendency and climax. He presents sporadic battles in mastery fashion, from the vantage of an imagined spectator; the raid on the Gaspee, the Boston Tea Party, the Battle of Bunker Hill, which was not fought at Bunker Hill, the Battle of Brandywine, Valley Forge, Trenton, Philadelphia, Yorktown—he is at each encounter in brilliant fancy, recording and analyzing. He re-creates battlefield scenes and brings dead fighters back to their chargers. He topples over marionettes and replaces them with persons who swear and fight, love and seduce, stab and die, as real persons do. He whisks dust from the godhead of Washington and contends that the General was a poor military commander in the early years of war; that his neglect of the obvious advantages of calvary was little short of bone headed; that his understanding of the commoner was negligible; that his disciplinary measures were such as to allow his officers to order deserters flogged thirty nine times and swabbed with salt water; that he lied magnif cently to save his army, and swore grimly as a means of enforcing discipline.

This author is no cheap belittler, however, he gives us Washington for what he is worth — and that is a very great deal. He emphasizes the American leader's importance as the one rock to which the starving farmer-soldiers could cling. He shows him changing in eight years from a vigorous, carefree planter to a tired, grey haired man whose fondest dream was to live peacefully beside the Potomac. Posterity has deified him and young skeptics have scoffed him in the pantheon of their crumbling gods, but their antics seem pitiful beside his accomplishment. His soul is inextricably wound through the roots of the nation.

'Revolution: 1776' acquaints one pleasantly with other prominent figures of the struggle: Sir William Howe, whose golden haired mistress unwittingly did so much for the American cause; Marquis de La Fayette, publicity man par excellence, without whom France would have remained aloof; Benedict Arnold, our army's finest general, driven to treachery by his wife, the lovely Mata Hari of the Revolution; John Andre, handsome young British spy, at whose hanging American officers and citizens wept; General Charles Lee, whose oft discussed cowardice Mr. Preston denies; and George Rogers Clark, who won fame slaying Indians and French in the Northwest.

With Washington as the central figure the Revolution moves its dramatic course. The narrative relates it uncompromisingly, its stupidity, its foolish glories, its suffering, its heroism. To the reader who saw American history in some stilted text and turned away, it will open up a new field. Though one hesitates to suggest that it is the first humanization of the Revolution which seems satisfactory, few will deny its supremacy. It is to be commended chiefly, I should say, for an emotional unity seldom achieved in such work. The Revolution is a difficult period to dovetail and render solid; it straggles so much. Mr. Preston perceives it as a kaleidoscopic entity, and by the simple expedient of imbedding, in temporal order, incidents against a moving background of skillful nature touches he eliminates inertia.

More than this, we find he has humor and a flair for graphic thrusts. 'So Colonel Smith, more portly than Pitcairn, sitting on his gray charger like a fat bulb with its roots clinging to a little rock maneuvered the king's regiments.' This at the Battle of Lexington. Writing from extensive research, Mr. Preston pours out facts rejuvenated, imbued with his own youthfulness and vim He makes us wish more brilliant men would avoid novels and exploit history. 'Revolution: 1776' is history the way it should be written.

Make Maple Syrup In Russell County

Lebanon,—Maple syrup is being made in Russell county probably in larger quanities this spring than any year recently. This was in the eighteen hundreds a very important operation of farmers in this section, practically every farm of any size having its "sugar orchard." The majority of these "orchards fell under the lumberman's axe." There are maple trees enough left to produce a large quanity of this dainty.

Bonny Blue

The safety council held their regular monthly meeting at the recreation building last Tuesday night. Smith M. Williams, Superintendent, of the Bonny Blue operation was in charge. Approximately 100 men were present.

The Bonny Blue League plans revenge on Pennington Gap Friday night by having the largest attendance at the union meeting. Pennington tied the score last month by having the same number present as Bonny Blue. The meeting will be held again at the M. E. Church, South, Friday night, March 10, at the usual time 7:30 p. m.

The wedding bells began ringing here a few days ago and they rang for the special benefit of Othenial Hatmaker and Miss Addie Roberts, popular young couple of this community. The marriage occured at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Miles, by the Rev. E. L Crump. The newly weds seem to be very happy indeed.

Led by coach "Phoebe" Shanks the Cardinals invaded Knoxville, Tenn., Saturday for the Woco Pep classic. Aside from an interesting game this trip proved to be a marvelous sight seeing tour for several of the Cardinal players Walter "Clereator" Carter Journal reporter and score keeper for the Cards, was reported to have visited several hot dog stands in the city Wade Pickle star player, informs everyone that he had the time of his life among the "bright lights". Wade explains that he rode an elevator, went through a revolving door, rode a street car, saw a fifteen story building and almost got ran over when he walked in front of a speeding fire engine, he says the city was all right but Bonny Blue would suit him just as well. John Opollo Slover played with such zeal that the audience were amazed, but the reason could be attributed to the cheering feminine section watching the Virginia athelete perform.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hill, of Knoxville, Tenn., were over night guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Hill Monday.

Ruth Miller, Pauline Cross and Mrs. U D. Bryant were strong rooters for the Cards at Knoxville, Tenn., Saturday night

Preacher And Goat In Butting Contest

Norton— Preaching in the colored churches of Wise county is not always lucreative, the Rev. James E. Crosby said today in recalling how he once had a butting contest with a goat when he was in need of cash.

According to Preacher Crosby the butting contest occurred at Josephine, in Wise county, in 1928. A $25 purse was made up for the event. The preacher and the goat squared off, he said, and met with a mighty impact in the center of the crude arena,

'I was knocked out myself fo about fo minutes,' Crosby said. 'After I comes to I goes over to see how the goat is getting along and blamed if dat goat ain't dead as a doornail. Mr. Smith wants to kill me fo killin' his goat but I gets away wid my hide and de $25.'

Norton residents remember the Sunday when Crosby mounted a Norton pulpit after having preached the previous Sabbath to inmates of the poorhouse at Wise and exclaimed: 'Brethren and sistern, you am now listening to de man who last week preached in the biggest tabernickle in Wise county.'

Fair Planning Press Building

Chicago,—How news is gathered, written, edited and transmitted over telegraph systems, and how a daily newspaper is published, will be shown in detail at the Press Building at the Chicago Century of Progress, which opens June 1st.

The Press Building is to be completed May 10 and will be one of the outstanding features of the world's fair. It will be located near the famous Soldiers' Stadium and will house a daily newspaper, in addition to providing space for correspondents from all parts of the world.

One Chicogo newspaper plans to publish a world's fair edition in the Press Building each day of the exposition, to give the public the most intimate cross-section view of journalism that it is possible to give. The building will be done in glass, chromium and a block composition similar to concrete.

Visitors will see how an editor works, how news assignments are selected and given to reporters, how those reporters and rewrite men handle their copy, and how photographers go about their work.

Hundreds of telegraph wires are to be installed in the Press Building and they will be setup for special correspondents, who will "cover" the exposition from "local" angles, for newspapers in all parts of the world.

Bonny Blue

The young ladies Sunday School Class met for a business meeting at the Recreation Building Monday night.

Bonny Blue was defeated at the Union meeting Friday night, by Pennington Gap. This is the second time Pennington has ruined Bonny Blue's chance for attendance honors.

Almost 300 people saw the Woco Pep, Cardinal game Saturday night. Everyone agreed that the Cards played a splendid, if hopeless game.

Sewell Shanks and Sam Wright were visitors at Black Mountain, Ky., Sunday.

Mrs. Elvin Henson has returned from a visit in Jacksbourgh, Tenn.

Robert Henson and Jimmie Henson were visiting in Bonny Blue, Sunday.

Mrs. V. M. Pence and Mrs. W. H. Bruce were visiting and shopping in Bristol first of the week.

Mrs. P. D. Pence and son Phillip, of Bristol, were guests of Dr. and Mrs. V. M. Pence one day last week.

VIRGINIA-LEE CLOSED OUT

Virginia-Lee Coal Company, a successful coal mining operation in St. Charles district for the last 31 years ceased operations Friday because "of business and banking conditions." Notice was given miners that they might seek employment elsewhere and vacate Virginia-Lee houses. The commissary was closed also.

The mine, a No. 5 seam that had been giving employment to 125 men, had been producing 600 tons daily in recent months. All tools and equipment will be brought out of the mines, according to A. W. Wagner, president.

Benefit Heart Party By M. S.

Jonesville—The Missionary Society has been having a series of benefit heart parties. Among those that have entertained are:

Large Attendance at League

Smyth Chapel is having one of the finest Leagues known in this section. It has far the largest attendance for the past month of any of the Leagues.

Splendid services are being rendered from time, to time. There were present Sunday night 330. The League was greatly pepped up by a short talk given by Rev. C. F. Watkins and Joe Gibbs. The Blues being the winners of the contrast.

Notice To Farmers

Game Warden J. R. Hines has received 100 pounds of Korean Lespedeza, and will give it out to the farmers of Lee county. Call at his store Route 3, Jonesville and get your package free.

Mrs. Kate Stover who has been ill is recovering.

Methodist Young People Meet

A very enjoyable mass meeting for the young people of Upper Lee County Southern Methodist Churches was conducted at the Pennington Gap Church, Friday night, March 10. Pennington, with 37 present, took honors for having the largest number present.

The devotional service was excellently conducted by Bonny Blue. Miss Opal Fleenor led the service. Several fine talks were given on the influence of the Bible on other lands.

President Joe Gibbs asked all officers of the individidual divisions to attend a buisness meeting Tuesday nite, March 14.

At this meeting officers for the whole division will be nominated.

After the session all retired to the lower floor to play games. Everyone had a fine time.

It is urged that every member of the Young People's Division attend these services. They are consecrational as well as recretational. The next service will be held on the second Friday of April. A cordinal welcome is extended to all!

Woco Peps Defeated Cardinals

St. Charles—The Woco Peps, Champion independent Basket Ball team of the South journeyed to Bonny Blue Saturday where they battled the cardinals to a 77 to 30 score Vaughn Snodderly led the parade for the Peps with 21 points while Payne, led for the cards with 11 presenting a fine exhibition.

Mr Starchi, Woco Peps captain, was given special introduction to the record crown by Mr Epstein of U. T. as a former Virginian, and a lad who had made atheletics history in the city of Knoxville Tenn, Sterchi called on many relatives during his short stay in the village.

After the game, Smyth Williams, Superintendent of Bonny Blue mine took the Knoxville team on a moon light journey to visit the coal mines. A sight indeed for the Tennessiians as they had never before saw a coal mine. They appreciated the trip wonderfully and the nice courteous extended them by the Bonny Blue folks.

Recovery of Stolen Goods at Bonny Blue and Conviction of Robbers

Bonny Blue—A young man of this community Lee Saunders visited into the Bonny Blue office Thursday afternoon at 2:30, and inquired if E. M. Williams and R. C. Hill wished to see him in connection with the store robbery which occured here last Tuesday morning. After a few minutes questioning Saunders broke down and confessed to his part in the robbery and named as his allies two other boys of this community, Sherman Ingle and Clyde Carter. Officer D. B. Holmes in charge of the investigation, immediately went to the boys homes and placed them under arrest. Saunders then volunteered to take Mr. Holmes to [illegible] on Jack's Branch where the loot was found in five travelling bags. All the articles of clothing and valuable pieces of Jewelry were found there, except a 16 gauge shot gun, 2 watches and four diamond rings valued at $200.00, these were found on the mountain side in a boy scouts cabin. The entire amount of goods stolen were returned. They were valued at $1685.25. The boys told how they hid away in the mountains while the search for them was in progress. When caught they seemed to be much the worse for food and water. The exact hour of the robbery was given at between the hours of 4:30 and 5:30 a. m., after the night watchman, Luke Peters, had gone home. Engle age 22, was sentenced to 4 years in prison. The other two, Carter and Saunders both 20 years of age, were given 2 years each.

To the 1933 Members of the American Legion who have not renewed their membership for 1933.

Have you thought seriously about allowing your membership in the Auxiliary to lapse? Can you stand aside and not help to relieve the suffering of America's veterans, disabled by their patriotic service to their country in the World War?

Our boys went into the army to serve until the war was over. Should we not consider our membership in the same light: namely, to serve until the disabled ex-soldier and his dependents no longer need our help?

When you repeat that wonderful Preamble do those inspired words mean nothing to you? Or you just rendering lip service with no heart in it? Read over the American Legion Auxiliary Preamble and see if you can, after realizing its true meaning, give up your membership in the Auxiliary. It is not the dues that are holding you back, it is the lack of appreciation of what your membership in the Auxiliary really means. If you fully realize its meaning, you will make any sacrifice to retain your membership.

What should it mean to you: that you are willing to help the American Legion Auxiliary to "carry on" the great task of caring for the disabled World War veteran, his mother, his wife and his children.

Let us repeat the objectives of the Auxiliary.

1. Rehabilitation.

1. To help the needy, disabled World War veteran in hospital and home.

To keep his loved ones from want.

2nd. Child Welfare.

The aim of the Legion and Auxiliary is: no World War Orphan or Child of a disabled veteran must lose its opportunity in life because of its father's service to his country.

3rd. Americanism including National Defense and Fidac.

To help keep America true to the principles for which she fought to win—freedom, liberty, justice for all.

To work adequate at National Defense, feeling that in this way lies the "way of peace."

To maintain by the Interalled Federation of Fidac friendship with our Allies as a means to preserve World peace.

These are high ideals of the American Legion and the Legion Auxiliary. If I cohld make you appreciate the privilege you enjoy in being eligible to be a member of the Auxiliary; if I could make you feel that whatever else you are giving up in these times of stress, that you will keep your membership in this organization which has for its single purpose that of service, service to those that are unable to help themselves, I would feel that success had crowned my efforts to carry out my pledge of service te the American Legion Auxiliary.

One of the compelling reasons for which the American Legion formed the Auxiliary was that they found in their work of service to the disabled that they needed the warm understanding touch of women, who through their own experience of suffering of having loved ones at war could best do the work.

Is this not a call to you? I have so many women, who are ineligible to join the Auxiliary, say to me, "I want to join the American Legion Auxiliary? Can I join on a son-in-law, is there any way I can become a member?"

I ask you to renew your membership for 1933. We need you now as we have never have needed you before. To carry out successfully the work of the Auxiliary in Virginia is more than we can do with reduced membership. I ask you not only to renew your membership but also to try and secure new members. Your unit needs you the Department of Virginia needs you. We want you to do what work you can. If you cannot give the time, your dues will work for you and we who have the time will do the work. But just keep along with us, forget the things you may not be entirely in sympathy with, forget everything, everything but that you are working to help those who gave up their lives or their health for their country. "What Price Glory?"

J. R. McMurray.
Department Membership Chairman.

To the Taxpayers of Lee County

All unpaid taxes for the year 1931 for real estate must be paid by the 15th of May 1933. And, unless these taxes are paid by the above date I will be compelled to sell all land that has 1931 tax still unpaid.

Please try to meet these taxes by or before the above date.

Yours truly,

Virginia Extends Tags Until May 1st.

Richmond — T. McCall Frazier, director of the division of motor vehicles, Monday extended the deadline for the purchase of state license tags from April 1 to May 1.

He said his action was taken with the permission of Governor Pollard to prevent an additional burden being placed on the people "at this time of financial readjustment."

"In order to prevent an additional burden being placed upon the people of Virginia at this time and to assist insofar as possible the return of business to normal conditions, I am today, with the advice and consent of the governor, requesting the officials of all states to recognize 1932 Virginia motor vehicle tags to May 1, 1933.

"Application cards to be used in obtaining 1933 tags will not be mailed to motor vehicle owners of the state before April 1. This statement does not mean that anyone desiring to purchase 1933 licenses cannot do so at any time after March 15 by taking the action I have outlined. We will not only assist every motor vehicle owner in Virginia during the existing economic emergency but we will save the state thousands of dollars of additional expense which would of necessity be incurred if the usual course of procedure was followed and and the purchase of license required at this time."

The beginning of the Virginia automobile license year was moved from January 1 to April 1 under a law passed by the 1932 General Assembly for the benefit of automobile owners who are faced with many first of the year bills.

Applications for automobile license for 1933 were being mailed from the motor vehicle department Monday.

There were more than 400 bags of mail going out of the office, the division having obtained a one cent rate by distributing and bagging its own mail.

Wilhoit-Robinson

Caylor—The announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Lillian Robinson of Caylor to Mr. Dale V. Wilhoit of Johnson Bible College, Knoxville, Tenn., on February 18.

Mrs. Wilhoit is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Robinson and has just completed a two year course at Hiwassee College, Madisonville, Tenn.

Mr. Wilhoit is a ministerial student at Johnson Bible College and has charge of some Christian churches near Rose Hill. The young couple plan to continue their work at Johnson Bible College.

Gibson Station

Quartely meeting at Gibson Station was well attended. A good sermon and a fine pichic dinner served in the church.

Mrs. A. W. Haines, Mrs. W. P. Allen, Mrs. Roy Malone, Mrs. Susie Taylor and Mrs. A E. Robertson were invited to Mrs. Jess Willoughby's of Jonesville, to a turkey dinner Thursday.

Norton Family In big Fortune

Norton — With the return of Mrs. S. P. Buchanan, of south Coeburn from Hawk, N. C, a fortnite ago where she spent some time in conference with a relative, Aaron Buchannon, learning the details of the vast $850,000,000 William Buchanan estate, which, it is said, will be divided among the 1,200 relatives in the near future, Mr. J. M. Buchanan and children of Norton, filled in contracts before J. J. Hyatt notary public, whereby they agreed to pay Aaron Buchanan of, Hawk, N. C., W. H. Young, of Bakersville, N. C., and Overtou D. Jackson, of Cincinnati, O., a commission of 30 per cent on their respective shares in the event that the three attorneys effect a settlement.

According to available information regarding the division of the estate, it seems that Mr. Buchanan and his three children of age, Joe, John and Mary, face the prospect of receiving approximately $100,000 each. The members of the Norton family also received copies of their family tree from Aaron Buchanan, who has traced the family back to William Buchanan, of Tyronne County, Ireland, whose grandson, Colonel John Buchanan, settled in South West Virginia in 1736.

Zeb Buchanan, of Hickory, N. C., states that the vast estate consist of $350,000,000 cash in trust, while the remainder is invested in valuable real estate, a portion of which is said to be located on Long Island

In his will, William Buchanan stipulated that his properties should be leased for 90 years, finally reverting to his estate and that his money should be held in trust for 100 years before a division was made.

The century now has elapsed, according to the heirs, and strenuous legal measures are being taken to effect a settlement.

Good Times Have Followed the Bad

New York, N. Y.—Unprecedented is a word which irritates many old timers in Wall Street, particularly as applied to the present financial situation.

Like old war veterans, they speak of past severe slumps, and conclude with "we licked 'em,' or words to that effect.

"We've got to stand and fight," declared a veteran banker, "just as we did before. I guess you don't remember 1907.

They emphasise that just as past fights have always been won, this one will be, too.

There were expressions before the memory of men now living written records tell their stories. Perhaps the nation's first major business collapse began in 1780 with the tobagganning of prices after the revolution. The records do not show how long this collapse lasted, but prices eventually began their climb.

Then there was prosperity. Then there was another war. Then in 1815 there was another depression, accompanied again by a collapse of prices. This one ended during an all defined period up to about 1830.

Wall Street was being organized on a more important basis. Speculation in stocks was extensive. There was a boom, and in 1837 there was a panic. There were bank failures by the score, money shortage, hardships, even food riots. But the deflation ran its course, and by 1840 another upward swing was on its way.

In the late 40's, California's gold was discovered. It poured into our markets. Speculation marched along with the nation's expansion. But expansion went too far, and the discovery of fraud in the offices of a large railway compan was the signal of still another panic. The story was told again. A former great banker turned to the manufacture of candles. This was in 1857.

Four years later there was the Civil war. Afterward as usual war prices collapsed and panic followed. Then came a period of rapid industrial expansion.

On the morning of September 18, 1873, the doors of Jay Cook's great bank in Philadelphia closed. The country had marched too fast. There was an avalanche of failures. From April, 1873, to June, 1879, prices fell about 40 per cent. This depression ended about 1880, but it was only an interlude, for another crash came in 1884.

It ended in the late eighties. The country sailed along until 1893, when there was another depression, a bad one. It ended too. In 1907 it came again, announced by speculative collapse, caused by a number of things. It also ended.

Another war in 1914. Another sharp collapse when the war ended. A boom until 1929. Another depression.

Good times have followed bad—always.

Va. Patronage Is Unsettled

Washington,—Final action upon federal Jederal jobs which may be available to Virginia Democrats under the new national administration may not be taken up for at least six months, it was learned here Tuesday.

Republican office-holders expecting the axe to fall at any minute, largely are winding up their work, but events now indicate that many of them will be expected to hold on at least until midsummer and others until autumn.

Virginians conferred with Tas. A. Farley, chief of patronage for President Roosevelt, and it was plainly indicated that the immense task of overhauling the federal personnel may require considerable time.

It was pointed ont that the Congress, which meets in special session Thursday, and the president himself, way abolish not a few of the jobs toward which Democratic office seekers have looked with ardent eyes.

Virginia's new senator, Harry Floyd Byrd, has succeeded Senator, Swanson as chief of patronage in Virginia, the senior senator, Carter Glass, having declined to add this task to his other manifold duties.

Wells Will Tour Hiawatha Country

Interesiting word pictures of present day vacation settings, as well as historical scenes in Michigan and Wisconsin will be offered radio fans next Wednesday night, March 22, by Carveth Wells, well known world traveler, in his regular broadcast for Continental Oil Company.

The names of old French Canadian explorers, such as Pere Marquette and Louis Joliet find an important place in the descriptions. In fact, Wells conjures up a gohstly voice, said to resemble that of Joliet, to tell about the adventures of his exploring party in 1673. The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station W. M. A. Q. Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

Young People Organized League

Caylor—The young people of Mt. Carmel Methodist Church of Caylor met last Wednesday at the church and under the direction of Rev. C. H. Browning, pastor, organized an Epworth League. Officers elect were Charles Snavely, adults counselor Estell Susong, president; Betty Rowland, vice president; Dexter Brooks, secretary and treasurer. Committee heads are Bartie Susong, Charlie Williams, Hasten Rowland, Dayton Parkey and Estel Rowland.

Books to Own

One of the pleasantest facts about a victory is that it is so easy to explain. The public is not inclined to be adversely critical, and there is glory enough to go around, with some to spare. Consequently, even those who fail to contribute a fair share to the final success have their sins of omission or commission generously forgotten. Conversely, defeat is hard to explain; and this fact accounts for the controversies which have raged in the South in determining the exact place of those Confederate leaders who survived the first half of the war.

No major figure in Confederate gray has evoked more acrimonious debate than has P. G. T. Beauregard, probably for two causes: he was by instinct and inheritance an unusually colorful figure in any gathering, and he was fated to begin his Confederate career too spectacularly to be continued. Even his name was against him; Pierre Gustave Toutant Beauregard is too sonorous a cognomen to be overlooked. His victory at Sumpter was too facile; when he lifted up the ram's horn against that Jerico so that its walls came tumbling down in glorious and bloodless victory, fate laid upon his reputation a handicap too great for mortal man. That he could not maintain the pace, though it would have been beyond human power, was bound to count against him when Southern fortunes began to ebb, and to weigh heavily in the final audit. Was he over rated? Did he commit major blunders influential in producing the defeat of the South? Was President Davis right in his suspicion and dislike of the Creole soldier? We have long been debating those questions, and we are still divided. Most of the historians who have concerned themselves with these matters have been honest men; frequently they are capable men. One begins to wonder if a categorical solution will ever be reached.

For instance, why was not first Manassas followed up with the capture of Washington? Jackson muttered something "in his beard" about ten thousand men. But were there ten thousand soldiers available in the army demoralized by victory? Beauregard was so elated with victory that he thought the war was over, says one critic. Davis was so busy trying to demonstrate that he had commanded on the field that everything else was forgotten, says another. Reorganization was so slow and so difficult that the moment passed before it could be seized, says another. There are still other reasons advanced. The fact is that Washington was not molested, and someone—or something—was to blame. It was Beauregard's misfortune to be involved.

Or again, take the Louisiana Lottery. Lee had refused to permit the use of his name in a commercial venture; Beauregard accepted a salary of $10,000 from the largest gambling venture America has known. What justification could be offer? What connection has this episode with his military qualifications? Let those reply who recall the horror with which this fact was communicated to them by awed and virtuous ladies in grammar school.

Mr. Basso has set himself the task of setting up Beauregard in his proper proportions. It is a difficult undertaking because it is hard to be fair to one's hero without casting reflections upon others. Perhaps the reflections are just. No matter; reputations are seesaws, and when one end goes up the other goes down. It is sad but inevitable. Whatever one's reactions may be to Mr. Basso's conclusion, he deserves much credit for his industry and skill in presenting a full and readable account of the facts in the career of Beauregard, who was, one must believe, an able man and an ardent patriot, who enjoyed great popularity and suffered great condemnation, who knew what it was to abound and suffer lack, and who was, through much, if not all of it, a gentleman. It is not well that he be forgotten.

Chevrolet Sales Increasing 7.3 percent

Detroit Total production of Chevrolet cars and trucks in February was 45,077 new units, a gain of 7.3 per cent over the 42,008 units built in the corresponding month of 1932, W. S Knudsen president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor company, announced here today.

February production brings the total number of new 1933 models — shown publicy for the first time on December 17 — manufactor to date to 150,000 new cars and trucks Mr. Knudsen said. Since the first of this year to the close of February 15,200 more units had been built than in the first two months of 1932, he stated.

Of February's total production, domestic dealers took 39,200 models for delivery to consumers as compared with 39,000 the month of 1932. Retail dedeliveries to consumers for the first twenty days of the month, already reported by dealers, reflect this increase in the gain scored over the corresponding days of last year Mr. Knudsen said.

After Taking Two Bottles of Scalf's Indian River Tonic

Mrs. Ben Noe, Loyall, Ky., Says: For more than a year I had suffered from pellagra. The skin on my arms and feet and ankles was broken out, I had no appetite, and I was so weak and nervous I could scarcely walk. I found great relief after taking only two bottles of Scalf's Indian River Tonic. I can do all my work now and feel better in every way, I can't say enough for Scalf's Indian River Tonic.

Scalf's Indian River Tonic is for sale by leading druggists and other stores.

Pupil Gets 18 Years For Slaying Teacher

Trenton, Ga.—Grady Jeffrey, 14 ear old high school boy, was found guilty by a Superior court jury Tuesday of voluntary manslaughter in the fatal stabbing of Prof. V. C. Collier, his school principal.

He was sentenced to 18 years in the penitentiary.

Collier was wounded February 17, at the local school when he sought to spank the youth.

Jeffrey entered a plea of not guilty on the grounds that he acted in self defense. He told the court he was knocked to the floor and the principal beat him.

Prof. Collier was a native of Lee county. He has a number of relatives living in Wise county.

Price-Sweeny

Ewing—A pretty but a quite wedding of interest to a large circle of friends, took place Sunday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Sweeny, at Ewing, when their attractive daughter, Violet, became the bride of Mr. Tom Price, of High Splint, Ky. To the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Mrs. C. H. Browning, the couple entered, attended by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith, of Knoxville, Tenn., aunt and uncle of the bride. They were met by Rev. C. H. Browning, who performed the ceremony. Others present were the parents of the bride, her grand-mother, Mrs. Smith, Miss Bashie Kincaid and B. F. Kincaid.

The bride was charming in a dress of blue crepe, with accessories to harmonize. Immediately after the ceremony, the newly-weds left by motor, for a brief honeymoon. While away they will visit with Mr. Price's mother, Mrs. Victoroa Price, at Pleasant View, Tenn. They will make their home in High Splint, Ky., where Mr. Price holds a responsible position with a coal mining company.

Car Load Baby Beeves on Show at Ewing, March 24

A carload of highly finished baby beeves will be on exhibit and judged for best individuals at the barns of Tip Richmond, Ewing, Friday 1 p m, March 24th. These calves were placed on feed October 1, and have been fed to the fullest capacity since. The weights of these calves last October was from 650 to 750 lbs. Now the weights range from 1,000 lbs, to 1,150 lbs. They were all purebred or near purebred herefords, selected for strictly baby beef type or early maturing qualities. The calves were selected from all points of Lee county, Hancock and Claibourne county Tennessee. They came from the best livestock farms in these three counties that have long enjoyed a wide reputation as beef cattle counties. Kenneth E. Litton, of Blacksburg, will judge these cattle after which they will likely be shipped to Cincinnati, Ohio. Buyers are invited and it is expected that sale of the load will be made on the grounds before shipping.

This car of the highest finish and quality of beef cattle to ever leave these counties is expected to attract many visitors that love fancy cattle. There are 28 head of these calves that have been fed by boys and farmers from fifteen different farms.

D. C. Tritt

D. C. "Dockey" Tritt, 58, was found dead in bed at his brother's home here, Friday, March 17, at about 6:00 o'clock. Four small empty poison bottles were found. No motive for the suicide has been given.

The funeral was conducted at the home Monday, March 20, and burial was made in the family cemetery near his old home.

Surviving are three brothers, Dr. P. H. Tritt, of this place, Elmer Tritt, of Ponder, Texas, and Tyler Tritt, of Tellico Plains, Tenn., one sister, Mrs. Frank Crabtree, of this place.

Birthday Dinner

Mrs. C. F. Watkin delightfully entertained with a six o'clock dinner Friday evening in honor of Rev. C. F. Watkin's birthday.

It was a pleasant surprise for Rev. Watkins when he came home that evening to find already seated at the table, the Rev. E. L Crump of Bonny Blue, and the stewards of the M. E. Church, South.

The long dinner table was a beautiful picture, it was centered with a large bowl of jonquils, green tapers tied with green ribbons were burning at each end of the table. Place cards were attractive paper jonquils. Favors of shamrocks, pipes, Irish derbiee. and harps were placed on the table. Mrs. Watkins served baked chicken, dressing, gravy, candied sweet potatoes, peas, macaronia and cheese, pineapple salad, mint fruit jello with whipped cream, cake and coffee.

After dinner the guests were entertained in the living room by the Rev. Crump. The guests were: Messers A. G. Hyatt. R. S. Orr, J. V Kelly, B. M. Kelly, T. C. Barlow, C. B Fry, C. E Legg, R. E Beeler, S. H. Hughes, and Roy Fletcher.

EWING BANK REOPENED

Ewing—Under authority granted by M. E. Bristow, Commissioner of Banking for the State of Virginia, the Peoples Bank of Ewing reopened on Wednesday for regular business. The opening day business was very gratifying, with the deposits made equaling about ten times the amount of the withdrawals, which were in the line of normal business transactions. This indicates a continuance of the confidence of the people in this institution.

Training School Opens Sunday

A Standard Training School for Christian workers will open here Sunday at the local M. E. Church, South. Three classes will be offered. Senior Young People Department Administration, will be taught by Miss Elizabeth Brown, director of young people's work throughout Holston Conference. The Rev. R. H. Duncan, of Leona Mines, will teach St. Mark's Life of Jesus. A course in Pupil Study, will be offered by the Rev. C. F. Watkins, of this place.

The first session will be held Sunday, March 26, 2:30 p. m. Thereafter the class peiords will be from 7:00 to 9:00 p. m., each evening, beginning with Monday and continuing through Friday. At the Friday evening session certificates of credit will be presented to those who have earned them.

This school is open to Christain workers of any denomination without any enrollment fee. Each pupil of course, pays for his own textbook, but that is the only item of expense.

A similar school was held here last year, at which time 87 received training credits. It was reported to be the largest three teacher school ever held in Holston Conference.

The Book Sampler

Spring is here, and if such trivalties as bank mortoriums abd what-not prevent assuaging the perennial urge with auto, bus, pullman or chair car why, lose it in a book. Will James will make you a swashbuckling buckaroo on a cattle ranch "All in the Day's Riding"; Elliott Merrick can lead a chosen band of fresh-air friends to conquer the Artic—or if not conquer at least subsist in his "True North". You can beat around the Horn in sail with Captain Alan Villiers at the helm.

Or if scented breezes, gold sands, and lazy living proves your lure, there is Hassoldt Davis' "Islands Under the Wind".

Anent ranch like; the cowboy—artist says that he tells may sound like friction but it isn't. He stands up for his ability to lie in a horse trade but lays claim to too little formal education to make a fluent fictionalist.

"True North" is hard and cold. The fittest only survive. There existence is biting were one serves an icy mistress.

It is a hard choice between the blue water and salt tag of "Grain Race" and the softer lap of South Sea wavelets and long stop-overs on "Islands Under the wind". Yet both authors have found theirs happy choices. For years there has been an unofficial contest between wheat ships plying from Australia to England. Alan Villiers purchased the "Parma" and with her won the 1932 event the one in which you vicariously participated and will sail again in 1933. Curiosity made Hassoldt Davis choose his life on Tahiei and Bali; he didn't believe in "magic" isles and set out to find the truth for himself. Though he has run into things that would shock the idealistic white man, he—in spite of his Boston origin — finds their charm and naturalness. This book is everything that a travel book should be. Someday its real value may be recogniged.

So, take your choice. All these books may be borrowed from the extension Division, University, Virginia.

New yorker (incredulously): "And you mean to say that in California you have 365 days of sunshine a year?"

How I Study English

Below is an essay written by Miss Rachel Davis a third year English pupil of Rose Hill high school, which was judged one of the best essays written this term.

This morning I thought my lessons unusually hard and sat down immediately after breakfast to study. English was the first thing I picked up and I went into it thinking that I would surely know my lesson for Monday. I had studied only a few minutes, however, when the children drew my attention by beginning a song, "It's all upside down, its all upside down."

"What is upside down,?" I asked. "All these houses and little boys," they answered, pointing to some pictures in their book.

I relieved their minds by turning their book around but the incident had so amused me that I was unable to get my mind on my lesson again for some time

At last the incident forgotten, I again went into English with a will. I had about fifteen minutes undisturbed study when again I was interrupted by two of the children; one of them was trying to crown me with their father's cap, and the other was making a horse of my foot.

"One, two, three," Billy began and he seemed so happy that I could do nothing but take him into the air on my foot. Being thus interrupted, I played with them awhile and then, taking my books, went into another room.

It was not long, however, after coming into this place of seclusion, unt l I found that my interest in English had all disappeared. I laid down my book to get a drink and decided that I would wait awhile and in the meantime, visit a neighbor.

When I returned from my visit it was lunch time and I did not begin studying for about an hour. During this time everything was quite and it seemed everyone had gone to sleep. But at the end of the hour, when I again picked up my book, everything awoke and went into action. I had been at work only a few minutes when the rubber ball went astray and hit me squarley on the end of the nose. I laid down my book at this third interruption and declared that I would not pick it up again that day if it meant that I must flunk the whole course. I spent the remainder of the day doctoring my nose.

I knew that it was necessary that I find some means of studying without so much noise and disturbance and so I began to plan for doing so.

At first I could think of no place where I could go to study and at the same time be comfortable. At last, however, I thought of the cellar, a place well ventilated and well lighted. It could be made an ideal resting place and also a place of isolation when desired. All it needed was a tiny stove and a davenport These I secured and placed them, with a small table, ready for use when at home.

I think my problem has been solved.

the hidden quart

CONOCO

THAT STAYS UP IN YOUR MOTOR AND NEVER DRAINS AWAY

...Mechanic Elder Schaffner Found the Hidden Quart... Also that Without it, Motors Show 50% to 60% Greater Wear ...So He Switched to Conoco

* The Germ Process (exclusive Conoco patent) imparts to this motor oil that peculiar ability to penetrate and combine with metal surfaces. Of the first filling about one quart will "hide" itself up in your motor's precious working parts. This hidden quart never drains away. It becomes a part of the motor itself, worth its weight in gold.

MECHANIC SCHAFFNER REPORTS ON DISCOVERY:

"I never did believe what Conoco Germ Processed oil would do; not until an Essex owner, with 25,000 miles on his speedometer, asked me to check his motor and put in new parts where necessary. It surely surprised me; clearance of pistons was only four 1-thousandths; of bearings only three 1-thousandths of an inch.

"This owner said he had used Conoco Germ Processed oil since the car was new. I have overhauled many another Essex at 25,000 miles, which has not used this oil, and found the wear 50% to 60% greater. Now I recommend Conoco Germ Processed Oil to my friends, and have changed to it in my own car."—Elder Schaffner, Highland, Ill.

Stop Cruel Motor Wear . . . Escape its Painful Cost

Don't Wait Another Day to Drain and Refill With Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil

To a motor, lack of lubrication is cruelty indeed. You are too "humane" to permit it, if only you knew the truth. But motors suffer in silence till costly damage is done. Then you pay . . . and pay . . . and pay.

50% of motor wear occurs in the moments following a cold start. Ordinary oil drains back into the crankcase and leaves the motor dry, till it is pumped back up again. Not so, with Conoco's hidden quart. It stays up in the motor and never drains away.

This is proved. Even with the crankcase empty, due to accident, users of this oil have driven many miles, without damage, on the 'hidden quart alone.

Isn't it smart and thrifty to have a 'hidden quart up in the parts of your motor, where you are sure it cannot fail? It is so simple to be safe! so foolhardy to be in doubt. Tend to it today. Go now, drain and refill with the 'hidden-quart oil. Do it for safety's sake.

Farm News

Mrs. Elbert Flanary of Dryden succeded in making a nice bit of pen money on her tobacco crop of last season. On three fourths of an acre she made near $300.00 selling for 21½c per pound average. Few crops in the county sold to better advantage. Mrs. Flanary gave her personal attention to this crop in cultivation, barning it at cutting time, and stripping, packing down and also marketing. She followed it to market and was docernedt to see it sell. Mrs. Flanary has had a number of crops on her farm of tobacco and all of them have been good sellers. She thinks it pays to give careful attention to the crop to see that it is exactly right at cutting time, and also to see that it is graded off properly and packed down in proper case, she has also, some good share croppers on her farm who are splendid tobacco growers that have made themselves money as well as the owners.

Geo. W. Orr, Jr., on Fincastle road near York church had 19-32 of an acre (measured) tobacco that brought $311 50. Mr. Orr is a very careful grower. He believes in a moderate sized crop and giving it good care, clear through from the bed to the market. He, now has, a good tobacco barn which is a great aid to his success with the crop.

Mr. Crit Walton of Jonesville has been experimenting with harry vetch for winter and spring crop to make early hay. He thinks much of it. This winter vetch is a legume and fits in well with rye, wheat or barley sown in fall to make a hay crop in early summer, June. The only fault with harry vetch is that it may become a somewhat pest. The seed are likely to spread to filth in a wheat crop like cockle etc.

It will last for many years in this way on a boundry.

Otherwise, it should be used largely for early hay crops with the small grain.

John Vann Young, Dryden, has a splendid barley crop following his tobacco of last fall. He was advised by the agent to run his calves on the boundry for a few weeks, helping both the barley and calves.

Inquiry to the agent.

Give a remedy for killing rats without poisoning other animals. The U. S. Department Agriculture recommends Red Squill. This comes from a plant akin to the lilly family that grows in Europe. It comes on our markets in the form of a powder. This powder of red squill applied to bait in the right quanity kills rats and does no injury at all to any other animal. The agent will furnish complete information on procedure.

What is the best crop to grow for green manuring or to turn under for land improvement? Answer.

Mamoth yellow soy beans is the best. They have a large stem and stand upright and can be turned under with the plow. cow peas less tonage per acre and have vines which are bothersome to turn under. Cow peas are less hurtful on land if the hay crop is removed than soy beans. Soy beans are very exhaustive on land and draw heavily on phosphorus and potash(and also nitrogin unless inoculated.) But when the crop in turned under, all the fertility goes back to the land and soy beans are recommended.

Inquiry: Which is the best soy bean for hay in Lee county? Ans. The Virginia soy bean, according to T. B. Hutcheson, of the Blacksburg, Experimental Farm. The Virginia bean is a splendid producer, having branching qualities and stand up well. The stem is smaller than the mammoth yellow and has less waste. The loredo soy bean is a great producer of grain for threshing but will not according to the above authority, produce hay with the Virginia soy bean.

Soy beans should receive 300 lbs. acid phosphate to the acre and certainly have inoculation. By this process, the beans are not a heavy draft on the land.

Inquiry to the agent: Are not county agents and all extension departments responsible for the over production of crops? Ans. No

This kind of inference is due to a lack of information. All county agents through the Extension Departments, and the U. S. Departments, spread and instruct farmers on what is known as "Outlook Reports" each and every year. These reports deal with crop and livestock productions in quality. Where the outlook is not good, due to large crops, the agents spread a "bad outlook" and try to discourage an expansion of that crop. They recommend a reduction instead. It is claimed that these "out-look reports" are 90 per cent correct. That is, the Department of Agriculture of Washington has information that these reports have shown true 90 per cent of the time; atd that a batting average of 90 per cent correct makes it worth while for the farmer to weigh these reports seriously, and which many are learning to do Inquiry: What varity of lespedeza is best for Lee Co.? Ans. That depends on what one wishes to do with the crop. For seed the Korean is best by far, but few are saving seed. At first seed was high. Now it is very low, about $2 00 per bu. For pasture and a land improver and also a hay crop, Tennessee 76 is best for Lee county. That is the 76 has usually about 4 weeks longer pasture greenes than the Korean. Korean goes dead usually before frost, the 76 never does and it takes a number of frosts to beat it down to the dead stage. The Tennessee 76 is equally as good a producer for hay as the Korean.

For hay,sow 12 to 15 lbs. Tennessee 76. Sow 20 to 25 of Korean. For parture and land improving, half the above amounts is good treatment. The abovestatement applies to Lee county. Across the Blue Ridge Mountains, this statement would not be correct.

Inquiry: What about Serices Lespedeza? Ans. Sericea (pronounceppcereca) is a perennial plant, (living from year to year) while the Korean and 76 are annual plants(go dead each year and re seed the following year) Sericea should be tried out and see how it fits in our crops.

Do not buy large quanities of seed. They will be cheaper next year and the next. Sericea seeds do not germinate any too well.

They have to be scarified to come up.

The Caverns Of Virginia

Richmond— William E Carson, chairman of the state commission on conservation and development, has for several years held that the "Natural wonders of Virginia" should be listed as among the chief assets of the state. His judgement was based upon the fact that, side by side with its historic treasures, the natural beauty and natural wonders of the Old Dominion would be permanently instrumental in attractive that every increasing tide of tourists which annually flock to this Mother of commonwealths.

Among the most marvelous of Virginia's natural wonders may be listed the caverns in the great Valley section. The following interesting account of these caverns is from the pen of William M. McGills, assistant state geologist.

Mr. McGill says:

"Among the many interesting caverns in the limestones of the Applachia Valley in Virginia, nine have been made accessible to the public. Seven of these caverns are in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley, as told below.

Passageways have been cleared, walks constructed, guard rails erected, electric lights installed and other conveniences added for the accommodation and comfort to visitors.

The average temperature in the caverns throughout the year is about 50 degree F. A tour through the caverns is free from discomforts or unpleasant features. It is an experience to be contemplated in high expectation and to be reviewed in memory with great satisfaction. In abundance, varitation in type, and in the diversity and beauty of the ornamental formations which they contain, the caverns of Virginia invite world-wide comparison.

Though similar in origin, each cavern has certain outstanding features peculiar to it. Some of the large travertine deposits are thousands of years old and others have been slowly forming for at least ten of thousands of years.

In addition to having great popular appeal, the caverns are of scientific intererest as examples of the slow and highly picturesque work of ground water.

"Each of the caverns is easily reached by hard-surfaced roads, being either on or near main State highways. Camping sites, rest rooms, cottages, restaurants and recreational facilities amid pleasant surroundings are available at several of the caverns.

Meals and lodging may be obtained at these caverns or in near-by town. Most of the caverns are open day and night throughout the year but some are closed during part of the night.

An admission fee is charged at each cavern and guide service is provided.

Detailed information and descriptive circulars may be obtained from the headquarters of the respective carvens as given below.

License Applications Cost State Big Sum

Richmond—Sending back carelessly filled in applications for operators' and drivers' permits has cost the State more than $1500. in postage alone, it was disclosed yesterday by officials of the Division of Motor Vehicles. Approximately 15 percent of the total applications received must be returned to the sender for correction before the permits can be issued, the officials say.

Of the 350,555 permits issued by the division up to the present time, approximately 52,555 applications were returned because of careless errors in filling them out. The cost in postage alone was $1,-276 65.

The errors range all the way from failure to sign the application on the back to entirely illegible handwriting. According to the officials, fully 5 percent of the applications either bear no signature at all, or do not have the signature witnessed by a notary puplic. Approxomately 3 percent of the applicants either give an incorrect residential address or fail to give one entirely. More than 2 percent fail to give a personal description, and another 5 percent fail to answer so nany questions that the application is meaningless.

Any one of these careless errors invalidates the application and necessitates its return for correction. this involves not only the cost of postage, but also the enormous additional clerical work necessary to handle the returns and the duplication of work when the correction applications are returned.

Applications for drivers' and operators' permits are not required to pay a fee to notary public who witnesses the signature of the application, the officials of the Division of Motor Vehicles state. Many inquiries have been received by the division asking whether the applicant must present himself in person at the Motor Vehicicle Division in order to obtain the permit without payment of fees, either state or notary, before July 1.

The officials state that any notary may witness the applicant's signature, and that by a special provisions of the General assembly, he is not permitted to make any charge whatsoever for the service.

After the application is witnessed, it may be mailed to the Division of Motor Vehicles, and the permit will be mailed to the applicant by the regular procedure. Of course after July 1, the driver's examination and the payment of the regular license fee will require the presence of the applicant himself to obtain the permit.

As a convenience to the public as well as to assist the notaries public throughout the state, T. McCall Frazier, Director of the Division of Motor Vehicles, has required every officer to qualify as a notary. The officers will not only assist applicants for drivers' and operators' permits to fill out their applications, but will be glad to notarize the same without any fee.

New Needs for Knowledge

In a time of uncertainty and hopelessness, it seemed that for education all the results of the depression would be ill. But the depression has often proved the compellong occasion for the search for new values.

Men and women are questioning old modes of thought and outworn activities. To some study has furnished answers to perplexing problems. To others study has substituted for interests no longer satisfying. Still others were induced to study by the necessity of preparing themselves for new occupations.

Consequently, the cooperative adult education program in Virginia, in spite of reduced funds, showed last year the highest class enrollment in its history, an increase in home study registrations, an expansion on expansion of two-thirds in library loans, and promising new activities in art and medical education. Advisory drama service, art exhibits, loans or slides and films, bulletins, and organized cooperation of high schools maintained their usefulness of former years.

This account of adult education in Virginia is an adventurer of exciting interest for those concerned with cultural progress. Readers of the News may obtain free copies from the Extension Division, University. Virginia.

Native New Yorkers Scarce Says Wells

"Although I came to New York City 30 years ago, I really can't remember the names of any of my friends who were born here," says Carveth Wells in his March 29 radio broadcast for Continental Oil Company, dedicated to the Great American Metropolis.

In order to bring out the contrast between early day New York and the present picture more sharply, Wells introduces his hearers to a man representing Peter Stuyvesant, govenor of Dutch New Amsterdam before the English changed its name to New York.

Many intimate glimpses of our greatest city are woven into Wells' rapid fire description.

School News

Pennington Hi won the first base ball game of the season by defeating Flatwoods by a score of 8 to 5. The Flatwoods boys seemed to have the advantage during the first two or three innings, but Pennington finally came to life and ran in enough scores to save the day. Houndshell of Flatwoods, a south paw, did some beautiful work on the mound, but had to be relieved in the seventh inning. Walker Cress went the full nine innings for Pennington and looks very promising.

Pennington plays Jonesville Saturday on local grounds. Jonesville has a very strong team this season and promises to make plenty trouble.

Hazel Smith has returned to school after a two weeks absence.

Sue Poteet has returned to school after being out a week on account of illness.

Miss Saluda Sewell motored to Knoxville, Tenn., Saturday.

Rev. White conducted chapel exercises Wednesday morning. The first number on the program was a tune played by the string band, after which Rev. White gave a very interesting talk and concluded with a prayer.

Pennington Hi has organized a Junior League and the following officers were elected: Presinent, Sue Richards. Vice-President, Virginia Lewis. Secretary, Roy Witt. Treasurer, Lillian Howard. Reporter, Howard Zion. The league will start work as soon as possible and try and accompliah as many things as possible before this term of school is ended.

The benefit party that was sponsored for the athletic association was a big success in every way but financially. Those that were present enjoyed themselves very much.

"Manager" Charles Edward Cecil, Pennington Hi's one and only bid for Hollywood, says that, "begin manager of a base ball team isn't what it is cracked up to be."

Methodists To Give Drama

"Ba Thane" is the title of a one act sacred play to be presented Sunday evening at the local M. E. Church, South, by a cast of local young people. It will take the place of the usual Sunday evening preaching service at 7:00 o'clock.

This drama depicts the happenings in a little Burmese village. It is full of human interest, heart throbbing appeal.

The play is being directed by Miss Elizabeth Brown director of young people's work of the Holston Conference M. E. Church, South. The cast of characters is as follows:

Gordon Worth, an American missionary, C. F. Watkins

Virginia Worth, his wife, Mrs. W. D. Bradbury

Joan Worth, their daughter, Virginia Lewis

Richard Ordway, Oscar Gibson

Ba Thane, a young Burmese lad, Clyde Lunsford

Ma May, Ba Thane's sister, Elsie Rhea

"Ba Thane" was presented with unusual success by a group of young people as one of the features of the Holston Conference session at Johnson City, Tenn., last October.

Bonny Blue

A splendid little play was presented here Friday night by the Bonny Blue School, the play was entitled "Alice in Wonderland" And the characters were played well by a group of small children. Several of the high school girls composed a chorus, singing some of the popular songs.

A number of the boys and girls dropped in on Lilian Gibbs for a surprise party Saturday night several games were played, and everyone reported a good party in generl.

A new era is dawning in Bonny Blue, the era of springtime: and with the event of this beautiful season, fashion steps forth with brighter colors and hues to be worn this year. Women will lead the fashion parade it seems with bright spring colors however the men are going strong for lighter shades this season than before. the men promises to be close around in the parade.

LEE COUNTY VETERAN DIES

Rose Hill—Funeral services for C. C. Brooks, 87, a resident of Lee county for over fifty years, were held Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at his home in East Rose Hill, by Rev. J. C. Clark, of Jonesville. Burial was in the Brooks cemetery, on his farm.

Mr. Brooks was one of the few remaining Confederate veterans in Lee county He has missed only two reunions which have been held and has never missed a county picnic which are given annually for Lee County Veterans of the Confederacy. For nearly a half century he has been a Methodist preacher.

Mr. Brooks was born December 26, 1845, at Liberty Hill, Tazewell county. In 1870 he married Sarah Steele, also of Tazewell county, and they came to Lee county during the difficult times of the re-construction period, following the Civil War. Born to their marriage were eleven children, nine of them still living, and six of whom are over fifty years of age. Mrs. Brooks died about two years ago.

Mr. Brooks died Saturday about two o'clock, of apop'exy. He is survived by five sons, S.S. Brooks, of Appalachia, P., of Logmont, Colorado, Charles M., Los Angeles, California, John H. Hagen, and Ralph of Rose Hill and four daughters, Mrs. J. J. Marcum, Hastings, Nebraska, Mrs. Will Farmer, Twila Ky., Mrs. W. A. Tucker, Roda, Va., and Mrs. A. A. Keys, of Rose Hill.

Southwest Dentists Meet At Abingdon

Thirty members of the Southwest Virginia Dental Society, meeting at Abingdon last week, heard Dan M. Cosby of Abingdon, prominent Southwest Virginia lawyer, deplore the deterioration of all professions "by the actions of unworthy members."

Mr. Cosby said it was "regrettable that all professions are now on the public auction block, that professional ability and skill are not considered, that cheapness is the dominant appeal regardless of competency."

"Cheap-Johns", he asserted are "running riot and the public suffers". The only hope of all professions, he said, is that "the public by results of mistaken employment will learn by dear experience the value of professional skill and ability."

Dr. V. M. Pence of Pennington Gap inducted into the presidency, succeeding Dr. W. S. Gilmer of Pulaski who presided at this meeting. Dr. W. M. Sexton of Bristol delivered a paper and Dr. P. T. Goad of Bristol conducted a demonstration.

The Society embraces Southwest Virginia from Montgomery county to the extreme state borders. Bristol extended an invitation to hold the next meeting there and the invitation was referred to the program committee.

Garden Seed For Lee County Families

Supplied From Work Relief Funds By Lee County Work Relief Committee, Jonesville, Virginia.

Garden seed will be supplied to Lee county families that are not able to buy their own seed. This will come from the funds of the Work Relief Committee as authorized by the State Emergency Relief Committee at Richmond. These funds are from the same source as the funds for employment on the county roads recently. The road funds or employment will have stopped by the end of this week and no more employment will be given this summer.

In the distribution of garden seeds, the Lee County Work Relief Committee hopes to serve all families that are not able to purchase their own seed. In making this announcement it is hoped that misunderstandings will be avoided. This does not mean that all families who want garden seeds will be supplied. It does not mean that all families who were employed on the roads for Work Relief will be supplied. Many of these families will not receive seed because they are able to purchase their own seed, taking the funds furnished them on the road. Near $40,000 was spent in the county in giving this relief and many of these families will be expected to purchase their own seed.

The Lee County Work Relief Committee will appoint other committees throughout the county to aid in the distribution of these seed and families who are interested will apply to these committees nearest their home.

In making this announcement, the Lee County Work Relief Committee hopes to have the cooperation of all people and especially the families who might apply for seed. If some families fail to be given seed, it is hoped there will be no cause for ill feeling, for the committee is only following orders from Richmond and Washington. It would be impossible to supply all families who apply for seed, because no such funds have been supplied.

Lee County Work Relief Committee, Jonesville, Virginia.

Baby Beeves Are Judged At Ewing

Ewing — Two baby beeves fed by C. D. Fugate of Rose Hill today were judged by George Herron, animal husbandryman of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, to be the best of fortean pairs entered in a contest here at the N. B. Richmond farm.

Farmers from throughout Lee county and from points in Tennessee and Kentucky attended the event which was preliminary to shipping out one of the finest carloads of cattle ever sent from the county to a western market.

Each of fourteen feeders last September selected two of the best baby beeves in his herds and put them on a balance and recommended ration. The result, County Agent M. V. Koger said today, was an exceptionally fine group, weighing on the average about 1050 pounds each.

The beeves will be marketed early next week at Cincinnati or Chicago.

Rhea Fugate of Gibson Station won second place in the judging with his pair and another couple fed by C. D. Fugate was given third place. Other feeders were: Joe Parkey, W. S. Parkey, M. Wheeler Kesterson, T. B. Fugate, Royal Fugate, N. B. Richmond, and T. L. McDaniel, Lee County; and Vince Parkey, Clarence Shipley, and Arch Parkey, of Claiborne County, Tenn.

Tree Planting

Trees in quality for reforesting idle and waste lands are going daily from the Forest-Tree Nursery to land owners of Virginia, according to Fred C. Pederson, Acting State Forester.

"This is the beginning of the heavy shipping season for tree planting," said Mr. Pederson in commenting upon the subject, "since March and early April are the best spring months for setting trees to start growing young forests." Last year during the month of March Mr. Pederson said that between 130,000 and 140,000 trees were shipped to land owners in Virginia for reforesting their idle land. The expected shipments for this month, he stated, could be foreseen but he hopes the number will be creditable. When asked for an expression about setting trees to grow forests on idle lands in Virginia, he replied, by saying.

"The question is often asked, what can the land owner of Virginia do in the present situation looking toward future betterment?

The answer is, he can do a very great deal. He can start on a program of making all of his land some product that will have value. Soil productivity is a first essential. Virginia is noted for products grown on her soil. Much of her land, once productive, is not now yielding anything

It has become idle or reduced to waste through improper tillage. A large percentage of this acerage should be started to growing forests again. The best way to start production on it within any reasonable time is to set trees.

The beginning of a tree-planting campaign by the land owners of Virginia would, therefore, be a step toward future betterment.

While timber, at present, commands no high price, nor even an inviting one, there is a future for this product. Trees that are planted today cannot be harvested tomorrow or this year; they require years to grow large enough to use or sell, and we can look only to the future for sales of timber grown from trees planted now.

One purpose for forestry in Virginia is to encourage and assist in growing timber for the future by reforestation of waste and other idle lands. Different kinds of valuable species can be used to this end.

Some areas will, if protected from fire and grazing, reforest themselves naturally. Many areas now, if left alone for a good many years, will not be covered with a stand of trees. These should be reforested immediately by seeting trees in order to secure at once a stand of good species. Loblolly pine, shortleaf pine, white pine, red pine, scotch pine, austria pine and black or yellow locust are good species to use. There are also others, native to Virginia, that are valuable for this purpose.

At least another month and perhaps six weeks will elapse before the end of the planting season. The land owners of Virginia are respectfully requested and urged to take advantage of the situation and start reforesting their idle land by planting at least an acre this spring to desirable forest trees. The Virginia Forest Service will gladly reply immediately to anyone making inquiry to this end.

Mrs. Smyth Dies At Appalachia

Mrs. A. L. Smyth, 48, died in the Masonic Hospital at Appalichia Saturday morning at six o'clock following a very serious operation Tuesday morning by Dr. Hendon, of Louisville. Ky. Her condition was very satisfactory for two or three days but she took a turn for the worse very suddenly and expired within a few hours. She had been in failing health for the past ten weeks.

Funeral services were cynducted at the M. E. Church, South, Monday morning at nine o'clock by the pastor, Rev. Holdway and burial was made at Smyth's Chapel near Pennington Gap.

Besides her husband who is employed in the postoffice at Appalachia, the deceased is survived by two sons and one daughter, Wendell, Keith, and Maurine Smyth.

Entertains Club

Jonesville—Mrs. R. L. Tyler was hostess to the Flatwood Women's Club Thursday, March 2. The Club's activity of the afternoon was joining a quilt which was pieced at a former meeting.

All members are urged to come and bring their needle and thimble.

Getting Off To School

Below is an essay written by Miss Thelma Turner a third year English pupil of Rose Hill High School, which was judged one of the best essays written this term.

The problem of getting off to school in the morning is both interesting and amusing. When I awake in the morning, I lie still in my bed and think about my lessons, my friends, and the tasks I have to preform during the day. I hear a noise which start as me. Is it the fire alarm? No it is only the bell ringing for breakfast. After yawning a few times I jump out of bed and slip into my bath robe. While still sitting on the side of my bed I am trying to put my shoes on but my fingers are cold and now I break my shoe string. Now I have to either tie the string or wear another pair of shoes, being too lazy and cold to tie the string I immediately decide to wear another pair of shoes.

I then go from my room to the dining room and sit down at the breakfast table.

On the table are poached eggs, ham, gravy, butter, sweets, and bread. Not liking poadhed eggs, "I immediately call, why didn't you have fried eggs? Because you knowed I don't like eggs any way except fried." The answer came from the kitchen, "you can come in here and fix your eggs yourself. You know how you want it fixed". I then fix my egg and eat without any further conversation because I have just barely enough time to get ready for school. I then return to my room and dress for school. I begin trying to find my books and they are scattered all over the house. I find all of them at last and start out the door. Just then my aunt called to me, "Thelma it is raining and you had better wear your raincoat".

I then turned to get my raincoat and the tam that belongs to my raincoat is lost. I finally find it and get started to school. I am between the bank and the postoffice when I suddenly remembered that I had to buy a package of notebook paper. I meet a friend of mine and he said he was going to Fugate's store and he would get the paper for me. At last I was started to school!

Birthday Party

Hagan — Mrs. Samuel Betty gave a delightful birthday party last Friday afternoon for her little daughter, Helen Lou, aged 2. Many games were enjoyed, and refreshments served to the following little guests:

Mary Rose Gilliam, Anna Ruth Irvin, Edith Langley. Marie Beatty, Herbert Chance, J. B., Harold and Jackie Myers.

Scott's Democrats Endorses Johnson

Gate City—John H. Johnson, former Virginia State Senator from Scott and Lee counties, has been endorsed by the Scott county Democratic committee fer collector in Virginia.

The Democratic committee has also endorsed Will H. Nickels, local attorney, for the post of district attorney for the western district of Virginia.

The endorsements were made during a meeting of committee held here for the purpose of backing applicants for the various patronage positions in Virginia.

The committee decided not to endorse any applicants for postoffices in Scott county until such applicants had successfully passed civil service examinations.

Flea Remedy

With the first days of spring here hot weather will be here soon, it is the time for dog owners to guard against Fleas and other parasites.

One of the best remedies known for this is to fill an ordinary barrel two thirds full of water, into this put 2 small cans of Red seal Lye, and 1-2 gallon of Creso sheep dip. Altho this may seem too strong, no ill effects have never been noted, dogs may be immersed head and all, once each day or as often as desired. Place the barrel in an out of the way place and cover, this solution will last for some time, stir slightly before using.

Fleas are the hardest of all parasites to get rid of, and this seems to kill them all.

This solution also makes a good cheap disinfectant for your kennel or dog house and will cure most light cases of mange, and make your dog shed off and keep a clean healthy skin and coat.

Dip on warm sunny day and do not rinse.

Bob Housley

A begger clutched at the sleeve of a benevolent looking passer-by

"Five cents, sir, for a cup of coffee," he whined.

The other turned and surveyed him.

Why should I give you five cents?" he asked. "What brought you to this sad, unseemly plight?"

"A terrible catastrophe, sir," the beggar replied.

"Two years ago I like you, enjoyed business prosperity.

Wealth poured my way. And then-and then—"

"And then?"

"The scrub lady threw away my motto!"

Wife (to absent-minded Professor): "Your hat is on the wong way, dear."

Prof.: "How do you know which way I'm going?"

67 Year Old Woman Drowns At Big Stone Gap

Two Others Suffer Like Fate in Trying to Rescue Mrs. J. H. Stewart From Swollen Stream Near Extract Plant Sunday Evening.

Saw Wife Take Fatal Plunge. Husband Cannot Account For Rash Act — Death Follows After Her Removal to House.

Although rescuers worked frantically to save the life of Mrs. J. H. Stewart, 67 year old woman residing near the extract plant, she died withis a few minutes after being taken from the swollen waters of Powell's River near her home where she had apparently jumped from the bank on her own accord Sunday evening at Big Stone Gap. No reason can be assigned for the act unless it is possible she was worrying about a triffle matter that no one was aware of. The act was committed in plain view of her husband and a neighbor, Sam Wilson, who were seated on the L & N. Railroad track about one hundred feet fron the place where she jumped aff into the stream.

Mr. Steward was so overcome with shock that he could do nothing in the way of rescuing his wife. A grandson, James Combs, high school student and star football player, heard cries for help and rushed to the place from his home about one hundred yards distance. He immediately plunged into the stream but found the swift water very difficult to overcome and came near drowning himself. He finally grasped his grandmother in his arms and held on to a willow bush that was extending out several feet from the bank and held on until the arrival of John Kirk, a neighbor, who brought Mrs. Stewart to the bank.

Mrs. Stewart was taken to her home where a physician was called but she died in about fifteen minutes.

Some are of the opinion that Mrs. Stewart might have accidentally fallen into the river but others who saw her make the plunge, stated it looked as if she deliberately committed the act. The river had swollen consider bly Saturday night from a heavy rainfall and it is estimated the place was about twelve feet deep where she jumped in.

The Combs boy was almost overcome in his effort to rescue and had it not been for the timely arrival of John Kirk, it is probable both of them would have drowned. Kirk had to run a distance of more than a hundred yards and was much out of breath when he arrived at the river bank Pulling off shoes and coat he grabbed Mrs. Stewart and gradually worked his way to the bank, although it took every bit of energy he had.

Mr. Stewart stated he had no idea his wife was planning to take her life, if such was her intention, when she walked by where he and Mr. Wilson were seated. He said he thought she was taking a walk down to see the river that had swollen rapidly since Saturday night or to watch some boys fish.

Mr. Stewart and his wife had been residents of Big Stone Gap for eighteen years, having come here from Chattanooga, Tenn., where Mr. Stewart took up a position as master mechanic for the Big Stone Extract works. Since the plant has been closed for some time he has been retained there as night watch man. His daughter, Mrs. Ben Moore, and family resided with them in a company house near nhe plant.

It is claimed that Mrs Stewart had remarked on several occasions in a joking way that she intended to jump in the river but members of the family did not take the matter seriously as she had made the state ment so often.

A husband, one daughter Mrs. Ben Moore, of Big Stone Gap, and a son, Clyde Stewart, of Little Rock Arkansas, survives. The body was held until Wednesday morning awaiting the arrival of the son from Arkansas. Burial was made in Glencoe Cemetery.

A young boy walked into a grocery store to apply for a job and the manager asked him his name.

"Shakespeare," answered the boy.

"And your first name?" inquired the manager.

"William," said the boy.

"Well, that's a pretty well-known name," remarked the manager, smiling. "That's not hard to understand," replied the boy, "I've been delivering groceries around here for two years."

The absent-minded Professor became aware that his wife was staring at him with an excessive amount of devotion and love.

"Do you know, dear," she said, "its just ten years ago today that we were engaged?"

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the Professor, "why didn't you remind me sooner? It's high time we were getting married."

The tourist rushed into the country store. "I want a qnart of oil, some gas, a couple of spark pluge, a timer, a five gallon kerosene can and four pie tins." "All right," replied the enterprising clerk," and you can assembly her in the back room if you want to."

The Book Sampler

Branch Cabell, not feeling in honors bound to treat with reverence the correspondence of one "James" who died on his fiftieth birthday, writes "Special Delivery, giving ten typical letters, their courteous replies, and then, for the relief of his soul and edification of his readers, long informal unposted replies in which the author ruminates upon his real reactions. He must have enjoyed this season of frankness with himself and his subjects, for the result is conducive at times to unholy glee. On the other hand, especially in "The Breast of the Nymph", being an answer to an aspiring young writer and treating particularly of Virginia's reception to literary effort, he is startlingly reminiscent of the old fire-eating disciple of Ingersoll, William Cowper Brann, admitted iconoclast, who was shot by a fellow editor in anger over some scathing criticism. The difference between the two men lies in the civilzation Mr. Cabell's iconoclasm.

He darbs his weapon in the flesh of his native state in passing comment; Brann pointed his shafts at subjects with vigorous belief in the method as a way of improvement. But Branch Cabell's effort as primarily amusing; therein he succeeds.

Zona Gale has turned from the "Realism" which titillated America into awarding to "Miss Luly Bett" the Pulitezer Prize for drama, to poetic idealism in her new novelette, "Papa La Fluer". The story is simple enough:-the old, old theme of age and youths being incompatible.

Papa La Fluer loved his daughters but couldn't understand them; they loved their father, but the tug of life was to strong.

Especially in the descriptive passages of Wisconsin scenery, the work may be liked to "Neighbor Rosicky" and other of Willa Cather's later writings.

The Dark Continent

The county as a political and governmental unit may with justification have been termed "The dark continent of American Politics" but more recently it has been the center of interest and study not only of scholars and statesmen but of the Public also. Especially is this true in Virginia where the Legislature took a forward step by passing the optional Forms Act permitting the voters of a county to choose between three forms of county government. Because the request for speakers and other aids to study the county are so numerious, the following steps have been taken: Package libraries on county government have been prepared for loan purposes. A list of available discussion leaders is being secured. Charts and graphs to compare the forms of government are in preparation. A list of illuminating books and phamplets that can be obtained conveniently and inexpensively and outlines for study are available.

Further information concerning these aids to the study of county government will be sent free upon application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Virginia Native Lamb Project

The native lamb improvement project in Virginia includes all phases of sheep husbandry that has to do with the improvement of market lambs. The extension service was very active in carrying this project through during 1932 both in production and marketing phases with the same program already under way for 1933. The county agents in the various lamb producing counties were on the job from start to finish and rendered invaluable service to their producers. The program followed in the twenty-five counties, which carried lamb improvement work as a major project, contains these phrases:

1. Use good purebred rams.
2. Treat flocks regularly for stomach worms.
3. Greater use of legume hay for winter feeding.
4. Dock and trim all market lambs.
5. Creep feed early lambs.
6. Grade lambs for market.
7. Cooperative selling and shipping of both lambs and wool.

The Virginia purebred sheep breeders assocation promoted thirteen ram sales, which resulted in 494 purebred rams being placed in the various counties reporting. It is consecutively estimated by lamb producers that good rams will increase the value of lambs sired by them at least 50 cents per head. If a ram sires 30 lambs, his value would be $15 for the first year, or to use a grade ram costs the producer $15 each year on 30 lambs.

The counties reported 108,487 ewes treated for stomach worms as against 71,747 for 1931. From early spring until late fall the department sends out regular monthly notices reminding the grower that it is time to treat again; other timely information is included on these cards from time to time.

123,399 lambs were docked and trimmed as compared with 62,899 during the 1931 season. Buck lambs were sorted out and sold separetly at $1.00 discount after the June 13th., market. This practice alone increased the value of Virginia market lambs approximately $61,699.

Creep feeding early lambs is proving profitable and increased about 50 per cent during 1932. Lambs going on the market after June are usually made to grade good or better from grass alone It is the opinion of producers that grain feeding pays on late lambs if the grass is not good enough to make them grade good or above.

Lamb grading was started in 1931 with a very few shipments being graded. In 1932 70 decks containing 7,363 lambs from fourteen counties were good enough to be classed as 'red circles' that is lambs grading good and choice. In almost every instance these lambs sold for 25 to 50 cents, premium on the Jersey City market. The value of grading is best illustrated by this report from the Southwest Virginia Shipping Association, (Amos Thompson, Riner, Virginia, manager) which shipped approximately 14,000 lambs cooperatively last season. The report shows that 3,574 lambs grading good and choice brought an average price of $6 89 per 100 pounds from July to October, while 3,570 ungraded lambs marketed during the same period brought an average of $5.25. This was a difference of $1.67 or $4,753 42 in favor of the "red circle" lambs. Growers like the farm grading, as it permits them to get paid in accordance with the quality they produce.

The practice of shipping cooperatively is gaining in popularity due to the fact that in most instances the shipping associates were able to get more money for the producers. The various shipping associations shipped approximately 50,000 lambs last season. Their volume of business is expected to increase this season because of the service they render, in addition to the actual money they save producers.

Virginia had 22 counties enrolled in the national native lamb improvement project. Augusta county ranked first in all counties entered, scoring 74 points, while Virginia ranked third as a state.

Membership Drive for T. B. Fund

Mrs. W. D. Harr, Chairman of the Lee County Tuberculosis Committee, announced today that the workers all over the country are making a drive for members. This money is greatly needed at this time as there are four or five cases before the committee needing home or sanitorium care now.

Mrs. Harr urges the county citizens to respond to this call. She says," that one dollar pays for membership in the State Tuberculosis Association for one year and shows your interest in your county health work. This is a county wide problem and the battle against tuberculosis can only be persons having tuberculosis, many of them unknown. Familiarity with the warning signs should cause every sensible person to go to his doctor for an examination when these symptoms are present. The danger signals are:

Loss of weight without apparent cause.

Indigestion.

Have an examination.

Let your doctor decide.

Early Diagnosis Campaign In Lee County

Miss Mozelle S. Parker, field worker from the Virginia Tuberculosis Association, is in the county assisting the local committee with the educational program which is being carried on in this community.

The public is to be fully informed on the cause, cure and prevention of tuberculosis. Literature is being distributed on this subject and talks are to be made at different meetings.

According to authorities who have made an intensive study of this subject, there are nine active cases of tuberculosis and nine inactive cases for every annual death from that disease would indicate that there are in Lee county 4.32 waged successfully when each citizen realizes responsibility as his brothers helper.

Join the Tuberculosis association!

Membership drive for tuberculosis funds, 75 per cent is spent in Lee county.

Radio Voice Speaks For Brigham Young

Just what ambitions, opinaons or bits of history would Brigham Young reveal to us moderns were he allowed by some miracle to step into life again?

This is a question which Continental Oil Company attempts to solve in its regular Wednesday night radio broadcast planned for April 12 over 20 N. B. C. stations. Co-starring with the globetrotter, Carveth Wells, in this program is a voice representing the spirit of the great Mormon leader—a man who in his day was "Builder of the West," govenor of Utah, Indian agent, President of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints and General of the Militia.

The general subject of this unusual broadcast is "Utah — The Land of the Honey Bee," the garden spot planted in the desert by Young and his followers.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station W. M. A Q. Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

BASEBALL PROPOSED

St. Charles.—Southwest Virginia's most outstanding sports organization, the Lonesome Pine Base Ball League which will be appreciative news to thousands of Virginians will b reorganized Monday night April 10th at Appalachia.

Represenatives from at least 14 towns and teams is expected to be present to bid for a place in the schedule. Either six or eight clubs will be accepted.

Every town that has a team of Lonesome Pine calibre is invited to have a represenative present to discuss their entry.

Mr. Frank Callaway. President of the Athletic House of Knoxville. Virgil Wacks, Associated Press and News Sentinel sports writer and probably a represenative from the Knoxville Smokies will be present to negotiate all necessary league arrangements for completion.

A full set of brand new rules will be presented to govern the Lonesome Pine sucessfully throughout the season without any squabbles or difficulties. Specific ruling banning completely any importation of foreign players from beyond the league boundry line has been completed.

The first schedule adopted will be permanent ithout change. No new clubs under any circumstances will be entered into the loop after the first schedule is officially adopted. There will be no board of adbitration in Va. to govern protest, all protest filed will be settled by the News Sentinel sports department. A large number of otner very important rulings will be presented at the meeting for approval.

Lynch Ky., who wishes to enter the Lynch club into the Lonesome Pine loop will be refused admission to the league because of a ruling of last year prohibiting any club from Ky., or Tenn. entering the Va. league because of the entanglement it would cause this fall in the State series when the winner of the Lonesome Pine would play the winner of the Cumberland Valley for the State championship.

The Atheletic House has arranged to furnished equipment for all Lonesome Pine clubs at a price which will make it quite easy for any club desiring to enter to do so and easily finance themselves regardless of times. There should be no financial worries because of the wide scope of publicity the loop will create an interest that will fill the stands at every schedule game.

The lonesome Pine publicity of last season put five players on their way to big time base ball, even better posibilities is forecast this season. Professional league scouts will cover the Lonesome Pine games in search for talent more so than ever this year and fine chances awaits every prospest.

Those expected to be represented at the meeting are: Dante, St. Paul, Coeburn, Norton, Gate City, Derby, Appalachia, Dunbar, Exeter, Big Stone Gap, Dryden, Pennington, Seminary, St. Charles and possiably others.

If you have any influence as a fan or as a promoter in local baseball now is the time to use it and help the local boys along. Join in with your local newspaper in boosting the league which will help greatly the sporting possibilities of your town.

L. & N. New 2 Cent Fare In Effect April 1

President Cole Optimistic As To Results

"Throughout the system of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, reduction of passenger fares goes into effect April 1st," states President Whitefoord R. Cole. "In coaches, the new rate will be 2 cents a mile. In sleeping and parlor cars, it will be 3 cents a mile, with no surcharge."

"It is a well known fact that for several years the railroads have experienced a continuos decline in passenger revenue," said Mr. Cole. "We have encountered one form of competition after another. We have realized that changing conditions call for changes in our operations. Various methods for solving the problem have been presented, but we have agreed upon the reduction of fares as the most practicable solution."

"We believe the public values the advantages of travel by rail. People like the cleanliness, safety and comfort of our trains. They appreciate the savings of time and trouble. Now we are making these benefits available at a rate which removes the economy of competive methods of transportation from consideration."

"Beginning with April 1st, countless men who have been using their own automobiles for short trips will prefer the greater economy and ease of the train trip. For long trips, there will be no question as to the desirability of the train, from the standpoints of comfort and convenience as well as cost.

"The Louisville & Nashville Railroad is authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission," said Mr. Cole, "to make this experiment in reduced fares for a period of six months At the end of that time the justification of the reduced must be judged by the results, but it is our hope and expectation that the 2-cent rate will bring back lost passenger traffic to such a degree that its continuance will be justified.

Attend Funeral

Caylor—Twenty relatives attended the funeral of Mrs Stanley Delph of Corbin, Ky., Sunday. Mrs. Delph was formerly Miss Mae Rowland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Rowland, both of whom were born and lived at Caylor.

Mrs. Delph well be remembered by many Middlesboro friends as she was a graduate of Middlesboro High School, and was a prize winner in a Middlesboro Daily News circulation contest.

Nicknamed!
that's what happened

THE contest for a name and slogans for Conoco's new gasoline is over. The winning name and slogans have been selected and awards made to the contestants listed here.

More than half a million good friends tried sincerely to help us, and we are grateful to all of them for the names and slogans sent us, each of which had a careful reading and consideration.

Even though we have selected and paid for a splendid name, we find we cannot use it or any of the many hundreds of good names submitted.

Personality always wins a "nickname." We never thought of that in our anxiety to get a good name for an outstanding gasoline. Bronze was used as a color to make this new gasoline distinctive and to protect our customers. It was liked by everybody—they, you, everybody called it Conoco Bronze. So, try as we might, we couldn't change now. It will always be known as Conoco Bronze. It had too much personality to avoid this popularity rating—"nicknamed"!

Therefore, conforming with contest rules, we are using a name of our own creation, the name used in all the contest advertisements—"Conoco Bronze"—even though it is not the name for which we paid $5,000.

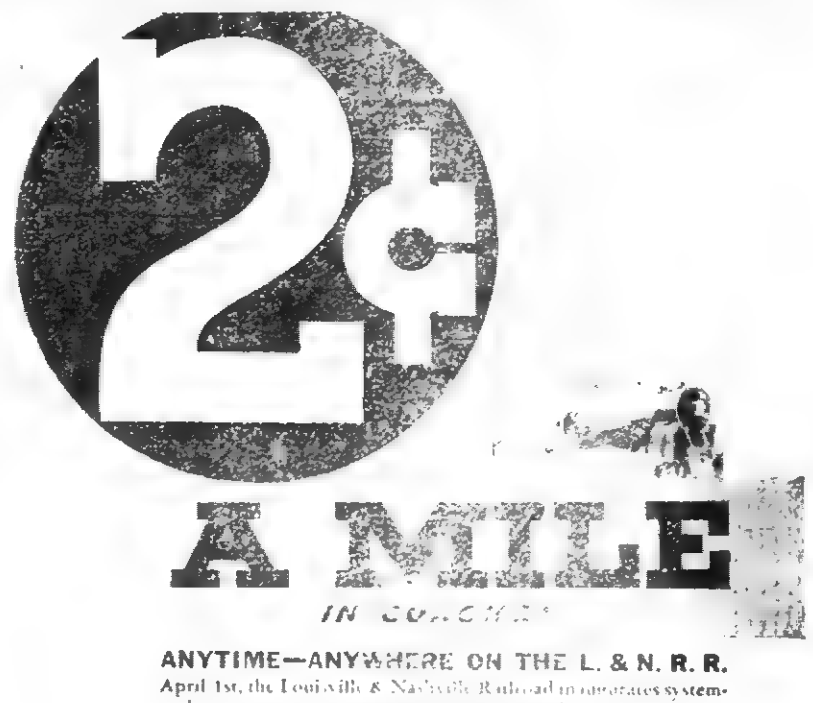
"THE OLD RELIABLE" REDUCES FARES TO



IN COACHES

ANYTIME—ANYWHERE ON THE L. & N. R. R.

April 1st, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad inaugurates system-wide passenger fare reductions [illegible] between all points located on its lines [illegible] coaches providing every travel comfort, complete toilet and smoking facilities, and with available dining cars.

The fare for transportation in chair cars and parlor cars will be at the rate of 3¢ per mile without surcharge.

For example, where the fare has been $5.00, under the new rate in coaches it becomes $2.00; [illegible] sleeping cars where the fare has been $7.50 or $8.50 will be $4.34, with a further saving due to the elimination of the surcharge.

CHEAPER AND SAFER THAN MOTORING

These fares make traveling on Louisville & Nashville Railroad trains a most economical, safe and satisfactory means of transportation. Statistics show that even with the smallest automobiles the cost per mile averages between 5¢ and 6¢ and with larger cars from 8¢ to 10¢

Avoid roadside delays, tire troubles, detours, hurried meals and the fatigue which comes from the strain of driving.

Board an L. & N. train, relax in comfort, travel economically, with safety and speed, and arrive at your destination fit and ready for work or play.

L. & N. DINING CAR SERVICE WORLD-FAMOUS

You cannot eat a better meal, better cooked or better served in any hotel or restaurant than you can enjoy in large, clean, comfortable L. & N. diners, and food prices are reasonable.

Whether you travel for business or pleasure save time, save money, save energy by using trains of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

The rates are established for an experimental period of six months from April 1st. Their continuance beyond that time will be dependent upon the extent to which they are availed of by the traveling public.

Ask any passenger representative or ticket agent of this railroad for particulars and reservations.

YOU were mighty careful in selecting the location for your store. You wanted to make it easy for your customers to visit.

But what about your "second address" — your telephone address?

Many people find it impossible to get away from home or office whenever they wish to shop in person. To these people your advertisements are the windows and counters of your store. Your telephone is the door through which they enter and buy.

But only if you invite them. Make your telephone address known to them by featuring it in your advertising. Tell them how welcome they will be when they visit you by telephone.

Beaver Picture Brought To Va.

By Carter Wormeley

As recently reported, five pairs of these little animals were released in Virginia during the summer of 1932. Commissioner Nolting says that ten years ago ten pairs of beavers were liberated in Pennsylvania by the local game authorities, who estimate that, owing to protection, as many as 5,000 are now in that state.

So trust that the Virginia experiment may prove as successful. Commissioner Nolting says:

"Three pairs of the beavers brought to Virginia were planted in a game refuge in Augusta County where they are proceeding with the building of dams in the mountain streams

The other two pairs were liberated in a pond in Suesex County, where ten years ago some beavers lived until trapped for their fur. The new beavers promptly took possession of the old beaver houses which still remained.

"At a meeting of the American Game Conference, held in New York recently, there was shown a motion picture of beavers in their natural habitat in Canada. While the beaver is a very intelligent animal, it is very shy and it had been found impossible to get pictures of them at work.

"An Apache Indian, a few years ago, went to Canada to engage in trapping. After he had been there a while he realized how fast the wild life was disappearing and decided to devote his efforts to its conservation rather than to its detruction. He tried to gain the confidence of the beaver anb succeeded so well that the animal lose all fear of him and the picture shows the beaver swimming up to him and eating out of his hand. Young beaver were shown crawling over his shoulders and submitting to his fondling.

"The picture showed how the beavers cut down trees, floating them to their dams and placed them in position and then brought large chunks of mud in their mouths, chinked the logs and patted it in place with their tails. The dam was broken to see what the beavers would do. As soon as the water level fell, a beaver appeared to realize at once what had happened

He looked the situation over, swam up the pond about fifty yards, crawled out on the bank, cut down a tree about six inches in diameter, cut about a fifteen foot length, dragged it into the water and started for the dam. The log was a little too long to pass through a narrow place in the pond. He immediately saw what the trouble was, cut the log in two and used the shorter lengths for repairs, then, with the help of other beavers which had appeared, brought mud and plastered it over the logs and had the dam repaired in less time than man could have done it.

"The Game Commission is endeavoring to secure this film to be sown in its moving picture exhibits at the schools of the State and feels that it will greatly help the interest in wildlife conservation and instill in the youth of the country a love for our wild life and a helpful spirit of cooperation"

Mrs. Lelias Mae Graham

Harlan—Our community was saddened Tuesday night when the spirit of Mrs. H T. Graham took its flight about 9:00 o'clock and returnd to her Master who gave it.

Mrs. Graham had been in ill health about four months, but for the past two weeks she had been seriously ill and her life at various times hanging only by a thread, though she made a hard fight to be spared to her loved ones.

Mrs. Graham was born December 2, 1891 at Pocahontas and was the daughter of Mrs C. C. Wilson of that city father preceding her to the grave a number of years ago.

Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock the funeral was held at the Methodist Church, conducted by Rev C. E. Vogel, assisted by Revs, Mark J Andrews and W J Bolt and it was filled to over flowing with relatives and friends of the deceased.

Mrs. Graham was married to H. T. Graham, then General Manager of the Clover Splint Coal Co. at Clover Splint, Ky. Mrs. Graham was born and reared in Lee county. To this union was born two daughters, Misses Irene and Mildred.

SEVEN YEARS OF PELLAGRA RELIEVED

Scalf's Indian River Tonic Hero!

Mrs. Tom Smith, Packard, Ky. says: "I had suffered from pellagra for seven years. My stomach was sore, my stomach would burn and ache, my nerves were bad, my arms, neck and feet would turn red and peel off. I had suffered untold agony.

"I had taken several kinds of medicines and had taken several shots from the doctors.

I only weighed 118 pounds. Then I began the use of Scalf's Indian River Tonic and continued until I had taken twelve bottles. I have never broken out with pellagra since. This has been 14 years and I have not even a symptom of pellagra and weigh 180 pounds. My local doctor told me that if ever anyone was well of pellagra, I am well

BOOKS TO OWN

Marqus James, Pulitzer-Prize-winning biographer of Sam Houston, has gathered sufficient matters of record to round out the frontier life of another man of the Border, Andrew Jackson; by remarkable feats of literatory surgery he has placed the salient aspects close enough together to form an integral picture in the mind; and by his own lucid method of dealing with the natural suspense of situations, he has put on paper a story which draws the reader's interest relentlessly from peak to peak over the rugged topography of Jackson's Southwest.

Through so completely documented as to render solid and lasting every satisfaction in the story's excellence, this is a biography with all the advantages of the modern style. Candid treatment, neither moralizing nor debunking, presents before us unadulterated the colors of the man and his times.

After starting his career as a courier boy in the Revolution, which came only fitfully to his Waxhaw homeland, and after a few years of youthful hell raising and instruction in the law, Jackson went westward into Tennessee on the tide that carried the earliest immigrants in the wake of the pioneers. To many the complexion of the United States during this period following the famous events of the Revolution is misely a vague map of thirteen colonies disarrayid but fraternal. To these it will be a surprise and a thrill to learn that between 1783 and the turn of the century the people in the Tennessee and Kentucky were constantly hesitating between loyalty to the new federation and union with the Spanish in Louisana. At one time there even existed in the wilds of Tennessee an independent republic, with its own form of government and a medium of exchange excitingly unique. Through the holdings of his hostile state Andrew Jackson had to ride to reach his first jurisdiction as a United States judge, which was in an isolated community harboring little respect for the law and needing the attentions of just such a fighter as Jackson. The Republic of Franklin was disbanded before Jackson passed through, but the same uncertainty of fealty made possible the tremendous schemes of Aaron Burr, which brought the conspirator in contact with Jackson as long as the Judge thought the project involved a mere annexation of Spanish property to the United States.

The country opened up; Nashville became a town; South of Tennessee the Creek Indians made trouble. Jackson raised an army and quelled them with little aid from the administration, which tried to disclaim the treaty he made depriving the aborigines of half their lands.

Jackson stuck to his guns, however, and later defended New Orleans from the British under the same handicaps. This division of the War of 1812, which forms perhaps the most graphic chapter of the book, brings back the brilliant, many sided life of old New Orleans and pictures Jackson's defeat of the veterans of Waterloo on the mud flats before the city, the American forces consisting of Tennessee "Dirty Shirts", French and Spanish from New Orleans, and the sunburned pirates of the Gulf. After this comes his invasion of Florida, followed by session and annexation, and last of all his retirement from the army and as he thought from public life.

The personal story of "Old Hickory" is interwoven with these events, and from the publicity which they caused him he momently longed for concealment; he ached from the bliss of life alone with Rachel, the former Mrs. Robards, whom he had married at the expense of recurrent scandal. The very fierceness of his love for her, and of his jealousy for her honor, dragged him into many undignified quarrels one of which ended in a duel. She loved him as he loved her, and her longings for his endlessly postponed retirement from public life to her arms is pathetic. Next to Rachel he loved horse racing, and the animals of the southern race tracks would reveal him as famous for the horses which play their own parts on the pages of James's books alone with other matters too delicately presented there to warrant spoiling them here. The one unsatisfactory features of the book is that it closes some twenty-four years before the end of Jackson's life, and these years were by no means barren. The reasoning which led Mr. James to let his story die with the vanishing of the frontiers is obvious, but the feeling remains that the life is not complete without the addition of another volume. "Andrew Jackson, Statesman".

The New Deal Explained

In the stress of pre-inaugural days President Roosevelt took time to compile a book expressing his convictions as to the necessity and meaning of the reconstruction he plans.

"Equality of opportunity, as we have known it," he says, "no longer exists."

Some 600 corporations now control two-thirds of the nation's business.

Plainly we are steering a steady course toward economic oligarchy." By supervising deposits, preventing speculation, separating investment and commerical banking, decentralizing industry, economic planing, creating a competitive instead of a prohibitory tarrif, unemployment and old age insurance, and especially by a wiser distribution of income, he proposes work for everybody with greater rewards for work and smaller return to capital.

Virginians will have a particular treat in the discussion of this presidential program to be broadcast from Station WRVA next Tuesday evening at 6:45.

The speaker will be Virginius Dabney, able political writer and author of the widely acclaibed volume, "Liberalism in the South." Further information about these weekly reviews and the loan of dozens of new books will be sent to readers of the News who apply to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Ewing Divides With Jonesville

Ewing—The first of the games in the county championship series was played last Saturday. Because of the rain the Ewing games with Jonesville were postponed until Monday when the Ewing team motored to Jonesville and divided honors with the Jonesville teams. The Ewing girls lost in basketball by a score of 17-15. The Ewing boys won by a scose of 17-2. Only seven innings were played. Two hard games are expected by the Ewing teams here Saturday when the Flatwoods teams meet Ewing here according to Coach Hyatt and Miss Vivian Hobbs.

PENNINGTON HI LOST TO DRYDEN

The hopes of the local Pennington High School base ball team to become pennant winners for this season received a serious set back last Saturday when they lost to the already-conquered team of Dryden High School. The game was played on the local grounds. It was an interesting, closely played game, despite the fact that both teams showed a lack of experience and team work.

It seemed that each team was unable to take advantage of the others errors Altho Pennington held the lead in scoring for most of the time Dryden exhibited better throughout the entire game. That team as a whole was cooler and showed a better composed team work.

J. Flanary, pitching for Dryden, started off and went most of the game in excellent fashion. He became wild in the eighth inning, however, and to be rep'aced. Bailey piched a good game for Pennington, but showed many signs of being unable to stand the strain of the entire nine inning's pitching. He got seven strike outs, but allowed fourteen hits. J. Flanary got fourteen strikeouts, and allowed only three hits. J. Graham and H Flanary both of Dryden led the hitting for the day with three hits each out of five times at the bat. Ralph Smith should be complimented for the fine way he played at catcher for Pennington. He was the star of the day for Pennington.

Santa Fe And Taos Program Wednesday

In Santa Fe the young men still go courting with a guitar and a bunch of flowers, and some of them can trace their ancestry back more than 400 years, says Carveth Wells, Continental Oil Company radio entertainer, who plans to devote his regular Wednesday night broadcast on April 19 to Santa Fe and Taos New Mexico, two of the most historic cities in the United States.

One dramatic portion of this program, which will be heard over 20 N. B. C. stations, is the characterization of Kit Carson, pioneer trapper and Indian fighter, whose old home is now one of the show places of Taos Taos, by the way, says Wells, is a Chinese name as well as an Indian one.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station WMAQ Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

Benedict Gets $146,000 Fire Damages in Court

A U. S. Circuit Court of Appeal judgement, upholding lower court decisions in an insurance suit between three insurance companies and the Benedict Coal Corp., means an award of $146,000 for the coal company of which Guy Darst, Knoxville operator, is president.

The judgement, was given last Tuesday.

Operating in Lee County, the coal company lost its tipple, head house and conveyer shed thru fire October 29, 1929. The company held use and occupancy insurance with three firms, Liverpool, London & Globe Insurance Co., $50,000; People's National Insurance Co., $60,000; Fidelity Phnoix of New York, $110,000.

By the lower court the company was awarded $800 a day for 183 days, with insurance companies appeal from the award and the coal comp ny appealed from allowing of interest only from September 10, and from the dential of a portion of the premium, which was claimed unearned.

The lower court was upheld on all points.

Give The Reader A Chance

Sex-shocker and cheap thrillers, the lurid magazines and books that exploit the seamy side of life, are roundly denounced by parents, teachers and preachers. Delorable reading habits particular those of young people, are said to indicate a moral lapse that is a step toward national downfall.

Probably little improvement will result from denunciation. Careful guidance in the selection of reading helps, but wise guidance and selection are impracticable unless wide range of choice is afforded by access to many books. Ones reading is a matter of taste than of morals. The love of good reading is usually catching if one is exposed to it. Herein lies the difficulty Virginia has no adequate libraries outside its cities.

The deficiency is remedied in some degree for those citizens whose interest overcomes the handicaps of distance. Various State agencies exist for the purpose of furnishing good books to town and country dwellers. A report of their progress and the scope of their work published in pamplet form will be furnirhed upon request to readers of The News who apply to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

TWO CENTS A MILE

The two-cents-a-mile inaugurated on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad April 1st is a reduction of more than 44 per cent under the general fare of 3 6 cents a mile in this country, according to the Louisville & Nashville Employes' Magazine for April which points out that the public may now travel via L&N for about one-third of the total cost of making a trip by automobile. The three-cent fare in Pullman and parlor cars, together with the elimination of the surcharge, reduces the cost of this kind of travel approximately 20 per cent.

Store Door Delivery Plan

During the first ten days of the operation of its storedoor delivery plan, which was inaugurated on March 15, the less-than-carload freight business of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad at Birmingham, Ala., showed a 40 per cent increase over the corresponding peri d in February, it is stated in the L&N Employes' Magazine for April. Many other stat ions showed nice increases, the publication adds, and others made a much better showing than was anticipated before the plan became operative.

Telephone Explained by Edwin F. Hill

Pennington Gap high school students were given lessons in telephony at their assemblies Tuesday by Edwin F. Hill, Washington, D. C, information director of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Companies, who talked on "Extending the Voice Range by Telephone".

In tracing the art of communication, which Mr. Hill said was never on a higher plane than now, it was disclosed that telephones in nearly fifty countries on six continents may now be interconnected. Enlarged charts reproduced from the currant telephone almanac showing various phases of the telephone industry were displayed during the address. Among the interesting charts displayed was one showing the fuuctions of the vacuum tube repeater, a development of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, which the speaker stated was largely responsible for the extension of telephone communication to day.

Virginia was one of the first states in the country to operate a telephone line A private line system was operated as early as 1877 in Fredericksburg. An exchange was placed in operation in Richmond, April 1, Norfolk, May 6, and Lynchburg, August 15, 1879.

Pennington Gap telephone users now make an average of 450 calls daily from the 150 telephones in service. Jonesville telephone users make an average of 225 calls from 90 telephones. There are 85 central offices serving approximately 141,000 telephones operated by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia. There are also 199 connecting company central offices serving 51,000 additional telephones in the state, according to Mr. Hill. This makes a total of 192,000 telephones in the state served from 284 central offices. Telephone users served by the Chesapeake and Potomac Company last year made 330,000,000 calls.

In seventeen years, according to Mr. Hill, telephones operated by the Chesapeake and Potomac Company in Virginia have increased more than 100 per cent. Telephone calls he stated, have increased even faster, reaching an increase of 100 per cent in 15 years. Use of the telephone for out-of-town calls in the state has increased 100 per cent since 1926.

Telephone communication, the speaker said, is in its fifty-seventh year The first conversation was held March 10, 1876, when Dr. Alexander Graham Bell the inventor, and Thomas A. Watson, his assistant, spoke to each other over two crude telephones connected by thirty feet of wire. From these two instruments, Mr. Hill stated, has come the enormous net work of communication lines serving more than 17,500,000 telephones in the United States, with communication possible 15,000 miles away. Telephone users in this country now make an average of 77,000,000 calls daily.

Development of the telephone was at first a slow process, according to Mr. Hill, People generally referred to the instrument as a toy and some predicted that it would never be of any commercial value, but Dr. Bell and Mr. Watson continued to give demonstrations and on October 9 1876 connected two telephones to a telegraph [illegible] and carried on conversations between Boston and Cambridge, a distance of two miles.

This was the beginning of long distance telephone communication, Mr [illegible] stated. Subsequently conversations were held between Boston and Lawrence, twenty-seven miles apart In 1880 when there were only 30,872 telephones in the United States, conversations could only be held for a distance of forty five miles.

New Haven, Conn., [illegible] the first telephone switchboard It was placed operation January 28, 1878 With the establishment this central office, company records disclose, an improvement was given this form of communication with the result that by 1881 there were only nine cities of [illegible] and only one with [illegible] people [illegible] United States of seventy [illegible] exchange telephone communication now reaches 70,000 cities, towns and rural communities in this country.

"Long distance service as the term is now used was inaugurated between New York and Boston, 235 miles March 27, 1884. Telephone communication was made possible between New York, Boston and Washington, December 31, 1885. Richmond and Norfolk, Va., October 4, 1897; Atlanta, Ga , in March, 1899; and New Orleans La., in February, 1900, Within a few years the principal cities of the country were connected by a network of long distance lines.

"As late as 1910 when there were 5,882,719 telephones owned or connected with the Bell system long distance was limited to approximately 1,000 miles. People in the east wanted to speak with those in the west, so engineers laid plans for the construction of a transcontinental line. With its construction New York wasconnected by telephone with Denver in 1911 and with Salt Lake City in 1913, The Atlantic and Pacific coasts, 3,650 miles apart, were connected by telephone, January 25, 1915 when users of the service in Washington, New York, Boston and San Francisco talked with one another. Subsequently two additional tranacontinental lines were built on which circuits have been added from time to time.

APPALACHIA Woman Rejoices

Says: "I believe Scalf's Indian River Tonic Is The Best Medicine In The World"

Mrs. F. G. Adams, 217 Spruce Street, Appalachia, Va., says: "I had suffered with stomach trouble for six years and had spent lots of money for treatments until I thought nothing could be done for me. My doctor had me to go to a hospital but I didn't seem to improve any there. Everything I ate hurt my stomach. I could scarcely sleep. In other words, I was so sick that I felt I would rather be dead and out of the way.

"One day while I was on my sick bed a boy brought me a paper telling of Scalf's Indian River Tonic. I decided to try it and before I had finished my first bottle I could tell I was better. I have taken 24 bottles, and I don't feel like the same person. I feel that Scalf's Indian River Tonic is the best medicine in the whole world, and I am glad to pass the message on to others, feeling sure it will benifit them as it has me."

BOOKS TO OWN

There is something about the French Revolution which quickens the pulse, even after a century and a half. Probably the words will suggest drama to the human family for a long time to come. The period has been a fertile field for the novelist, the historian, the poet, and the moralist; certainly the biographer has found it no less productive, for surely no equal number of years has ever seen l fed into prominence a greater number of interesting rascals, heroes, and Vivians. It is noteworthy, moreover, that c medy and tragedy have never blended more perfectly in human conduct than during the destruction of the Bourbon monarchy.

Of those connected in any way with the French Revolution, few surpass in interest the tragic figure of the biographies of theactors in the huge spectacle, it is safe to say that none exceeds in interest Stefan Zweig's life of Marie Antoinette.

If one recalls for a moment the salient facts in the career of the ill-fated queen it will be easy to see what a tempting subject Herr Zweig has chosen to discuss. Marie Antoinette, Archdtchess of Austria, was the daughter of the most brilliant and appealing of the Habsburg family, the Empress Maria Teresa.

When the archduchess was yet in her teens her marriage was arranged with the dauphin of France, the future Louis XVI, bringing about a union b tween two of the most powerful families of Europe, and putting the feet of the young girl upon the steps to the throne of the greatest state then exist. But Marae Antoinette had more than position; as heiress to the throne of Louis XV it was confidently believed that her husband was placed in an inexhaustible purse; morever, she was a charming and beautiful woman, with a flair for pleasure; it seeems an absurdity to suggest that one so placed, so entrenched, and so endowed need ever fear for the future.

Then came the deluge The revenues of France dried up like a desert stream; the powers of the soverign were curtailed bit by bit until they vanished entirely; the circle of carefree friends was scattered abroad, first fleeing for safety from proletarian vengeance, and then plotting even against the king and Queen for selfish ends.

The second successor of the mighty Louis XIV proved himself to be a weakling who could not be saved, and too strongly placed to be circumvented. Disaster followed disaster, humiliation upon humiliation.

The royel family became the prisoners of the nation. Then the head of the king rolled in the dust. Squabbling and inept royalist who should have been expected to come to the widowed and imprisoned queen divided their time between inaction when action was required, and foolish action when tact and wisdom should have prevailed.

The queen was dragged before the tribunal, charged with treason and with nameless crimes, including the corruption of the morals of her own children. After two harrowing days of trial she was condemned to the guillotine, and, the next day, died upon the scaffold. Such is a brief outline of a life filled with contrasts, abounding in experience, and ending in tragedy. The simplest recital of its history could could not fail to hold the interest.

Stefan Zweig's biography, however, is far more than a simple recital of facts; it is an artistic anb skillful delineation of a personality. The facts are not skimped or slighted, but the interpretation of those facts is made of far greater interest, for the workmanship is masterly. Moreover, Zweig's Life is no mere rehash of earlies treatment of the subject, done over in the modern manner; it is a fresh and inbedendent evaluation of the queen's history, upon which new light is thrown by recent investigations made possible, for example, by thrown open archives at Vienna to students since the fall of the Habsburg dynasty. From the documents in Vienna have been drawn extracts of the letters from Paris, both those of Marie Antoinette to her mother and brothers, and those of the Austrian diplomats to their sovereigns.

There are a great many fine things that one can say about Zweig's biograph , but then it is frequent possible to say some fine things about a very uninteresting book. What everyone really want to know is whether a book is readable. This one is eminently so; within a very few weeks everyone will either be reading or planning to read "Maie Antoinette"; it is that kind of a book.

The Book Sampler

Mixed races, geography, economics have played their parts in the making of Mexico, as well as individual figures who have guided and misguided her destiny Of these a bandit stands forth, Pancho Tilla, peon leader of peons. He has the distinction of, after having defeated the Army of the north in twenty pitched battles and becoming virtually master of the republic in 1910, holding almost unlimited power, yet withholding himself from office Hence Edgcumb Pinchon's "Viva Villa!"

Our own Revolution can stand a little depunking-st least so John Hyde Preston thinks. Of course, we all know that the battle of Bunker Hill was not fought there at all-unless this come as a surprise to a few disgruntled tourists. We all respect Washington's greatness; so does Mr. Preston, but gives us somethir g different from a Waxy bust and a cherry tree to think of. But what may be amazing is the business spirit that prompted the Colonies' uprising, and the lack of enthusiasm for revolt in some quarters

History Mr. Preston unexpurgates, even to the extent of quoting, instead of the school books' "Disperse, ye Rabels!", the real remarked of the redcoats officers to the Boston rabble. There should be three reactions to "Revolution: 1776"; prode, pleasure, and renewed interest the story of our beginnings.

Everyone is telling us how we live, and what should be done about it. Horace M. Kallen has turned his attention from "Indecency and the Seven Arts" to "Individualism: the American Way of Lite", and James H. R. Cromwell has published a slight volume of 34 suggestions, which he calls "The Voice of Young America". Kallen, the philosopher, seeks remedies within; Cromwell, the business man, thinks first of economic improvement, evidently believing that when all's well in the pocket-book individual problems will work themselves out.

Camps To Be Established Soon

Richmond—Under provisions of the recently enacted law appropriating millions for the relief of the unemployed, to be expended at the discretion and under the direction of President Roosevelt, a number of camps will be established in the timbered areas of Virginia, The minimum numbes in each camp will be two hundred men.

The enlistment of the employees in these camps will be based on the 1930 census, which will result in Virginia being allotted 5,000 men. A certain portion of this number will be composed of such as are qualified to supervise the camps and direct their operation, and these will be recruited from the civilion population. No age limit will apply to such employees.

The major proportion of the 5,000 however, will consist of men from 18 to 25 years of age who have dependents and who agree that a certain percentage of their wages shall be applied to the support of such dependents. The enrollment of these employees will be under supervision and direction of the departments of labor and public welfare.

The primary objectives President Roosevelt's program is relief of a large number of the unemployed and the preservation of one of the nation's greatest assets, its forest reserve.

As fire is the greatest destroyer of our forests, necessarily a considerable portion of the work done under this relief program will pertain to fire prevention and suppression

This part of the program will be under the supervision of the Virginia Forest Service Bureau, which is one of the divisions of the State Commission on Conservation and Development.

County Studies for the Asking

Social and economic surveys of Virginia counties discussing within each governmental unit have now reached a total of seventeen for the series. The usual contents of the studies in chapters on local history and the several towns, natural resources, facts about the people, wealth and taxation agriculture, food and feed production, schools, government, and summaries of county problems with recommendations for improvement. Recommendations in the latest survey, that of Washington County, are for a new form of county government, school reorganization to eliminate school debts, abolition of the fee system, establishment of a district home for the poor, formation of a welfare unit, a new courthouse, control of crop planting and marketing, reduction of loss through migration of youth to the cities, a health department, and a system of flood control.

Copies of the surveys for Accomac, Augusta, Charles City, Fredrick, Giles, King and Rueen, Northampton, Princess Anne, Russell, Washington and Wise counties are still available for distribution. By special arrangement readers of the News are offered a free copy of any one survey upon application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Jamestown Day Proclamation

Whereas, the deep significance attaching to May 13 has for many years been emphasized throughout the United States as the date on which was effected the first permanent English speaking settlement on the American continent, and, the historical meaning of this anniversary should be especially dear to the people of Virginia, and,

Whereas, for many years a devoted band of Virginia women, actuated by patriotic impulse, has labored loyally for the preservation of the landmark on Jamestown Island, now,

Therefore, I, John Garland Polard, Governor of Virginia, do designate Saturday, May 13 as Jamestown Day, on which appropriate patriotic exercises may be held in commemoration of the landing of our forefathers at Jamestown.

Given under my hand and under the lesser seal of the Commonwealth, at Richmond, this fourteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty-three, and in the one hundred and fifty-seventh year of the Commonwealth.

(Signed) John Garland Pollard, Governor.

Seal By the Governor.

(Signed) Peter Saunders, Secretary of the Commonwealth.

E. Lee Trinkle Accepted Chairmanship

Honorable E. Lee Trinkle of Roanoke, Virginia has accepted the Chairmanship of the State—wide Financial Campaign of the children's Home Society of Virginia which will be held from May 1—15, The purpose of the campaign is to raise $75 000 which is the major portion of the operating expenses of the Society for 1933.

City and County Committees are being organized throughout the state under the leaderahip of Governor Trinkle and it is hoped that an active campaign may be conducted in every city, town and country in the state, to each of which a proportionate amount of the budget has been assigned as a quota.

In asking representative citizens te assume local responsibility for the campaign, Governor Trinkle has pointed out to them that approximately 1000 children are now in the care of the Society, The budget for the coming year provides for the continuance of this care and supervision.

Many of these children have been placed by the Society in free foster homes others are boarded by the Society, and an average of around sixty are in the Receiving Home in Richmond awating placement in permanent homes,

Each year the Society is called upon to receive as many additional children as its funds can be stretched to provide for. Some of these are placed for adoption into homes and the Society is relieved further care, but almost all af them must be given temporary care until homes can be found for them, either by adoption or through free foster homes. To leave the work of the Society undone means that children who need its services will suffer distressing consequences In most localities there is literally no place for them except in the almshouses, which are, of course, wholly unsuited.

Governor Trinkle pointed out that approximately $100 000 will be needed in 1933 to provide food, clothing and shelter and the neccessary supervision of the children now in the bare of the Society and of those who will come in its care during the year

Of this amount, approximatel $25,000 has already been provided through the Community Funds in Richmond and Roanoke and from other sonrces. The balance of the budget must be raised in the State wide Campaign to be held during the first two weeks of May if the work in the interests of the welfare of these children is not to be seriously crippled.

"Oh dear, Johnny have you been fighting again?"

"No miss, we moved yesterday and I moved the cat."

Roosevelt Visits President's Camp

Richmond—Practcally a unanimous editorial welcome from the newspapers of Virginia greeted announcement of the recent visit of President and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to the President's Camp on the Rapidan, together with on inspection tour of the famous Skyline Drive in the Shenadoah Park area in the Blue Ridge William E. Carson, chairman of the State Commission on Conversation and Development, was host on the occasion, the day was delightful and the distinguished visitors deeply impressed with the beauty of the landscape.

Constructed originally by President Herbert Hoover, at his own personal expense, the summer camp of the Presidents was graciously deeded back to Virginia when the last chief executive return to private life. Since Mr. Roosevelt has been in office he has received frequent and urgent requests from Senators Byrd and Swanson, as well as from Chairman Carson to visit the Shenandoah Park area, traverse the famous Skyline Drive and inspect the President's Camp on the Rapidan.

Commenting on the visit of the President last Sunday Mr. Carson expressed real delight "We take them as they come, said he. "We day no favorites Democrats or Republicans we try to make them feel at home. We trust President Roosevelt will accept the invitation of the Mother of States to divide his time between the White House and the Rapidan There is little more than the Potomac River separating them".

From Bristol to Danville from the Kentucky line to the Atlantic Seaboard, the Virginia press has been unanimous in its invitation to the President with his First Lady to accept summer residence at the President's Camp in Virginia

William E Carson is responsible for the creation of that camp, which has already become historic, and the use of which is very gladly extended to the chief executive of the nation.

Could Not Lie Down For 7 Days and Nights

Read the unusual experience of Mrs. Jim Grubbs, Alva, Ky., with The Master Medicine. Mrs. Grubbs says:

"About three years ago I was suffering from one of the worst cases of kidney trouble I have ever known. I was swollen from head to foot and for seven days and nights I could not lie down. I sat in a rocking chair with my feet lying in another chair. I had to lean to the right all the time or I could not breathe. It seemed that I might die at any moment. My husband and I were both so discouraged that we hardly thought it necessary to make futher effort to get relief for me, but so many of my friends told of the wonderful results of Scalf's Indian River Tonic that we decided to try it.

"It is unbelievable how quickly this great medicine took hold of my case. The first bottle gave me wonderful relief and by the time I had taken 4 bottles I was up about my house work and cooking for eight borders. I could not say too much for Scalf's Indian River Tonic for I have no doubt that it saved my life."

BOOKS OF OUR OWN

In this volume is set forth the political faith of the man to whom the people of America are looking at the present time to lead them out of the worst peacetime crisis in the country's history. A collection of articles and speeches prepared and made public during the past year or two, it affords an excellent index to the mental processes of the present occupant of the White House.

Observer's of Mr. Roosevelt's career had suspected that his political faith had not crystallized until he was well along in his campaign for the presidency, and the addresses and papers included in this volume bear out that suspicion. Regarded as being on the whole a man of liberal inclinations, Mr. Roosevelt nevertheless failed to make his position clear on various issues while seeking the nomination. This was also true, albeit to a lesser degree, while he was seeking the election.

Whether his retieence was a necessary concomitant of his political strategy or whether it was due to his own indicision is, of course, open to question. At any rate, the chapters in "Looking Forward" which discusses subjects which are more or less innocuous are, in general, the earlier ones, while those which lash out against the men whom the author's Cousin Theodore termed "malefactors of great we lth", are the later ones.

Certainly it is difficult to see how and cover-to-cover reader of 'Looking Forward" can feel otherwise than that Mr. Roosevelt is a liberal with the courage of his convictions. If a year ago he seemed to be temporizing with Tammany's miraculous tin boxes and exhibiting a measure of indicision in other directions, he has emerged in recent months as a man of substance, bravery and integrity.

This is particularly evident in the chapters of this book which have to do with such questions as water power, the tariff, holding companies, and banking and speculation. To read these is to realixe that the President is determined, in so far as it lies in his power, to prevent the exploitation of the public by the great financial interests which have done so mnch to bring on the depression. Of course the seemingly endless chain of exposures of crooked manipulations by banks, public utitity companies and other corporate interests has served to give Mr. Roosevelt a highly sympathetic audience. It is possible that his criticisms of the practices of which he complains would have been less severe if these exposures had not roused the people to the need of reform.

In addition to the subjects already mentioned as considered by the President in his new book, there are chapters dealing with economic planning, land utilization, governmental reorganization, expenditure and taxation, agriculture, the railroads, judicial reform, crime and criminals, and international relations. The most conspicuous omission is prohibition, but since Mr. Roosevelt's views on this subject have been expressed on numerous occasions, little would have been gained by a repetition of them.

A reading of "Looking Forward" makes it evident that "rugged individualism", that sacred cow of the Coolidge and Hoover administrations, has been thrown overboard by their successor in the White House. The author states in his excellent chapter on "Banking and Speculation" that he does not believe that in the name of individualism "a few powerful interests should be permitted to make industrial can non fodder of the lives of half of the population of the United States". The course he has followed since his inauguration leads one to the view that he is putting his faith into practice.

In addition to the fact that Mr. Roosevelt's book is interesting by virtue of its important subject matter, it is arresting from the standpoint of style. The present occupant of the White House is the first since Woodrow Wilson who has exhibited any marked proficiency in the handling of the English language. There is nothing in "Looking Forward" of the dull truisms of Harding, the ponderous platitudes of Coolidge, or the pedestrian banalities of Hoover. Its author has ideas and he knows how to express them. If the book yields nothing that is startlingly new to those who have followed Mr. Roosevelt's career closely in recent years, it is the best available handbook for those who desire a compedium of his views on many of the most pressing questions of the hour,

Paul Hugh Shelburne

Paul Hugh Shelburne, 9 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Shelburne, of this place, was accidentally killed last Thursday afternoon when he was struck by a car driven by George Bishop, of below Jonesville.

The accident, according to witnesses, could not have been avoided as the boy, carrying a small stool, stepped in front of the car and was hit by the right front fender just below the ear, near J. W. Green's Jewelry shop. He was taken to the Lee General Hospital, where he died Friday evening at 10 o'clock without regaining consciousness.

The funeral was conducted Sunday at the Christian Church by Rev. W. B. Moore, assisted by Revs. D. W. White and C. F. Watkins.

Burial was in the family cemetry at Station Creek. He is survived by his parents, two sisters and a brother, all of this place.

Revival At Christian Church

Revival meeting which began Easter Sunday and will continue through Sunday, April 30th, is being conducted by Rev. M. E. Hughes, pastor of Bluefield, W. Va. Large crowds have been attendance from the beginning. All the pastors of the town with their people are cooperating nicely. The invitation is — come and hear the gospel preached by a successful pastor-evangelist.

LONESOME PINEING

By Virgil Q. Wacks

St. Charles—Home runs, extra base hitting and one sided scores featured in the first chapter of the Lonesome Pine schedual for the 1933 season which began the past week end.

An, allowance for the vast week end slugging is easy beconse "They haven,t began curving them yet".

The better pitchers of Lonesome Pine rating are not yet in shape to really bear cown while a number of the rookies that has seen service doesn't have quite enough to make the riffle, so as the season progresses along the pitching will be speedialy improved and the scoring wont look quite so much like football.

Jenkins leads the home run parade with 4 homers for the weeek end, netting 3 Saturday against Norton and 1 against Dryden.

Dryden and Lynch have one homer each for the week. Pettus, the big Indian of Jenkins leads the parade with 2 homers.

Many of the clubs are planning quite an improved line up for the approaching week end schedule, managers are seeking satisfactory talent from all corners of the six counties which make up the official league boundry line.

The Lee Smokies, which is a combination of both the St. Charles and Pennington club will have many smiling new faces in smoky uniforms this week including the persons of Add Rogers, Cowboy Barker, Dan Queener and perhaps others, speedy efforts are being negotiated to reach Queenor and it is believed he will be in town by game time Saturday.

Jenkins has two players that are most sure to standout in the Lonesome Pine this year, Pettus, the lanky hard slugging center fielder who at present leads the loop in homers will be quite sure to give the pitchers plenty trouble while Creech, the Jenkins manager who pitches very effectively both left and right handed will soon be in trim to work from either side.

A great sign for a sucessful season in the Lonesome Pine was very evident this week in observing a fine attendance at all games in the loop this early in the season. Even better crowds are expected to turn out this week end.

DOLLARS COME HOME

Trace the course of a dollar spent for propert improvement, repairs, or replacement.

Part of it goes to local merchants, who provide the needed materials. Another part goes to the workman on the job.

The workman spends his part for the necessities of life. The corner grocery, the drug store, the department store get it—and through them it goes to their employes, to the farmer and the manufacturer.

Then the circle begins again—the money enters new pockets, passes through other industries, travels to other sections of the country.

The part of the dollar going to the store providing the supplies follows much the same course. It pays the store's workers. It pays bills. It goes to factories to purchase new stock. From the factory it goes to other workmen, to related industries supplying raw materials, to investors.

And at last, the dollar comes back, through one channel or another, to the original spender.

In a short length of time that dollar has had a thousand uses. It has done the work of a thousand dollars.

That's the beauty of money which is actually circulating—it is used an infinite number of times, and it does as much good each time.

Now is the time to obtain repairs at the lowest cost in decades—and at the same time do your bit in fighting depression.

Jobs are cheaper than charity—and without the jobs there won't be anything for charity.

Months or even years may pass before the symptoms of tuberculosis become troublesome enough to drive the patient to the family doctor. Meantime other members of the family have become infected. People need to be reminded that "that tired feeling" or the "cough that hangs on" or certain other symptoms may be due to tuperculosis and should be investigated by a doctor. Tuberculosis still kills more people between the ages of 15 and 45 than any other disease. Yet it can be controlled if we provide treatment for every case and examine every person who has lived in contact with a tuberculous person.

Governor's Statement To People Of Virginia

The National Slogan for this year's Childs Health Day, "Mothers and Babies First", has a special appeal in these times of acute economic depression, because every thoughtful citizen must realize that the surest basis of hope for the future rests upon the health and character of our future citizens' the children of the State. Medical science has demonstrated that the laying of the foundation for good health and personal efficiency in adult life must begin in the prenatal period and be intelligently built through the infant, preschool and school ages.

I therefore urge that on Child Health Day special consideration be given to the carring out in practice the following ideas: That every child have right care from birth; that every expectant mother have such guidance as will render child—bearing safer; that every comunity protect its children against physical dangers and moral hazards, and that these facilitins be available to the rural mothers and children as well as to the city mothers and children.

Help Employment

Beer has become legal in states comprising about 69,000,000 people. It will become legal at various dates within the next four months in a group of other states. States which are still unfriendly to beer, are regarded as likely to remain so, comprise but about 12,000,000 of our population.

The principal reasons for immediate legalization of beer were the jobs it would provide, the money it would put to work. Indications are, shortly after its appearance, that it is up to its expectations.

First result has been a sharp jump in employment, sizable revenues to the federal, state and local governments, and an increase in spending, not only for beer, but for other articals.

Railroads have hired additional crews to man beer trains. Related businesses —such as the manufacture of bottles and mugs—report a sharp pickup

Reliable figures will be difficult to obtain for some time—until the novelty of "beer is back" has worn off and stabilization of the industry sets in It seems, however, that it will do much in helping the couses of employment purchasing power and governmental revenue.

Two Sides of the Picture

Virginia schools ranked thirty-ninth among the states in 1932. Eight years later the State ranked forty- third.

In comparison even with the eleven other Southern states Virginia has no cause for pride. Through its average wealth is highest, income is third highest, and net debt is fourth smallest it has made no effort in keeping with its capacity. State appropriations have never equaled the Constitutional provisions for schools; the proportion of school costs paid by the State has steadily declined, and the chief burden of progress has fallen upon the localities. Only two Southern states spend for schools a small proportion of total income. In 19-29-30 Virginia ranked fifth in the South in schools expenditures per pupil attending, an amount hardly half the national average. Three Southern states have a lower debt per pupil, but seven have less valuable school property. Only five states pay teachers less than Virginia. In spite of contrary impressions, expenditues per pupil have increased little in six years, and are now lower than for 1928-29.

A bulletin of compaative school costs is offored free upon application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

"Like Trail In Snow"

"Like tracks in snow, the tuberculin test may reveal the source of tuberculosis in the home. This is the great value of the test in your children" declares Dr. Edward R. Baldwin, nationally known specialist in tuberculosis and director of the famous Trudeau Foundation, Saranac Lake, New York.

"If the source of infection is thus discovered and controlled by sanitary education or treatment in a sanitorium, few of the children found to be infected will develop real disease. Should the test show no reaction after the second trial it is safe to conclude that no infection has taken place in young children.

"In grownups after school age the result of the test, if positive, is of less significance, because we have learned by experience that approximately 90 percent of the population have tubercle bacilli in their bodies by the time they have reached adulthood. Should the test brove negative, however, it is of great significance, because the examining physician may conclude immediately that whatever symptoms the patient has shown are not due to tuberculosis.

"It is in grownups after the school age that the X-Ray is most valuable, and all of high school age should undergo such examinations whether the result of the tuberculin test is positive or negative. Naturally all positive reactions and contacts should have X-Ray examinations where possible.

"I am pleased to note that special emphasis is laid on these facts during the Early Diagnosis Campaign now being conducted throughout the United States by the affiliated tuberculosis associations. The death rate from tuberculosis has been reduced two-thirds since the National Tuberculosis Association was organized in 1904, but our hardest problem will be to overcome the last third. In this struzgle the tuberculin test and the X-Ray will prove to be our heaviest artillery."

Local branches of the Virginia Tuberculosis Association in all sections of Virginia are joining in the Early Diagnosis Camgaign.

Final Allocations For Virginia Roads

Richmond — The final allocation of funds for the state highway primary system was announced by the state highway department Friday.

Of the $2,928,220 available for allocation, $2,400,000 was allocated to the districts, leaving $553,220 for overhead and engineering, surveys and plans and conditioning 2 and one half per cent mileage.

The estimate applied to fiscal year July 1, 1933-June 30, 1934.

By districts, the department allocated funds as follows:

Bristol, $303,440; Salem, $336,720; Lynchburg, $301,440; Richmond, $351,840; Suffolk, $352,560; Fredricksburg, $176,160; Culpeper, $271,680; Staunton, $307,200.

The commision is making public its report said that the allocations are just sufficient to take care of the convict road force and that there will be no additional funds available for any other work.

Harlan Deputy Dies Of Wounds

Harlan, Ky.—John Carnes, 28, deputy sheriff shot from ambush two weeks ago near Harlan, died Thursday afternoon in the Harlan hospital from effects of the wounds.

Carnes was shot in both legs with shotgun slugs. Gangrene development and both legs were amputed in an effort to save his life. He died Thursday afternoon at two o'clock.

Finley Wooten, deputy sheriff who was also wounded while with Carnes, is recovering.

The officers had stepped from a building where a dance was being held when two men opened fire on them without warning. No arrests have been made in connection with the shooting.

Carnes' death brings the homicide toll to 17 in Harlan county for 1933.

When a doctor discovers a person who has tuberculosis his first question is "From whom did he get it" For tuberculosis comes only from tuberculosis. The doctors next thought is "To whom has he given it?" Persons living with one who has the disease are in danger of getting it unless precautions are taken to prevent its spread.

Child Health Day

Whereas, the Congress by joint resolution has authorized and requested the President of the United States of America to proclaim annually that May Day is Child Health Day; and

Whereas, the Health and welfare of our children concern not only their parents, but also the nation at large; and

Whereas, the observance of such a day gives opportunity to unite in furthering the health and protection of our children; now,

THEREFORE, I, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate May first of this year as Child Health Day, and call upon all agencies, public and private, and all individuals having the interests of children at heart, to set aside that day for the earnest consideration of the needs of the children in their communities and in their homes, and to inaugurate constructive activities to protect and promote the health and physical vigor of the youth of our nation.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this 31st day of March, in the year of our Lord 1933, and of the United States of America the 157th.

Franklin D. Roosevelt.

By the President:

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State.

The real cause of tub rculosis is a germs. If a few tuberculosis germs get into a healthy body no harm is done because that body figths back. But if one lives daily with a careless person who coughs or spits out the germ, the danger of getting the disease is great.

"One bad apple can spoil the barrel", says an old proverb. A case of tuberculosis may, from the public health point of view, be like that bad apple—the disease tends to spread from who has it to those with whom he lives. Tuberculosis often "runs in the family"; not because it is inherited, but because of the close contact incident to family life.

The perplexed little college professor who appears in one of the stories in this volume called "The Flood" and has devoted his sabbatical year to the writing a book on values; says, in the end, "Everything in life comes in surges, floods, really." "There is no balance." "There are only floods, one flood following another." As far as such a thing is possible, the little puzzled scholar in declaring himself, speaks not for himself alone, but for all the characters in this volume and for the pleasant and reflective Sherwood Anderson also. He is a kind of interloctor, whose quieter existence gives him opportunity to express in words what most of the people in this book have been experiencing in terms of action and living.

Few of the stories in "Death in the Woods" contain plots, and most of these evade complaisant definition. They can be described only as moments, movements, floods, pouring in upon the lives of understandable human beings and flowing out again, but with a difference past ready understanding. In many cases, this march of forces is so swift and spurious as hardly to be observed until time has made their working clear. An old woman walks in a forest with a sack of meat scraps on her shoulder; a young writer dreams of a perfect novel; a possessive son is humiliated to the will of a stubborn father; a sedentary scholar finds his privacy violated by a convivial brother: each is taken unawares and overwhelmed by the flood of accident and circumstance, each is suddenly made the richer or poorer for it. What has taken hold of their lives is nothing important or striking, it has neither "vale" nor "balance"; yet it lifts them out of themselves for the duration of a lifetime or a moment, and then passes on. The idea is brought into play most forcefully in the story called "Like a Queen" the whole effect of which is centered upon the mysterious return, for an instant, of her lost beauty to a middle aged singer.

About eight of the sixteen stories in "Death in the Woods" are concerned with the Southern scene, and half this number with Virginia itself, In the New Orleans story called "A Meeting South", Anderson directs a pointed jibe at a type of faddism less current today than it was two years ago, but still in general practice. "A great many Northern men and women," he writes, "come down our way and, when they go back North, write things about the South. The trick is to write nigger stories. The North likes them. They are so amusing." None of the stories in "Death in the Woods" is a nigger story; they exploit nothing but deal with men and women who interest the author in their own right, as individuals. Several of the stories center about mountain folk; a good many about marriage relationships, and others, like "A Meeting South" and "In a Strange Town", are not short stories at all, but personal anecdotes told with an effect of climax.

"Death in the Woods" is a good book, a shrewd, wiry, forthright book. Its strongest point is the vein of terse garrulity that runs through all of the stories and puts the reader in a receptive and even a reflective frame of mind from the very outset. Occasionally, the strict simplicity of style may irritate by a tendency toward theatricalism and studied naivete, or, at its infrequent worst, by a kind of journalistic bleakness which makes "Why They Got Married" the only really poor story in the collection, so peculiarly noisome. At his conversational best, however, Anderson is hard to surpass; certainly, few writers today have the power or the intuition to excel the poignant and profound "Brother Death", which is unquestionably the finest story in the book Anderson's sense of the strangeness and the secret fulfillment of human character, of the impressionable part exceeding and intensifying the whole, of the beauty and importance of the passing moment and the intuitive human spirit, is what most endears him to us. It is a fragmentary and elusive thing he has done with these stories, and yet to pharaphrase one of his own lines, a thing so curiously complete that it has its own beauty.

The secret of preventing tuberculosis lies in the examination of all "contact". A "contact" is any person who lives, works or plays with a person who has tnberculosis of the lungs. He may not have any sign of illness he may not even have the germs of tuberculosis in his body, but for safety's sake he should be axamined.

RED CROSS CONVENTION

Washington, D. C —Relief activities are on review during the annual convention of the American Red Cross, which convened for four days in this city beginning Monday, April 24th. From all over the United States reports were made of volunteer production of clothing from government cotton, of distribution of Red Cross flour, and of the rendering of many forms of community unemployment relief. An evening session featured a display of sample garments produced by Red Cross chapters.

From Richmond, Indiana came an outstanding member of the Junior Red Cross, Dwight C. Spillman, selected in a national contest as spokesman of the younger generation. He occupied an honor position at the colorful opening plenary session, and told of participation of the Junior Red Cross in emergency work.

National Chairman John Barton Payne, Vice-Chairman James L. Fieser and Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary occupied key positions on the convention program, which featured among its speakers the following: Fred C. Croxton, assistant to the directors, Reconstruction Finance Corporation; J. Prentice Murphy, general secretary of the Children's Bureau of Philadelphia; W. B. Rodgers, executive director, Pennsylvania State Emergency Relief Board; Brigadier General Frank T. Hines United States Veterans Administration; Reverend John O'Grady, director of the Catholic Charities of Washington; Dean Annie W. Goodrich, Yale University School of Nursing; Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, President of Vassar College; Dr. J. L. Biggar, Canadian Red Cross Commissioner; Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion; Harvey D Gibson, Chairman of the Emergency Unemployment Relief Committee of New York; Lester D. Wallerstein, of Richmond, Virginia; Mrs. Newton S. Noble, of Akron; Congressman Daniel A. Reed, New York; and A. C. Sprague, employment manager of the B. F. Goodrich Company.

Federal Forestry Relief in Virginia

Richmond, — President Roosevelt will solve to a considerable extent the great problem of unemyloyment through the establishment of civilian camps, composed of 200 men each, in the forest areas throughout the United States. A number of these camps will be established in Virginia Those which have been definitely designated are to be located within the Federal Forest reserves and the allotment of 5,000 men has been assigned to Virginia to be selected from the civilian population.

4300 of this allotment must fall within the ages of 18 to 25 years. Those who are eligible for enlistment within this group should apply to the State Department of Public Welfare or through its local branches where full information as to the enlistment will be given.

700 men will be selected to supervise and direct the work of this relief program. No definite age limit is placed on these. Citizens of the state who wish to obtain employment in this latter group will apply to Joseph Kircher, Regional Forester, National Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., or H. M. Sears, Supervisor of Natural Bridge National Forest, Lynchburg, Virginia, or John McNair, Supervisor of George Washington National Forest, Harrisonburg, Virginia, or C. L. Graham, Supervisor of Uneka National Forest, Bristol, Virginia.

So far there has been no decision reached as to the establishment of camps on State, county or privately owned lands Therefore, the projects that are now proposed are under Federal supervision and these camps will be under the control of the United States Army. The final selections will be decided by the United States Department of Labor.

Applicants who desire to apply for enlistment with the emergency relief committee should follow above directions in order that their applications will receive prompt attention.

The Book Sampler

"Miss Lovelyhearts", created by Nathaniel West, might have been the man in almost any newspaper office who hides behind the anonymity of a column head offering advice to those who bring their problems. "Desperate", "Disillusioned", "Brokenhearten", all poured out their woes to Miss Lovelyhearts, and he went forth to gain experience in order that he might help. And did he gain experience, that is, up to the time of a Religious Experience which him. It's good, raw satire, but watch out that the maiden aunt dosn't hook your copy and die in a lingering attack of apoplexy.

What the younger generation continues to do is no longer news; it's just subject matters for novelists. Phyllis Bottome, she who wrote "The Dark Tower", now has a great deal to tell about "The Advance of Harriet" and how they were received by a young Frenchman of - yes, my dear!-- the haute monde. It appears that this English gal was always in a state of love and didn't it being apparent to the object of her desire; in fact, it had become quite a habit. But Harriet got results. Theresore, cheers for Harriett.

Some of the irritating generation might take lessons from the younger crowd in I. J Singer's "The Sinners". When it comes to good old-fashoon misbehavior, this book rings the bell-- but then it's literature and gets by for that reason. This book is supposed to do for the strange sect of the Kabbalists of the Austro-Kussians border that "The Good Earth" has done for China. In addition it is notable for its "Epic movement". An adoptation, "Yoshe Kalb", is now playing at Schwartz's Yiddish Art Theatre in New York. That's just the very place for it.

BASEBALL

Lee Smokies dropped the first game of their schedule here Saturday to Dryden by the score of 5 to 1. The Smokies were not in good form making six errors. Kelly for Pennington looked good in his first game, a lowing nine hits and five runs, striking out seven men. Bailey and Young led the hitting for the Smokies, Young getting a double and a singles out of four trips to the plate, Bailey getting two singles out of four trips to the plate.

Parsons went the route for Dryden allowing six hits and one run, striking out seven men. Ely and Freeman led the hitting for Dryden, Ely getting a home run and two singles out of five trips to the plate, Freeman getting a double and a single out of four trips to the plate.

The Lee Smokies went to Lynch, Sunday and were defeated by the score of 11 to 5.

Hoskins started the game for Pennington and was relieved in the 5th or 6th inning with the score 1 to 1, Hoskins was taken out on account of it being his first game and was not in shape to pitch the full game, Bailey relieved Hoskins and he was wild, walking four or five men, Tritt relieved Bailey, and he was also wild, Shanks finished the game for the Smokies.

Details of this game is not available as they were not a represenentative of the press there and the local boys don't like to talk about it.

Upward Trend of Farm Products

There is an upward trend of farm products and stiffening of prices of all products and a good many economists predict that all such things will reach a considerably higher level than exists today.

In the fertilizer business materials have increased in price during the last two weeks until it would cost about $1 50 a ton more to replace the fertilizer that is on hand in the plants than it cost to make it at the time it was made. This is true in the same porportion with almost everything else. Corn, wheat, oats and cotton have all taken decided jumps upward. The tobacco crop, of course is sold and brought a good price.

With these conditions confronting us it would be a most serious matter for East Tennessee to allow itself to be caught with a corn shortage this year. There is danger of a corn shortage too unless the farmers give special attention to planting their corn on good ground and fertilizing and cultivating it well. In all probability good merchantable corn will be a valuable crop this year. Nubbins are never salable and worth but little as feed. Don't put out a lot of acres of thin land unfertilized as it just means a lot of work without any returns.

We predict that if the farmers in East Tennessee will make a good corn crop and a good tobacco crop that they will all be in much better shape next year than they are now. It is a sad thing for prices to be high and to have to buy stuff instead of having something to sell.

Scientific Marvels Seen At Exposition

A mechanical man ten feet high and made from a transparent substance called "Cellon" will be one of the official entertainers at Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition, according to Carveth Wells, Continental Oil Company radio star, who will devote his regular broadcasting period Wednesday night, May 10, to his second Exposition program.

The unusual cellon robot in the Hall of Science, says Wells, can eat cucumber salad and half baked pork and digest both while you watch the entire process. You can also watch his blood circulate, and if you push the right button, he will sing soprano, alto, tenor or bass—to order. Other marvels include the "fever machine", which increases your temperature, the Thyraton Organ, and a miniature, transparent oil refinery in operation.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station WMAQ Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

The spread of tuberculosis can be prevented. How? By examining every person who has been in close contact with a case. This means not only medical examination of adults, but of children also. With the aid of the tuberculin test and the X-Ray it is now possible to discover if a person is infected, and if so how much damage, if any has been done. If danger signals are discovered much can be done to prevent the development of actual disease.

CLODS! CLODS!

Clods lock up the plant food and starve the plants. Good farmers will not plant seed in a cloddy bed, neither will they use fertilizer filled with clods and acid balls when they can get Basic Pulverized Fertilizer free of clods and balls. Also the plant food in Basic Pulverized Fertilizer is chemically combined with Lime and Magnesium, destroying all poison and fiery acids.

From tests and testimony we are confident that when we make our fertilizer Basic and Pulverize it that we add at least One-third to its value. This gives the farmer the Cheapest available Plant Food on the market.

Below is a list of brands of Basic Pulverized Fertilizer. Among this list you will find a brand that will suit the Need of any soil or crop. Our dealers are supplied with these brands.

LEE SMOKIES STEP OUT

By Virgil Q Wacks

St. Charles—With negtiations ahead for cellophane uniforms for some of the Lee Smokie boys it is very evident that you will see more of them as the new schedule is released for the home games.

Bud Wilson, a fan who has displayed some real intarest in Lonesome Pine baseball in past days came up the street the other night with a broad smile and remarked, Boys I'm looking for some new heels.

Another fan asked, Bud, what kind of heels,? Heels for socks Bud remarked, to repair thirty pair I have walked out going to ball games. If another couple thousand fans would kindle up this much interest in baseball around the immediate neighborhoods, the Lee Smokies would have easy going for victories and the pennant.

Gee, what a difference just a few additions make, with Proctor Rogers and Cowboy Barker in the Lee Smoky uniforms this week end two nice victories resulted seemingly easy, and with the addition of one more infielder and another twirler the Smokey roster will be complete for a successful parade for the first half.

Pettus still leads the loop in circuit clouts, getting another Saturday against Lynch for a total of three. Rogers, Ely and Bise each have two for the season while several other players have clouted one each.

Dryden is still quite in the limelight with three victories out of four attempts which came by the result of some heavy slugging.

Lynch seemed to have taken the worst tumble over the past week by dropping both games while most of the other clubs seemed to have considerably improved.

The Lee Smokies seemed to have reached their normal stride in hitting Sunday as they collected 19 hits including three homers over the much improved club of Jenkins.

Ball-Parkey

Rose Hill—It came as a great surprise ta her host of friends of Rose Hill when word came of the marriage of Betty Lynn Parkey to Clarence Ball of Harlan, Ky.

Miss Parkey is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parkey of Rose Hill, and was formerly a student of Rose Hill school where she was very popular among both boys and girls. Mr. Ball is a graduate of Harlan High, and is employed in the city clerk's office of Harlan. Mr. and Mrs. Ball will make their home at Harlan, Ky.

Lee County Man Found Beaten Up Saturday night

John Plasters Dies Few Hours After Picked Up On Roadside and Crime Remains Mystery; Four Held in Jonesville Jail.

Altho four men are being held in the Jonesville jail after being arrested in the vicinity of Stickleyville where John Plasters, a well known farmer of that community, was found late Saturday night unconsious and badly beaten up, the crime still remains a mystery as the prisoners refuse to talk.

Plasters died Sunday night without regaining consciousness and officers are still searching for clues that may indentify the assailants.

Plasters was found by the roadside a short distance west of stickleyville about midnight Saturday by a lone person traveling that way. He was removed to a neighbor's home and a physican called, an examination revealed that he had several body bruises and both of his eyes had swollen shut from blows in the face.

The physican announced Plasters could only survive a few hours.

Lee county officers are working hard on the case and it is understood they may be able to connect the crime with two robberies committed in that section Saturday night in which both Elbert Stout's and Will Robbinette's stores were robbed. An opinion was expressed that the robbers might have encountered Plasters while on his way home and decided to get rid of him as a means of avoiding future indentity. Plasters was considered a peaceful man and it is not thought by his acquaintances he voluntarily started any trouble. Other reports from Stickleyville say that several saw a car going in the direction that Plasters was traveling near the hour of midnight. Farther on down Wallen's Creek the four men in the car passed some one on the road and said:

"If you see a dead man on the roadside, don't pay any attention to him."

This same party it is understood was arrested by officers later.

Plasters was a native of Stickleyville, having resided there all his life time.

He was 38 years of age and is survived by a wife and seven children.

Dr. V. M. Pence is in Washington, D. C., as delegate to the United States Chamber of Commerce in its 21st annual convention, representing Southwestern Virginia, Inc.

Y. P. D. Hike

Saturday evening at 6 p. m. the Smyth Chapel group of the Young People Division left their church on a hike to Shavers Ford.

As the hikers were nearing the popular "Shelburne Bottom" fire could already be discovered. When they reached the spot, a group of thoughtful boys were seated on the ground, around a furnace built of stones and covered with tin to make a convenient frying pan.

After they were congratulated on their skill and thoughtfulness, two large containers of eggs were placed over the fire to boil.

Games were played, while the ever faithful "Charlie" kept the fire going. When the eggs were done bacon was broiled over a large fire. This gave much enjoyment to all who were present.

More games were played before the fire was extinguished and the crowd started for home.

COURTHOUSE TO BE BUILT

Jonesville—V. L. Nickolson Co., of Knoxville, Tenn., was awarded the contract for construction of a new Lee county courthouse by the county board of supervisors here Wednesday. Their bid of $44,825 was low among the nine received. Construction will begin May 1 and is to be completed in five months.

Burnett Brothers, of Middlesboro, Ky., was awarded the contract for plumbing and heating fixtures on a bid of $5,375.

Bids on fixtures will not be open until the first Monday in June.

Sponsors of a petition for removal of the county seat from Jonesville to Pennington Gap warned the supervisors that they would seek an injunction before Judge E. T. Carter, May 1, to prevent erection of the building at Jonesville, unless a referendum is held.

The Lee courthouse was burned February 13.

Lee Countain Penned Inside A Home 28 Years: Can't Talk, And Never Had A Hair Cut.

Jonesville — Twenty eight year old Frank Lawson, who has never had a shave or hair-cut and whose only words of speech are "yes" and "no" is attracting throngs of curious people to the Lee county jail, where he is being held pending removal to Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va.

Sheriff Giles of Lee county was called to a section five miles from Jonesville last Sunday and the parents of young Lawson requested that he be removed to the county jail after he had struck his mother in his first fit of violence during the 28 years he had been kept almost penned inside the family home.

Lawson's hair is almost 20 inches long and his face is covered by a giant black beard. His only response to the stares of spectators is a rather bashful smile. His face is almost bleached white and he is of a very slight physique.

Sheriff Giles said Lawson's mother told him the son had almost an invalid since his birth, and of weak mind, and that she had always kep him inside the home. She said possibly not more than 50 people had ever seen the boy, and that he had never offered resistance to his confinement until last Sunday, when he struck her in a definate gesture to leave the home.

Sheriff Giles said that young Lawson will be removed to Marion as soon as commitment papers are received from the State hospital.

Virginia Mayor Is 89

Danville—Mayor Harry Wooding had very little time today to attend to his offical duties.

It was his 89th birthday, and altho he was in his office he spent most of the morning shaking hands and answering the telephone calls of citizen well—wishers.

Capt. Wooding will have been in office 41 years as mayor next August 12. So far as can be determined, he is the oldest mayor in the United States in point of service.

Whether he will run again two years hence is not certain.

Thrilling Tournament Is Held In Jonesville, Saturday

Jonesville—L. M. U. met L. M. U. and L. M. U. won.

Cheste Hobbs and Miss Meda Parsons, both graduates of L. M. U., and now coaches respectively of Flatwoods high school and Calvin high school girls basketeers brought their charges to Jonesville Saturday for the decisive game for the Lee county championship.

The game was a nip and tuck affair despite the fact that Calvin was in the lead only once. Flatwoods drew away time after time only to be threatened just as many times by the Calvin lassies. It was only when the last whistle sounded and the final score was Flatwoods, 38, Calvin, 36, that Flatwoods backers felt at ease.

Hendrick of Flatwoods with eighteen points and Moore of Calvin with fourteen led their teams, offensives.

William and Mary met William and Mary, Tyler met Tyler, brother met brother, and W. & M., brother and "Tyler too" won Kenneth and Ralph Tyler, brother and coaches respectively of Calvin and Flatwoods high schools baseball teams, and both former William and Mary students fought for the high school supremacy of Lee county at Joneville Saturday and Ken's team, Calvin, won, 12-6.

After the Calvin girls lost the basketball championship to Flatwoods, the Calvin boys seemed bent on revenge and jumbed to a six-run lead before Flatwoods scored. In the fifth inning, Flatwoods suddenly came to life and with the aid of four hits and three errors, scored five runs to which they added three in in the seventh inning to take a two run lead.

In the last half of the seventh Calvin tied the score at 8. In the eighth Calvin retired two Flatwoods men bat Crockett, Slugging Flatwoods star, on his last strike put his team in front, 9-8, with a home run. But Calvin took a lead in their half of the eighth which Flatwoods was not able to overcome.

In the matter of statics, Flatwoods pounded Stewart, Calvin pitcher for fifteen hits including four two-baggers, three three-baggers, and a home run.

Calvin to ched Flatwoods pitchers, Hounshell and Neff, for only eight hits, four of them two bases, but they made their hits pay off and took advantage of scoring opportunities.

In strike outs, Stewart of Calvin beat Hounshell and Neff 4 to 2, Flatwoods made five errors to Calvin's four.

Crocket of Flatwoods hit a thousand out of five trips to the plate. He got a walk, two two-base hits, a three base hit and a home run.

The winner in both baseball and basketball will be awarded a pennant emblematic of the county high school chmapionship.

CLODS! CLODS!

Clods lock up the plant food and starve the plants. Good farmers will not plant seed in a cloddy bed, neither will they use fertilizer filled with clods and acid balls when they can get Basic Pulverized Fertilizer free of clods and balls. Also the plant food in Basic Pulverized Fertilizer is chemically combined with Lime and Magnesium, destroying all poison and fiery acids.

From tests and testimony we are confident that when we make our fertilizer Basic and Pulverize it that we add at least One-third to its value. This gives the farmer the Cheapest available Plant Food on the market.

Below is a list of brands of Basic Pulverized Fertilizer. Among this list you will find a brand that will suit the Need of any soil or crop. Our dealers are supplied with these brands.

CONSIDER THE LEAF

The value of tobacco is in the LEAF. BRIGHT BURLEY BRAND contains LEAF FOOD. It has all the elements that a FINE-tobacco leaf requires, including 4 percent of MAGNESIUM which is known to be necessary to give stretch, life, quality and COLOR to the leaf.

Use BRIGHT BURLEY BRAND for FINE tobacco.

BRANDS OF BASIC PULVERIZED FERTILIZER

BASIC TEN-O-FOUR BRIGHT BURLEY BRAND
VEGETABLE SPECIAL
BASIC MAGNESIA PHOSPHATE
KNOX TRIPLE A BASIC EIGHT-THREE-SIX

CONSIDER THE GRAIN

The value of corn is in the GRAIN. BASIC TEN-O-FOUR is made to make GRAIN. It is abundantly supplied with GRAIN FOOD. BASIC TEN-O-FOUR will put more well-filled HEAVY GRAIN on the cob than any other known fertilizer.

Use BASIC TEN-O-FOUR for HEAVY corn.

A New Word

A new word—"octane"—seems likely to become everyday language in the motorists' vocabulary with the introduction of this year's new cars. Already certain gas stations are displaying signs reading "high octane rating", and other dispensers of the better grades of fuel promise to cash in on the merchandising value of a high octane content in their gasolines.

Although long an engineering term, the word "octane" did not approach popular usage until the introduction of 1933 Chevrolet Master and Standard sixes, both equipped with a device new to the industry known as the "octane selector".

Its function primarily is to give the motorist knockless performance and a nearly uniform cost-per-mile from all grades of gasoline, with resultant economy, according to J. M. Crawford, chief engineer of the Chevrolet Motor Company. By use of the selector in 1933 models, the recognized economy of Chevrolet cars may be increased by an average of as much as two or three miles to the gallon, Mr. Crawford stated.

"Popular brands of gasoline vary in octane content from as low as 40 to as high as 80 or more," Mr. Crawford explained. "Similarly, a gasoline of a uniform octane content will vary greatly in results delivered in different parts of the country due to altitude and climactic variations. (Tests reveal that with an octane selector, the driver purchasing the better grades of gasoline gets additional miles per gallon for his money, and that all grades deliver knockless performance.)

"Development of the octane selector grew out of a personal experience. A year ago I was driving from Detroit through the South and at every gasoline pump along the route where I stopped my motor developed a different spark characteristic. One particular fill of gasoline figuratively 'knocked my cylinder head off'. It was so bad I dumped it out rather than let a station attendant try to adjust the automatic spark timing to the octane content. It occured to me then that if we could develop something easily adjusted to give the motorist uniform knockless performance from any type of gas we would be rendering an important service. From that came the octane selector.

"Recently I drove over the same route and deliberately filled up on the same gas which gave me so much trouble before. I had to retard the selector more than five degrees, but my motor didn't develop the semblance of a knock.

"The device, resting on the distributor arm, regulates spark timing through a range of ten degrees on each side of zero. The reading is advanced for good fuels and retarded for cheaper ones. A lock nut and adjusting screw sleeve are all that need to be touched to obtain maximum engine efficienc and greatest fuel economy.

"We have recently issued a booklet describing in detail the setting of the selector and covering the general theme of octane content of gasolines. It may be obtained free by any interested party by writing the factory or calling a dealer.

"The name octane comes from a liquid fuel known as iso octane, which produces the least known knock in internal combustion engines. On the other extreme is a fuel known as normal heptane which produces most knock. To arrive at a standard for guaging gasolines the former is rated 100 and the latter 0. Equal mixtures of these two fuels would produce an octane rating of 50. Sixty parts of iso-octane and 40 of normal heptane would give an octane rating of 60. And so on.

"From these standards all oil companies develop their gasolines. Any informed gas station attendant will know the octane content of the fuels dispensed by him if the motorist is unable to get the brand with which he is familiar."

Roscoe Wells Shot to Death Near Jonesville

Roscoe Wells, son of Clarence Well, 19 years old was found in a path Tuesday morning, near Oak Grove School House, three miles south of Jonesville shot to death, the bullet entered just above the left nipple.

The neighbors heard four shots Monday evening between five and six o'clock, the first one loud and the next two small and the fourth one loud. No one knowing of any disturbance did not investigate the shooting and Wells was not found until the next morning by a small girl with his gun lying by his his hand and two empty shells in it.

Wells figured in a shooting last spring of a Mr. Lewis of St. Charles, who was shot throrgh the bowels. Also he had been engaged in a recent disturbance where shots were passed.

The bullet wound was different to the caliber of gun that Wells had.

At this time no one has been arrested for the shooting of Wells.

Successful School Year at Rose Hill

Rose Hill — The fourteenth year of Rose Hill high school rounded out on April 19 with what in the opinion of many close observers was the most successful year of the school.

Although no larrels were won in the county contest, the attitudes, efficiency, classroom work and general morale of the student body gave out the signals that inspire teachers and patrons. The willingness to do other than book work only makes a progressive milestone. The school organized the American Junior Red Cross and Junior School Improvement League. Health work inspired by daily physical inspection had a very satisfactory effect. The grades had 32 five-pointers while all together too few, much wholesome benefit has accured to the children as a whole.

The grade teachers gave three public programs; the High School two plays which received favorable comment for amateur performers as well as various chapel exercises throughout the year.

The Home Economics Class entertained Seniors and later the faculty and assisted the teachers who gave a social hour to the Teachers Study class at the final county meeting at which forty teachers were present. Other social affairs were given at the school and in the community for teachers and pupils.

The regular attendance was exceptionally good amidst all the trying conditions of sickness, lack of books, etc.

The clothing proposition was supplemented through the patriotic loyal support of our women who cut and sewed more than 200 yards of clothing for children.

The library of 115 first grades books met a pressing needs not only in supplying first grade pupils but for practice reading for second and third grades.

The third grade made the eviable record of only one failure and one dropped, in an enrollment of thirty-nine.

Some very helpful work was done in the class in agriculture, that of planting mountain shrubs and nursery stock around school building and campus.

Two Irishmen, with a grevience against their landlord, decided to settle it man to man and laid for him one night with their shillalahs. They expected him to pass their hiding place at nine. At eleven he had not made his appearance.

"Do you suppose, Pat," said the other in a voice of sympathy and solicitude, "that anything can have happened to the poor fellow?"

The Book Sampler

Begining a long while back, Evelyn Scott's "Eva Gay" was born in Kentucky. In her early years she was afflicted with a mother whose obsession was to be "nice", or, more exact, to be thought "nice".

It appears that when the fair Eva was on the verge of becoming hopelessly repressed by this unpalatable product of the 90's, the world war offered her a way of escape. If that escape and its ramifications, meaning the sloughing of inhibitions also to a much trammeled and married (synonymous, here) professor—had not taken up some 799 pages, this would be one of the year. However, if you enjoyed "The Wave", place "Eva Gay" on your list of good books, and take a month or two off in which to read it.

Up-to-date in every way is "Helene", with a new interpretation of that hackneyed phrase. For with her to be modern is to work hard, use her intelligence, face the changing order with saving grace, and, above all, to be honest.

A sort of German Ann Vickers she is, but with more of human charm.

Small wonder that Helene and her problems are causing more interests in the land of their inception than any other of Vicki Baum's work, not excepting "Grand Hotel". Here is much to interest and much to follow.

Post-contemporary is Panteleimon Romanof's study of life and love in Soviet Russia, "The artificial conditions under which Ludmilla and Sergei work out their destinies, companionate marriage, deification of State, would hamper any solution. But Romanof's salvation lies in his intense phychological knowledge of men, and more especially women. Against this experiental regimes continues the old, old struggle of a clever woman caught by her own emotions, demanding utter fidelity, and therefore smothering the object of her desire.

NERVOUSNESS

Nervousness is usually due to some disorder of one or more organs of the body. Bad stomache, bad kidneys, bad blood, and female troubles are likely to cause extreme nervousness. If you are restless at night, nervous and irritable or if you feel despondent, don't go on making yourself and everyone around you unhappy.

Get to the bottom of your troubles. Scalf's Indian River Tonic has helped many folks to enjoy life. It strengthens the vital organs and soothes the nerves. Get a bottle of Scalf's Indian River Tonic at your nearest dealer and be convinced.

Adult Education in Action

To examine the accomplishments of agencies of adult education in Virginia, to exchange ideas that will improve and stimulate further activity, and to discuss new responsibilities created by stress of conditions, are the purposes of the fourth state conference on adult education now being arranged. Established as an integral part of the Instution of Public Affairs this annual conference in July will explore varied undertakings in evening courses, classes for illiterates, postgraduate medical education, art education, education of citizens particular in respect to county government, training of municipal employees, home and farm demonstration work, musical and dramatic programs, garden club classes, workers' education and organized community recreation.

The effect of new demands upon educational agencies will be discussed in the light of reduced working hours, enforced leisure of schools and college graduates, the reforestation camps, and the loss of special subjects and evening sessions in many public schools.

A preliminary announcement of topics and leaders for the conference, and reports of addresses and proceedings of the last session, are available to readers of The News upon request addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

BOOKS AND MEN

Since the publication of "Joseph and His Brethern" Mr. Freemon has been widely known as a novelist of the soil. His scene is the English countryside; his people are the yeomen and peasants who till the earth and herd the sheep.

For a long time milieu and people have remained almost unchanged by the march of new ideas, but there are not lacking signs that the great war has been as upsetting among the quiet lanes of the back country as it has been among the crowded streets of London. It is the changing farm that Mr. Freeman has chosen for his latest novel.

Dick Brundish, heir to Pond Hall, sees service in Italy during the war, and marries an Italian peasant girl, whom he bring back, to preside over the ancestral acres. But it is not enough that there should be the clash of ideas between Saxon and Latin; the old ways are changing rapidly. The younger generation is no longer satisfied with the simple life of the farm First the cinema and the radio bring their distirbing forces to change the old ways of living.

The motorcycle shortens distance; the barriers are broken down. Domestic service irks the young girls and the hard labor of the fields offers no attractions to the psat war lads.

The village and the city with their greater sophistication and their easier living are depopulating the country side. The dole makes it possible to live without.

Amid this breaking up of the world in which they have been for generations leading and directing figures, the Brundishes struggle in vain to hold the things they have won.

First of all the difficulty within the household caused by the conflicting points of view of the Brundishes and Dick's Italian wife.

According to the accepted standard her place is in the home, the mistress of kitchen and storeroom.

But Teresa has grown up in the fields, where her labor is as efficient as that of any man. When she attempts to adjust herself to her new envirement neither she or her husband's people are satisfied Her cooking is an insult to English stomachs, while her lapses into her accustomed ways of taking off her shoes and stockings and helping in the fields is regarded as indecent. Even her buoyance of spirits is is held against her. Finally her husband comes to hold her responsible for many of of his troubles.

Then there is the new economic world which the farmers has to face. During the war prices had been high and money plentiful. Now comes the slump. At first the government attempts to guarntee prices of farm produce, but this plan broke down. The mechanized farm and the scientific agriculturist make their appearance, and the Brundishes have no powers of adjustment to altered conditions. Sturdy but unyielding stock, they cannot bend, but must break when the pressure becomes too great.

One of the most notable things about "Pond Hall's Progress" is the fact that the author has skillfully avoided making it either a comedy or a tragedy; it presents the elements of both most skillfully blended, and the reader is enabled to take it as he choses.

As in reality, its glooms is frequently believed with smiles while its comedy has always an undercurrent of meaning and seriousness.

It is not a depressing book, as so many novels of the soil seem inevitably to turn out. With no sacrifice of verisimitucc Mr. Freeman has not felt compelled to be brutal. He does not slur the crudeness and coarseness of his people, yet they are rarely, if ever, repelent; they do not belong to a lower order of being, through to a lest refined and privileged class. Their virtues, which are numerous, are never forgotton. The readers may be amused, pitiful, even exasperated, at the things they do. But he is not tempted to pe contemptuous, and at times he is moved to admiration.

"Pond Hall's Progress" is the sort of book most of us like to read, and that many of us can read with profit. To Americs minds the title is probably not as suggestive as to British.

However that may be, it amply justifies the promise of "Joseph and His Brethren".

Wells To Broadcast Yellowstone Program

"Most people who tell you about a visit to Yellowstone National Park spend most of their time descriingb the natural freaks they have seen and seldom mention the rare natural beanty which acompanies these oddities," says Carveth Wells, globetrotting Continental Oil Company radio entertainer, who will deliver his second 1933 Yellowstone broadcast Wednesday night, May 17, over 29 N. B. C. stations.

"In reality, the topography and vegetation to be found in Uncle Sam's largest natural playground provide equally good talking points," according to Wells. "Step off the beaten trails once in a while," Wells urges. "The wealth of animal and plant life you encounter and the beauty of the high, secluded mountain country will leave impressions never to be forgotten."

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station W. M. A. Q., Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

MOTHERS DAY MAY 14TH

The great events of this world are not revolutions' and economic conferences and banking reforms. The great events of this world are babies.

The most important people in in this world are not soldiers, and statesman and bankers. The most important people in this world are mothers, who are called upon to bring into existance a new generation.

So it is fitting toast on Mother's Day we honor mothers. It is even more fitting that on this day we should take steps to make motherhood safe for them, as it is agreed by leading authorities that at least half the 16,000 women who anually die in childbirth could be saved by adequate maternity care.

A meeting aimed to help remedy the situation is scheduled to be held in New York City May 12th, with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, as principal speaker. A number of outstanding medical authorities and educational leaders are to be on the program. Emphasis is to be placed on two important steps to be taken.

First, people should understand that much depends on the choice of the doctors, and select one known to have had experience in maternity cases.

After selecting him, parents must trust his judgement, and not try to prevail upon him to make painless a process which cannot always be made free from pain without increasing the risk of infection and other undesirable complications. Second, if a hospital is chosen, it should be one of high standards, such as has been approved by the American College of Surgeons, for despite the fact that each year finds more women going to hospitals, there is no corresponding decrease in the mortality rate. In fact, many authorities believe it is safer for a woman to have her baby at home, if conditions there are suitable, unless the mother's condition requires special care.

The Maternity Center Association of New York, which is sponsoring the Mother's Day meeting, has made a notable contribution to knowledge of what adequate maternity care can do to save mother's lives. Among 4,726 women under their care over a period of eight years in a certain section of New York City, the death rate was reduced two-thirds.

Among those to be present at the Mother's Day meeting are:

Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; Surgeon-General Hugh S. Cumming; Miss Grace Hbbott, Cheif of the Children's Bureau; Dr. Walter Chipman, noted obstetrician of Montreal; Dr. Linsly Williams, Managing Director of the New York Acadamy of Medicine; Dr. Allison Hodges' President of the Medical Society of the State of Virginia and Dr. S. S. Goldwater of the American Hospital Association.

With such an imposing array of well-informed and influential people behind this movement to "make Motherhood Safe for Mothers," it is not too much to expect the new deal to include the "Forgotten Woman."

Chevrolet Again Increasing Output

For the fourth consecutive month this year the number of cars and trucks built by the Chevrolet Motor Company for consumption in the domestic market exceeds the corresponding month last year when April production went 4,000 units ahead of April, 1932, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager announced today.

Total production in the month just ended was 59,953 new cars and trucks, compared with 38,665 in March and 55,433 in April last year, Mr. Knudsen announced. Of this number, all but 5,000 units were shipped to dealers in the United States.

Up to the end of April his company had built 208,000 units this year, compared with 138,000 in the first four months of 1932, Mr. Knudsen announced. This is a gain of eleven per cent. The percentage gain in April over last April was eight per cent and in April over March fifty-five per cent.

Owing to unsettled conditions in the fields following the National bank moratorium, his company entered April on a restricted production basis, Mr. Knudsen said. A pickup in orders from dealers, however, necessitated several schedule increases during the month, with the result that since the second week of the month practically all his company's plants have been operating on a normal basis of a five day week, he said.

This rate of operating has been continued into May, with prospects of this month comparing favorably with April, the Chevrolet head stated. This would reverse the trend his company experienced last year, when a fairly sharp curtailment in production marked the transition from April into May.

The Book Sampler

"Pond Hall's Progress" doesn't seem to be in accord with the accepted American definition of its title, for in this book H. W. Freeman, author of "Joseph and His Brethern" tells a story of rural England that would serve well to illustrate what has happened to farm life the world over. The characters in themselves ring true: it doesn't matter that a Britisher after the War has brought an unquiet Italian home to wife and that their temperaments clash the universal truth is there that innovation, especially to middle-class solidity, is anathema.

Two exceptional books of short stories have come out of the season's offerigs. "The First Lover" is the title piece of a collection of Kay Boyle's work, than in which can be found no finer writing or technique. The tales in themselves are slight and momentary-a little boy finds an ally in a dreaded uncle; a movie magnate on enforced vacation is unable to forget obsession of the Kliegs; a charming women resurrects from the past the image of her lover of other scenes. "Death in the Woods" by Sherwood Anderson is of more meaty substances. Many of these stories are concerned with the South; the best of them being "A Meeting South" and "Like a Queen". They are told, or allowed to tell themselves, naturally, and are peopled with flesh and blood.

Elmer Rice's play, "We, the People", survived New York's poorest theatre season in years in spite of criticisms that as a production everything was wrong with it that could be wrong. It is a depression study. It is minor tragedy culminating in major tragedy. But it should appeal to those of us who think. Sidney Howard's "Alien Corn", now playing to packed houses, has also been published in reading edition. Though the theme is likened to Ibsen, no doubt Miss Cornell's acting explains a deal of its popularity,

Relieves Women's Pains

Here is an example of how Cardui has helped thousands of women: "I was very thin and pale," writes Mrs. F. H. Scott, of Roanoke, Va. "I suffered from weakness and a severe pain in my back. The pain unnerved me, and I did not feel like doing my work. I did not care to go places, and felt worn, tired, day after day.

"My mother had taken Cardui, and on telling my condition she advised me to try it. I have never regretted doing so. I took three bottles and it built me up. I gained in weight, my color was better and the pain left my back. I am stronger than I had been in some time."

Cardui is sold by local druggists.

Tenth Annual Coal Convention

It is a great credit to the coal industry that at a time when so many hard pressed industries are turning to the government for a solution of their ills, the coal industry, no less hard pressed, is still depending upon its own efforts to find the road back to prosperity," says J. B. Warriner, President of the American Mining Congress and President, The Lehigh Navigation Coal Company, in a recent statement concerning the Tenth Annual Convention and Exposition of the Coal Division of the American Mining Congress to be held at Pittisburg the week of May 8 to 12

"By economies, by the search for the adoption of new devices and new methods, not only in operation but also in selling, the coal industry is slowly solving its own problems and is moving forward. It is a peculiar satisfaction that the American Mining Congress is holding this year its tenth sucessive Convention of Practical Coal Operating Men and National Exposition of Coal Mining Equipment. It is a sign of stability and an indication of the high regard in which the Coal Mining Industry holds its Annual May Meeting. These ideas have served year to year as a clearing house from which new ideas in operating methods and machinery are disseminated throughout the coal mining world. Each year the value of such a clearing house has grown more apparent. In spite of hard times and uncertainties, such tried and proven Institutions must be carried on!"

"Today is a day of "New Deals", says R. L Ireland, Jr., Chairman of the Coal Division, and Vice President of the Hanna Coal Company, in a similar statement. "The Coal Industry is awake as never before, trying to figure out what its new deal may will look like. Part of its new deal may come from without, but certainl most of it must come from within.

The program arranged for the Tenth Annual Coal Convention contains a lot of suggestions as to how a part of this new deal, at least, can be made a fact,

The manufacturers of coal mining equipment will be on hands with their suggestions to the cause.

While this convention has been designed primarily to assist the practical coal operator, it contains food for thought for the executive and coal salesman as well.

A series of three radio speeches have been arranged is Pittisburg over stations WWSW, WCAE, and KDKA. Samual A. Taylor, Consulting Engineer, and Past President of the American Mining Congress spoke on Monday, May 1, at 9:15 p. m. over station WWSW on the subject of "The Importance of Coal to Pittisburg". A. C. Fieldner, Chief Engineer, Experimental Division, The United States Bureau of Mines, spoke over WCAE at 6 p. m. Wednesday, May 3, on "The Importance of Coal to the United States." R. Templeton Smith, Vice President of the Pittisburg Coal Company, spoke on "Coal and Pittsburg" at 10:15 p. m. on Thursday, May 4.

Can Your Town Answer "Yes"

Periodically newspapers carry accounts of some community's "fire rating" being changed to another class. This means that the insurance rate is either going up or down, in accordance with the risk property in that community represents.

The degree of risk, obviously, is determined by the number and extent of fires, in comparison to similar data obtained from a thousand similar communities. The town with poor fire protection thus pays twice-in property damage and the destruction of productive enterprise, and in insurance rates.

Are your town's water facilities adequate for any protential emergency? Is there an efficient alarm system in operation? Is the department well trained and disciplined, under an experienced fire chief? And perhaps most important of all-is the fire fighting apparatus the product of one of the three standard makers? Is it the kind of apparatus that time and experience has proven to be of the higheet possible quality?

If the answer to those questions is Yes, your town is well protected against fire.

If it is No, your life and your property are in danger, and it is time for a change.

Stomach And Kidney Troubles Relieved

Miss Lucy Carter, McVeigh, Ky., says: "I had suffered from stomach, kidney and bladder troubles for four years.

Every time I ate I would smother from blated stomach. I was weak and could scarcely sleep. After taking a few bottles of Scalf's Indian River Tonic all my troubles are gone.

"My seven year old son suffered from kidney troubles too, he had no control over his kidney action at night. I gave him Indian River Tonic and he is no longer troubled from kidney disorder.

Two Decades of School Contests

Nineteen years ago eight boys and girls engaged in a series of three debates and called the winners state champions. Next year track and field games were added. Shortly began a contest in public reading, later divided into boy's and girl's sections in order to give the boy's a chance.

Public speaking, also divided, was introduced, and verse and short story contest started.

In 1924 an anaual tennis tournament was launched, and two years later the track meet was tripled by classification of schools.

Four years ago competition in spelling began, and last year in one-act plays.

Each expansion was brought about by demand of school officals, who through their representitives, have for years conducted the Virginia High School League.

This week-end nearly 500 entries, represting 90 schools and engaging almost equally in literary and atheletic events, will assemble for the twentieth renewal of the State Final Contests, a climax of social and educational values to which the schools generally are shaping their work.

Programs of activities and results of contests may be obtained on request addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Bride Honored

Sponsored by the M. E. Church choir, a most delightful social event was given at the home of Mrs. J. E. Laningham Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Gladys Stacy, who, on Satuurday afternoon became the bride of Dr. M H. Robbins.

The spacious rooms of this beautiful home was decorated with cut flowers, with huge vases of Spirea Predominating,

The leading features of entertainment was the "mock wedding" given by the little folks, who played their roles as follows:

The "Bride" came in on the arm of her "father".

She was dressed in a long gown of real lase, with long veil, Syirea and carrying a bride's bouquet of Lillies of the valley, and pink roses. The ring was carried in a tulip.

After the ceremony, other delightful entertainment was enjoyed, including a reading given by Mrs. M. E. Flanary, of Dryden.

A delieious Ice course was served.

This was piled high with gifts for the Bride. Miss Stacy, in a happy and graceful manner opened the packages, displayed the gifts to each of the guests, heartily thanking each and everyone. She was beautifully dressed in an evening gown of medium blue crepe.

Those enjoying this delightful affair were:

Misses Gladys and Ida Stacy, Louise Barlow, Virginia and Mary McNeil, Margaret Richards, Mesdames W. D. Harr, M. H. Carder, B. P. Gibson, James Tipton, W. J. Richards, Joris Catron, W. H. Creech, J. E. Laningham, J. G. Overbay, W. R. Ellison, J. T. Laningham, E. C. Laningham, J. W. Green, of this place; M. E. Flanary, Dryden. Mrs. Luther Stewart, Dry Branch: Mrs. S. G. Hill, St. Charles, Mrs. Henderson, Bonny Blue.

The guests also included several children.

BOOK TOWN

If all New England people were Gladys Hasty Carrol's people, Eugene O'Neill would still be a poor man, the manufacture of sea-plays would still contribute to a slim livelihood, and some would call American drama the loser.

"Where" one asked one's self, after Miss Carroll has spun the New England world before one from winter to winter, "where is the seduction, the murder, incest, and strife? What has become of the stern folks of Robert Frost with their pentup souls? Have we had another mythe foisted upon us like that of the Southern Colonel?" Miss Carroll makes us wonder. She brings us peace, beauty and, some will odd, charm.

She shows us, perhaps, the reflections is an unruffled dool of the turbulent river where O'Neill waters his horses. Like old James Thomson, she has felt the urge to trace nature's cycle, and like him, unfortunately she comes to border upon rather dull objectivity.

The slow growth of her story is often quite hidden under New England verdure.

This is the gentlest book I've read in years. Although the author shows the realists' influence, she deserts them in applying the pruning hock to all that mothers of twenty years ago were supposed not to have been told. In the divergence from smut lately noticed. "As the Earth Turns" will prance along foremost. It contains not one crime, swearing scene, brawl, act of licentiousness, or phychoanalsis of young-man-beholding - young woman. If Sunday schools get wind of it best sellers may show over a newcomer. It will set a new high level in decency.

The fact that, with such commendable attributes, it connot be called a really good novel is to be regretted. In a qualification of this I must confess to disapointment with the work as a whole. Here, at last, I thought, was a book without tricks and pleasant artifice to lure its reader onward. But the triumph didn't entirely come off.

Where the tricks were weeded out nothing was supplanted for the reader's appetite. Miss Carroll may strike home with her type of work some day but "As the Earth Turns" is too leisurely, too lacking in force and compression to move along shorn and unempellished.

If you asked the average man what happend in his family during the past year he would probably say, "Nothing much." So it is with the story of "As the Earth Turns", the chronicle of one year in the family of Mark Shaw, New England farmer. A son married. A son killed in a plane. A son achives success out in the world. A daughter-in-law contemplats divorce and changes her mind. Another daughter-in-law bears a grandchild. A faithful daughter, woman of all work, falls in love with a Polak neighbor who plays the violin and has beautiful eyes. Winter changes to spring, spring to summer, summer to fall, fall to winter. Mark Shaw's farm and the farms of his two nearby sons yield crops and bury themselves under whiteness until the "sand eats up the snow again" One gets the impression that the process will continue endlessly; that when Mark Shaw is put under ground, other Mark Shaws with heavy shoulders and kindly eyes will p tiently take his place and infinitum.

Miss Carroll writes with obvious familiarity of her place and people. Perhaps this very familiarity, in a way, makes more difficult her tasks. She probably feels the dynamic charm of these people's lives so strongly as to forget that, from the perspective of one unfamiliar with them, they need a bit of touching up to make them look perfectly naturally—like characters on the stage chiefly lacking in the panorama she unfolds, I believe, are those highlights which would effectively serve to give the book dramatic unity. This is doubtly applicable to characterization, which is finely done in a too conservative way. The writing is crisp and unpretentious. It was probably done slowly and with feeling. There will be a certain leisure type of reader for whom it will be a thing of beauty and a joy for many hour. To me it was occasionally the former.

Mode L. Allen

Mode L. Allen was born December 25, 1889 near Jonesville, and spent practically all his life near the scenes of his childhood. He grew up with the children of his community and reached the years of mature manhood where he was called to render service to his country in the name of humanity in the great world strife. He rendered efficient service as a private soldier on the plains of France and in the forest of Argonne. When he came out-of the war his nervous system had been shattered and his health impaired by the effects of having been gassed in the war.

He never received from these effects although his state of health was improved. On October 31, 1910 be was married to Ida Hines. Into their home came four children. Three boys and one girl to brighten their lives. Three years ago his health began to decline and his nervous disorders became more serious.

A few weeks ago he was afflicted more seriously until the end came February 16, 1933. He was a good soldier, a patriotic citizen and a good neighbor who never meddled in the affairs of others. He was very much devoted to his wife and children, all of whom survive him. He also is survived by his father one brother and five sisters. He was a member of the American Legion and was buried on Wallens Ridge near his birth place.

A few days before his death he made a profession of faith in christ and seemed to be very happy during his last days.

WESTON SHORTAGE SETTLED

A compromise settlement of $100,000 has been reached in connection with the alleged $113,441 49 shortage of J. M. Weston, former treasurer of Lee county.

An agreed judgement for $100,000. plus court costs, was entered in Lee circuit court Friday against the Maryland Casuality Co.

The sum is to be paid to the county on or before June 2, 1933. The Maryland Casuality Co., was surety for Weston in the sum of $158,000 while he was treasurer.

The shortage in the treasure's office was discovered by state auditors on May 17, 1930. A short time later, after Weston refused to resign at the requests of Gov. John G. Pollard, the governor attempted to remove him and appoint Charles Fugate in his stead. The Virginia supreme court, when the action was appealed, denied the right of the governor to remove Weston and he retained office until his term was completed in 1931.

Representing Weston and the Maryland Casualty Co., in the latest proceedings were Hunter and Willis of Roanoke, Judge Skeen of Clintwood, and W. L. Davidson of Jonesville. Representing the commonwealth and the magisterial districts were Robert B. Ely, commonwealth attorney; Pennington and Pennington, J. C. Noel, and George P. Cirdlin.

LEE COUNTY CITIZEN DIES

Rose Hill—John Rosenbaum, 68, a resident of Lee county all of his life, died at his home near Pleasant View of heart trouble a few minutes after midnight Friday morning. Mr. Rosenbaum was a leading citizen of his community and well known in this section.

He is survived by three sons: J. A. Rosenbaum of Jonesville, Fred and Emine, of Rose Hill, one daughter, Mrs. Bob King, of Rose Hill, and one sister, Mrs Rebecca Speak, of Grandby, Missouri.

Funeral services were held Saturday at Speaks Chapel, at one o'clock.

Rev. Clark pastor at Speaks Chapel conducted the services, assistad by Rev. D. T. Jones, pastor of the Friendship Baptist Church, of Jonesville.

Mary: "I saw a man kissing you at the back door last night. Was it the postman or the policeman?"

Maid: "Was it before seven o'clock or after?"

TWO DROWN IN WRECK WED.

Two drowned and a third had a narrow escape from death Wednesday when a Ford sedan left the highway and turned upside down in the swollen waters of Powell's River near East Stone Gap. The victims were Henry Drugger, 29, of Stony Creek, Tenn., and Cora Clawson, 16, of Elizabethton, Tenn. Mrs. Tommy Brummatt, of Velley Forge, Tenn., escaped drowning by jumping through a raised window of the ar cand swam down the stream fully fifty yards where she grabbed a limb and finally pulled herself to safety on the river bank.

Two physicians from Big Stone Gap, Dr. R. S. Kyle and Dr. J. A. Gilmer, were immediately called to the place to render first aid treatment, but in a short while they pronounced both the man and girl dead. However first aid methods were resorted to for several hours in an effort to revive the victims. Mrs. Brummett suffered a deep cut on one of her lower limbs, requiring several stitches by a physician, and was removed to the home of Mrs. Rebecca Bledsoe at East Stone Gap. In the meantime trained first aid men, John Ray and his son, Johnny, Jr., with the help of others, continued artifical respiration on the young girl, but to no avail. Both the man and girl were caught in the car when it turned over into about eight feet of water. Those who tried rescue them were helpless until a wrecker was called to remove the car from the swollen stream.

According to a statement made by Mrs. Brummett, who so narrowly escdeath in the wild plunge of the car, the party of three were enroute home after a motor trip to Norton. Drugger was driving the car and in her opinion he was intoxicated as he had purchased a pint of whiskey and drank a portion of it shortly after leaving Norton. However, she claims he did not show any signs of intoxication previous to that. They had decided to return home via the Wildcat Valley after being told that was the nearest route to their homes. The accident happened on a very short curve at what is known as the Wheeler place. The car pluged over a bank about twenty feet high at a point where a short bridge of the Southern Railway spans the stream. According to a statement from people residing in that locality the car was proceeding at a rapid rate when it went over the bank.

Judge Hood and Matt Phillips, of East Stone Gap, were among the first to reach the place after the car was seen to turn over. They saw Mrs. Brummett jumped from the car and float down the stream. In answer to screams they quickley crossed the railroad track and assisted her to the river bank. But when they returned to the car they were helpless in an effort to effect a rescue and immediately summoned aid,

In explaining their visit to this section Mrs. Brummett sais all three had planned a trip to North Carolina but a storm on the previous night had damaged the road on their proposed route to such an extent that they changed their plans and motored to Abingdon, Norton and Big Stone Gap.

Efforts to revive the Clawson girl were continued until eight o'clock Wednesday nearly four hours after the accident.

An ambulance from Kingsport arrived on the scene about that time and the bodies were removed to their homes in Tennessee.

News of the tragedy quickly spread and within a short time several hundred people were on the scene.

Lions Club Meet at Legion Cabin

As a result of the splendid offer of the local American Legion Post the Pennington Gap, Lions Club held their regular meeting Thursday, May 11th, at the beautiful new Cabin near Nigger Head Rock. This building is splendidly adapted for the club meeting there in the future. A vote of appreciation was tenderad the local Legion for their public spirited offer.

Thirty members were present. Music was furnished by Hazen Witt and Mrs. S. W. Black.

Another feature was the songs by Rev. Wall of Cookeville, Tenn., accompanied by Mrs. Wall at the piano D. C. McCall banker of Norton was guest speaker giving a mast interesting talk on finance.

The meal was served by the Ladies Missionary Society of the local Baptist Church, and testimonials can be secured from the members vouching for the splendid meal.

The Ladies of the Christion Church will serve the meal for the meeting to be held Thursday May 25.

G. Ransom Gilley Dies At Dryden

George Ransom Gilley, aged 79 years, a prominent farmer of Lee county, died at his home in Dryden early last Sunday morning following a stroke of paralysis the previous Tuesday.

The stroke left him in an unconsious condition and he remained so until Sunday morning at 1:40 o'clock.

Mr. Gilley had been a resident of Dryden for twenty-eight years. but he was born and reared in the vicinity of Big Stone Gap.

For several years he has been actively engaged in farming and cattle raising at Dryden and was well known through both counties. Although he had been complaining about ill health for several months Mr. Gilley was still going about his farm when stricken down.

Funeral services were conducted at the home Monday afternoon at three o'clock by Rev. Parker, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, in which the deceased had held membership for many years. Quite a number of friends from Wise county attended the service. Burial was made in the Jessee cemetery.

The deceased is survived by a wife who was formely Miss Mary Ann Willis, a sister of J. M. Willis, of Big Stone Gap. The following sons and daughters also survive: H. L. and G. C. Gilly, of Norton; Mrs. C. B. Herndon, of Pennington Gap. Mrs. Grover Orr, of Dryden.

Blue Mold On Tobacco Beds

Blue Mold is reported from two Middle Tennessee counties and from Sullivan county near Bristol. This makes all tobacco growers in Lee nervous. It is likely to appear in Lee county.

The county agent, Koger, quoting recommendation from the Department, suggests that 1st. beds be kept dry by taking canvas off and allowing sun on them. 2nd by rushing plants with nitrate or other stimulants. 3rd. Get plants set out in the fields as soon as possible.

Report all indications of this fugus. No spray has been very successful to date. This disease look much like a mildew growth on the leaves.

Shower For Bride

Mrs. J. E. Laningham and Mrs. E. C. Laningham were joint hostesses to a reception given at the latters home Saturday afternoon, May 13, in honor of Mrs. Paul Laningham Overbay, who, until her marriage on May 8th, was Miss Sue Bruce, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Bruce.

The entire lower floor of the Laningham home was given over to the many guests. The rooms were beautifully decorated with spring flowers, the bridal colors of green and white predominating.

After being presented to the receiving line, which consisted of Mrs. J. E. Laningham, Mrs. J. G. Overbay and Mrs. J. T. Laningham, and then to the bride, the guests were ushered to the sun porch where they were served to punch, with Miss Thyra Herndon presiding at the bowl.

The entertainment consisted mainly of music, with Miss Anna Price Gibson at the piano and Hazen Witt, Jr., as violinist. Miss Martha Gibson sang a number of vocal selections, and Mrs. M. E. Flanary gave a musical reading.

The little folks, too, added to the entertainment with their "make believe" wedding. An improvised altar was prepared of flowers, and above this burned tapers of white and green. As Mr. Witt and Miss Gibson softly played, Miss Virginia Lee Stacy, dressed in real bridal attire, stood at this altar and became the "bride of Joseph Overbay, with John Wynn Laningham officiating. Other members of the "bridal party" were as follows: Billy Laningham, best man; Billie Gibson, of Knoxville, Tenn., and Mary Ann Laningham, brides maids; Lillian Cranston Laningham, maid of honor; James Alice Laningham, flower girls; Jimmy Tom Laningham, ring bearer. Lillian Laningham and Virginia Stacy also did some delightful fetes in tap dancing.

The guests added a bit of usefulness to the occasion by making a "yo-yo" pillow for the bride. Each lady was handed a needle, thread, thimble and some pieces of soft material in delicate shapes. When "going home time" came round, there were enough to spare of the little rings to make a pillow.

For refreshments a delicious Ice Course was served, the squares of Angel Food cake being decorated with designs of wedding bells. The flavors were shoulder boquets of delicate flowers, blended with maiden hair fern.

The door bell rang and two "Messenger Boys," who were John Wynn Laningham and Joseph Overbay, announced that they had an express package for Mrs. Paul Overbay.

This package consisted of a shower of beautiful and useful wedding gifts. Mrs. Overbay received them gracefully, looking radiantly happy and beautiful in a gown of delicate pink.

The invited guests to this delightful event were:

From town: Misses Thyra Herndon, Martha Gibson, Maude Fletcher, Reba Tritt, Anna Price Gibson, Blanche Tiller, Edith Sheets, Marietta Ellison, Ruth Quinley, Mary Ella Gibson, Verlie Tiller, Lorene and Alene Kelly. Eloise Beeler, Ferol Parsons, Ruth Cecil, Ida Stacy, Golden Kelly, Rose David, Louise Barlow, Inez Rogers, Mary Bolin, Patty Elison, Vivian Hawks; Mesdames: Mat Mink, Paul Overbay, W. H. Bruce, L. T. Stewart, Sarah B. Black, S. G. Anderson, Robert Housley, M. H. Carder, J. Chinsky, J. E. Laningham and E. C. Laningham and George Reep.

From out of town: Misses Saluda Sewell and Alice Smith, of Jonesville; Jean Hill, of St. Charles; Mrs. S. G. Hill and Mrs. G. C. Tomlinson, of St. Charles; Mrs. S. H. Rivers, of Calvin; Mrs. M. Flanary, of Dryden and Mrs. Jack Flanary, of Jonesville.

The Book Sampler

Lovers of Swinburne and Browning might agree that this is so, through the moderns may find beauty in his eccentric course

Be that it may, William Faulkner is to be found among that crew with his "A Green Bough". Not quite so frankly morbid as his prose, yet it contains a bit of Faulknerian cheer:

"Still swings the murderer, bent of knees In a slightly strained repose".

And, of course, it seems beyond Mr. Faulkner's power to deal with the nightingale and the beauty of the rose without comments upon droppings.

Ezra Pond's "Drafts of XXX Cantos" — written between opinionated letters to the land of his birth and aversion—demonstrates again his unequalled rythm, music, and erudition

Through some of D. H. Lawrence's "L st Poems" are anything but verse and no doubt were not intended for such, many of them give evidence of supreme calm and faith. Ill-starred Hart Crane's collection includes many important poems, all of them overshadowed by "A Bridge White Buildings", for which he will be remembered.

On Inspiration's other wing sits a real lyricist who has come out of the South: Lawrence Lee, now instructing at the University of Virginia. His book of verse, "Summer Goes On", sings the praises of the "slow green counties of the South", and of his beloved Albemarle. Among the shorter pieces stands out "Helen's Three Danghters", graceful. with a rythm that reccils upon itself after the manner of the ebb and flown of the "Barcarolle" from the "Tales of Hoffman". In addition to the beauty of his songs, Mr. Lee is to be congratulated for not having run away with the idea that to ba a poet one must be obscure.

Henry Ford

May 9, 1933

A great thing has occurred amongst us. We have made a complete turn-around, and at last America's face is toward the future.

Three years---1929 to 1932---we Americans looked backward. All our old financial and political machinery was geared to pull us out of the depression by the same door through which we entered. We thought it simply a case of going back the way we came. It failed. We now realize that the way out is forward---through it.

Thanks for that belongs to President Roosevelt. Inauguration Day he turned the Ship of State around. Having observed the failure of sincere efforts to haul us back the way we came, he designed a new method---new political and financial machinery---to pull us out the way we are going---forward. He is clearing international obstacles out of the way; he does not stand in awe of tariffs. The people begin to feel that he does not take advice from the "interests"; that he has courage and loyalty to work for one supreme interest only---the welfare of the American people. That is a big achievement for two months in office.

And now we all look to what is coming; we grow less and less concerned with what is behind. We are looking for a hand-hold on the haul rope. Every man wants to do what he can, and all he can.

The best thing I can do for the Country is to create industry by building good motor cars. If I knew anything better to do, I would do it. Industry must be my contribution. Motor cars must face ahead to the future, like everything else. They are so much a part of the Nation's daily life that if they lag behind they hold the Country back.

Commission Refuse L. & N. Rates

The Interstate Commerce Commission Thursday refused to permit the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company to establish lower rates on coal from Eastern Kentucky and Tennessee mines to North Carolina and South Carolina and a few destinations in Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida.

The company sought to establish rates through its new cut-off from Chevrolet, Ky., to Hagans, Va., from its Cumberland Valley division from Hagans to Norton, over the line on the Interstate Railroad Company from Norton to Miller Yard, Virginia, and the lines of the Carolina, Clinchfield and Ohio that would be approximately the same as like traffic to the same destinations from various Virginia, West Virginia and Tennessee groups.

The rates represented reductions ranging from 22 to 34 cents per net ton. Similiar rates were not proposed to stations on the Southern Railway because that carrier declined to join in their establishment.

The commission in its opinion said that division 5 has heretofore held that rates must be maintained that would not be preferential to any particular district and that in the present instance the commission will follow that precedent.

The effort to reduce the rates was made in the hope of increasing business of mines in the Harlan and Bell County districts of Kentucky. There is normally a difference of around 23 cents a ton between the rates from these two districts and rates from the Virginia, West Virginia and Tennessee districts.

A NEW DEAL FOR LEE COUNTY

ATTENTION CITIZENS

We Earnestly Call Your Attention To The Following:

In a desperate last minute effort to unduly influence our Lee County Citizens, a certain group at our County Seat have been making absurd promises.

If all the roads should be built that have been promised, Lee County would be a veritable network of modern highways and would probably have the best Highway system in the world.

The thinking citizen, realizing that this group desires to remain intrenched in power to further carry on in the same high-handed mismanaging manner, will take these sudden promises for exactly their worth---NOTHING.

This County has existed on broken promises for many years. Lets change this condition. You have the chance to aid in this reform movement:

VOTE FOR A COURT HOUSE AT PENNINGTON GAP.

In face of the fact that over 3,000 of our Lee County Citizens had signed a petition asking the Judge that Lee County Voters be allowed to decide on the Court House Question our elected Board of Supervisors hastened with unseemly speed to let a contract before the people of our County had a chance to express themselves at the Polls on this vital question.

On the day that the Board of Supervisors were sitting in "solemn state" receiving bids, a notice was served on them before a contract was signed with the builder, informing the Board that a petition was being circulated asking for a vote on the matter.

But this notice was not even read before this session. The reader can draw his or her own conclusion as to the ethics of this procedure.

This high-handed attitude by two or three Elected men has aroused the indignation of our citizenry, who are beginning to realize that an Oligarchy in Lee County, rule by a few Privileged ones, is not a representative form of government and that this must STOP. It is contrary to the Fundemental principles of American Democracy.

LETS REMEMBER THE BROKEN PROMISES OF THE PAST

LETS WORK FOR THE INTEREST OF LEE COUNTY

A vote for the removal of the County Seat will insure a New Deal for Lee County and will materially aid in ushering in a new era of prosperity and harmony in our County.

DIZZINESS

relieved by Black-Draught

"I decided to take Thedford's Black-Draught, as I had been having bilious spells," writes Mr. Chas. E. Stevens, of Columbus, Ind. "When I get bilious, I feel sleepy and tired and do not feel like doing my work. I get awfully dizzy. I know then that I had better take something. After I found how good Black-Draught is, that is what I have used. I guess it rids me of the bile, for I feel better—don't feel like I am dropping off to sleep every time I sit down. Moderized County Government

The State Auditor reports shortages of over a million dollars in the accounts of fifty county officials during a single year, and bluntly states that most of the shortages were due to misapporiation of funds. As one remedy he proposed a local government commission set up by the commonwealth to exercise sone supervision over county affairs.

In what has become a nation-wide movement for governmental reform, Virginia voters have the advantage of law which give them complete power over the form of local government. Already Albemarle county by a two to-one vote has adopted the county executive form, and Princess Anne county votes on the change on June 29.

In Northampton and Henrico petitions signed by the required ten per cent of the voters will enable the courts to call special elections.

In Orange, Louisa, Fluvanna, Rappahannock group of citizens are taking the first step toward organizing to effect reforms.

Speakers and informational literature are offered to county groups throughout the state in a campaign of education endorsed by Governor Pollard. Applications should be made to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

1000 Free Trips to World Fair

More than 1,000 free trips to the Chicago World's Fair will be awarded to the Chevrolet field organization by the company this summer on the basis of meritorious sales work during May and June, H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager announced Saturday,

The trips will include two days and two nights in Chicago and transportation both ways, Mr Klinger said. Awards will go to retail salesmen making the best sales record against the quota established for them during the two months ending June 30, he explained. Each zone in the company's field set-up has been alloted a definite number of free awards, and the ranking members of the selling organization in that zone will win the Chicago trips.

The company had a dual motive in offering the awards, Mr. Klingler said: First, to give the field men a worth-while incentive to reach their quotas by offering as prizes the world's premier attraction of the summer, and second, to give the winners an opportunity, while at Chicago, to see the assembly plant which Chevrolet will operate in the special General Motors building on the exposition grounds.

Wells To Picture Zion and Bryce

Down in south central Utah, not many miles north of Arizona's picturesque painted desert country, the summer tourist will find two canyons, Zion and Bryce, which have been so strangely carved by nature that it seams almost possible that some giganic prehictoric human sculptor was responsible for them.

In facts, many of the stones or earthen figures do look like men at a distance, says Carveth Well, famed explorer, who will devote his regular Wednesday night Continental Oil Company radio program on May 24 to a description of these two Utah wonderlands.

As a result of the adoption of daylight saving time in eastern broadcasting centers, the Conoco program is now being heard one hour earlier than usual in all but one of the 20 N. B. C. cities from which the program is put on the air. The exception is Chicago, which is continuing at the usual time.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station W. M. A. Q. Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

A. W. Wagner Succumbs At St Charles

A. W. Wagner, 57, president of the Virginia Lee Company, prominent in coal circles of Lee and Wise counties for the last twenty years, died at his home at Ft. Charles Sunday after an illness of 18 months. His condition had been critical for the last several weeks.

Two sisters of Chicago, and two brothers, Fred W. Wagner, of Chicago, and Hilmar Wagner, of California, also survive.

Born in Tromso, Norway, Mr. Wagner came to America with his parents when he was six years old. The family settled in Chicago.

He was first employed with the Illinois Central railroad, and because of his attitude and thoroughness quickly won promotion and advanced rapidly in that line of work.

Later he became associated with the late A. M. Barr, of Charlottesville, Va., in heavy railroad construction work, and while with Mr. Barr, came to Lee county in 1913 as manager of the Virginia Lee properties in the St. Charles coal field.

During the last twenty years, Mr. Wagner has been active in the political, civic, and social affairs of Lee and Wise counties.

The funeral services were held at his home at St. Charles Tuesday, the body was taken to Chicago for interment.

Colorado Park Still Thrills Says Wells

Whether your inclinations lean toward the secluded highlands which Enos Mills made famous, or the gay resort life that has thrilled so many newcomers, Rocky Mountain National Park in north central Colorado is bound to please, says Carveth Wells, Continental Oil Company radio explorer.

Wells, who has journeyed into many strange parts of the world, is scheduled to present an intimate description of Colorado's most famous playground Wednesday night, May 31, as a part of Conoco's regular weekly broadcast. He will include innumerable pictures of the park, ranging from the gayeties of Estes Park village to the highborn sheep of the gayeties of Estes Park village to the highborn sheep of the glacier regions.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station WMAQ Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

The minister in a little church that used natural gas for illumination announced his text in solemn tones: "Yea, the light of the wicked shall be put out!"

Immediately the church was plunged in total darkness, due to a failure in the supply.

"Brethaen," said the minister, with scarcely a moment's pause, "in view of the sudden and startling fulfillment of this prophecy, we will spend a few minutes in silent prayer for the gas company."

Vote For the Future

Vote to Save Money For Lee Co.

A Message To All Lee Countians

The Past

In 1776 our forefathers declared that taxation without representation was unjust, tyrannical and contrary to the unalienable rights with which every human being is born into this world; Patrick Henry uttered his famous declaration, "Give me liberty or give me death," which has been lauded to every school child in all our fair land, and right so; our Contentil Congress issued a clarion call to arms and our forefathers fought, bled, froze, starved and died under the leadership of the immortal Washington for the great principles of justice, liberty, freedom and democracy, that we, their descendants might enjoy those great American principles, which today we hold so sacred. Every war since the Revolution has been fought in defense of one or another of those principles and thousands, yes, millions, of the flowers of our manhood have perished that these principles might remain and that we, today, might enjoy a land of the free and the home of the brave under a government, of the people, for the people and by the people. Today we look about us at our buddies of the hectic days of 1917 and 18, and think of the hardships, sufferings and privations that those of us still have sound minds and bodies have experienced, we see those who are mained, crippled and diseased for life, and we remember those who rest under the little wooden crosses on the battlefields of the foreign countries, and we know that our buddies fought, suffered, bled and died that tyranny, autocracy and bigotry might perish and the ideals of democracy might live.

The Present

On February 18, 1933, Lee County Court House at Jonesville, Virginia, was destroyed by fire, (origin unknown). It then, therefore, became the evident, emminent and immediate duty of those who have been elected by a majority of the voters of Lee County to set in motion the machinery for the erection of a new court house for Lee County, which they proceeded to do in almost, the regular order of things. In the meantime various citizens of Pennington Gap were approached by citizens from various sections of Lee County, including some from Jonesville, in regard to the proposition of moving the County Seat to Pennington Gap. After considerable streetcorner discussion with these good citizens, a meeting of the citizens of Pennington Gap and surrounding territory was called to discuss the possibility, and advisability of such a move. After a great deal of discussion and a number of meetings it was decided to circulate a petition among the citizens of Lee County to determine their feeling about the matter. The petition was circulated and the Board of Supervisors was informally notified of this movement.

Not withstanding they went ahead with preparations for letting a contract to have the courthouse rebuilt at Jonesville and on April 26, 1933, did let such a contract, but not before a formal and legal notice had been served on the Chairman of said board by a Deputy Sheriff of the effect that this petition would be presented to the Court of Lee County on May 1st, 1933. with the required number of legal voters of the county petitioning the court for an election to allow the citizens of Lee County to express by way of the ballot their wishes concerning the location of the county seat. The petition was presented to the court on May 1st, 1933. with 3,086 signatures affixed thereto. Notwithstanding this fact on the self same day this Our Board of Supervisors started work on this court house at Jonesville, Virginia. On May 3rd, 1933, a formal order was issued by the Court called an election to be held on June 12, 1933, for the purpose of determining where the county seat of Lee County would be located. In the fact of this fact Our Board of Supervisors continued to prepare the grounds at Jonesville for the building of the new courthouse, notwithstanding the fact that this Board is empowered to hold up this work for a reasonable period of time without any cost to the county whatever, and notwithstanding the fact that Our Board of Supervisors had ten days in which to consider bids on this proposition and the right to reject any and all bids, the contract was let in less than two hours after the legal notice was served on the Chairman of said Board by a Deputy Sheriff of our county. And, Fellow Citizens, this is not all.

Our Board of Supervisors are aided, assisted and abetted and backed legally, materially and morally by at least two other elected officers of our county for whom a majority of you cast your vote in good faith in November, 1931, and who pledged themselves in all sincerity to do their utmost for the citizens of this fair county and the principles of American democracy, This, in the face of the fact that our county is already over burdened with taxation, only $7.40 in the county funds, when the contract was let with which to build a courthouse and no provisions made for more. (This statement can be verified at the office of the Treasurer of Lee County). Where do you think this money is coming from?

The Board of Supervisors must provide it. Who pays? You and I. You have been lead to believe that there was to be no pay day unless this court house was moved to Pennington Gap. In some mysterious way the courthouse would be paid for without extra taxation citizens we all know that this is a mistake. We all know that our teachers are not paid, many other officers of the county are not paid, many bill of various kinds are not paid, the county is head over heels in debt and we taxpayers must pay and pay and continue to pay so long as the county's affairs are run in such an unbusiness-like manner. Since we are on the subject of money, let's get a few figures. You were told that a contract had been left for building the courthouse at Jonesville for the sum of $44,825.00 while the people of Pennington Gap have asked for $60,000.00 with which to build it. Good, that is fine if it were only the whole story. But how sadly it lacks the complete fact. The $44,825.00 contract is for the erection of the naked walls, no finishing, no walks, no steps, no terracing, no painting, no plumbing and heating, no furniture and the county itself must excavate and prepare the ground for starting the foundation. The plumbing and heating contract calls for an expenditure of rome $5,200.00. Another undetermined amount is to be spent on repairing the county jail, which we understand, has been condemned for many years, and which is far to small to accomodate the present population; another contract calls for an outlay of $2,500.00 to the architect, with full powers given to him to specify what make, brand aud manufacture, every piece of material going in this structure shall be. The state law require that the minimum amount of real state on which a courthouse may be erected must be one acre.

The present site does not contain anything like that amount. Have you been told where the balance of the land is coming from and what it will cost? And too, have been told that the architect has informed the Board of Supervisors that they must have a new and adequate sewer system? Wonder who yays for that? The Pennington Gap system cost $25,000.00. A certain contractor, who has erected more buildings in Lee County than any other man, and who is familar with the blueprints, specifications and contracts for the new court house as estimated the cost under the present arrangements of erecting this courthouse at Jonesville to run at least $75,000.00, not including the extra land and sewer system. The contract, who has the $44,825.00 contract has said that he could erect the same part of the building at Pennington Gap for at least $3,500 less than at Jonesville. People, these are facts to which you can be cited. Go to the Clerks office and examine the records there, talk to the men who know something about building and see if these are not facts. You would not plunge into such a proposition in such a manner if you were erecting a building of your own, neither would the men who are doing this if they were spending their own money; but, men and women, this is taxpayer's money and there is plenty more where that came from.

They look down from their high and mighty perch with a "Haw, Haw, Haw", watch the little Pigmies squirm. We know they want a change, but they will never get it. We'll have a courthouse built at Jonesville before they can have an election. They only furnish the money, poor souls, we spend it." Is this what our forefathers fought for? Are those the principles our buddies of the World's War faced a flaming hell for? Is that what you cast your ballot for in 1931? Is that what you are going to cast your ballot for June 12, 1933? No, ten thousand times No. Was ever such high-hand bigotry forced upon a people since Nero fiddled while Rome burned? was ever in the history of the world such disregard to human rights practiced upon a free people? Never since the Stars and Stripes first waved over the Land of the free and the home of the brave, has such outragous and utter disregard for the principles of liberty, freedom, justice and democracy been attempted.

But, Ladies and Gentlemen, so long as you worship the "Little Gods" you must obey their will. If you would have the crumbs that falls from their table you must come before them with fear and trembling with much penance and supplication beg for your humble share.

Thousands Want A Change

Just here let us call your attention to hundreds of men and women we encountred while circulating this petition, who said "Sure, Pennington Gap is the logical place for the county seat, that's just where it ought to be, but you know I am trying (or my wife's nephew or someone else among the family relations is trying) for this post office or that rural route and you know if I sign this petition they might work against me."

No questions were necessary to know who they were. Everyone knew.

Since when has the qualifications for holding a job under the Civil Service Commission of the U. S. entailed the pampering of certain indiduals? These jobs are pased on competitive examinations, yet, we are assured they cannot be obtained if they are crosed in any manner. We found numbers of our school teachers of the same mind, who were afraid to sign because they were afraid they would never get another job teaching in Lee County if they found it out.

Our school teacher's fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and cousins were afraid to say a word in regard to the removal of the courthouse for fear Johnny or Mollie would be knocked out of his or her job of school teaching. Whence came this fear if not threats. Since when have our teachers and their famiiies had to deprive themselves of the most sacred rights of citizenship, free speech and a free voice in the affairs of their community, in order that they might teach in our schools? When has it become necessary to dance to the music of the powers that be in order to qualify as a teacher to our future men and women? People, this sounds absurb, rediculous, preposterous, outrageous and difficult to believe, yet, if it is not true a number of our teachers think it is. If this be true, our county has come to a pretty pass when the teachers of our boys and girls must reduce themselves to a practical state of vassol slavery to hold their jobs.

Roads

And roads, Oh, why mention roads? Has not our friends at Jonesville practically settled the road problem of Lee County?

That is by promises. How many state roads have you been promised? Old Lady Rumor has it that practicall ever man in the county has been promised, at least, a state road to his back barn and a federal highway in his front yard, that is, of course, if he votes to keep the courthouse at Jonesville and help support such unadterated bigotry as has been, and is being practiced. Of course we know this rumor is an exaggerating but it really has a foundation in fact, heartily wish it were possible to have such a road system in the near future. How many trucks full of empty promises do you still have around the place? How many school houses, jobs, and other things do you still have in your hope chest? People, to begin with, Pennington Gap has no roads to swap votes.

But, get this, Pennington Gap has been in the thick of the fight for roads in Lee County for a number of years and will continue to fight for roads in Lee County no matter where the courthouse is built. We are fighting for the roads that will be the most benefit for the most people of Lee County. There is no people on earth who favors good roads any more or has worked and harder to get them for Lee County than the people of Pennington Gap. They have joined forces with the People of Jonesville on several occasions to get a road that Jonesville wanted, but never have they had the support of Jonesville on any road project started by themselves. Contrary to the general belief, Pennington Gap joined with Jonesville is asking for a road to Blackwater and the Tennessee line, under the agreement that Jonesville would help in obtaining a road to the Harlan County, Kentucky line. What happened? The road to the Tennessee line was secured, opening our markets to the farmers of Tennessee, enabling them to put farm produce on our markets from one to three weeks earlier than our farmers, and compelling our farmers to sell at much lower prices. The people of Jonesville absolutely and positively did not support the movement for the road to Harlan, with the result that while thousands of bushels of our farm products rot on the farm. 60,000 people in Harlan County are begging for them and have no way to them. Yes, we opened our markets to the farmer of Tennessee, but refused to open the markets of Kentucky to our own farmers, all because Pennington Gap got opposition where they have been promised support. The citizens of Pennington Gap have worked diligently for at least ten years, traveled thousands of miles and spent hundreds of dollars trying to open this wonderful market to the farmers of Lee County, and they will continue to do so until the road to Harlan County, Kentucky, is a finished project.

Pennington has, for a number of years, requested the rebuilding of Federal Highway No. 411 thru Lee County and has worked on a great number of other road projects to numerous to mention. If its roads we are for them 100 per cent but we realize as you, too, must that we cannot have them both at once.

Let us unite on the most important ones first and work on until our highway system is second to none in the U. S. We have an active committee of the citizens of our town who are working continual for more and better roads in Lee County. Please give us your help , whether the courthouse is built at Jonesville or Pennington, we are still working for our interest. We are not altogether unselfish in this, because, we realize that your interest is our interest.

An Unselfish Attitude

Pennington Gap is not asking for the courthouse for itself alone but for the benefit of the citizens of Lee County as a whole. Pennington Gap is the largest town in Lee County, and being situated in the center of the population of the county, in the center of the industries of the county, in the mouth of the coal mines and in the front yard of the farming section, and on the junction of the L&N and Southern Railroads, in the gateway to Harlan County, Kentucky, with a pure water supply and excellent sewer system and with a citizenship that believes in progress, it is the only town in the county that has any chance to become worthy of the capital of our county. We want you to know we do not take credit fot the town's location. It was here when we came. But, since we have such a location, we do think the people of the County should take advantage of it. Being near the coal mines many dollars per year can be saved on the haul bill of coal to the county seat alone. Being near the center of the population the territory surrounding it furnishes more litigation, more jailbirds and more witnesses than other parts of the county. This item alone would mean the saving of hundreds of dollars to the taxpayers of Lee County milage for witnesses, jurymen and arresting officers taking prisoners to jail. Please remember this is not a question of a small mistake which can be corrected in two or four years. The decision which you render with your pallot on June 12th will very likely stand for hundreds of years. The saving of hundreds of dollars per year on these items will run into hundreds of hundreds in that time, please think and cast your ballot for the future of Lee County, for your childre and your children's children. Pennington Gap offers you the most beautiful, convenient and one of the most valuable sites in the town for your courthouse absolutely free, without one penny cost to anyone outside of Pennington Gap itself. We think that is worth considering.

Let us ask you if you have you heard one single sensible business reason why the courthouse should remain at Jonesville? The only reason we have is the greately exaggerated and entirely selfish one, that it will ruin the business people of Jonesville who have their money invested there. We say that is a greately exaggerated reason for the simple reason that Jonesville has had the courthouse for

The New Deal, Harmony and Prosperity ?

The press agent for the advocates of the removal of the courthouse to Pennington Gap promises the people of Lee county a New Deal, Harmony and Prosperity if they will vote for the removal of the courthouse on June 12th. This agent does not disclose by what means this miracle is to be wrought, neithor does he explain how a refusal to give the advocates of the retention of the courthouse at Jonesville a "square deal" by taking from them their property right without reason, thus trampling under foot the tenets of the Golden Rule, can bring about the consummation of such an event. He is strangely silent as by what legerdemain the allying of one community against another and the taking away the vested rights of one community in order to enrichen another can bring about a spirate of harmony. Neither does he inform the taxpayers of Lee county how the floating at this time of a bond issue of $60,000.00 with the attendant increase of the already intolerable tax burden can bring about an era of prosperity.

THE NEW DEAL

What is the New Deal that is proposed for Lee county? This press agent says that an oligarchy exists in county and that by voting to remove the courthouse to Pennington Gap true Democracy will be restored. He says that in order to bring about this great reform the courthouse must be moved to Pennington Gap, but he fails to explain just how the spending of at least an additional sum of $60,000.00 with a total loss of amounts by the Board of Supervisors on the original site can bring about such a reform. Such a statement would be ludicrous if it were not tragic. It is tragic because of the effort to mislead the people of Lee county, arouse their prejudices, engender bitterness and retared the progress of our county for the next quarter of a century. The opponents of removal may be found in every section of the county, even in the town of Pennington Gap. They feel that the effort to remove the courthouse from its present location is unwise and unwarranted, and that the calling of this election, with its attendant costs which must come from the poskets of our people was unjustified and indefensible. And because of the protests of this multitude of taxpayers against such an unnecessary movement, they are dubbed as enemies of the public weal, seeking to secure a strangle hold upon the machinery of government, and to undermine the fundamental principles of a representative democracy. He becames pathetic as he cries out in deep anguish at the intolerable (?) conditions under which our people labor. He speaks in breathless tones about broken promises, and complains that if all the roads should be built that have been promised a veritable network of highways would permeate every section of the county. He should know that Pennington Gap has received her due share of public highways, at times at the expense of the remainder of the county, because it and the community around it received every foot of the primary road mileage, nearly ten miles, in the last distribution under the Porter-Rhodes act, no other section of the county being considered in this distribution. Yes, there will soon be a veritable net work of splendid highways all over Lee county, and the only thing that can retard this progress is the unwise agitation now going on. To remove the courthouse from its present site would not be a "square deal" neither would it be a "fair deal".

HARMONY

It is urged that the removal of the courthouse to Pennington Gap would usher in an era of harmony and good will unexample even in the golden age of Pericles, that no discordant note would be heard; that the harp of life would be one sweet accord, and that the last cord would again be heard in the music of the speres. This is a consummation devoutly to be wished, but can it be attained by the means proposed. Can the stirring up of bitter strife between communities, and the pitting of one town against another bring about a spirit of concord? Will such an aggation that is now going on, which has already engendered a spirit of bitterness which will be manifested a quarter of a contury hence, tend to further cement the friendship of these communities? No, such a movement can only result in bitterness, estrangement, discord, strife, failure of cooperation and lack of progress for the county. This utter lack of harmony is chargeable only to those who have precipitated this unnecessary struggle, but it will be the innocent public who will have to pay.

PROSPERITY

It is urged that the removal of tht courthouse to Penningron Gap will usher in a new era of unexplained prosperity.

(1) The county now owns the present courthouse site, on which is located a modern, fireproof jail, which cost at least $30,000.00 and which will adequately serve the county for the next fifty years. If the courthouse is moved to Pennington Gap this property will be rendered worthless and a like sum will have to be expanded for a new jail, thus entailing a cost of $60,000.00, including the loss substained in the abandonment of the old jail and in the construction of a new one. Will such an inexcusable expenditure promote the prosperity of this county?

(2) The Board of supervisors have already entered into a legal contract for the erection of a new courthouse for the sum of approximately $44,000.00, and for the pluming and heating for approximately $5000 00. They are bound thereby. Even if the courthouse were moved to Pennington Gap the taxpayers of Lee county would have to pay the present contract price as well as the cost of a new courthouse at Pennington Gap. Could such a condition be considered as madam Prosperity in disguise.

(3) The Board of Supervisors have collected $28,800.00 from fire insurance on the old courthouse destroyed by fire. Under the contract with the builder he is to be paid on the estimates on the first of each month. By June 12, the day of the election, most of the $28,800 00 will have been paid out to the builder under his contract. If the courthouse is removed this huge sum will be a total less. Can this be termed Prosperity?

(4) If the courthouse is removed to Pennington Gap it will entail a bond issue in at least the sum of $60,000.00. The county already has a bond issue of approximately $60,000.00. A new bond issue would increase our already heavy tax burden. Would increased taxes at this time bring prosperity to the suffering public?

(5) The cost of material is rapidly going up, and a contract for a courthouse on the same plan as now being erected, if let within 30 days of, June 12th, would cost at least $10,000.00 more than the present contract price. Would the spending of this additional $10,000.00 for the pleasure of mere delay tend to make the taxpayers more prosperous?

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

It is alleged that the Board of Supervisors acted with unseeming haste in letting the present contract for a new courthouse. Let us see. On February 14th, the day after the fire, Judge Carter called the Board together for consideration of the immediate erection of a new courthouse. The law imposes the duty on the Board of Supervisors to provide a courthouse. Without a dissenting voice the Board voted to rebuild the courthouse on the old site. No objections were raised to this action. The Board made a tour of inspection of various courthouses in this section with a view of getting the best possible plans for a new courthouse. Various architects appeared before the Board with plans for such a structure, Finally an architect was employed and a price for his services named. No protest was raised to this action. Bids were advertised for a period of thirty days without even a rumble of opposition.

On April 26th, more than two months after the fire, these bids were opened and the lowest bid accepted by the Board. After the bid had been accepted there was served on the Board an unofficial notice that a petition was being circulated for an election on the removal of the courthouse No election was assured.

The prices of building material were mounting upward. The county was without a place in which to transact its business. Actions had to be taken, and the Board of Supervisors, composed of five of the leading citizens of the county, from every section thereof, only one of whom resided at Jonesville, signed the contract for the erection of the courthouse. There was no haste, but due deliberation at all times. If those favoring the removal of the courthouse felt that the action of the Board was improper, then they had access to the courts for relief by way of injunction or otherwise. But no effort was made for such relief, for it was admitted that the Board had acted well within the scope of legal rights. Therefore, there can be no just criticism of the Board of Supervisors.

"Insulting Words" Bring Man $10,000

E. L. Morgan, 45, ex-telegrapher at Abingdon, Wednesday was awarded a verdict of $10,000 damages from the Western Union Telegraph Company and its district manager, W. G. Sale of Richmond, by a Washington county, circuit court jury.

Morgan asked damages of $50,000, claiming that Sale, acting in his official capacity, wrote him words last February that were actionable under the "insulting word" statue. Lawyers said last night the verdict of $10,000 was the largest ever returned in the county and possible in the state in a suite under this statue.

The plaintiff claimed that Sale's letter contained insulting language concerning his handling of a sick benefit or pension claim.

The words accused him, it was claimed, of sending an unauthorized telegram in the name of Dr. A. J. Edwards of Bristol. Morgan produced as evidence the original message written on a prescription blank and signed by Dr. Edwards.

At the time of Sale's accusation, Morgan, who had been working for the company since he was eleven years old, was suspended or relieved of duty.

Defense attorneys, R. L. Pennington of Bristol and George P. Cridlin of Jonesville moved that the verdict be set aside; the motion will be argued later. Representing Morgan were H. E. Widener of Bristol and E. W. Potts and R. C. Thomas of Abingdon.

After completing the Morgan suit of Robert Blevins, by next of friends, against Robert M. Houston. The claim involves personal injuries said to have been suffered by the child, son of Jarvis Blevins, from the explosion of a dynamite cap.

Dryden Leads Both Leagues

By Virgil Q. Wacks

St. Charles — Dryden leads the pennant parade in both the Lonesome Pine and Powell Valley leagues at the present writing.

Looks like the Dryden fans will have to begin decorating a couple of windows with nice crepe paper and flowers for two silver trophies if the other clubs doesn't make some changes pretty soon.

With practically forty hits and thirty runs over the week end Dryden anchored safely and all to themselves in first place in the Lonesome Pine, and to open the new Powell Valley the Dryden boys tumbled St, Charles 8 to 0 and followed Sunday and nosed out Jonesville 4 to 5 to lead the junior loop.

Of all the popular baseball players at present, "Lefty" Hobart Scott is both of them. Managers from far and near driving in to ask his services, telephone calls, letters and what not, well I hope lefty can live through it until he starts back to Toledo, because he is getting plenty of worry and offers from those good managers that is supposed to play absolutely amateur baseball.

The Lee Smokies, after having set an endurance record in napping, seemed to have woke up Sunday and now we can expect some real baseball and a nice bunch of victories over the two approaching week ends sure would help lots in bringing the silver trophy closer home and that's my predictions for first place, four consecutives victories.

The Powell Valley boys are exercising some unusually great interest and will be all set to paddle them out this week end.

10-frame Hive with Watertown Cover

The best authorities on bees say that it is necessary to have beekeeping equipment accurate in every detail for the best results with bees. Accordingly, we decided to stock Lewis "BEEWARE." Our equipment will help you produce the biggest and the best crop of honey.

The above hive contains 10 movable frames. A sheet of Dadant's wired foundation should be inserted in each frame. A super should be placed on top for the storing of surplus honey and we recommend for beginners the shallow frame super. The frame of this super should be filled with thin surplus foundation. When the combs are filled, the honey may be cut out with a knife.

some 150 years and what has it done for it? We fail to see the wonder it has worked for, even the citizens of Jonesville. We say it is a selfish reason because none but a few citizens are considered, while the vast population of the County is asked to vote against their own interests, in order to benefit them. Think the proposition thru from end to end and on into the future and see where your best interests are.

The Future

Finally Fellow Citizens, we ask you to rise in defence of these ideals for which our forefathers, our fathers and our brothers fought, bled and died; liberty, justice, freedom and democracy, and in defiance of the selfishness, bigotry and tyranny practiced by some of those in authority in our county. Make a move for business economy in our county affairs and against this wanton waste of the taxpayers money. Rise up in defence of the very principals on which the American Constitution is founded. This is the day of a New Deal. Let us get in the game and and fight for a new deal, a fair and a square deal. Our forefathers gave us a new nation with new ideals and new principals, let's as hard to preserve those ideals as they did to give them to us.

To Arms, Comrades, and let your battle cry be, "A New Deal, A Fair Deal and A Square Deal," and your wepons be ballots, for the court house at Pennington Gap, on Monday June 12th 1933.

Kincaid-Campbell

The following is taken taken from a Lynchburg, Va., paper, and will be of interest to many friends:

Easter lilies and other white flowers, supplemented by evergreens and candles, formed effective decorations for the afternoon wedding of Miss Hanna Virginia Campbell, danghter of Lewis Campbell and the late Mrs. Laura Evans Taylor Campbell, and Charles Morison Kincaid, son of B. F. Kincaid and the late Mrs. Elizabeth Ball Kincaid, of Ewing, Lee County, Va. The ceremony took place at 4:00 o'clock at the home of the bride's father, "The Oaks" on Amherst Road, and was performed by Rev. G. W. M. Taylor, of Chase City. An informal reception was held immediately after the wedding.

Charles Miller Hatcher and Edna Campbell, nephew and niece of the bride, the former in white linen and the little girl wearing white taffeta, carried the satin cushions on which the bride and groom knelt for the betrothal, and were the first to enter the room in which the ceremony was performed.

The groom was attended by Paul Fletcher, of Blacksburg, as best man, and the bride, who entered with her father, had as her only attendent her sister, Miss Grace Campbell. The maid of honor's gown was fashioned of ashes of roses crepe, and she carried a shower of Talisman roses and delphinium the shade of her frock.

The bride wore Eleanor blue crepe trimmed in dark blue, with hat, shoes and other accessories to the later shade. Her flowers, arranged as a shoulder bouquet, were Souvenir roses and lilies of the valley. For motoring, she added a beige coat to her wedding costume.

Music was furnished by Edward G. Bell, who play the Bridal Chorus, from Lohengrin, which was the processional, and soft numbers during the ceremony. He accompanied Mrs. Audery Blankenship, who sang "O Promise Me", just before the entrance of the bridal party.

Assisting in the informal reception were Miss Rosebud Campbell, Mrs. B B. Campbell and Mrs. T. T. Hatcher. Miss Genevieve Harris presided at the punch bowl. The guest list was limited to relatives and close friends. During the reception the bride and groom left by automobile for their wedding trip, and will return to make their home for the present at "The Oaks."

Both bride and groom are widely known in Virginia. Mr. Kincaid received his education in Lee County and at the Virginia Polyteconic Institute, and the bride was graduated from Harrisonburg State Teachers College, in economics.

Out of town guests here for the wedding included Miss Bashie Kincaid, of Ewing, Mrs. Rose Stickley, of Rose Hill, sisters of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. John Kincaid, of Leesburg; Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Kincaid, of Richmond; Mrs. G. W. Smith; aunt of the bride, and Dr. Wood Campbell, Seth Campbell, and Miss Emily Campbell, of Suffolk.

"Look here, Hiram, when be you goin to pay me them eight dollars for pasturin' your heifer? I've had her now for about ten weeks."

"Well, supposin' I keep her for what you owe me?"

"Not by a jugful. Tell you what I'll do, keep her two weeks more, and you can have her."

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

May 15, 1933

Time and again I am told—by my own organization and by others—that I penalize myself by quality.

Friendly critics protest our putting into the Ford V-8 what they call "twenty-year steel." They say such quality is not necessary; the public does not expect it; and that the public does not know the difference anyway.

But I know the difference.

I know that the car a man sees is not the car he drives—he drives the car which the engineer sees. The car which is seen, comprises beauty of design, color and attractive accessories,—all desirable, of course. The best evidence that we think so is that they are all found on the Ford V-8.

But these are not the car. The car proper, which is the basis of all the rest, is the type of engine and its reliability; the structure of chassis and body, ruggedly durable; the long thought and experiment given to safety factors; the steady development of comfort, convenience and economy. These make the car.

A car can be built that will last two or three years. But we have never built one. We want the basic material of our car to be as dependable the day it is discarded as the day it is bought. Ford cars built 15 years ago are still on the road. It costs more to build a durable car—but two items we do not skimp are cost and conscience. A great many things could "get by"—the public would never know the difference. But we would know.

The new Ford V-8 is a car that I endorse without any hesitancy. I know what is in it. I trust our whole thirty years' reputation with it. It is even better than our previous V-8. It is larger, more rugged and mechanically a better job all round.

I readily say this in an advertisement because I know the car will back it up.

Four Years of Suffering Ended

Mrs. Joe Hickey, Benham, Ky., writes: "My son, Bedford, who is 16 years of age, has suffered for the past four years from one of the worst cases of kidney trouble I have ever known. He had positively no control over his kidney action day or night. His appetite was poor, he was very pale and nervous, and suffered dreadful headaches. He was in bed as long as two weeks at a time, suffering from headaches.

"I worried so much about his condition, and the fact that my father died of Bright's disease, added to my anxiety for fear my son would do likewise. Bedford was given the best medical attention I could obtain for him but his ailment refused to yield until he began the use of Scalf's Indian River Tonic. He had taken seven bottles of this wonderful medicine and his appetite is fine, his color much improved, he has gained in weight, his headaches have entirely disappeared and his kidneys seem to be perfectly normal and well.

"I shall always be grateful to Scalf's Indian River Tonic for what it has done for my boy."

Books for Virginians

Fifteen hundred patrons of a Virginia library which lends annualy over 10,000 books by mail will receive this week the summer reading leaflet li ting hundreds of new books now ready for loan. The volums are classified in a dozen groups such as politics, headed by President Roosevelt's "Looking Forward", and novels as good, if not as popular as Sinclair Lewis's "Ann Vickers". Biography, especially notable, is represented by lives of Andrew Jackson, the tragic Queen Marie Antoninette and the pitiable Mary Lincoln, Sidney Lanier, General Sherman and the bandit-patriot Pancho Villa. History has Preston's "Revolution: 1776"; travel has Seabrook and Siegfried; Ferber and Anderson contribute short stories; Galsworthy and Cabell, essays. Humor, verse, detective, mystery, children's books, and nonfiction are included. Fiction has G. W. Shaw, Zona Gale, Isabel Paterson, Gerald Johnson, Vicki Baum, H. W. Freeman, Robert Nathan and Luigi Pirandello among its authors.

Every Virginian may have a free list and access to the books of this library and of five other lending agencies whose services announced. Requests should be addressed to the Extention Division, University, Virginia.

Nagging Pains are Warning Signals

TEMPORARY pain relief remedies may save you much suffering at the moment, but putting a mask over a warning signal does not clear up the condition it was telling you to avoid.

When periodic pains, due to a weak, run-down condition, distress you, treatment for the cause of the trouble should be started without delay. Take Cardui to build up against the nagging symptoms of ordinary womanly ailments. So many women praise CARDUI, it must be good to have the widespread use that it has today. Sold at drug stores. Try it!

The Book Sampler

Full of quiet dignity is Gladys Hasty Carroll's story of New England farm life and of the events which befall Mark Shaw's family from one winter to another, "As the Earth Turns".

The happenings are plain and homely: a son marries, a daughter-in-law contemplates, divorce but reconsiders, another killed in a plane, the mainstay daughter falls in love with a Po lack, one of those recent immigrants whose absorption is diluting the old hardy stock of the countryside.

In the recovering, Miss Carroll's novel definitely lacks excitement; it is to be read for calm appreciation alone.

A banana ship soils for the colorful Canaries with an oddly assorted passenger list, among them a doctor fleeing obloquy, and a titled woman fleeing husband. Since in the compressed world of shipboard events transpire quickly, and no less true is this of a port hectic with the stickly glare of yellow fever, there isn't an uninteresting moment from cover to cover of the novel, "Grand Canary", whose author is A. J. Cronin.

Robert Marshall has really found those people who possess happiness. They have found it in reality, simplicity and struggle

Some of these fortunate beings are Whites, some Eskimos; their home is Wiseman in the Koyukuk, an "Arctic village". Mr. Marshall, using his hobby, forestry, as an excuse, spent two months among them, then was drawn back for a year. His observation is peerless, for after having found this settlement, he is able to tell the world of his find, making you see rough customers sympathetically, feel with them, and discover in them something of universal human nature. Throughout this book is true, there isn't a dry fact among the lot.

Books of Today

It is very much to Lawrence Lee's credit that he has understood so well the nature of his talent, and that he is content to be a lyric poet. Many who have attempted grandeur have been merely grandiose. Many poems, that were in the major classification of poetry because of their scope and intentions, have been very bad poems, which the world very willingly has allowed to perish.

Only perfiction, upon whatever scale it is achieved, can endure. And perfection is most frequently reached in the lyric flight,

Mr. Lee has the very commendable quality of being always entirely lucid, and his lucidity, and his lucidity is always musical.

There are many poets now writing, and who enjoy a great reputation, whose vogue rests largely upon the fact that they cannot be understood very easily, and who, one often suspects, take refuge in unintelligibility. Here is something quite different.

These poems, thought often subtile in feeling and crystalline. Wisdom is no doubt a greater thing than wit; but we can be mistaken about wisdom, about wit never. And there can be no mistake about these poems.

I do say that Mr. Lee is a great poet, but he is a good poet, knowing always what it is he wants to say, or to suggest, and always contriving what he wants.

That is the impression of delicacy beauty which, despite its delicacy, is of normal human interest:

While there are hints of Masefield, Edward Thomas, Oliver Gogarty, and Ralph Hodgson in some of these poems, one can never feel that there is imitation.

The movement of the music is always Lawrence Lee's. Even when in "The For Hunt's he images God as a fox pursued by the soul (which is the converse of Francis Thompson's "Hound of Heaven") there is no faintest suggestion of Thompson's manner. Indeed, the idea of the poem is more closely paralleled in one by the Spanish mystic, St. John of the Cross; and I very much doubt whether Mr. Lee has so much as heard of him. Entirely his own is such a charming piece of decoration as "Helen's Three Daughtern", and the fine sonnet "To a Native State! This, I believe, is Alabama; but since Mr. Lee is now living in Virginia, at whose state university he is teaching, Virginians might with justice appreciate it.

This, and "For a Poet Growing Old", and a series of five sonnets entitled "The Letters show how dextrously Mr. Lee can manage the form even thought he attempts a compromise between the strict Itlan aud the Shakeperian patterns; and "Epitath" and "This Was Her Country" shows how good a lyric he is. But the crown of the collection is the long title poem. It is, using blankverse, moulded very adroitly into eight-line stanzas, a story is told of an idyllic lave. Though I am a little disturbed by the voluntary separation of the lovers, who fear to tarnish their experience by the daily discipline of marriage. I can have nothing but praise for the loveliness of the pictures presented to us of "the slow green counties of the South", and for the poem's enchanting atmosphere. The reading of it is something not soon to be forgotten.

Rarely have I come upon the first book of a poet which has struck me as being so full of promise. But the assurance of this quiet, musical verse is a very definite achievement as well.

The individual note is clear, as is also the accomplished craftsmanship.

While I do not expect that Mr. Lee will ever be a prolific writer, I shall look forward to all that he writes, and shall count upon his steady growth. On the strength of what he has given us here, he must be hailed as one of those rare people who really know how to sing.

Ewing Scout Report

Seven members were present and two absent, at each meeting. games were played on the outside, and exercises taken.

The Scouts have organized a baseball team and have won two out of three games played, the score of the won games being 5 to 3, and 4 to 2, while the score of the lost game was 9 to 11. The team went to Caylor to play that team, but the Caylor team was scattered, and the game was postponed. They expect to play a game with Roy Harris's team soon.

"And how are you getting on, Mrs. Mumble?"

"Not so well, Mrs. Crumble. My poor husband has had a parallel stroke and we are having a time making ends meet."

How much should a funeral cost?

The cost may be as much or as little as the desires and financial circumstances of the family warrant.

Whatever the cost, rest assured that full value will be given for each dollar spent, And Courtesy, Sympathy and Reliability enter fully into every service regardless of the cost.

LEE SMOKIES WIN TWO

The Lee Smokies defeated Dryden at Dryden, Saturday by the score of 4 to 2. Lafty Scott went the route for the Smokies, stricking out 13 men. Scott only allowed Dryden six hits.

Parsons pitching for Dryden went good in the box for Dryden, allowing 10 scattered hits.

Scott led the hitting for the Lee Smokies getting 3 out of 4, Haynes, Young and Tritt collected two hits each for the Smokies.

Rhea Ely and Orr did all of Drydens hitting each getting two hits.

The score was tied from the sixth inning until the ninth inning, when Barker walked, Young singled, Tritt won the game with a long drive into the tree tops in left field, scoring Barker and Young.

It is reported that the largest crowd that has seen a ball game this year attended the game at Dryden Saturday.

The Lee Smokies defeated Lynch at Lynch, Sunday by the score of 3 to 2 Lefty Kelly pitched the game for the Smokies.

Kelly had to be relieved in the seventh inning by Lefty Scott.

Charlie Farmer a former Lee County boy and also a south paw pitched for Lynch.

Details of this game is not available.

Wheat and Cotton Distributed

Washington, D.C.,—Distribution of Government cotton by the American Red Cross has taken the form of 75,000,000 yards of cloth, 58,000,000 garments, 5,000,000 sweaters, and 2,000,000 each of blankets and comforts, according to to recent resume by James L. Fieser, vice-chairman. This operation has already involved 175,429 shipping orders, with attendant audit. The 844,000 bales of Farm Board cotton included practically every length and quality of staple.

"The value of this cotton", points out Mr. Fieser, "ranges from $65,000,000, to $75,000,000, depending upon the market. By way of comparison, the Mississippi flood operation of the Red Cross ran a little over $17,000,000.

"In addition to its cotton work, the Red Cross has been one of the biggest flour producers and distributors in the world. The totol quantity of Government wheat set aside for Red Cross distribution amounts to 85,000,000 bushels. This huge dispersal will be completed by June".

Radio Fans to Hear Grand Canyon Program

"The rim of the Grand Canyon is of the stillest places on earth," says Carveth Wells, Continental Oil Company radio entertainer. "This is even when there are hundreds of people there staring down into this mile-deep chasm. The grandeur of it render tourist speechless.

"Furthermore," says Wells, "not many people attempt to describe the Canyon. Those who do, including myself, deserve to be shot." Wells' attempt to picture this wonder of the world, however, will be heard during the regular Wednesday night Conoco program on June 7 which be broadcast by 20 N. B. C. stations.

The Conoco program may be herd by local listeners who tune in on station W. M. A. Q. Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

One may may debate the question whether being born a Russian grand duke is good fortune or bad; the important thing is that most of us who read the memories of the late brother-in-law of the Czar did not have that kind of fortune, and we find it hard to put ourselves in the way of emagining just what a grand duke feels like when he is reduced to the possession of no more than his title, a few strings of pearls, a collection of rare but not current coins, and a permanent vacation from the demands of his station. Doubtless, a good many persons will read these memories through a natural curiosity to find out what a grand duke does and feels like under these circumstances, and some of them may be surprised to discover that grand dukes, at the outset, have no more idea than themselfs, being unprovided precedents suited to the occasion. This accounts, in great part, for the fact that most of the grand dukes settled the question in very various fashions. Cyril, for example, set up as Pretender to the Romanof throne, and Alexander undertook a lecture tour through uncultured but solvent American. Cyril wrote proclamations and Alexander memories, which proved, I have no doubt, more immediately profitable, through a hundred years from now it is not likely that anybody will remember either set of compositions.

Alexander, with singular clarity of vision, was enabled to discover Americans, during those lecture tours, that a title always creates excitement. I have read this somewhere else, I think, and through some of my countrymen violently rejected the charge, I see no reason not to admit the soft impeachment. I remember my own rage when someone, still unidentified, stole my card of admission to look at Albert, King of the Belgians, when he visited this country. I had never seen a king, and I resented having to climb, Zaccheus like, upon an unviting elevation for my only glimpse of royalty. The very essence of interest is the unusual; why should Americans not be interested in titles? And if some of us have the bad taste to try to impress the great man instead of submitting meekly to being impressed, it proves no more than that America, in common with other nations, possesses its quota of the ill bred.

In spite of those parts of "Always a Grand Duke" which are incomprehensible or mildly irritating to Americans, it is a very interesting production, and the idea one derives from it concerning its author is rather in his favor. It is a little hard for some of us to understand, for example, why a man who has to support his family largely upon the proceeds of his wife's jewels feels compelled to live at the Ritz and keep a private secretary, particularly one who expected to learn from a Baptist clergyman in the Middle West where he might purchase a bottle of brandy. Most of us are likely to regard somewhat skeptically Alexander's reported conversation with the spirits from "behind the beyond" in Stephen Leacock's phrase. But, had we been born grand dukes only to find ourselves precipitated, at an age when our habits had been formed and our points of view solidified, into a world which, for the moments at least, was feeling exuberantly safe for democracy, there is no knowing just what we should have done. Had we, under similar circumstances, not the situation with the smiling countenance and polished grace of Alexander, it should be counted to us for righteousness.

On the other hand, why a gentleman in those circumstancesshould rush into a love affair with a fair unknown is a question that should set some of our sedate contemporaries to wondering. It is certain that Alexander had a flair for knowing what readers like to know about the private lives of grand dukes on the Riviern, and has not spared himself to please his public. Even his little digs at our sense of self-regard are not serious enough to rankle, but just deep enough to be pleasantly irritating. Alexander has not lived in vain in the same world with Shaw. If there is a suspicion of Jack Horner about the Grand Duke's attitude one must not overlook the fact that Horner, after all, had some, cause for self-congratulation that his own estimate of himself was probably quite justified in the main.

McCartt is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George McCartt, and two brothers.

The Sciences Stand Revealed

Through a generous grant from a philanthropic foundation the American Association for the Advancement of Science has prepared a series of reading lists of the most valuable books in all fields of scientific interest. The titles recommended are those of new and vital works written in non-technical language. The chief scientists of the nation collaborated in making the selections, each of which is briefly described for the guidance of the reader. Among the subjects covered are the life of field and forest and stream, animals, birds and fish; the heavens above the earth and the waters beneath it; the record of the rocks and the universe of worlds around us; the discovery of laws and properties of inanimate matter, and of the principles of biological development.

The list are a fascinating exploration for serious readers into the power of scientific thought that is reshaping the world. Not only are sample copies of the list available but many of the books recommended are offered for loan to readers of The News. Send this notice or a postal card request to the Extension Division, Univirsity, Virginia.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SPEND

The public has grown weary of the old slogans to the effect that "Prices are booming! Buy now!" etc. But there's truth in those phrases at present.

Recent inflation activities and the prospective change in the gold backing of the dollar, will be the most powerful price stimulant in three years. It really is time to buy now!

Best of all, by buying now, and building and reparing now, you can do your bit in the most dramatic stages of the war against unemployment and disaster and at the same time secure the greatest return on your dollar in more than a generation.

A dollar in property improvement means a dollar touching the lives of a thousand people-- and doing a thousand dollar's work. Repair the steps, paint the house, remove fire hazards, renovate the garden, renew rooting foundations with concrete, do any of these things, and you'll be a factor in the work of recovery.

It is not prophecy to say that in your lifetime you'll never have the opportunity to get work done as cheaply as now. It's fact. The price structure is abnormally low. It is lower than even the intenseness of depression justifies. As demand increases, the rate of climb will be sharply accelerated.

Remember that providing jobs is cheaper than charity-and that it's better to provide a job now than to have to contribute to charity next year. Remember, too, that unless the jobs are provided it won't be long until nothing is left for charity!

Mrs. Laura Headen has as her guest this week her grand daughter, Miss Elizabeth Weston, of Harrogate, Tenn.

Jack Moore, son of Rev. and Mrs. W. B. Moore, is convalescing satisfactorily at the Lee General Hospital here after an appendix operation about a week ago.

Dr. Sulian A. Burrus, president of V. P. I., will present the diplomas. H. H. Dyer, Jr., Martinsville, will deliver the class valedictory, and P. H. Cross, Newport News, will give the salutatory.

Permanent officers for the class are A. S. Wright, Jr., Richmond, president; O. G. Harris, Richmond, vice-president; O. C. Gibson, Norton, secretary; and W. D. Garwood, Pocahontas, treasurer.

Rev. Dr. Frank T. McFaden, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Winchester, will preach the bacclaureate sermon at services to be held in Memorial Hall at 11 o'clock Sunday morning, June 4.

The commencement program begins Friday, June 2, with the junior-senior prom in Memorial Hall, and the sophomore-freshman banquet in the college dining hall. A corps-alumni dance has been arranged for Saturday night, June 3. Besides the religious services Sunday morning, a band concert, regimental parade, and a reception alumni, graduating class, and faculty has been arranged for Sunday, June 4.

Alumni activities fill the schedule for Monday, June 5. Special reunions for twelve classes will be held that morning. The annual alumni dinner will be held in the college dining hall at 1 o'clock. This will be followed by the annual meeting of the association at which revision of the constitution, election of officers, and other matters will be considered. The alumni will review the corps at 5 o'clock. Class banquets will be held at 7 o'clock. The dances of German and Cotillion clubs will be held at 10 o'clock.

"Historic Shrines of Virginia"

Richmond—A distinct and very beautiful addition to the many works dealing with the historic shrines and show places in Virginia is made by William E. Carson, Chairman of the State commission on conservation and development, in a handsome publication just issued from The Stone Printing and Manufacturing Company, Roanoke, Virginia.

Mr. Carson, in the past, has devoted much time to visiting and describing the many natural wonders of the Old Dominion, and was the moving spirit in the erection of the thousand and more historic markers, which dot the highways of the state, pointing out to the traveler and tourist the spots of outstanding interests and historical significance.

Mr. Carson is among the first to point out the true value of what he has described, or designated, as "the hidden treasures" of Virginia, by which he means unmarked and largely unknown spots of beauty and of history, which needs only proper recognition and adequate advertisement to turn them into popular public shrines.

From a purely monetary standpoint the tourists travel, or trade, in Virginia last year amounted to approximately $50,000,000. This revenue was very largely due to the activities of the state commission on conservation and development, of which Mr. Carson is chairman. The publication from the pen of Chairman Carson will, it is thought, materially add to Virginia's tourist trade. The book is very attractive and of real and historic values.

In "Historic Shrines of Virginia", which is profusely illustrated, are described the following places:

Arlington, Christ Church (Alexandria), Mount Vernon, Dogue Creek Mill, Gunston Hall, Pohick Church, Mary Washington's Home, Mercer's Apothecary Shop, Kenmore, the Monroe Shrine, Jackson's Deathplace, St. John's Church (Richmond), The Poe Shrine, The Confederate Museum, St. Paul's Church (Richmond), Blandford Church, Westover, Brandon, Jamestown, Bruton Parish Church, The Wythe House, The Powder Horn, The Raleigh TAvern, Bacon's Castle, St. Luke's Church (Isle of Wight), York Hall, The Moore House, Wakefield, Stratford, Epping Forest, Montbelier, Saratoga, Washington's Headquarters (Winchester), and the Birthplace of Woodrow Wilson.

Rural Health Program

Richmond—An intensive health program is being carried out by the Virginia State Department of Health working through its cooperative health units in rural districts. This program is varied to meet the specific needs of the different counties, and includes sanitation, control of communicable diseases with special emphasis on tuberculosis control, clinical activities, health work in schools, midwife education, prenatal and postnatal work, immunization work, general health education, and the collection of specimens for laboratory examination. Recent statistics show the need for work along the lines of material and infant hygiene, and the Department of Health is devoting a great deal of time and study to this part of its program.

As a result of this health campaign, the control and reduction of cases of diphtheria, typhoid, and other communicable diseases has been marked in many counties. Certain outstanding instances can be cited to substantiate this statement. An intensive fight was waged against diphteria in Accomac County last year with the result that there were 157 less cases reported in 1932 than in the previous year. An outbreak of this same disease threatened serious consequences in Fairfax County, but the efficient supervision of the Department in excluding all suspects and in maintaining strict quarntine, effect the prompt subsidence of this outbreak.

Smallpox vaccinations, typhoid and diphtheria immunization, chest clinics in the interests of tuberculosis control, and step to improve sanitary conditions have undoubtedly saved many lives, while the educational program in schools and homes is raising the health standards and creating a health consciousness in those districts where the State Department of Health, in cooperation with the counties, is carrying out its health program. It is worthy of mention that not a single case of smallpox was reported in any of the health units during the past year, and this fact alone is ample repayment for the funds expended by the State and counties.

ACID STOMACH

EXCESS acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. Harmless, and tasteless, and yet its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, once you learn how quickly this method acts. Be sure to get the genuine.

The ideal dentifrice for clean teeth and healthy gums is Phillips' Dental Magnesia, a superior tooth-paste that safeguards against acid-mouth.

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

May 22, 1933

I suppose that I may claim to be the first Ford Dealer. I not only made cars, but sold them and frequently delivered them myself.

The "drive away" is not new; often I have driven cars from Detroit to towns in Ohio or Indiana or Michigan to make delivery.

There were no good roads in those days, and the people where I drove had never seen a motor car before.

My first really enthusiastic customers were Country Doctors. They were the first to realize the value of dependable transportation to a widely scattered practice.

Even today I occasionally hear from some of those first Ford users.

We had to teach local mechanics how to care for the cars. That is how Ford Service began, which is now found everywhere in the world.

We believed from the beginning that a sale does not complete our transaction with our customer — it creates upon us an obligation to see that our customer's car gives him service. Ford Dealers know their duty to the public in this respect.

I can say of Ford Dealers generally that they have been and are men of character and standing in their communities. Most of them have been with us many years, which indicates that we agree on basic business principles. The Company provides that the methods used to sell the Ford car are consistent with the self-respect of the Dealers who handle it.

The present Ford V-8 is the peak of our 30 years experience.

We have never made a better car. Its eight-cylinder engine is powerful and smooth running. The car is admittedly very good looking and has comfortable riding qualities. It is economical in operation because of advanced engine design and low car weight. It is the fastest, roomiest and most powerful car we have ever built.

The Book Sampler

In less than 200 pages, M. Andre Siegfried, author of "America Comes of Age", ably does what others vainly struggle for through volume after volume. He knows what to omit and what to drive home in recounting his "Impressions of South America". The musical comedy idea of private-revolution, all-general-n-army existence south of the Isthmus is left out; he deals with facts neatly presented and thoroughly readable. However, his admiration for the Brazilian solution to the question of national homogeniety in amalgamation of races is enough to make a Southerner's hackles rise. M. Siegfried is so typically French!

It seems strange, considering the open admiration expressed at the bookstands for so many of America's figures of war and statesmanship, that, since Beveridge's classic, John Marshall has been comparatively ignored. Just as truly as Washington created a nation, Hamilton preserved its integrity, Jefferson gave it principles, Marshall is responsible for its governmental construction and juristic procedure such as it is. From Scotland comes an appreciation from a notable jurist, Lord Craigmyle, to remind us of the debt we owe to a great Virginia in diplomacy and law, past and present. It is a slight volume but a great deal can be said with sincerity in a small space.

"We actually believe our conduct is normal. We actually believe disillusion, boredom, partial satisfactions and suffering are what men must inevitably and perpetually expect... We are so used to fighting we don't know we do it..." So says Harry F. Ward in summing up the economic struggle. From a study of Russia Dr. Ward concludes that a more normal existence can be lived without the drive of economic pressure, that man can work better for an intelligent aim than for gold, and gives a list of social incentives "In Place of Profit". Dr. Ward's opinions are worthy of respect.

Century of Progress Red Cross

Washington—A pictorial story of 52 years of ministering to the needs of humankind will constitute the exhibit of the American Red Cross in the Hall of Science at Chicago's Century of Progress, which opens May 27th.

Hand-tinted cut-outs in hair-step arrangement depict the growth of Red Cross services and activities. In the background is the figures of "The Greatest Mother" with arms outstretched protectively above a needy world, a picture made famous by the Red Cross roll call poster of 1930. On silver sidewalls is illuminated lettering summarizing 50-odd years of this country's Red Cross.

The Chicago Chapter of the Red Cross will maintain "open house" at its headquarters, 616 South Michigan Avenue, during the entire period of the fair. A special invitation has been issued to the teachers of the United States to visit the Chapter and view an exhibit there by the Junior Red Cross. Local Juniors will be detailed to answer questions and extend courtesies to visitors.

TRAIN KILLS CHILD OF FIVE

The five-year-old son of Mrs. May Williams of Appalachia was run over by a freight train on the Appalachia yard Monday night; dying in the Masonic Hospital Tuesday morning.

The child and another were playing about the tracks and were crawling under the car. The second child had crawled through to the other side of the track when a locomotive, which was shifting on the yard, moved the car, the Williams child was caught on the rail, his thighs being cut from his body.

A brakeman, It is said had chased the two children from the track a few minutes before the tragedy.

Review Is Denied In Benedict Case

The Fidelity-Phenix Fire Insurance Company of New York, the Peoples National Fire Insurance Company of Wilmington, Del., and the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Co., Ltd., of Liverpool, Eng., were denied a review by the supreme court Tuesday of the decision of lower federal courts awarding a judgement against them for losses suffered by the Benedict Coal Corporation operating in Lee County, Virginia, while replacing tipple, machinery, etc., destroyed by fire.

The Benedict Coal Corporation operated under leases in Lee county. It carried fire insurance on its plant and also insurance against losses which would be suffered in case of fire, during the inactivity of its mines.

This "use and occupancy" insurance was carried in the three insurance companies. A fire occurred at the company's mine, which totally destroyed the buildings and property covered by the insurance against loss from inability to use its tipple, headhouse, conveyor and shed and machinery, etc.

Contending that the company had been paid fire insurance of $122,000 for the loss of the property by other insurance companies, those carrying the "use and occupancy" insurance contested the claim of the company that it was entitled to recovery from them $180,000, based on the assertion it would take the company nine months to replace the property destroyed by the fire during which time the company would lose approximately $2,000 a month through its inability to operate the mine and other properties, including its commissary.

The federal district court for Western Virginia awarded judgement against the three companies for $146,400 apportioned according to the amount of risk they had assumed, and its decision was affirmed by the fourth circuit court of appeals. The three insurance companies would have the judgement set aside on the ground losses from the commissary were included, that the lower courts wrongly construed certain evidence in interpreting the insurance policies had been vitiated by what the insurance companies asserted was false swearing by the mining company in effering its proof of loss.

W. W. Jessee and R. S. Orr, Dryden, attended the Wool Pool at G te City, May 30th, selling their own wool 350 lbs., at 30 cents a pound. The Pool disposed of 16,000 lbs., at 30 cents for clear wool and 26 cents for burr wool.

School Children in Dental Clinics

Richmond—"Nearly 34,000 school children in Virginia were given the benefit of dental examination as a result of the twenty-five dental clinic held during the twelve-month period, ended June 30, 1932," stated Dr. F. Draper, State Health Commissioner.

Dr. Draper stated that that the State Department of Health, in cooperation with the counties, revealed that a large percentage of the State's school children have defective teeth. "The Health Department," he added, "is undertaking to see that such children receive the necessary dental treatment either from their family dentist or at the clinics held from time to time by the State Department of Health. The actual number of children examined during the year which closed June 30, 1932, was 33,924."

"Since the year 1921", continued the Health Commissioner, "when the State Department of Health started holding dental clinics in schools, the percentage of children found with dental defects has been reduced from approximately 92 per cent to approximately 80 per cent. The work done by these clinics, together with the use of the five-point program, has contributed much toward this improvement. The five-point program provides that every child found to have apparently normal or corrected vision, teeth, throat, hearing and weight receive a certificate signed by the State Health Commissioner and the State Superintendent of Public Instructions. Such certificates arouse interest on the part of the children and make them want to correct the defects which they may be found to have."

Advise All Weakly Women To Give This Master Medicine The Trial It Deserves

Read what Mrs. John Hall, Path Fork, Ky., says: "Scalfs Indian River Tonic is truly wonderful, says Mrs. Hall.

For nearly three years I suffered dreadfully. I was so weak and nervous and I had such terrible pains in my back and side When I would stoop and then bring my body erect again my side would almost kill me. I was out of heart for I had tried so long to find something that would give me relief but had failed. My husband bought me two six-bottle treatments of Scalf's Indian River Tonic and after taking this medicine I have never been troubled with the above mentioned ailment again, and this has been eight years. My advice to all weakly and ailing women is to give Scalf's Indian River Tonic the trial it deserves. It will be money well spent."

LONESOME PINE LEAGUE CLOSE

By Virgil Q. Wacks

The lonesome pine league trail leads in three directions to day, though this week end will condense it to one, depending on who wins and who looses between the Lee Smokies, Dryden and Norton.

Norton leads the league by 1-2 game while the Lee Smokies and Dryden are tied for second with a good chance for either to go into first by the ending of Sunday's game.

Lynch will meet Dryden Saturday with a greatly improved ball club, introducing several new faces including a staff of improved pitchers while Dryden will await their arrival probably with Tyler Horton to defend their title hopes on the mound.

Lee Smokies will meet Norton Saturday, the Sheriffs now being first place by 1-2 game and will tie up with Dryden Sunday which will practically determine who will win out in the first half as there will only be 4 games left to play after this week end.

Rose Hill

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Grabeel and daughter, Reba, returned last week from a month's vacation in Hot Springs, Ark., where according to Mr. Grabeel he took full advantage of the hot water baths.

Miss Gladys and Miss Orito Kinser of Harlan, Ky., are spending a month with relatives here.

Mrs. Emma Edds was in Pineville, Ky., from Saturday till Tuesday on business.

Mrs. J. N. Bartley spent the week with her daughter, Mrs. H. P. Snavely, in Pineville, Ky.

Miss Eva Lawson, Middlesboro, Ky., visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawson, here over the week end.

Misses Vivian Hobbs and Gladys and Bonnie Grabeel were in Middlesboro, Ky., Sunday.

Chester Hobbs was at Flatwoods on business Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Smith were called to Bristol last Friday by the death of Mrs. Smith's sister-in-law, Mrs. R. E. McClellan. Mr. Smith returned Wednesday while Mrs. Smith will spend a few day with relatives in Bristol.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Smith and daughter, Jean, and C. F. Smith visited relatives on White Shoals Sunday.

LEE SMOKIES WIN TWO

The Lee Smokies defeated Coeburn here Saturday by the score of 10 to 1. Lefty Kelly went the route on the mound for the smokies, while Coeburn used Grizzle and Robinette.

The leading hitters for the Smokies were Barker getting two doubles and one single out of five trips to the plate, Herndon getting two singles out of three trips, Payne getting a double and two singles out of four trips. The leading hitter for Coeburn was Robinette who had a perfect day at bat getting a double and three singles out of 4 trips.

Kelly only allowed eight hits, and one run, struck out nine men and walked one.

Grizzle allowed ten runs, seventeen hits, and struck out four men.

New faces were seen in Smoky uniforms, Ty Harber and Herbert Herndon.

The fielding star of the day was Thomas who played center field for Coeburn he was all over the field, getting six put outs.

A Prospective Shifts in Honors

The approaching end of the tenth annual high school publications contests on June 12 is producing the usual large number of entries and reviving ancient rivalries. The newspaper issued by the Danville school has been pronounced winner in five of the nine years past, but Lynchburg has broken through twice; in the divisions for smaller schools, Charlottesville and Williamsburg have been preeminent. Richmond, Norfolk and Winchester have shared most of the honors for annuals, with West Point a regular leader among smaller schools. The arch rivals for distinction in the field of literary magazines have been Lynchburg and Richmond, but Harrisonburg also has maintained a high standing.

Peculiar interests is attached to the publications contests because the results may change the ownership of trophies emblematic of the highest honors awarded for achievement by the Virginia High School League. Norfolk with 20 points and Newport News with 16 lead one division; in another there is still closer grouging, Vinton 10, Charlottesville 8, Hopewell 6.

An early report of results will be furnished to readers of The News on request addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Lee County Girls At Radford College

Lee County was represented among the 256 students completing their courses Monday night at the State Teachers College at Radford. The commencement opened at the Radford College on Friday with the Sophomore-Senior Play and closed Monday night with an address by Judge George L. Browning of the Virginia Supreme Court. 256 students were graduated from the two and four-year courses. Those from Lee County completing the two-year courses were: Anna Lee Carter, Dryden; Julia Chance, Maude Golden Davis, Hagan; Debie Copeland, St. Charles; Verda Kelly, Big Stone Gap; Eva Kirk, Pennington Gap, Nellie Reasor, Big Stone Gap; Marie B. Smith, Pennington Gap; Emma Stapleton, Jonesville; Bonnie Stewart, Keokee; Berta Walton, Blackwater.

Those completing the four-years course were: Amy Geneva Grubb, Hubbard Springs; Zelma Lucille Tyler, Jonesville.

Those who complete the two-year course receive the diploma and will receive the normal Professional Certificate from the State Board of Education. Those completinng the four-year course receive the Bachelor of Science Degree and will receive the Collegiate Professional Certificate.

The annual meeting of the Southwest Virginia Incorporated will convene at Bluefield June 10th at Wade Athletic Park 2 p. m. Dr. V. M. Pence and W. B. Moore of Pennington Gap are Directors for Lee County. Dr. Pence and perhaps others will attend.

Speakers scheduled for the meeting are W. J. Jenks, President of the Norfolk and Western Railway, Hon. Geo. C. Perry, candidate for Governor, and Hon. H. G. Kump, Governor of West Virginia.

The Directors will have a business meeting at the West Virginia Hotel at 11 o'clock followed by a luncheon for the Directors and their wives and company.

Southwest Virginia Incorporated have accomplished many valuable pieces of work in the past year and one of the major features of the present Bluefield meeting will be the introduction to the public of a Park to Park Highway for the northern border of Southwestern counties; the Highway starting at Christiansburg, by Pearsburg, Princeton, Bluefield, Tazewell, Lebanon, Norton, Appalachia, Big Stone Gap, Pennington Gap, Jonesville, Rose Hill, Ewing and Cumberland Gap. The introduction of this highway development promises to tap many resources in these valuable counties. The citizens of the counties traversed should show a marked interest in the undertaking as it will mean a speeding up of reconstruction and removal of kinky and out of date roads on this line.

Wells to Describe Montana

Carveth Wells, explorer and Continental Oil Company radio entertainer who says he saw fish climb trees in Malay and shivered in a snowstorm on the African equator, is scheduled to tell some tall but true stories about Montana and Glacier National Park. Wednesday night, June 14, over 20 N. B. C. stations.

Montana, according to Wells, would still be a great mountain playground if Glacier Park had never existed. But that doesn't mean that Glacier isn't a phenomenanon, he says, The Glacier Park lakes, for example, are the most beautiful in the world, and the streams that feed them appear milky.

The Copoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station W. M. A. Q. Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

Quality Cream Demands Attention

High quality in all dairy products demands extreme care in the production and handling of the raw materials from which these products are made. Whether on the farm or in the dairy plant, milk and cream must be so handled and stored that the resulting dairy products will be of the high quality now demanded in all markets.

Cream is perhaps more susceptible to quality defects than any other commodity produced on the farm. In the first place, cream is a highly perishable product and; in the second place, it must frequently be held in storage either on the farm or in the daisy plant for several days before being made into butter or ice cream These conditions, plus the fact that cream has a natural tendency to absorb foreign odors and flavors that become greatly intensified in the manufactured butter, makes it exceedingly important that the cream be handled properly on the farm, in transit to creamery, and in the creamery. It is an old adage that "A good butter maker counts for nought when his cream is not as good as he thought."

Cream should always be cooled immediately after separation. On the farm at least two cans are necessary for handeling fcream properly; one to be used as a receiving can; the other as a holding can. The warm, fresh cream from each milking should be kept in the receiving can until cooled to the temperature as that in the holding can, then the cream in the receiving can may be added to the collection in the holding can, mixed thoroughly, and held for delivery to the creamery.

Experience has demonstrated that to pour fresh, warm cream into the holding can containing several days accumulation of cream usually leads to trouble. Each addition of new, warm cream raises the temperature so that bacteria normally found in cream multiply rapidly causing the cream to deteriorate rppidly.

Because the cream producer is delivering sour cream to the creamery should not provide an excuse for not washing his cans frequently. Unsanitary seperators, cans and other paraphernalia are the besetting sins of most producers who have trouble producing high quality cream. Before any cream is placed in an empty receiving can, that can should be thoroughly scrubbed with alkali washing solution (never soap) and scalded. The holding can, too, should receive this treatment when it is returned from the creamery. Don't depend on the creamery to return your cans strictly sanitary and ready for service; such dependency may cause you frequent disappointment and no little loss in quality premiums. Nothing should be taken for granted where high quality is the goal in cream production.

It should be remembered however, that once cream acquires an old or unclean flavor or garlic, budd, grassy, metallic, or similar flavors, no amount of processing or subsequent care will enable the butter maker to turn out a good quality of butter. The production of high quality butter on the farm where the cream is produced and it is on Virginia farms where the forces of outside competition in butter production is being most sorely felt.

CONOCO BRONZE'S claims to superiority have received the most tremendous indorsement ever accorded a new gasoline.

Motorists in vast numbers talked and wrote of their experiences with instant starting, lighting pick-up, improved anti-knock, greater mileage and power of Conoco Bronze. They proved its unusual qualities in new cars and old-timers.

Take any motor car manufacturer's claims of car performance . . . add a plus if you use Conoco Bronze! Where performance counts . . . or economy is stressed, here is a gasoline whose perfection is greater than the car engineers counted upon.

BOOKS TO OWN

The novel, "Little Man, What Now?" is a book of these times. It is a book out of what is good in these times, out of what is good in these times and did not exist before. In Communist Russia, in capitalistic America, in Nazi Germany, the new deal is on in fancy if not in fact. The poor, however downtrodden they may be, are no longer merely the downtrodden poor; they are John Smith and his little wife Mary who has a dimple in her left cheek they are Johannes and Bunny Pinneberg and their baby son. And by this same token a book about the poor has ceased to be a volume of sociological sententiousness, however great its significance for society; it is no longer a book to be approached with a sigh and a great resolution; the new story of poor people, such as Fallada's is one which the man secure in luxury can read with a smile because he is amused, and which even the most sophisticated can grace with a tear because the fashion points him that way.

When Bunny Mosrchel and Johannes Pinneberg found they were going to have a baby, they got married. Although the baby was what gave them the idea, their reason for getting marrid was that they wanted to be married to each other. They did not have to be married. They could not afford to be married. She was a shop girl in the city, danghter of a workman; he was a bookkeeper in a small town business which sold seeds and manure. She stopped working so that she could move out to Ducherow and live with him on a hundred and eighty marks a month. In spite of the fact that Bunny hadn't enough saucepans and didn't know how to cook, in spite of the time when Bunny tried to make pea soup with half a pound of peas and five quarts of water, and burned it up the next day trying to boil it down, in spite of all this, not to mention uncomfortab'e lodgings and general proverty, they were happy with each other. The trouble was that in order to keep his job, Pinneberg had to protend he was considering marriage with the daughter of his employer Kleinholz, an unfortunate girl whose difficulties in finding a husband were well founded. Pinneberg kept up the deception for a long time, but one morning when Kleinholz had a hangover he fired Pinneberg becau.e news of Bnuny's existence had leaked out.

What happened next? their removal to Berlin, Pinneberg's next job and his efforts to keep it, their lodging with Pinneberg's mother, for whom he had not much respect, their search for new quarters, all these things are more interesting to find out than to recount. As in all simple stories, a strong, healthy desire to know what will happen next in kindled on every page. The little moments of ecstasy, of pain, of bewilderment, of laughter, follow each other in bright procession. Perhaps the best are Pinneberg bored at the nudist colony because nobody's body means anything to him any more except Bunny's; Pinneberg looking at his newly born son and wondering with panic which of his past sins could be responsible for the appearance of this (really quite normal) monster; Bunny exhibiting herself before a foolishly acquired dressing-table; Bunny received Pinneberg when he comes home in black despair after a policeman has ordered him off the sidewalk as a tramp. To watch the two growing to each other through the months, through each shared joy or disappointment, until destitution and the dole point out how completely they belong to each other, is no less than a privilege.

Herr Fallada, in commenting on the book, takes the attitude that the idea of portraying the poor "in their days of joy, too" is his own. He is right; the notion occurred directly to him. It occured to him for the same reasons that it is occurring to millions of other people. However, it is not likely that any of them could write as good a book about it as he has. Even if "Little Man, What Now?" should be drowned out by a flood of similar literature, it is among the first; it is a book in time, a good book, a book for everybody.

The Book Sampler

Once the story was the thing-story meaning and action, plot, and a smashing final which leaves the heroine in the proper arms, and the ruined villain dying somewhere in the background. Well, it isn't any more. In place of action there is thought, and in place of plot, psychoanalysis; the climax may deserve its name, or it may be dreamed or imagined by any of the characters. This is only indicative of a new trend, and does not necessarily imply that the new trend is no good.

An eminent example is Conrad Aikon's "The Great Circle". Divided into four intense episodes, it deals with the peculiar undoing that man can bring upon himself. When Andrew Cathern returns to his apartment he knows that he will find his wife and his closest friend there; realizes that the best course would be to turn away; but he is powerless to do other than he does,

Luigi Pirandello's "One, None and a Hundred Thousand" might be placed in this category, but, in contrast to the strain of Aikon's novel, here may be found a subtle mockery at everything and everybody. Pirandello's young Italian, aroused by his wife's criticism of his face, which really wasn't so bad after all seeks the "power the gifts gives us", and finds that not an unmitigated blessing. Since he, as we all are, is a different personality to each of his beholders, the question arises as to which personality is true. Moscarda's efforts to decide through introspective concentration are amusing, confusing, then harrowing. That way lies madness for the subject certainly, and in this book there is danger for the reader also. Even the author toward the end seems to find himself in it pretty deep. However, let us hope that not many others will take wive's criticisms so seriously.

WOMEN'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE MOTOR CAR

There is some doubt that people care to hear very much about what goes on under the hoods of their cars.

The driver knows that "driving qualities" are not accidental; they are put there. How the manufacturer creates or evolves those results may not interest him. He judges entirely by the results he gets in driving.

Well, it is not essential to talk "shop"; let us talk Results.

Smoothness. Drive the Ford V-8 and you will find that the engine runs with surpassing smoothness, due to its design and the extra precise methods of its manufacture.

Power. There it is, 75 horsepower (we could say 80) at the drive-shaft for the driver's use. With less weight to pull around, the mettle of this car——its life-like response——is rather remarkable.

Economy. Our V-8 develops more power on a gallon of gasoline than any car we have made. Mileage is partly a matter of individual driving, but under average conditions the Ford V-8 does 17 to 20 miles a gallon. Of course, car economy is not only a matter of fuel. Ford V-8 has that too, but it is also economical in the complete sense——initial cost, operation, maintenance.

Appearance. This is woman's contribution. The motor car must not only be useful, but also good-looking. View the Ford V-8 and you will not need our comment on its fine appearance.

Comfort. This also is woman's concern. In 30 years she changed the motor car from a wagon to a coach. Comfort is a quality made up of numerous ingredients. There is no comfort without a quiet, smooth-running engine. We have all the other ingredients too,——color, good taste, quality, ease, safety, roominess and convenience.

State Health Department Clinic

It is a well known fact that 80 per cent, or eight out of every ten, cases of tuberculosis are cured who are properly treated in the early stage of the disease. The majority of cases, unfortunately, do not seek medidical aid until they have reached an advanced stage.

Tuberculosis, as a rule, does not cause pain or suffering in the early stage. For this reason, it is sometime very difficult to convince those found in this stage that they have tuberculosis, and this delays treatment until it is too late. To find it early they must consult their physician as soon as they feel the least bit badly.

Tuberculosis is a communicable disease, which accounts for it running in families. One careless patient often gives it to the children and young people who live in the same home, or to a less extent to those with whom they associate outside the home. These people may break down with the disease long after being in contact with the patient. For this reason, anyone who has been around (especially during childhood, adolescence, or early adult life) a person who died with lung trouble, should be examined once a year as a precaution, and at any other time he feels badly in any way.

A clinic will be conducted by a specialist of the State Department of Health for this pirpose in School Buildings at Pennington Gap June 14th, 1933 Jonesville June 15th, 1933.

This clinic will be under the auspices of the County Board of health and in cooperation with the physicians of the county.

If any treatment is found necessary, it must be done by the family physician, whose care and advice they must depend on for their health and happiness anyway. For this reason, it is necessary for those wishing an examination, which is free of cost to all, to consult their family doctor or visiting nurse and make an appointment. Those who do not have a written requests from their doctor, or who have not made arrangements with the nurse, will necessarily be turned away.

Children under fifteen years of age are not examined at this clinic unless especially referred by a doctor. It has long been recognized that tuberculosis in children cannot be found within a special examination in which the tuberculin test and the x-ray are used.

Advise All Weakly Women To Give This Master Medicine The Trial It Deserves

Read what Mrs. John Hall, Path Fork, Ky., says: "Scalf's Indian River Tonic is truly wonderful, says Mrs. Hall. For nearly three years I suffered dreadfully. I was so weak and nervous and I had such terrible pains in my back and side When I would stoop and then bring my body erect again my side would almost kill me. I was out of heart for I had tried so long to find something that would give me relief but had failed. My husband bought me two six-bottle treatments of Scalf's Indian River Tonic and after taking this medicine I have never been troubled with the above mentioned ailment again, and this has been eight years. My advice to all weakly and ailing women is to give Scalf's Indian River Tonic the trial it deserves. It will be money well spent."

TO THE THINKING CITIZENS OF LEE COUNTY

During the past month you have been deluged by a continual "bally-hoo" regarding the courthouse question. The following facts cannot be denied.

IF THE COURTHOUSE IS MOVED TO PENNINGTON GAP

It will save the future taxpayers money on insurance, fuel and mileage that in a few years will amount to more than the cost of a complete new courthouse.

It will be placed on adequate grounds that have been donated to the people of Lee County. ---the present Jonesville site is not large enough---

It will be supplied with an adequate sewage disposal system.

It will abolish the oligarch---Rule by a few selfish individuals---that has caused Lee County Citizens to hang their heads in shame when compared with other Virginia counties.

It will restore free speech and independence to our many county employees.

It will truly begin a new era of prosperity and freedom for ourselves and children.

It will give the clean county rule that the Lee County Citizens have merited these many years.

This is your chance to save money for your county from now on. This is the logical way. This is the easiest way.

NORTON LEADS LONESOME PINE

By Virgil Q. Wacks

And so it came to pass just as I predicted, that the past week end June 10th and 11th would practically determine who would be the champions of the first half in the Lonesome Pine League.

Norton, Lee Smokies and Dryden all stood what most fans would determine as an equal chance to go into first place last week, Norton with three games to play and Dryden and Lee with 2 each. Norton came through with 3 victories defeating the Lee Smokies 4 to 1, and winning a double bill from Jenkins 5 to 3 and 6 to 3. Dryden also did all that could have been done by winning both of their battles defeating Lynch Saturday 5 to 3 and winning over the Lee Smokies Sunday 3 to 0.

With shattered hopes, a weakened line up with some players absent and others saying farewell, and dibbling from all sides to tare down what the backers of the Lee Smokies had fought so hard the whole season to build up, it seems utterly impossible for the boys to get themselves together, so like any mammoth statue with the foundation carved from under it the local boys fell in miserable defeat loosing to Norton Saturday by score of 4 to 1 and to Dryden Sunday 3 to 0.

No crackup in all previous baseball history in Southwest Virginia hasbeen recalled that will cope in any respect with the present crisis which has been experienced over the past period of perhaps ten days.

Many new faces of very acceptable calibre that is cabable of bringing home the victories will be seen soon in the Lee Smoky uniforms which will start off the second half in the spirit of the original roster of the boys of late 32. With this in mind all the lost interest of the past few days will be regained and the chance to ride the Lonesome Pine baseball special to the State series this fall will be an event to precare for that to worry about bedause of preselyting.

Reforestion Camp Of 250 Boys At Big Stone Gap

Big Stone Gap has been selected as a place for a forestry camp after a visit of army officers here early Saturday morning. They chose the large oak grove just outside the corporate limits in the east end section of town as the most desireable place after a consultation with deputy state fire warden Milford Quisenberry and county treasurer J. B. Wampler. Those in the party were, Col. Sharpe, of the U. S. Army and Major Cooley, of the medical corps.

The site contains about six acres and is owned by the Big Stone Gap Land Company who gladly gave the use of the land free of charge. The Town Council readily agreed to furnish free water for the camp. It is understood a representative of the government is expected here this week to make arrangements for construction of the camp mess hall and other necessary buildings, tents, etc to house not more than 250 men who will be employed in erecting three steel towers 150 feet in heighth on the mountains nearby. They will also cut several miles of eight-foot trails leading to these towers and fire breaks twelve feet wide will be graded out so that motor cars can be used in transporting fire fighters hurriedly when serious forest fires occur.

Harlan—Officers left here Sunday for Corbin, Ky., to which town two men suspected of complicity in the robbery of Bermuda Skidmore Saturday, have been traced.

Two other men, George Day, a son-in-law of Skidmore, and Homer Lankford, were arrested Saturday at Caw od, Ky., and brought to jail here.

Bloodhounds trailed the men still being sought fifteen miles to Kenvir, Ky., where the fugatives were believed to have entered a taxicab. From there officers believed they headed for Corbin, Ky., changing a $100 bill en route.

Skidmore was robbed of $2,647, his life savings. He said two men held him up and took his money, which he had in a sack under his overalls, while two others watched from nearby bushes. Day and Lankford denied implication.

Wells Will Broadcast Second Virginia Program

On Wednesday night, June 21, American radio audiences may tune in on the second Continental Oil Company broadcast of the season to be dedicated to the nation's most historical state-Virginia.

The numberless bits of history and scenic descriptions included in the program will be combined into one colorful story and presented by Carveth Wells, well known explorer. Wells himself claims that he is almost a Virginian because his father was a resident of Bermuda, Virginia, Wells adds, is just as famous outside of the United States as it is within the States.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station WMAQ, Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

DRYDEN WINS TWO GAMES

Dryden—Dryden holding on to 2nd place in L. P. League., by winning two games for her week end exhibition of fast ball playing, Defeated Lynch and the Lee Smokies.

John Bailey's Dryden Maulers defeated Lynch 5 to 3. Tyler Horton Dryden pitcher out classes Well's South Paw of Lynch, Horton pitched his best game of the season here Saturday allowing only 7 hits and 3 runs and striking out eleven Lynch batters, while his team mates were putting across the plate 5 runs and getting 10 hits off of Wells, the big feature of the game was Buford Rhea, Dryden star 2nd baseman getting 3 hits for his four times up and crossing the plate three times coupled with his two long running catches that have not been equaled at Jessee Park, Big Morris gave the fans a thrill when he drove in Rhea and Graham in the first frame with his long double to center.

Carnutte and Grogan of Lynch getting 2 hits each.

Dryden Maulers defeat Lee Smokies 3 to 0 before the largest crowd ever to witness a ball game in this country Dynamite Rudolph Parsons was giving an exhibition of Air Tight pitching to the thirty men that faced him, was allowing only four scattered hits while his team mates were crossing the plate with three runs, collected off Lefty Scott who was pounded for twelve hits, while he was striking out nine Dryden men, the big feature of the game was the combination of Big Parsons' pitching mingled with the 3 hits of Big Morris for 4 times up, Freeman 3 for 4. Buford Rhea 2 for three. 1st frame Rhea singled, Graham sacrificed, Freeman singled scoring Rhea, 3rd frame Rhea, singled, Graham sacrificed Freeman singled, Ely singled, sending Graham across the plate for the third run, Buford Rhea's average for the season batting 509.

While Rodgers of the Lee Smokies was getting a single and double, the Smokies almost got a man to 3rd in the 5th frame when big Tritt attempted to get a glimpse of the base was thrown out by Bullet Hensley Dryden Catcher.

LEE SMOKIES LOOSE TWO

Lee Smokies lost both games over the week end the first one to Norton at Norton and the second one at Dryden to the Dryden maulers.

Lefty Kelly let big Jim Cox get the best of him in a pitchers duel at Norton, Saturday.

Lee Smokies collected seven hits off Jim Cox but he kept them well scattered allowing only 1 hit each inning except in the first when the Smokies collected two.

Scott and Harber led the hitting for the Smokies getting two hits for 4 trips to the plate.

Cox allowed seven hits and one run.

Kelly allowed four runs and six hits but the hits were bunched in the seventh getting three runs, three hits in this inning.

See Dryden write up for second game.

Guardian of the Blue Ridge

Richmond, — Where once wound an Indian trail through primeval forest up in the slopes of the Himalaya of Virginia, now is to be found a beautiful scenic drive-way from Bedford City to the base of the famous Peaks of Otter. When the call of the out-of-doors and the fadeless majesty of the mountains lure millions of tourists to take the open road, to enjoy the adventure of travel and to escape the heat and congestion of the cities, thousands of pleasure-seekers visit the twin sentinels of the Piedmont, from the summit of which they gaze down upon an incomparable Virginia landscape.

If one is seeking sheer beauty and majestic scenery, both may be found among the Blue Ridge Mountains. Here the rhododendron, mountain laurel and trillium bloom in profusion. Clear, crystal streams cascade down their granite sides.

In the gap of the mountain there is to be found a beautiful plateau where Hotel Mons is located, which is famous for its hospitality and excellent cuisine. Here is to be found the peace and quiet of nature, while one may look for miles in all directions down upon the busy cities of Virginia.

Rearing their lofty summits over 4,000 feet above sea level, older than the human race, from these peaks one may experience in reality the expression of what "on top of the world" means. No one can ever forget, as they stand on the crest of the Peaks of Otter, the glorious sight of seeing the sun rise over the rose-tinted fields and valleys of the Virginia landscape, and then see it sink in golden splendor behind the battlements of the Alleghanies.

Virginia is famous for her historic background and scenic beauty. Her seashore and lakes offer the most wonderful bathing facilities to be found on the eastern seaboard, but visitors to the State and all Virginians have not completed their trip through Virginia until they have visited the world-famous Peak of Otter.

Cream Cooling Made Simple

Because of low quality, many thousands of dollars are lost annually to Virginia cream producers. This loss not only falls heavily upon those who produce low quality cream, but it places the Virginia dairy industry in a difficult competitive position with other dairy sections clamoring for the same markets.

The seriousness of this situation is not generally contemplated, even by some cream producers. But when it is considered that upward of 5 million pounds of butter are imported into Virginia to satisfy discriminating consumer demands for good butter, while much Virginia butter can hardly be sold because of low quality, the situation cannot be taken lightly. In climate, agricultural, and marketing conditions Virginia is very favorable situated for the production of good cream and butter. But if full advantage is not taken of these conditions, then the reputations of some producers of low quality cream and butter is likely to continue, along with a corresponding low state income from this agricultural source.

This loss to Virginia producers is often traceable to poor cream production and handling methods on the farm. Poor cream cooling and holding facilities are very largely responsible for the small cream checks many producers receive for their product. Some dairymen, however, are effectively meeting these conditions without much money outlay.

Any farmer can make a good cream cooling and holding plant. About all that is required is a strong water-tight barrel, two well constructed cream cans, a screened, open-front, shed-like structure to protect the barrel from the sun, and free access to plenty of cold water.

In building such a cream cooling plant, a water-tight barrel large enough to hold two cream cans is sunk one-half its depth in the ground near enough to the farm well or a cold spring so that cold water may be pumped frequently into the barrel. The water from the well should be discharged from a pipe near the bottom of the barrel. Entering at top of the barrel, the inflow pipe may have an extension down the inside of the barrel, to allow the water to be discharged near the bottom of the barrel.

The overflow from the barrel should be several inches higher than the cans, so that the cans may be set on bricks place in the bottom of the barrel, thus permitting better water circulation in the barrel. It might be desirable to have the overflow pipe discharge into the livestock watering tank. In any event the barrel should be maintained under the best sanitary conditions at all times. Hence it should be enclosed in a screened open front shed. Very likely the value of the plant will increase if it can be built on a shady, well drained site. This type of cream cooling plant has found favor among small producers who do not deliver their product to the creamery daily. Further details regarding the construction of the plant will be gladly furnished upon inquiry to the dairy extension department, V. P. I., Blacksburg, Va.

Health Officials Inspect Camps

Richmond—State Health officials are hard at work inspecting sanitary conditions of Virginia camps with a view of insuring the safety and comfort of all those who wish to enjoy the benefits of out-door life during the summer months. Before the opening of camping season living conditions of some sixty-five camps located throughout the tidewater and mountainous sections of this State must be inspected.

One of the most important factors to be considered in camp life is the supply of drinking water. The camp program of the State Department of Health includes the testing of all such supplies, particular attention being given to surrounding conditions which might in any way effect the water.

Recommendations are made concerning suitable camp sites. It is desirable that camps be located on rather high ground, near a lake or some other body of water. The Health Department also makes a careful inspection of all bathing places to ascertain whether or not they are free from pollution.

The disposal of wastes items which requires skillful supervision. In order to prevent contamination of drinking water, all sewage facilities must fulfill the requirements of the State sanitary law. Garbage should be kept in fly tight containers and disposed of daily, either by burning, burying, or carting away. The prompt and proper removal of all waste materials will prevent the breeding of flies, and mosquitoes can be eliminated by the drainage of all accumulations of water.

The State Department of Health further insures the safety of campers by seeing that a properly inspected and graded milk supply is available to every Virginia camp, and by urging that camp buildings be well screened and floored. Living quarters should be dry, light and airy in order for campers to enjoy the full benefits of the out-of-doors. All camps are required to have good medical supervison and to provide a building isolated from the others to be used as a hospital in case of illness. A physician or nurse should make frequent inspection trips through the camp and report all conditions to the director.

The real joy of camping and the beauty and wisdom of nature can only be appreciated under safe camping conditions, and health officials request co-operation in making camps safe and comfortable.

LOW PRICE CARS VS. CHEAP CARS

We do not build a low-price car: the cost to us of building our car is pretty high.

But we do sell a high quality car at a low price.

Almost every new Ford V-8 car we have built so far this year, has cost more to manufacture than its selling price was. As you buy them at only $490 to $610, we have to depend on increasing volume to make up the difference.

The reason for this is simple: — a manufacturer who gives good value must expect to lose money on the first cars he sells because he cannot charge all his costs to the people who are first to buy.

But with the purchaser it is different — he cannot afford to lose anything on a car. It must give him full value from the first, and keep on giving him full value for years.

Two things make possible our combination of low prices and high cost quality:

1. Volume Production
2. Taking only one profit

First, we set our price at what would be fair to the public on the basis of economies we enjoy in volume production. Then, in order to justify and maintain our low price we must get volume sales.

Thus it comes that a car which is really high-cost to make, is also low-cost to buy.

There is a difference between a cheap car and a low-priced high quality car.

Ford prices are always fixed at a point which makes it profitable for a customer to buy.

Good and lasting business must produce profit to the buyer as well as to the seller. And of the two, the buyer's profit must be, comparatively, the larger one.

It pays us to sell the Ford V-8 because it pays you to buy it.

Must Obtain Vehicle License

Richmond—"The most serious situation that has faced motorists of Virginia since 1924, when the Title Law was made effective, is rapidly approaching", was the statement made today by T. McCall Frazier, Director of the Division of Motor Vehicles. The last session of the General Assembly passed an Operator's License Law requiring every person over sixteen years of age to obtain an Operator's License prior to July 1, 1933. The law provides that no charge shall be made for this license before the date mentioned.

Children between the age of fourteen and sixteen years may obtain an Operator's License by submitting to an examination.

It is estimated that there are approximately one million motor vehicles operators in the State and at this time less than one half have applied for Operator's Licenses. This means that on July 1, thousands of people who have heretofore driven cars will, under the law, be denied that privilege. Mr. Frazier pointed out that numerous articles have been carried in the county papers and in the daily press reminding the motoring public of the necessity of obtaining an Operator's License. He also stated that an application for Operator's License was enclosed with every application for motor vehicle license mailed from his office during the month of March more than 425,000 application forms were distributed. Application blanks for Operator's License have been placed in all banks in the State, clerks' offices, police department and can be obtained at any time from offices of the Division of Motor Vehicles. The law does not make any provisions for extension of the time for obtaining an Operator's License. So far as the lawyers on Capitol Hill are concerned, they do not see any loophole for those who have not obtained Operator's License before July 1.

How serious this situation is can readily be realized when it is understood that thousands of people depend upon motor vehicles for transportation to and from their places of employment and other thousands are depending upon the operation of motor vehicles for their livelihood. If these people cannot drive after July 1, both motor vehicle transportation and commerce will be materially effected within the State. After July 1, any person making application for Operator's License must submit to an examination by a representative of the Division of Motor Vehicles and pay a fee of fifty cents for the license which can now be obtained without charge. Due to a limited force the Division of Motor Vehicle will not be able to give but a comparative few examinations per day.

Every person who is employed as a chauffeur must submit to an examination before 1, if he is to continue in that field after the date mentioned.

The Governor and the Director of the Division of Motor Vehicles urge the motoring public of the State to immediately consider the seriousness of the situation which they are about to face and apply immediately for an Operator's License.

Education's Place in Social Planning

Fifteen years ago Chester County, Pennsylvania, got the jump upon the rest of the country by begining a program of social planning. Before "planning" because the watchword of the day, Chester County laid pioneering plans not only for the physical planning of the region, but for social and cultural planning of various welfare services as well. Its county and welfare council accepted the responsibility of carrying through a various of social tasks which is most communities are nobody's business. Four commissions of the council were formed for heading up health, social work, recreation and library activities in a united county movement. Through representation in all civic groups the council carried the facts of county problems, not their solutions, to the people; and thus evolved as the distinctive feature of its work "the wedding of education to social planning and social planning and social achievement."

Chester County's experience recounted in "Social Planning and Adult Education" is a contribution to the literature of community organization that will interest the community-minded everywhere. BOOK REVIEW

Seeds of Liam O'Flaherty's book, "The Martyr", was shown in the early Twenties when revolution blew the lid off Irish granaries. His cultivation of these seeds deserves more than ordinary commendation. This new book, I believe, will be the harvest supreme, definitely placing him ahead of Francis Stuart, another young Irishman who has thrived on revolution. "The Martyr" is a dramatic story of Irish civil strife, taut with action, vibrant with real people. Its basis theme is the study of an out-mode personality caught in a net of its own making. Its minor theme is the lusty chronicle of full-blooded Irishmen playing at war.

Mr. O'Flaherty, like most of his countrymen, is a fine story teller. He releases a dynamite tale at the outset and carefully watches it spin to the finish without loss of momentum. Unlike Stuart, he does not allow poetic ardor to run away with him, overbalancing suspense. "The Martyr" has virtually no falling action. It rises steadily and closes on an up tilted plane of interest. In fact, so few books of the modern school have plot-suspense down to the tip of of the final page, that one might perceive in Mr. O'Flaherty a leader among long awaited Messiahs who will flee the stream of consciousness and psychoanalytical fields to return to strong plots, healthy vigor, and beauty. His characterization will remind some readers of Dickens. He sketches people with gusto, enjoying the task, leaving not the merest crannies untouched. His humor and dramatic ability are most satisfying.

Brian Crosbie, his main study, is a dreamer-another dreamer. Every book about this period in Ireland seems to have a dreamer as its protagonist; apparently they came to life like moths in moonlight. Mr. O'Flaherty's dreamer is every more delicately drawn than the others. He is a man whom circumstances made a national hero, circumstances bieng a hunger strike for liberty's sake and who, as a consequence, was given command of a revolutionary army. Personally opposed to bloodshed, he allows his position to throw him into mental chaos. Strongly motivating this condition is his religious intensity, cumulated to the verge of mania, which makes him a poor leader and worse revolutionary.

Chief among other factors which accentuate his maladjustment is Tracy, his second in command, a Violent Socialist fighter who looks with scorn upon Crosbie's distaste for fighting. He has no sympathy with religion, regards Crosbie's dreamy detachment as cowardice. To me he is the most powerful personality in the story. He surpasses Crosbie in interest because the latter is caught at the crisis of his emotional life wherein he seam fars away from the world of action, wrapped in speculation. The unrelieved constancy of this state compares poorly with Tracy's swashbuckling charm. Tracy is a born killer, fighter, and lover. He takes his Kate to takes his Kate to battle, makes love as the enemy approaches, scorns three wounds and fighting till his gun jams, swears lengthily at Kate for rescuing him from a failure's just doom. In his coarseness, his brovery, his blatant Socialism, his ocasional tenderness (as when, set to make a last stand to the death, he tells all his men they can leave if they don't want to die) he is at once a realistic achievement.

Also acting upon Crosbie is Angela Fitzgibbon, lovely young revolutionary, who does her bit for the cause by getting leaders in her power and then dictating whatever moves she wishes to make. Crosbie, who hates his command and longs for solitude, finds her exotic influence disturbing. More and more he indulges in his melodromatic mental anguish until his nerves approach collapse. Tracy takes complete charge of the army, plans an attack which fails utterly and results in the capture of Crosbia and Angela, and in the wounding and pursuit of Tracy himself. Here a curious thing may be noticed. Angela a so called legendary figure, is locked in the same room with Crosbia, a revolutionary dreamer. In Francis Stuart's "The Coloured Dome" an identical situation occurs; except the legendary figure in that case was disguised as a man. Can both of these writers be drawing from the same folk story growing out of the revolution? It may be interesting to know.

From Crosbie's imprisonment the drive of plot swoops to a terific ending.

Step by step it moves, gathers force, pulls in all the little outlaying bodies of story, until it terminates with a compulsion which leaves the reader aware that he has touched something electric.

HAIL THE NEW SMOKIES

By Virgil Q Wacks

Procrastination is a thief of time, and so is a Baseball Club that can't win Therefore the baseball fans and promoters are demanding a winner, and that is exactly what the fans are going to have the pleasure of seeing when the second half opens

Proof of this fact will be obtainable Saturday when Jenkins appears at Pennington and Norton appears at St. Charles because Hack Henderson, Star Maiden and perhaps Bonnie Hollinsworth will be in Lee Smoky uniforms and perhaps Ted Wingfield, formerly with the Boston Red Sox will make his first debut in the Lee Smoky infield.

Come out and realize for yourself that your dream of a winner is speedily on the way.

Last Conoco Program of Season Wednesday

The summer yach races on Grand Lakes, Colorado, where it is more than a mile above sea level, hold a decided appeal for Carveth Wells, Continental Oil Company radio entertainer who on Wednesday, June 28, he will devote his last broadcast of the season to a second description of the Colombine state.

Among other Colorado scenes which the famous globetrotter considers phenhmental are the mountain sunsets, the stone formations in the Gardens of the Gods near Colorado Springs, Yampa canyon, the Great Sand Dunes in the San Louis valley, and Carbon mountain, the peak that is shaking itself to pieces.

"Tourists who would like to see a real old fashion gold rush should go up into the mountains near Canon City," says Wells.

"Hundreds of excited people are panning the precious yellow metal there right now."

The Conoco program may be heard bp local listeners who tune in on station WMAQ, Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

Two women were discussing the sad case of a financier who had failed.

"Poor George," said the first woman. "Did he accept his failure like a man?"

"Exactly like a man," said the second woman. "He blamed it on his wife's extravagance."

"Well, there's still a sucker being born every minute. The trouble is he hasn't got anything you can take away from him."

Husband: "Is this vegetable all we are going to have for dinner tonight?"

Mrs. Youngbride: "Yes dear. You see, when the chops cought fire and fell into the pudding, I had to use the soup to put it out."

Texas is such a big state that it's a real trip from one part of it to another. A man from Brownsville, on the southern edge, was gone quite a time from home, and when he got back a neighbor inquired where he had been.

He replied: "I been on a trip north."

"Where'd you go?" the friend asked.

"I went to Dallas."

"Have a good time?"

"Naw, never did like them Yankees."

"Mary," said the mistress to her new servant, "always serve from the left and take the plates away from the right."

"Of course, madam," nodded Mary, "I,ll do as you tell me, but that is the strangest superstition I ever heard of."

One morning the parcel post carrier had a package for a Mrs. Goldstein, who lives in the outskirts of Brooklyn. He blew his whistle several times and yelled the name of Goldstein before a voice from thte op floor answered, "Yaaa;"

"A package for Mrs. Goldstein," he said. "Will you please come down and sign for it?"

"Wot kinda peckage?" the voice asked.

"A large one," replied the the postman.

"From who comes it?" she wanted to know next.

"From a Mr. Stein," yelled the postman.

"From whur?" persisted the lady.

"From California," he told her in resigned accents. "Will you please come down and sign for it?

"Wot's in de peckage?" she asked.

"I can't tell you madam," the postman hollered. "I don't know."

You ken't tell me what's in de peckage?" she repeated in surprise.

"No, madam," he answered, losing all that was left of his temper, "I can't."

There was a pause.

"Vell," she finally said, "you'll hev to come back tomorrow. Mrs. Goldstein ain't home."

Hold-Up Men Take Miner's Savings

Between $5000 and 6000, part of which he had earned as a miner in mines of Consolidation Coal Co., at Jenkins, Ky., and part of which he received as compensation for a permanent disability accident, was stolen from Bradley Baker. Mr. Baker is a paralytic living at an insolated cabin in the Bold Camp neighborhood of the Pound section, 15 miles from Norton.

Four or six robbers entered the little mountain home about 3 a. m. One held Mrs. Baker, while another held Mr. Baker, When Mr. Baker fought he was beaten with a pistol.

The robbers broke open a trunk and took the Bakers' savings from a glass jar. Mrs. Baker broke away from the robbers and ran into the yard, calling neighbors who came in time to see the fleeing robbers.

"Fighting is all right providing you do it intelligently."

Mrs. McPherson (just at meal time): "Sandy, we have guests at the door."

A COMPANY THIRTY YEARS OLD

Last Friday the Ford Motor Company completed 30 years of automobile making.

It is also my fortieth year at the same job. I made my first engine in 1893, and it still runs. This is the engine that won the Selden Patent Suit——which took the motor car out of the exclusive class, and opened the automobile industry to hundreds of manufacturers who started during the last 30 years.

Some of the men who began with me that June day in 1903, are working here yet. All of the principles we laid down then, are still operative; we find that they have great survival value for the future. To date they have produced and sold over 21,000,000 Ford cars.

Although we created the automobile market we have never thought it was good for anyone to monopolize it. We have always believed that before business could be good for one, it must be good for all. Our discoveries and improvements have always been open to other manufacturers without patent restrictions.

Of course, there is one thing we cannot share——everyone must get it for himself——and that is experience. Money could duplicate our buildings and machines, but it cannot duplicate 40 years of experience. And it is experience that makes a motor car.

But the past does not especially concern me; it has all been a preparation for the future. For myself, I feel that I have just been gathering the tools to do something worth while, and that my real task is still ahead.

Great changes are upon the world. False ideas of every kind are vanishing in the general upheaval. Those who built truly on principle will survive——their service will carry over. Business integrity and commodity honor will be fully justified. And newer and better ways of living will appear.

That is the outlook for this young thirty-year old Company of ours.

BOOKS OF TODAY

The author of "Travail of Gold" has a large public which expects of him the semi-serious, semi-entaining type of novel. Those who have liked him before will not find cause for disappointment is his most recent novel. It falls just between these two high levels of fiction, and has its own worthy virtues. Yet, a reader coming upon E. F. Benson for the first time in "Travail of Gold" would not, I think, be impressed with a sense of discovery; for the novel does not lift itself much above the generally well-written summer novels that are always available in current fiction.

The story is not an unfamiliar one. Chris Merivale has thrown over a dull job as a bank clerk for the pursuit of an art that is calling him. He thinks that he prefers the art to security with dull London friends. He wishes to be a famous playwright, author of great pieces of dramatic art in which his sweetheart, Nancy Cornish, will have the leading parts.

Unfortunately, Chris's desires are muddled by a native cynicism and a lust for glitter. His career begins honestly and in deep earnestness. He and his sweetheart, whose success as a real actress is slowly growing, go away together to work and sustain each other in the fight that lies ahead. The stamina remains Nancy's Chris loses himself in bitterness and cynicism. He is taken up by silly women, by rich men, by any number of fools; and he ends by being the most glittering and foolish of the lot. In the meanwhile Nancy has remained pure of purpose and her success becomes as sound, in a smaller way, as the real art of the great actress Duse. At the book's close Chris is rich and unhappy, Nancy is hard-working and beautifully successful.

Such a story needs more than a passing talent to make it glow. At times Benson succeeds in creating a glow, but at other times the smart people, the odd types draw him from his main purpose and make the book into a novel that can only be described as undistinguished.

Where other novels have pictured a most unusual set of characters that take their individuality from their oddness, "Travail of Gold" seems only to present a series of very boring people. They were meant to be boring, but they are boring in a most ordinary way and in a way which will not hold more than a temporary entertained for the reader. It is toward Nancy and Chris that the mind of a reader must turn back for the true values of Mr. Benson's art. In these two figures he has done an excellent job. The earnestness of Nancy and the beauty of her character are true pieces of creative writing. Chris is a well developed character, even when he is most irritating. They represent, in their opposing natures two types of reaction to London, to life, to struggle. Chris is defeated, even through he becomes wealthy; Nancy, even in her brilliant success, remains undefeated by her own nature and by the temptations of fame. In these two figures the book makes its clearest claims for serious attention.

Bridge Party

Rose Hill—Miss Gladys Grabeel entertained at her home Friday evening, June 9, with three tables of bridge. A delicious salad course was served to the following: Misses Gladys and Oreta Kinser, Ruby Nell Smith, Bonnie Grabeel and Vivian Hobbs, and Messrs. Lewis Smith, Bryan Grabeel, Lee Beatty, Carter Cawood, John Richmond and Olin Stickley.

"Hey!" roared the constable. "You can't swim here!"

Sow Libraries Over the Land

All who say that Horace Mann: "Had I the power I would scatter libraries over the whole land as the sower sows his wheat field," will find a new brochure on library development in Canada replete with interest.

In British Columbia, rated as "more library conscious, more library-minded than any part of Canada; except Ontario," a small group less than a dozen strong set out a decade ago "to ascertain the acts concerning, and suggest solutions for, the library condition of the province." A survey in 1929 brought forth government grants-in-aid to local libraries. The progress resulting is called an "unqualified success."

In Ontario "the very multiplication of small libraries, once Ontario's boast, has now became its problem," and the recommendation is made "for a thorough study of the situation in its social and economic relations." One remedy proposed "is to develop greater cooperation between the school and the public library."

"Libraries in Canada," revealing how a democratic state for indispensable cultural services, is offered for loan to readers of the News on application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

General Motors at Worlds Fair

Chicago—"The General Motors Building rears its bulk aloft, a giant shaft of gold", says one writer describing the magnificent panorama of the Century of Progress Exposition by night. With the Fair but a few days old, the General Motors Building is recognized as one of the most thrilling spectacles at night.

Three hundred and fifty flood and projector lamps bathe the orange, yellow, red, silver and blue building. The orange-gold tower is the focal point of attention, rearing its 177 foot height conspicuously into the many-hued heaven created by the genius of Joseph Urbon, supervisor of color and lighting for the Century of Progress.

Exterior lighting of the General Motors Building alone consumes enough electricity per night to pump water for a city of 25,000 inhabitants, or to provide home and street lighting for a city of 7,500 inhabitants. An average of two millions, three hundred thousand watts of electricity a day is used. Monthly consuption mounts to sixty-nine million watts. This is equal to 92,000 horsepower a month.

Approximately three times this amount of current is consumed in the interior of the giant structure for power in the Chevrolet-Fisher Body assembly plant and other action exhibits and to light the seven main rooms.

Policeman: "As soon as I you come around the bend I said to myself, "Forty-five at least."

Lady Driver: "How dare you? It's this hat that makes me look so old."

Gentleman: "What would you do with a nickle if I gave you one?"

Hobo: Get a new suit, mister an' some supper, an' a nights lodging, an breakfast an' dinner tomorrow."

Gentleman: "My good fellow, here's a quarter. Go and support yourself for the rest of your life."

Side Quit Hurting, Got Stronger, Well; CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntsville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am usually cheerful when I am well and don't easily get nervous. I knew I ought to take something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well."

Cardui is sold at drug stores here.

The Book Sampler

Some books are slated for popularity even before they leave the presses. So it was with "Always A Grand Duke", which continues the reminiscence of Alexander, Grand Duke of Russia, began in "Once a Grand Duke". After the tremendous appeal of the first volumn, a sequel would be bound to gain a public of a sort. This last book is of no permanent value, but it allows interesting glimpses at the foibles of royalty at which the crowd can gap; the show is good and the gate should be large. Some of its pathos is missed because of the reader's naturally different viewpoint. For instance, the picture of a man, once master of untold wealth, living on the proceeds from his wife's strand of pearls is likely to be blurred for the practical minded by that of a jobless grand duke complaining of poverty and living on the Ritzs. However if you read the book, you cannot help but realize that it was a gentle and dignified spirit which passed so shortly after the completion of these memories.

And now to the best seller of the moment: Charles G. Norris, "Zest". As in other single titled novels, here is a definate theme. Mr. Norris is out to prove that there are so many facets to man's nature that no one woman can be reflected in them all. Mother, wife, friends, daughter, mistress, all fit into the plan of man's existence; but because of a superimposed code of behavior he is likely to find himself in a mess. It is this mess of muddled impulses that Mr. Norris portrays in pitiless clarity, leaving us to infer as a moral, "Life is like that-do whatever you can about it.

Hot Weather Hints

Richmond — Simple, common sense precautions, especially in hot weather, have been the means of saving thousands of babies, says Dr. Warren F. Draper, State Health Commissioner for Virginia, and if adhered to, may mean the health and life of many others.

Figures recently released by the Bures of Vital Statistics of the State Health Department show that 588 babies died of diren and dysentery during the year 1932. A large majority of them died during hot weather. During the year 1913 the first year that death certificates were required in the State of Virginia-babies died from these diseases. 1st the same death rate had prevailed during 1932 as nineteen years ago, nearly three times as many babies would have died from the [illegible].

While those concerned in bringing about this reduction may be gratified the rate of babies' deaths is still for to high. Many additional deaths can be prevented if the following precautions are observed:

1. Every home provided with a fly proof toilet or sewage disposal plant.
2. Every home provided with a safe water supply.
3. Every home screened so as to protect all food, as well as the baby, from flies.
4. Baby brest-fed whenever possible for the first six or eight months. When bottle fed all milk boiled or pastorized before given to the baby, and all food kept as cool as possible.
5. All babies drinking water boiled.
6. Careful personal cleanliness practiced by every member of the household, especially those who handle milk or food.
7. All persons who have any spmptoms of disease, however slight, kept away from the baby and not allowed to handle any of his food.

In addition to the above precautions which are necessary at all times of the year, the following rules are especially applicable to babies in hot weather:

1. Keep him cool.
2. Keep him clean;
3. Reduce clothing to a single garment and diaper;
4. Keep away insects;
5. Insure him quiet and freedom from excitement and handling;
6. Keep him out of doors as much as possible;
7. Increase the water, internally and externally;
8. Do not over feed;
9. Keep up breast feeding;
10. Keep him at home;
11. Consult a physician regularly, and early if there are signs of illness.

"Our economics prof talks to himself. Does yours?"

Yes, but he doesn't realize it—he thinks we are listening."

The Book Sampler

Even around 1860 it was not beyond the poor to dream of distant horizons and succes measured in glittering dollars. Because of hope, Joe Trexler followed the Northern horde South into Georgia. There he found gentlemen, and a belief that gold plus observation would make him indistinguishable from them. Georgia railroad politics were rotten to the core, but Joe never quite realized. And so through petty graft, this carpet-bagger became a hero to his family. Just as the oil scandal rent the Harding adminastration from top to bottom, so the railroad crash opened up Bullock's rhgimes with a sickening strench; the big frogs remained unpunished; it was the little men who footed the bill. Still Joe's family believed there must be some mistake-all except one faithful sister whom knowledge destroyed. Another brother, David at the price of what is called dececy achieved sucess in other fields, but to those at home Joe remained the romantic figure of legend. Thus runs the story of "Pity Is Not Enough". In this work Josepnine Herbst has sought meaning in the drab, and found herself a great place as a great American woman novelist.

It hardly seems fair after a discussion of such a book to bring up athers that can only suffer by comparison However, taken on their own merits, Barbara Webb's "Three Who Were Strong" and Ernest Poole's "Great Winds" should prove satisfactoey. "Great Winds" is a story of the issues sweeping the earth what one New Hampshire family does about it all. The other concerns two people fleeing from the city's unrealities to the everlasting blue of the Virginia mountains, and two others seeking escape from those same everlasting blues. Strangely enough, the charactorization does not reach its highest pitch in the three who were strong, but in one who was weak.

NORTON WINS FIRST HALF

By Virgil Q. Wacks

The Norton Sheriffs Pounded their way to 16 victories and the championship of the first half in the Lonesome Pine League as half closed Sunday completing a schednle of 20 games.

The Lee Smokies and Dryden tied for second place in the standing with 13 wins and 7 loses each while Jenkins and Lynch tied for 4th place with 8 wins and 12 defeats. Coeburn assumed no competition for sixth place cinching their stand in the cellar with 2 wins and 18 defeats.

The first half became only history as the ninth innings closed over the circuit Sunday with Lee Smokies, Coeburn, Lynch and Jenkins ready to open the second half with brand new line ups that will compete with the best and may possible become the best by the time the Lone-Some Pine special pulls out for the series in September.

Three. Three game series await the winners of the Lonesome Pine in September, the winner of the first half will play a 3 game series with the winner of the second for the championship of the league, this will play the winner of the Cumberland Valley League in Kentucky, and the winner of that series will play a three game series with a class A winner in Tennessee for the championship of the 3 States. And then, Bob Wilson, Sports Editor of the News Sentinel will invite the champion to Knoxville, Tenn., for one game and the medals which will end the fun for 1933

Press Convention Program Drafted

Farmville—An address by Paul H. Appleby, assistant to the secretary of agriculture and editor-publisher of the East Radford, Journal-News, on "Reconstruction in 1933," will be one of the high lights of the program of the 45th annual convention of the Virginia Press Association at Norton, July 20 to 22.

The program was announced Friday by J. C. Latimer, secretary of the association. Mr. Appleby will address the Friday afternoon session.

The program will open Thursday afternoon with a welcome from Charles I. Fuller, mayor of Norton, and a response by George O. Green, editor of the Clifton Forge Dailey Review. Preliminary business, including appointment of convention committees, and submission of reports of the officers, will complete the first day's program, after which the delegates will be taken on a tour to High Knob. From High Knob, Bruce Crawford, editor of the Crawford's Weekly and a member of the program committee. reports, "You can see five states with the normal eye and smell the fragrance of Mountain Dew."

Friday's session will be held at the Lonesome Pine Country Club, midway between Norton and Big Stone Gap. The day's program will open with the annual address of the president, Josiah P. Rowe, Jr., of the Fredericksburg Free Lance Star. Announcement of award of the Fred C. Grumman Cup for the best weekly newspaper in Virginia", for 1933 will be announced, followed by a report by Rufus G. Roberts, of the Culpeper Virginia Star, chairman of the committee on legislation. An address by R. S. Kellogg, of New York, on "Circulation and Illiteracy." and by W. Clement Moore of Wolf and Company, auditors of the V. P. A., will complete the morning program.

Speakers at the Friday afternoon program in addition to Mr. Appleby will be H. L. Williams, secretary of the Illinois Press Association, and Joe Mitchell Chappee, Boston publisher.

This session will receive a report of a special committee on "Better Newspaper" awards planned for the coming year. The committee includes J. E. Wall, of the Farmville Herald, H. B. Trundle, of the Danville Register, and Bee, and Jake Goodman, of the Covington Virginia.

Business session will be concluded Friday. A banquet and gridiron program will be held at the Country Club Friday night.

On Saturday the Association's traditional "Know Virginia" tour, held each year as a feature of the convention, will be held. The visit this year will be to the Derby mine of the Stonega Coke and Coal Company, where in the subterranean pits will be found plants and fishes of prehistoric times crystalized in "Black Diamond."

REPUBLICAN MASS MEETING

The Republican men and women of Lee County are urged to attend a mass meeting to be held at Pennington high School Auditorium in Pennington Gap Saturday, July 1st, 1933 at 1:00 p. m. for the purpose of electing Lee County's Delegates and Alternate to to the Republican State Convention to be held in Lynchburg on July 3rd and 4th.

LEE COUNTY HAS AIR SHOW

Ewing—Lee County had a air show Sunday, at Wheeler Kesterson's farm and fully 2500 people turned out to see the stunting and flying of aviators from Knoxville, Tenn., and Middlesboro, Ky. Four planes were on hand during the afternoon. Heading the visitors from Knoxville, Tenn., was Pilot Tom Kesterson. Other planes from Knoxville, Tenn., were piloted by John Steel and Marshall Sipen. John Pattison, young aviator from Middlesboro, Ky., was on hand with his Aeronica.

One part of the program was a parachute jump by Jack Lewis, who baled out from a plane at an altitude of about 2500 feet. John Steele especially entertained with his stunt flying.

A number of people went up for rides. The crowd was well handeled by Traffic Officer Jess Mize.

The first Potash and Perlmutter stories, introducing to America the famous partnership now playing on the NBC Network, were published in the Business Men's Magazine of Detroit, Michigan, after almost every magazine editor had turned them down in fear that they would offend potential advertisers. The Detroit magazine promptly went out of business. The Saturday Evening Post then began them and managed to survive. That was 25 years ago when Montague Glass, who is still writing them, was a law clerk. The Potash and Perlmutter firm is airing its troubles Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 8:30 o'clock E. D. S. T. over WJZ and associated stations.

J. F. Witt, of Woodway, was a visitor in Pennington, Saturday.

RED CROSS

Rev. E. L. Crump of Bonnie Blue has been elected chairman of the Lee County Chapter, American Red Cross, succeeding Mrs. W. R. Pennington, whose term expires June 30. Mrs. R. L. Rosenbaum of Jonesville will become vice-chairman succeeding W. L. Davidson of Jonesville, L. B. Hagy of St. Charles will succeed C. B. Gibson of Jonesville as treasurer, and Mrs. Pennington succeeds Rev. C. F. Watkins as chapter secretary.

The chapter executive committee to take office July 1, including the following: Miss Marion Richmond, Dryden, E. I. Stewart, Keokee, M. V. Koger; Mrs. B. T. Young, S. J. Shelburne, Mrs. Ben Robinson and Rev. C. F. Watkins, Pennington Gap, Mrs. J. C. Wynn, Wm. L. Davidson, and George V. Graham, Jonesville, Rev. R. H. Duncan, Leona Mines, Mrs. S. G. Hill, St. Charles, O. A. Robinette, Blackwater, Mrs. W. N. Noe, Hubbard Springs, Mrs. Emma N. Edds and Miss Florence Baylis, Rose Hill, Mrs. T. L. McDaniel, Ewing, and Miss Lelia Colson, Gibson Station.

Mrs. Tom King will head the Volunteer Service Committee, Rev. C. F. Watkins the Committee on Public Information, Mrs. Ben Robinson the Committee on Home Hygiene and Care of The Sick, and Mayor T. B. Quinley the Committee on Disaster Preparedness. Chairman for Junior Red Cross, Public Health Nursing and Home Services are to be named. Special Committee chairman on cotton and flour distribution are being retained from last year's organization until these activities are complete.

At the American Legion Cabin at Nigger Head Rock, Friday, a Red Cross conference and tea was held. The following indicates the work of the Lee County Chapter during the past year, and the new policy for the ensuing year.

Due to conditions of public finances and general economic distress, the Red Cross chapter has bourn the brunt of relief work in Lee County. The Chapter brought its resources into play some 15 months ago, supplimenting public funds and responsibility as well as that of other charitable organizations. A total of 3,450 barrells of flour, worth $13,800.00 has been obtained and used to supplement the food needs of 1,250 families; has obtained 24,000 yards of cotton cloth worth $2,400.00 from which has been made 8,000 garments for persons ane children in need to the number of 5,488, some 3,000 being school children, has obtained 9,528 ready made garments valued at $2,382.00 for needy cases.

The chapter has expended from its own funds approximately $750.00 in obtaining food for emergency cases of destitution; in meeting the medical and clothing needs in 75 maternity cases among indigent families; furnished medical needs in several tubercular cases, 55 pellegra cases, and 1 cancer case; fuel for desitute families during the winter; beans to supplement food growing and cans for conserving food among families unable to purchase these last fall. The chapter expense for administration, handeling flour and other matters has been approximately $76.00. The work has all been voluntary. Some 70 people have contributed their time and effort during the months of relief program, as Red Cross volunteers, receiving no remuneration.

With the coal mining industry showing definate evidence of recovery, farm products rising in price, crop conditions favorable, the county financeal situation considerably relieved, it is felt that the depression has reached rock-bottom in Lee county and that the reconstruction period has arrived. Accordingly, the Red Cross will follow a new policy during the coming year.

While relief will be continued to meet the needs of the many yet destitute families in areas contiguous to coal deposits, Red Cross flour and Red Cross cotton goods and garments will be secondary in importance from now on. It is felt that the County Board of Supervisors will now be in position to consider a broader policy of extending relief to needy in the county than heretofore, and assume now much of the responsibility hitherto carried, during the emergency, by the Red Cross chapter. It is also felt that other charitable organizations will soon be receiving support for their work nearer normal.

Beginning July 1st the Red Cross Chapter contemplates a rapid tapering off of relief work. With pellegra and tuberculosis on the increase in the county, with some trachoma in the mountain sections, and health conditions a likely problem due to abnormal living conditions the past pear, the Red Cross chapter propose to turn its efforts now in the direction of a health program for Lee county. Chapter funds now on hand will be used as a nest egg for the promotion of such a service, which will be possible if the other organizations of the county will accept proportionate financial responsibility. In the development of a Public Health service the chapter anticipates the support of the county's leading citizens, school boards, the board of supervisors and mine officials.

The "Flour" policy of the chapter is worded: "The Chapter's flour and cotton material resources will continue to be applied in meeting the needs of needy and distressed families, but the interpretation will be limited to cases either destitute or bordering on destitution. Chronic dependent families are to be regarded as community responsibilities, and in all cases pressure is encouraged to cause needy families to do their own part in meeting their own needs. Types making no effort to help themselves will have to look to other avenues for assistance."

The chapter has received its last flour allotment. The national supply has been exhausted. There isn't any more. The small supply left therefore is to be used for only those families in need due to illness or other similar causes.

The main objective of the Chapter will to build lines for permanent activities, with strong committees that the chapter may have a trained group ready for an emergency, preserving its power of adjustability to be able to meet extraordinary present and future needs. The chapter will move forward within its capacities and resources.

The chapter proposes to send a representative to Washington, June 26-27, in cooperation with the American Legion, for the Red Cross Institute at national headquarters, where two days of intensive instruction is to be given on new legislation affecting veteran's pensions, to Red Cross Chapter home service workers.

Those attending the annual meeting of the chapter and the conferance and tea last Friday were high in their praise for the leadership given by Mrs. Walter R. Pennington during the past year, a trying one in Lee County's history. Tribute was also paid Mr. C. B. Gibson, retiring treasurer, who has given 15 years of volunteer service in that capacity. Mrs. Pennington however, gave credit for the work of the chapter to her corps of volunteers over the county, mentioning them each by name. Upon her motion these people are to be placed on a permanent honor roll in chapter records.

Honorable mention of Lee County Citizens who have rendered an unusual amount of volunteer service for the American Red Cross are: Dr. J. W. Innes, M. V. Koger, T. B. Quinley, J. W. Quinley, C. E. Grabeel, J. R. Gilliam, L. B. Hagy, Rev. E. L. Crump, Mr. Jas Hobbs, W. H. Clark; Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Duncan, Mrs. W. E. Fletcher, Mrs. E. E. Parsons, Mrs. W. D. Harr, Mrs. E. E. Skaggs, Mrs. W. F. Hughes, Miss Warian Richmond, Mrs. L. B. Hagy, Mrs. W. H. Clark, Mrs. B. T. Young, S. J. Shelburne, Mrs. E. V. Sword, Mrs. Emma Edds, Miss Florence Bayles, Mrs. W. N. Noe, Mrs. R. L. Rosenbaum, Miss Saluda Sewell, Mrs. L. L. McDowel, Mrs. Bartie Gibson, Mrs. L. M. King, Mrs. S. G. Hil, Mrs. M. S. Flanary, Mrs. G. E. Creeger, Mrs. J. C. Wynn, Mrs. L. B. Skeens, Jr., Mrs. Ben S. Robinson, Jeeks, J. H. Payne, Rev. C. F. Watkins, C. B. Gibson, Walter Carter, F. McNamara, Robt Ely. Special mention should be made of the long and faithful and valued services to the Lee County Chapter of the American Red Cross of Senator Lloyd M. Robinette, who has served the chapter as county chairman for 15 years, Mrs. Judge Orr has served faithfully as Roll Call Chairman for a number of years.

Those who are qualified for a Red Cross button given at least 8 hours of service are Mrs. J. E. Laningham, Mrs. Kate Stover, Mrs. M. V. Koger, Mrs. T. B. Quinley, Mrs. J. V. Graham, Miss Telia Colson, Mrs. Robt S. Orr, Mrs. Emma Orr, Mrs. C. B. McElroy, W. L. Davidson, Rev. S. N. Ebieu, J. C. Noel, George Stewart, A. J. Stacy, B. S. Robinson.

The Book Sampler

More and more, as life becomes increasingly complicated and urgent, is the need for short stories felt-a releif from reality for an hour, complete to be dropped. And so their appreciation rises. Three shining names are appended to recent collections: that of Francine Brett Young, whose fledling hoper might aspire to the place of Arnold Bennett; of Edna Ferber, who created, and was created by "So Big"; of Hugh Walpole, famous for his lengthy discusiveness about the Herries. In "The Cage Bird" Mr. Young tells in sinister fashion of an Englishman in South Africa, a haunted sea captain, a doctor on a holiday: lightly of a romatic lady; and finds that in a collection of stories, thirteen may not be an unlucky number. Miss Ferber continues her applied sociology through eight stories entitled "They Brought Their Woman" incidentally on the week's best seller list. They are authentic in every detail, but a soul seems missing to the work. It is Hugh Walpole's "All Souls' Night", which speaks with quite horror or delicate wistfulness of the North Country. Cornwall, Spain, of the meek and loveable who are tossed about by life, that is by far the best book of the three.

But here is one book worth knowing: Liam O'Flaherty's "The Martyr", a swiftly moving tale of Irian dirturbances of the '20's, written with all the poetry and unevenness of the Celtic temperment. In conflict with Crosbie, the dreamer in charge of the irrogular forces, his subordinate, Tracy, is of the fighting variety that is appreciated by soldiers, and by a woman named Kate. So Crosbie comes to the figurative end of all dreamers, the irregulars to invitable defeat, and Tracy and Kate to some living conclusion not here recorded. Take a tip: the final is glaring irony and should be handled with care.

Gift Car

To an eight-year-old Polish lass whose father works part time as a janitor went, scot free, the first car built on the assembly line operated by the Chevrolet Motor Company on "A Century of Progress" grounds.

The car was a gift of Chevrolet, whose president, W. S. Knudsen, insisted that the first automobile off the line be given, rather than to a personage of national or local prominence to some Chicago school child in or below the eighth grade.

Odds against the child's winning were 400,000 to one, for 400,000 tickets requiring the entry of their name, address and school affiliation were distributed to eligible pupils just prior to the close of schools for the season. From the filled in the blanks a five-year-old Winnebago Indian in full regalia, off a Fair grounds reservation, drew the winning name in the presence of Vincent Lopez, orchestra leader as principal judge, and Chevrolet and General Motors officials. Out came the name of Miss Dorthy M. Maciejewska, of 2828 West 39th Place, Chicago, who now knows the thrill of falling heir to an unexpected fortune.

No member of her family has ever owned a car. A 24 year-old brother unable to get work for some time past will serve as her chauffeur.

Scouts located the winner late that night and checked her eligibility through the parish priest. Early the next morning, accompanied by the priest and two young companions who have been promised their first ride with her, Dorthy was at the General Motors building to inspect her new property a Master Six coach in black Duco finish. The car was to be formally delivered to her this week.

It was the first of nearly 300 Chevrolets already built on the Fair Grounds since the line got into production shortly before the opening of the exposition. Demand for cars built here has been running far ahead of production, but first choice is being given those who make their purchase on the grounds in the expectation of driving home in the locally-built product.

Clinics For Pre-School Age Children

Richmond—Paralleling the work of the city schools in summer round-ups for pre-school children, clinics are being held by local physicians throughout the State for the examination of children who will enter school next fall for the first time", said Dr. Warren F. Draper, State Health Commissioner. Four such clinics have recently been in Sussex County.

No child who enters school hampered by physical defects can do his best work. Parents owe it to their children to see that they are given a fair chance, and they are urged to patronize these clinics, and to do all in their power to have their family physicians correct the defects which these examinations may reveal in their children. Already about 80 per cent of the children examined since the closing of school this spring have been found to require medical attention, and this attention will save money both for the State and for the parents.

During the last session, 27,000 children in the public schools of Virginia repeated grades, and it is believed that nearly as many permanently dropped out of school because they were doing poor work in their classes or realizing they were going to fail. Since the average cost of educating children in Virginia is $25 a year each, we can see that Virginia spent nearly $1,000,000 last year on repeaters, a great part of which might have been saved if these pupils han been in good physical condition.

Many organizations throughout the State have been cooperating enthusiastically in this program, and is due largely to their efforts that these clinics for the examinations of pre-school children are made possible.

Skim Milk for Calves

"The natural feed for the calf is its mother's milk," says R. W. Dickson, assistant extension dairyman. Continuing, Mr. Dickson says: "Milk is one of the most perfect of feeds and it is well known by all dairymen that calves suckled by their mothers grow best and have the sleekest coats During normaltimes it would be uneconomical to raise a calf on whole milk. If a calf were allowed one gallon of milk per day, valued at 30 cents per gallon, it would consume $45 00 worth of milk in addition to other feeds by the time it it is five months old. It may be permissible to feed very valuable calves and show calves on whole milk.

"The use of making condensed milk, cheese, and for market milk, and the value of fat for butter-makink has resulted in the development of new systems of calf feeding. Whole milk is used sparingly in all methods of calf feeding, being gradually substitute by skim milk

"In skim milk are found all the solids of the milk except the major part of the butterfat, which has gone into the cream. The special value of skim milk as a supplement to other feeds depend upon the proteins, which are of an especially high quality, the vitimins, and the mineral matter. The composition of skim milk varies because of the cows. Skim milk from milk of a high average per cent fat contains more solids-not-fat, especially protein, than that from milk with a lowest test.

"For calves between the ages of two to six months", 16 to 20 pounds of skim milk is a daily allowance; however, if the skim milk is plentiful more may be fed to larger calves. The total amount of skim milk generally used in raising a calf to six months of age varies from 2,000 to 3,00 pounds.

"With cheap milk and butterfat more skim milk should be used in raising calves. The skim milk supplies the proteins, minerals, and vitamins which are necessary for growth and development. The fat in the ration must be supplied by some grain mixture."

Redmon Will Retain His State Prohi Job

Attorney General John R. Saunders today said Prohibition Inspector C. H. Redmon would not be discharged for his activity against transits carrying beer over the narrow neck of Virginia between Kentucky and Tennessee, but that he has been instructed not to molest them further.

An investigation of Inspector Redmon's activities was launched by attorney general's office after Alex Shaffer, automobile man of Knoxville, Tenn., complained of treatment received when arrested on the few hundred yards of highway in Virginia on the road from Middlesboro, Ky., to Knoxville, Tenn.

Shaffer said he was taken to Jonesville, Lee county, held overnight in jail, and fined $66.50 for transporting a few bottles of beer, which had been legalized in Kentucky.

Subsequently charges against Redmon were filed with the attorney general's office by the mayor of Cumberland Gap, which Major E. R. Gibson, assistant attorney general termed "very serious."

Mr. Saunders said Shaffer pleaded guilty to charges prefered against him by Redmon.

He said a maze of testimonys had been received on both sides of the controversy which developed over Redmon's activities after the arrest.

Major Gibson, who conducted the investigation in discussing the matter Monday reiterated his opinion that there should be some satisfactory way to handle 3.2 per cent beer and wine in Virginia. He said that practically every officer with whom he had talked asserted it is absolutely impossible to enforce the prohibition law in this state.

Kolo, A Family Medicine

Mrs. G. F. Rice, Twila, Ky., says: "My baby had been sick all summer suffering from diarrhoea. I had tried different kinds of medicines and received no results. When I would get the diarrhoea checked the child would become so constipated that I would have to give him a laxative, then his bowels would become irritated again and the diarrhoea would come back. I was very much discouraged. I tried Scalf's Kolo, (which was then known as Scalf's Flux & Diarrhoea Remedy) and to my surprise the child was all right in a few days. I keep a bottle of Kolo in my home for my family all the time. I am sure Kolo is the best medicine I have ever used in cases of irritation of the bowels."

Scalf's Kolo is sold by leading stores, or write New Scalf Medicine Co., Harlan, Ky.

Virginia's Survey At Chicago

Richmond—The Geological resources of Virginia are well shown in an exhibit at the Century of progress Exposition at Chicago, the exhibit being sponsored by the Virginia Geological Survey, a division of the State Commission on Conservation and Development with the cooperation of Shenandoah Valley, Inc., Endless Caverns, Grand Caverns, Luray Caverns and Natural Bridge, all of Virginia.

The compositite exhibit was arranged and installed by Mr. William M. McGill, Assistant State Geologist of Virginia, and is being displayed in Booth 4, Group S, Geology Section, Main Floor of the Hall of Science, under the sponsorship of the Virginia Geological Survey.

Among the interesting features of the exhibit, which is, in reality, a coordinated group of exhibits displaying and illustrating several different types and varieties of geological resources and features are (1) a collection of 5 geologic maps of Virginia illustrating the progress and development of geologic mapping in Virginia from 1833 to 1933; (2) a representative collection about 35 specimens of rock and minerals of economic importance from Virginia; (3) a collection of manufactured rock products from Virginia including slate, soapstone, diabase, building stone, sand and gravel, marble, ocher, gypsum products, and ilmenite concentrates and by-products;(4) a collection of more than 30 varieties of fossil soells from the famous Yorktown area; (5) a complete set of publications of the Virginia Geological Survey; (6) a small grotto or cavern chamber containing a variety of syecimens of actual travertine formations such as stalactites, stalagmites, helictites, flowstone, shields, sheets and other types from Endless, Grand and Luray caverns; (7) a small illuminated model of Endless Caverns; (8) a realistic and picturesque diorama of Natural Bridge; and (9) transparencies (illuminated and colored photographs) of Grand and Luray Caverns.

The main purpose of the cooperation exhibit is to show to the visitors to A Century of Progress the geology, mineral resources and natural wonders of Virginia and to illustrate the progress made in the study and development of Virginia's economic resources in the past century It is believed that the exhibit of the Geological Survey and the contributing Natural Wonder organizations will give favorable publicity to and develop great interest in Virginia, and the State Commission on Conservation and Development; the Virginia Geological Survey and the Natural Wonders of the State.

History in the Churches

Church services based upon the qualities of courage, vision and faith which characterize the spirit of the American people in moral and economic crises of the past, are admirably illustrated by the Chronicles of America Photoplays. This series of fifteen motion picture subjects reveals in accurate reproductions the most dramatic and crucial events of our early history. Notes accompanying the films supply a useful interpretation of the background of the action. There are also colored slides for close study of significant episodes and personalities. Ministers using these materials in churches, Sunday schools, men's club and missionary society meetings have attracted larger audiences than they had known for years. "The people went away with a greater consciousness of America's beginnings than ever before," is a typical comment.

A set of the Chronicles of America Photoplays presented by an unknown denor is available for use in twenty-four northern Virginia counties without rental charge, an advantage that is unique in Virginia. Descriptive literature and suggestions for effective use by church groups will be furnished to readers of The News upon request addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

ED. JOHNSON KILLED MONDAY

Ed. Johnson was accidentally killed Monday afternoon, while working on the courthouse at Jonesville, he was kiiled when a steel beam they were raising, weighing about five tons crushed him across the chest pinning him against the wall. The workers picked him up and started to carry him to the doctors office, but he died before they could get him there.

He was buried Tuesday at Rocklick.

BOOKS IN TOWN

Vardis Fisher's novel, just taken over by Doubleday, Doran, is in some ways a bit of an anachronism. Since Dreiser became a legend-or, as he is for most of us, amyth-we have been lulled into a forgetfulness of the dark forces within the common man. Isben, that prize man ahead of his time, has at last been dropping into place as a means of educating playwrights and the young, and we have been taking life according to Mr. Cabell's principle that realy polite people treat certain things as a parlor joke. But tremendous books will come, and it is in no disparaging sense that we name "In Tragic Life" such a one, even though in spirit it does smack faintly of the difficult nineteen-twenties, when life was spelled with a capital L and novelists still had to demonstrate their earnestness about sex by writing with a thundering, serious attitude and one foot in the phychology department of a state university. Probably the presence of this flavor is due largely to association in the mind of the reader, for it is the misfortune of Fisher's book to come before but after a flood of gloomy propaganda and pseudo scientific muck which is vaguely resembles. However, neither mention of its imperfections nor apology for them can alter the large fact that for size of conception, for simplicity and skill of execution, for beauty of ianguage and imagery, and for fine human sympathy, "In Tragic Life" stands out above current literature as one of those volums which have the potentialities of great-

The story is incomplete, being the first part of a tetralogy. No denouement is necessary to interest, however, for this is the story of a life, and the urge forward is not toward the end but in natural manner from page to page. Vridar Hunter, grandson of an Idaho pioneer, spent his childhood in the utter loneliness of a wild, isolated farm. His mother was a proud, pinched woman with puritan tendencies, his father a giant who no longer showed inclination toward and pastime except subduing the stuborn soil. Except for his younger brother and sister, these two were the only human being he saw the year around. Work alone occupied the days, and the Bible was the only guide. Delicate, sensitive, and ravening with curiosity, Vridar suffered pain, humiliation, fear, and shame, in all shades of their meaning, and hid them all. The farm was a terriable place, full of storms and the sickening blood of animals and his father's infrequent but unforgetable rages. He loved his father for his strength, but feared him; he adored his mother, but never trusted her after he found she had deceived him about the various secrets a child wants unveiled. Aspiring, and knowing no other outlet for his aspirations, he decided he was destined to be a prophet, and he received a revelation. This idea, halfway encouraged by his parents, persisted in him until he was nearly grown.

Virdar's father and mother, though bound to the soil, were not clods. Their ambition was all for their children, and they acquire the reutation of misers by their bitter saving to the boys to school. Vrida was to be a lawyer, Mertyl a doctor. And to school they went, miles away from home, living mostly in shacks by themselves and cooking their own food. Vridar suffered much from bullies but fought desperately when forced and usually won. His fear of girls and embarrassment in their presence was one of his greatest miseries, and after a while all the terror of a lonely adolescnce closed in on him. Horrified by his own desires and actions, still steeper in the notion of sin, he conceived the idea that he was going mad. As time went on and this delusion grew upon him, it seemed possible that he actually was becoming hopelessly insane. His fights against his condition, and the result, fill the last pages of the book.

Unpleasant in subject matter, "In Tragic Life" is immensely combining the awful and the beautiful and the pitiful with the sympathetic in a skilful progression which cannot fail to win the applause of any reader who can stand the strength of its movement.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

He went over with "Abie's Irish Rose". That was good for three years. After he played "Shylock" in the English actors' annual Shakespearian production. After that the leading roles in "The Kibitzer" and in "The Wonder Bar" were good for two seasons more.

Jersey Breeders To Hold Field Day

The Virginia Jersey Cattle Club will hold its annual summer field day July 12th, at Charles T. Neale's "Rocklands Farm" near Gordonsville, According to plans completed by the Jersey Club board of directors, this field day promises to be one of the most important dairy events in Virginia this summer. An unusual program has been prepared, inculdingaspeakers Jersy breeders of state and national prominence.

Jersey breeders in Albermarle, Madison, Orange, Prince William, and Spotsylvania counties will act as hosts to Jersey visitors from other parts of the state. T. T. Curtis, Orange, secretary of the Virginia Jersey Cattle Club, is now preparing invitations to go to all Jersey breeders listed in the state. From information that has already leaked out the field day will be no ordinary affair andis believed that few Jersey breeders will miss the occasion.

"The Rocklands" and its Jersey herd are real attractions in themselves. The farm is one of Virginia's newer Jersey establishments that has made signal accomplishments in Jersey herd building in the past few years. The farm is owned and operated by Charles T. Neale and is well known for many miles for the practical farm and dairy management program in operation there. Excellent demonstrations in Jersey, Aberdeen Angus and southdown sheep breeding, as well as in pasture improvment, may be observed by all who visit "The Rocklands." The farm is beautifully located and in every way will provide every visiting Jersey breeder an instructive and enjoyable time during the field day.

"The Rockland" herd has been on Register of Merits and Dairy Herd Improvement Association test long enough for the senior herd sire to become meritoriously proved sire. The daughters of this bull will be an object lesson worth while to all who attend the field day, for in them is exemplified successful accomplishment through proper breeding and selection. The whole herd of 50 cows produced on an average of 418 pounds of butterfat per cow in the state herd improvement association during the past year The herd is also tested for Bang's disease. How these and other practical things are accomplished on this farm should be of interest to all who attend the field day.

Harry Stewart — "Wife, dear, there is something wrong with this cake."

Wife—"That shows what you know about it. The cook book says it's perfectly delicious."

Mayme Ruth the infant baby of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Stewart, has a serious case of the flu.

Bud Haynes and Rellie Pendegraph, surprised their friends when they got married Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bledsoe was calling on W. P. Waddle Sunday afternoon.

Everette Wolfver had another fine cow to die last week.

Lee Iceman of Pennington and Mary Osborne was married Saturday night.

Mrs. E. B. Waddle and daughter was calling on Mrs. W. P. Ward one day recently.

Mrs. W. P. Ward and Children Ella and Herbert spent Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. R. L. Travis on Cane Creek.

The stork made his visit here recently and left a boy at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Harber and left a girl at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bascom Smyth.

Mrs. Lloyd King and son of Louisville, Ky., have been the guests at the home of John and Ballard King the past week.

Mrs. George Akins and children and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hobbs of Cadet was visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Scalf recently.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Ward and children enjoyed a motor trip to the Cove Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Daughtery gave a social party Saturday night in honor of Hermon Moony. Those present were: Roth and Dare Hobbs, Vivian Gilbert, Ruth King, Verdie Mosley, Baylor and J. T. Daugherty, Clifton Stewart and the Baumgarner boys from Ben Hur made the music.

J. B. Wolfe, of Dryden, was a visitor in Pennington, Saturday.

Unusual Program Jersey Field Day

According to reports recently released by officers of the Virginia Jersey Cattle Club, the Jersey breeders who attend the State Jersey Field day at "The Rocklands" near Gordonsville July 12th, will be treated to one of the most interesting programs ever staged on such an occasions. The program as prepared, is likely to be both interesting and instructive as many phases of dairying will be touched on by well known authorities during the day.

Lynn Copeland, superintendant of the Registry of Merit of the American Jersey Cattle Club, will be one of the field day speakers. Mr. Copeland is well known among the dairymen throughout the country for his research investigations in dairy cattle breeding. The published results of his work have been the subject of reference for many who attempt to improve their cattle breeding. Improved dairy cattle breeding if not first importance in dairying now and Virginia Jersey breeders will no doubt benefit greatly from Mr. Copeland's address of "Making Dairy Progress With Records."

Professor O. G. Schaefer, formerly of the University of Minnesota, now associated with the editorly staff of "Successful Dairying" will stage a lecture demonstration of the Official Jersey herd classification, as sponsored by the American Jersey Cattle Club. Prof. Schaefer is a nationally known Jersey judge as well as on authority on dairying. His classification and officials grading of all the cattle in The Rocklands herd should be extremely interesting to all the field day guests.

Professor T. B. Hutcheson, head of V. P. I. agronomy department, who is well known throughout Virginia and other states for his work in the forage and grain crop field, will dicuss "Pasture Improvement as a Basis for Profitable Dairying". No doubt results of pasture improvement research now being conducted at V. P. I. will be drawn upon for new facts bearing upon this field of agricultural endeavor.

Wheatly Johnson, president of the Virginia Jersey Cattle Club, and T. T. Curtis, secretary, will have charge of the day's program. H. E. Dennison, field secretary of the American Jersy Cattle Club, and others will cooperate with the program. Albemarle, Madison, Orange, Prince William and Spotsylvania county Jersey breeders, the field day hosts, are leaving nothing undone for the comfort and entertainment of visiting Jersey breeders.

DEATH VISITS LONESOME PINE

By Virgil Q. Wells

Raymond Christopher sleeps tonigh in north Jenkins cemetery in the lonely hills of Letcher County, Ky while thousands of admirers over the Lonesome Pine League circuit mourn his passing with great sadness existing among players on every club because of the loss of a man who was a hard fighter in the game and a maker of many friends.

No greater sadness or misfortune has ever been experienced in all athletic history in Jenkins or Letcher County than that of the death of Raymond say promoters of baseball and fans from Kentucky. July 4th was passed sadly with the cancelation of a game at Norton as death came at 1:00 a. m. Tuesday.

The entire Jenkins ball club managed by Mr. Creech has established a reputation over the entire league circuit as being real gentlemen and sportsmen from the very begining.

Virginians by the hundreds join in expressing their sorrow and regrets that such a calmity would visit the Lonesome Pine to take away a most outstanding player.

Mr. Christopher received the deathly blow in the Dryden-Jenkins game at Dryden Sunday afternoon when hit just above the ear by a wild pitched ball from the delivery of Tyler Horton. Physicians tried desperately to aid in every possible way since the accident occured but all efforts were in vain. An exray picture showed the skull fractured in three ways, each fatally serious.

The left fielder has had wide experience in baseball playing in various leagues mainly in coal field leagues in West Virginia. He was speedily becoming an outstanding player in the Lonesome Pine League.

LAID CORNERSTONE FOR NEW COUNTY COURTHOUSE

Judge Preston Campbell and C. Bascom Slemp Delivered Addresses at Jonesville, Tuesday

One of the most outstanding events in Southwest Virginia was the dedication of the new Lee county court house at Jonesville, at which Judge Preston W. Campbell of Abingdon, chief justice of the state supreme court of appeals, delivered the principal address. Judge E. W. Pennington of Pennington Gap presided.

Judge Campbell in his brief talk touched upon historical developments particularly in Lee county and the Southwest, spoke of many noted lawyers which this region has produced and explained the relationship of the bar and judiciary to the peaple.

Judge Ezra T. Carter of Gate City introduced Judge Campbell. C. Bascom Slemp of Big Stone Gap spoke briefly.

Included in the large crowd gathered at the dedication were many from Pennington Gap, whose citizens had recently engaged in a friendly contest with Jonesville to decide which town would get the new court house, built following the destruction by fire of the old one several months ago.

To make the Jonesville celebration complete, the local team won the first half championship of the Powell Valley League by downing Calvin 9 to 5.

The old courthouse erected in 1767, immediately following the Civil War, was destroyed by fire on February 13, 1933, with an estimated loss of $90,000 Court was in session at the time, and the fire, originating in the attic, broke through the ceiling above the head of the presiding judge, Ezra T. Carter, before it was discovered. The building was partially covered by insurance, and was completely destroyed, despite valiant work by volunteer firemen and others summoned from nearby towns.

The county board of supervisors, meeting two days later, voted to rebuild the courthouse immediately, appropriating a large sum for the purpose. Work was begun within the next few weeks. The courthouse will be ready for occupancy in time for the November session of the county circuit court, it is believed.

Lee county boasts an interesting history. It was formed from part of Washington county in 1793, and named for Richard "Lighthorse Harry" Lee of Revolutionary fame, and father of General Robert E. Lee, the great Confederate cheiftain.

The site for the county seat was selected from a tract of land owned by Frederick Jones, for whom Jonesville was named. It is located at the head of Powell's Valley and commands one of the most beautiful views in Southwest Virginia.

The first county court was held at Jonesville in 1793, before the erection of a courthouse building. Before the next session of the court, however the county erected a frame building for county purposes, and this building did service until 1864, when it was destroyed by fire by Federal soldiers raiding in the vicinity.

At this time Henry J. Morgan, a young man, afterwards judge of the court, was serving as court clerk. Upon receiving information that the Federal troops were nearing Jonesville, he commandered several wagons and hauled away most of the deed books and other important records to a cave located in the Rocky Station district of the county, where they remained concealed until the close of the war.

The courthouse was maintained in temporary quarters for about two years after the war, when the people of the county, despite existing economic conditions, erected a new courthouse, modeling it after the plan adopted by numerous other Virginia counties, typical of which is the Washington county courthouse at Abingdon. The material used was brick native stone and timber.

In 1909, after the Louisville and Nashville Railway built a line through the county, missing the county seat but touching at Pennington Gap, eight miles distance, an election was held at the instance of the latter town, residents of which sought to remove the county seat to Pennington Gap. The election resulted in an overwhelming vote to retain the county seat at Jonesville.

When the courthouse was destroyed in February of this year, the residents of Pennington Gap again secured an order for an election to determine whether the county seat should be removed to their town. This second election, held June 12, again resulted in an overwhelming vote in favor of Jonesville. Despite the impending election, work was begun several weeks previously on the Jonesville site, the board of supervisors including one member from the district in which Pennington Gap is located, being of the unanimous opinion that Jonesville was the logical site for the county seat.

Judge Preston W. Campbell, cheif justice of the supreme court of appeals, was elected to the court to succeed Judge Joseph W. Kelly, of Bristol, upon the resignation from the court in January, 1923. Judge Kelly was later appointed cheif justice by Governor E. Lee Trinkle upon the death of his successor in office. Judge Campbell qualified as a member of the court in February 1, 1924, and has since been one of the court's most active and popular members, succeeding to the chief justiceship on January 1, 1932. Prior to ascending to the supreme court, he wac commonwealth's attorney and judge of the Washington county circuit court.

Judge Ezra T. Carter, of the Lee county court, is a brother of C. S. Carter, president of the Dominion National Bank of Bristol, and former president of the Virginia Bankers Association.

LEE SMOKIES WIN TWO

The Lee Smokies won both of their games over the week end to lead the second half of the Lonesome Pine League.

They defeated Lynch here Saturday by the score of 10 to 0. Lefty Scott was on the mound for the Smokies he was master of the Lynch batters from the beginning allowing only five scattered hits.

The Lee Smokies were hitting anything Lynch had to offer, Lynch having to use three pitchers starting with Charlie Farmer, a former Lee County boy, he lasted three innings, then he was relieved by Wells who only lasted one inning, he was relieved by Beckett who finished the game

The Lee Smokies collected 10 runs and 18 hits off the three Lynch pitchers.

The leading hitters were Spears for Lynch getting a double and two singles out of four trips to the plate, for the Smokies Barker getting two doubles and a single out of three trips, Rogers and Scott getting three hits each out of five trips, Henderson getting three for six trips, T. Harber and Young getting two for four trips.

The Lee Smokies defeated Coeburn at Coeburn, Sunday by the score of 8 to 6 in 10 innings, this was more of a hitting duel than a pitching duel, Coeburn had an entirely new outfit of players. Baker pitched for the Lee Smokies until the eighth when he had to be relieved by Scott. Four home runs were hit in this game, 1 by the Smokies and three by Coeburn, Young hit one for the Smokies and for Coeburn, Maiden, Travett and Rosenbaum hit homers. Maiden hit his home run in the eighth with two men on bases tying the score.

BOOKS AROUND TOWN

"Ahthon Adverse", by Henry Allen, is a master work. The author, who has created much comment and attention with poetry and biography, will be from now on one of the best novelist written in English. A good poet, he will be known as a great novelist with one novel. The appearance of "Anthony Adverse" is full cause for excitement to all literature followers of events in literary history; for it is impossible to believe that the book will fall short of being a distinctive and monumental novel a novel toward which later readers turn with the very safe feeling that real and important work is to be found.

It seems that Hervey Allen, in his seven years of writing this novel, brought to it, under high pressure, all of the decisions and imaginings of a life which has been full of high action, serious scholarship, the keenest enthusiasm and sensitiveness. For it is the fullest and most heart quickening acconnt of one man's life that America has produced; but it is also the story of everyman, and the story of the particular family of everyman who came from complex, warring, Catholic Europe into the rude America of the early eighteen hundreds to become the American.

The central figures the illegitimate orphan named Anthony is Hervey Allen, or you, or myself, in the exciting human sense His sins are ours, his dreams beside the convent well where the early mornings of his life were spent are our dreams; but they are the sins and dreams of man forever. It is in this respect above all others that "Anthony Adverse" exceeds to such a great degree the normally excellent literary achievement. A huge volume of panoramic entertainment that it moves with Stevensonian swiftness and excitement, it is at the same time the spiritual record of man's struggles with his own soul and the elements of the known and imagined universe.

Educated under Roman Catholic influences; Anthony begins a worldly life with a large Scotch commercial firm in the city-state of Livorno. Here the first delights and the first temptations of fleshly man assail him. He is seduced, he falls innocently in love, he becomes efficient in matters of finance, he faces his first religious doubts. Before his windows pass the world The great Napoleon comes into the city with the glittering companies of his victorious soldiers. And here early maturity, with its confusions, overtakes Anthony and turns him toward the marvelous but complex outer world.

There are no elements in the full history of man which do not present themselves to Anthony, either in physical reality or by implication. Love in its lowest and highest forms, the martyr's attitude in religion, the mammalian pragmatism of the world, the seductive and destroying contacts with Africa and the slave trade in the eighteen hundreds all become a part of the amazing web which makes up this life. In the brilliance and flow of the action it is hard to believe that a philosoyhical drama, making its comments on man's most important beliefs, is unfolding itself. Superficially this is only a most moving adventure tale which takes in Europe and Africa, and finally the new and crude America. Beneath and within is realism and transcendentalism. In sum it is a book which draws on all that past literary art has offered, to become, without quibble, a master work of our literature, a spiritual record of man moving toward a new world that is at the same time an old of loss and mixed happiness.

PELLAGRA

HOW TO TREAT IT

Five of Scalf's Remedies are used in treatment Pellagra. However, no patient will need all of them at a time.

All Pellagra patients should take SCALF'S INDIAN RIVER TONIC to aid digestion and help purify the blood.

If the patient suffers from diarrhoea — SCALF'S KOLO should be taken to relieve the bowel troubles.

If the skin is rough, scaley or blistered—SCALF'S SKIN OINTMENT should be used.

For sore mouth and burning skin, apply SCALF'S PAIN KILLER and CATARRH BALM.

If Scalf's Indian River Tonic will RELIEVE, it should also PREVENT. Because of the widespread of this DREADFUL DISEASE called PELLAGRA, every one should be careful to keep the system in the best possible condition.

If your druggist fails to have any of the above medicines write New Scalf Medicine Co., Harlan, Ky.

Accomplishes Notable Work for State

Richmond—William E. Carson, chairman of the State Commission on Conservation and Development in conference with Robert Feckner, regional director of Forestry Emergency Relief, secured this week for Virginia eight additional forestry comps, making possible the enrollment of 1,600 more young men in the state.

Such work at this time is exceedingly valuable to the whole Commonwealth. The camps, it is thought, will last for at least one year and will, besides providing employment for the 1,600 men enrolled, bring a revenue to the state estimated at something like $1,500.00.

When Governor Pollard learned of the success attending the latest efforts of Mr. Carson at Washington in securing eight additional camps for Virginia, he expressed in highest terms his commendation and praise. The activities of chairman Carson in securing forestry camps for Virginia will result easily in bringing millions of dollars into the Commonwealth, will give employment to large numbers of worthy citizens and is already performing a most necessary and imperative service in protecting and improving the timbered areas of the state.

Vacancies Announced By Marines

A listed number of applicants will be selected for enlistment in the United States Marine Corps at the Recruiting Office, Post Office Building, Savannah, Ga., during the month of July.

The Marine Corps maintains high standards of educational and physical qualifications of those who are selected for enlistment. Only young men of good moral charactet are accepted for enlistment whose educational qualifications are equivalent to those of a graduate of a high school.

Many Marines are selected for sea duty on board battleships and cruisers and are given splendid opportunity for travel. During an enlistment one will travel thousands of miles and will visit many strange and interesting lands.

Application blanks will be mailed high school graduates upon request.

BEST IN THE STATE

"The Virginian", issued by the students of Virginia High School, Bristol, has just been declared the best hign school annual in the state. "The Commodore" of Maury High in Norfolk ranked first among the larger city schools, and "Big Cheif" of Powhatan leads the rural schools.

In competition for school magazines "The Missile" of Petersburg was awarded first honors. "The Bumble Bee" of Lane High, Charlottesville, leads the entries from the schools of medium size.

Two points of particular interest are involved in these results of contests conducted by the Virginia High School League. First, Bristol's victory is a genuine triumph of ingenuity, in that the cost of its annuals was sharply curtailed and the usual process of printing and illustrating were by inexpensive reproductions of pages typed and arranged almost entirely by the students. Second, Lane's score for magazines gives that school highert standing among schools of its class and re call to Charlottesville the honor tropy which in May was temporarily presented to Vinton High.

Comments of the judges upon these contests may be obtained free by application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Lynching Record Six Months of 1933

There were 6 lynchings in the first six months of 1933. This number is one more than the number 5 for the first 6 months of 1932. In 1928, that is ten years ago, there were 15 persons lynched in the first six months of the year.

During the first six months of 1933 there were 14 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Of these 3 were in Northern States and 11 in Southern States. In 9 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented; in the 5 other instances force was used to rebel the would be lynchers; thus a total of 17 persons, 6 whites and 11 Negroes, were saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the persons lynched 2 were white and 4 were Negros. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; murder, 4; charge not reported, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number iu each State are as follows: Georgia, 1; Louisiana, 2; Tennessee, 2; Texas, 1.

The Book Sampler

From Germany has come just about the most timely piely piece of literature penned by the hand of man. It is a little story, gaily pathetic, of the clerk, Pinneberg who marries Bunny and takes her away from work in a shop to have a baby. Invisible to his limited understanding struggle underlying causes; all he knows is that he loses a couple of jobs, but in spite of lack he is happy in his wife and child. From page to page, simple incident leads the reader on to viarious enjoyment of this young's homely adventures. But why call this work timely, say you? After delving into the squalor of of similar conditions, it's a pretty good thing to be able to look on the brighter side and that's just what Hans Fallada does in "Little Man, What Now?,'.

Poverty, and struggle of a sternet sort form the theme of a novel of a far-Western boyhood, called truly "In Tragic Life". Vridar Hunter is sensitive; his early years are warped by the cruelty of nature and the hardness of his parents. Schooling he has, at the price of unnatural solitude, or unkindness accorded to members of any group who do not conform to the general pattern. Thrown back upon himself in the difficult period of adolescence, Vridar interprets his awakening impulse as sin, black and utter. Confusion and fear of insanity follow, then by some miracle the dawning purpose to conquer fear. In some ways this work, through powerful, is incomplete; but notice that this is the first volume of a proposed tetralogy, the second now being written by Vardis Fisher.

Christopher Morley's "Mandarin in Manhattan" watches another part of this stream of life flow by, making gently philosophic comments. His are the most delightful bits of humor that have blessed the presses in many years, and with him you'll agree that his little poems "fit every length of thought".

These books are among those that may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Potash and Perlmutter

Montague Glass's favorite story about his experience as author of the Potash & Perlmutter plays which are now on the NBC Blue Network, is about the first opening in England. Gus York (nee Schlesinger) and Bobby Leonard (nee Lefkowitz were in the title roles. The tryout was at Plymouth. The mayor of Plymouth introduced the play. Before a curtain showing the Mayflower leaving Plymouth on the first trip to Plymouth, Massachusetts, he said: "Ladies and gentlemen, we are gathered here tonight to witness the English premiere of a play which has been very successful across the waters. It is a play concerning the typical American business men played by gentlemen whose ancestors, no doubt, left our fair port 300 years ago on this gallant ship (pointing to the curtain) bound for the rockbound coast of North America."

Montague Glass, who writes the Potash and Perlmutter dramas now on the NBC Blue Network, never was in the garment business in spite of all reports to the contrary. He was a lawyer in New York twenty-five years ago when he first introduced his characters in a short story. In these days, he says, everybody knew he had never been in the garment business because they wrote him letters showing him where he is all wrong about it. The famous partners are on the air Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock E. D. S. T.

Old Fiddlers Convention

Richmond—The ole fiddlers, banjoists and dulcimer players of five States are tuning up and getting ready for the third White Top Folk Music Festival, which is scheduled for August 11 and 12 on one of the most beautiful mountain peaks of Virginia, 5600 feet above sea level. The announcement coming from Washington that Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the festival has stimulated interest in the event and officials anticipate so many entries that a series of local elimination "contests" may be held in order to give time for the completion of the program in the two days on which it is scheduled.

Officials of the the Folk Festival held a conference in Richmond recently at which John Powell, famous Pianoist, Mrs. John P. Buchanon, chairman of the department of American Music of the National Federation of Music Clubs and first sponsor of the Festival and officials of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce were in attendance.

Plans for the festival were worked out in detail and several new features were discussed and will be added. Among them will be exibit of handicraft of the mountain people, hookrugs and shawls add the many items which the women of the Virginia highlands manufacture for their own use and which are among the finest examples of this type of work to be found in the country.

Folk Tales will be added to the program and evening sessions will be held high up on the mountain, around campfires, where the mountain people will tell the quaint old legends of the mountains which have been handed down to them for generations, while around other campfires impromptu programs of fiddling and buck and wing and square dancing will be in progress. During the last Festival the mountaineers and their city guests who attended the festival danced all through the nights. When one "orchestra" tired another was ready to spring to the platform and continue the music and as the dancers fell out there were always others ready to take their places, in fact waiting eagerly on the sidelines for a vacancy.

Richard Crane of Westover, the president of the Virginia Music Festival Association, will be one of those who will attend the Festival. Another will be Percy McKaye, dramatist and pageant master of national note, Mr. and Mrs. Winston Wilkenson, of the University of Virginia and George P. Jackson and his Old Harp Singers of Nashville who will give a program of "White Spirituals."

Officials called into consultation on the program at White Top voted unanimously against incorporating anything into the program which will be in the nature of a show. The program is to be a festival, pure and simple, they determined, in which all members of the audience will have a part if they so desire. While competitions will be held prior to the fertival, in all probability, yet no one will be eliminated from taking part. These competitions will only determined which are the best in the opinion of the judges so that they may be given a preferred place on the programs.

Festival officials realize that they cannot cover all all the mountain country with these contests and those who do not come to the eliminations will be welcome to compete in the main contests.

Often during the contests the judges plan to call on the audience to produce even more contestants. Anyone, from anywhere, will have a chance to exhibit his or her skill. Last year, according to officials of the Festival, some of the most skilled of the musicians were women and the first prize for individual "fiddling" went to a young girl from Bristol.

A unique feature of the festival will be playing by John Powell, the noted pianist, who will play a few of the tunes which he has written or which have been written by others, based on the melodies of centuries ago which have been preserved by the mountain musicians, who have handed them down from father to son.

Officials of several national organizations interested in folks music and the handiwork of the mountaineers, will be on hand to hear the pure melodies of old, see the oldest steps and the finest workmanship of the mountain people.

Highway Department officials have already done a great deal of work on the mountain road leading to White Top Mountain and have made it wide enough for traffic to pass both ways. Last year it was a one way road and it was necessary to regulate traffic and let it pass in only one way at a time,

White Top is exceeded in height by only one other mountain in Virginia and is well suited to such a festival, for it is almost flat "on top" and half the top is covered with heavy blue grass and is clear of timber, while the other half is covered with fine Spruce Timber.

Just prior to the festival Mr. Powell will give a course of Lectures at Rosacre, at Marion, home of Mrs. Buchanan, for a class of those interested in these talks. He will give a recital on August 10th at Marion to include a number of compositions based on folk tunes which will be heard at the festival on August 11. The lectures will be nine in number, based on English - American Folk Music, its origin, modes, collecting and recording, use of it in compositions, etc., with native musicians to record tunes from playing them to illustrate the lectures. It is hoped to make this lecture course a permanent, annual feature of the festival.

Broadcast Changed

Blacksburg—The schedule on which V. P. I. and the Virginia Agricultural Extension Division have been presenting programs over WDBJ, Roanoke, for the past three and one-half years, has been changed from the half-hour each week day to one hour twice a week during July and August. The new schedule offers programs of information and music from 12 to 1 Tuesdays and Fridays, begining July 7th.

Presentations in this series will each be designed as a unit, the informational features being sufficiently related to interest a special group of listeners. It is planned to have regularly scheduled music to intersperse several addresses.

The first program under this arrangement will be offered for dairymen especially. Jersey Field Day, quality cream, and milk cooling equipment, together with a general summary of the dairy and other agricultural situations will be discussed. Friday, July 11, the discussion will be especially for livestock growers.

Topics for home owners interested in fruits, vegetables, flowers and their culture and care will be offered July 14. Discussio: s on foods, clothing, and household expenses will be given July 18.

July 21 a series of broadcasts in connection with summer meetings on the campus will be started. Material representative of the 4-H and rural ministers short courses will be given July 21, 25 and 28.

If satisfactory arrangements can be made, special features from the combined meetings of the American Country Life Association, the Virginia Farmers Institute, the Virginia Homemakers Association, and the Institute of Rural Affairs, held in Blacksburg Aug. 1-4, will be given during the first part of next month, followed by more especially planned programs.

Notice to Scouts

All registered Scouts and all Scouts desiring to register are requested to meet at the High School Thursday night July 6th at 7:15 p. m. Patrols will be organized. An over night hike will be planned, and the annual summer camp will be discussed at this meeting.

Federal Road Aid Scheduled July 1

Washington — Federal funds for highway construction under the 400,000,000 appropriation in the recovery act will be ready for distribution to the states July 1st under regulations designed to promote the greatest possible employment.

The regulations for funds, drawn up by department of agriculture officials with the approval of the special board for public works, provide that "human labor, wherever practicable and economical, shall be used, instead of machinery."

Other regulations relative to labor provide for a 30 hour week, where feasible, for an except administrative and supervisor positions, and require that employes be selected from qualified workers referred by employment agencies designated by the United States employment service Minimum wages for skilled and unskilled labor shall be prescribed in contracts for construction.

Preference in employment will be given first to ex-service men with dependents, citizens and aliens who intended to become citizens who are residents of the political subdivision in which the work is to be done, and to citizens and aliens intending to become citizens who are residents of the state. Convict labor, and the use of materials manufactured by convicts is forbidden.

The $400,000,000 is to be alloted the state one-eighth on the basis of population, and seven-eighths under the three-way allotment of the federal highway act. The measure provided for allotments equally on the basis of population, area and highway mileage.

Other regulations provide that not more than half the funds apportioned to a state can be used on federal highway project extensions outside municipalities. Not less than 25 per cent shall be applied to extensions into and through municipalities, and not more than 25 per cent shall be used for the satisfactory completion of at least 90 per cent of the initial limiting federal-aid highways systems in the state.

The projects must be initiated by the state. The state highway department shall submit to the secretary of agriculture and through him to the special board for public works a preliminary assignment showing the proposed assignments of funds. Unless exceptions are granted projects must be provided in at least 75 per cent of the counties.

A Son

Born to Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Ely, Sunday, July 2nd a fine boy, who will go by the name of David Alexander Ely.

Plans Rushed For Special Session

Richmond—Responding to the wishes of the General Assembly, Governor Pollard was today prepared to issue a call for a special session of the lawmakers, August 10 being set for date of assembly. In his message to the solons, the govenor, it is thought, will mention only three subjects beer, repeal and public works. In order that every section of the state shall be represented Governor Pollard has announced that special elections will be held on August 7 to fill nine vacancies in the legislature.

William R. Shands, director of the division of legislative research and drafting, and C. H. Morrisett, state tax commissioner, have been requested by the governor to start at once gathering factual material for the use of the assembly when it meets next month. The governor will advise that the lawmakers direct their efforts to consideration and action on the legalization of 3 2 beer in Virginia, the setting up of machinery for action on the proposal to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, and such measure as are necessary to the state's full participation in the Federal program for national recovery.

"We are preparing to make the work of the assembly as easy as possible", said the governor. "If the boys want to come here and sweat in August, I will be here to sweat with them". To expedite matters the executive and his advisors have concentrated upon a study of beer law administration, collecting copies of statues of other states for consideration.

The Poll of house and senate members was undertaken by Senator William M. Tuck, of Halifax, for the upper branch, and Delegate John Q. Rhodes, of Louisa, for the lower chamber. Replies piled in upon them rapidly, and within a short time the necessary number of applications for a called session had been secured.

Upon presenting these telegrams to Govenor Pollard the executive assured them with a smile that the call would be issued. There has been no proposal, so far, that the special session act upon a state liquor control plan, which matter, it is thought by many, had best be considered by the regular sesion of 1934, composed of members freshly elected by the people.

GIVES BASIS OF SOUND BANKING

Speaker Outlines Threefold Cooperation Between Bankers, Government Officials and the Public to Maintain Bank Standards

TWO elements beside the bankers themselves are required in order to give the nation universally the type of banking it should have, Francis H. Sisson, president of the American Bankers Association, declared in a recent address. He said that the efficiency of government officials upon whom the people rely to supervise the banks properly, and the patronage of the people themselves are factors in the kind of banks a community shall have.

"There can be no question that the people of the United States should have banks immune from failure and wholly free from bad or questionable banking," Mr. Sisson said. "It is not enough, as President Roosevelt has said, that while some bankers had been incompetent or dishonest, this was not true in the vast majority of our banks. A situation should exist in which there is not even a small minority of bankers open to question. There should be no room for dishonesty or incompetency to exercise any influence in banking anywhere.

"While bad faith and bad management enter the human factor in all types of business, their effects in banking should be surrounded by such special safeguards as to render them no longer a factor in bank failures. The responsibility for bringing this about, however, cannot rest upon the bankers alone, for the means to accomplish it are not wholly in their hands. There are other essential elements.

"One is the efficiency of government supervision. Since we rely so greatly upon supervision, it may, unless it is of the highest order in safeguarding the public interest, create a sense of false security. Supervision should render bad banking impossible, but it has failed to do so. There was supervision by presumably the highest type of bank supervisors in every one of the instances of questionable banking that has shocked the attention of the country during the past three years. Therefore a thorough strengthening of supervision is clearly called for if the people are to rely on it for the protection of their interests.

The Public's Part

"Another essential factor in maintaining good banks involves the part played by the public in banking. There is certainly a responsibility on the people themselves to support that type of banker whose rigid adherence to sound principles makes a sound bank, rather than to give their patronage to the easy going banker who may be easier to do business with, but whose methods create a weak bank.

"Bank customers are charged with a great responsibility in protecting the safety of their banks in respect to their utilization of the assets of the banks as borrowers. Banks have failed because many of their loans and securities, created in good faith by bankers in cooperating with the business interests of the country, proved unsound under subsequent conditions. An unsound loan is created by the borrower as well as the banker. A bank is only as sound as its community, and this applies also to the banking structure as a whole in relation to the economic condition of the nation as a whole.

A Semi-Public Institution

"A bank is truly a semi-public institution, but in a reciprocal sense—it has its obligations to the public, but so has the public equal obligations to the bank. No one who has not sound banking principles at heart has any business in a bank whether as banker or customer.

"The banker is a semi-public servant. He is charged with the heaviest of responsibilities and obligations that occur in our economic life. But he can meet these fully only through the cooperation of good laws, good public officials who are empowered to exercise authority over his bank, and good business methods on the part of business men generally who utilize his bank. Only through such cooperation by all elements in our nation's community life can we be assured of a failure-proof banking structure.

"The Administration at Washington has taken hold of this problem with a firm grasp of essentials and is exercising splendid leadership toward the desired end. The strongest feature of the government program will be found in recognizing the joint responsibility of the public, of business and of government officials together with the bankers themselves in creating the kind of banking the nation should have.

"The fundamental needs of banking reform are fewer banks, more adequately capitalized, better supervised and better managed, standardization of laws and methods, greater and more intelligent cooperation between government and banking, better understanding by the public of its joint responsibility in maintaining banking solvency and efficiency—these primary principles should be the foundation of our banking system of the future. For such a system no guaranty of deposits would be necessary and the depositors would be fully protected."

A BANK REFLECTS THE LIFE ABOUT IT

Loans and Investments on Which Condition of a Bank Depends Determined by the Kind of Business Surrounding It

POLITICAL and popular misapprehensions toward banking are due to little else than failure to realize that it is what the people themselves do that the condition of banking reflects, and that banking cannot of itself reflect events and conditions other than those that actually originate from surrounding circumstances, Francis H. Sisson, President of the American Bankers Association, says in an article in Forum Magazine.

The character of an institution's notes and investments indicates whether it is in the farm regions, a manufacturing center, a mercantile neighborhood or a great financial district, he says, and furthermore, besides identifying the institution as to its locality, a study of its notes will equally clearly indicate the economic conditions surrounding it.

A Picture of the Farm Districts

"If a farm district bank's note history shows that its loans rise and fall with the normal cycle of production and marketing of the products of the region, it may be taken as an index of economic good health for the locality," he says. "But if, over a period, the loan volume shows a dwindling trend it may mean a region that is losing ground, —becoming exhausted or being robbed of business by another community. Or if a large proportion of the loans are not paid at maturity but are chronically renewed, or if stocks or bonds or real estate have to be taken as additional security, these too have economic significances, reflecting perhaps crop failure, over-production or inefficient, high cost farming methods in a highly competitive national or world market, such as wheat. Inevitably all these facts are reflected in the condition of the local banks.

City Banks, Too

"If the loans of a bank in a manufacturing or merchandising field show a smoothly running coordination with production and distribution they, too, mirror a healthy economic situation. Or there may be here also signs that reflect growing unfavorable conditions, such as excessive loan renewals, over-enthusiasm and therefore over-expansion of credit extended to makers or dealers in particular products, and similar circumstances. Similar conditions apply to banks engaged in financing the securities markets.

"The foregoing is merely suggestive of the infinite aspects of the life outwardly surrounding the banks which form and control their internal conditions. Although these facts seem obvious enough, the discussions and criticisms that have raged about the banks often appear to set them apart as somehow separate from the lives of our people, casting forth a malignant influence upon agriculture, industry and trade from forces generated wholly within themselves.

Fate of Banks and People Interwoven

"The truth of the matter is that the fate of the banks is inseparably interwoven with the fate of the rest of the people and of the nation. What happened to the country happened to the banks and what happened to the banks is in no way different or detached from what happened to the people. They are all part of the same pattern, of the same continuous stream of events. No one element in that stream of events can be called the cause of depression.

"If the banks caused trouble to some of our people it was because they were irresistibly forced to pass on troubles that came to them from other people. These troubles impaired the values of their securities and customers' notes—and rendered some unable, in turn, to pay back to other customers their deposits that had been properly used to create these loans and investments."

The Bank as a Rebuilder

IN place of a 3 per cent loss on an investment of $40,000, a large New York savings bank is now getting 6 per cent profit on an investment of $50,000, because it had the good business judgment to spend $40,000 in modernizing a group of 40-year-old tenement houses on the lower East Side which it was forced to take over on mortgage foreclosure, says an article in the American Bankers Association Journal. A year or two ago the owner, who had always kept up his mortgage payments, began to neglect the property, it became run down and the tenants began to leave.

The bank remodeled the buildings completely, putting in an oil-burning heating plant, incinerators and other modern changes, with the result the buildings are now entirely rented, and there is $14,000 a year coming in instead of several thousand going out. At that rate the improvements will pay for themselves in three years.

This same bank has done 15 other renovation jobs similar to this, and all have proved profitable. The bank has its own architects and is employing seven painters.

THE PRICE OF BUSINESS SPEED

Banking Institute Speaker Says That Bank Failures Followed Business Failures

CHICAGO, Ill.—Many appear to think that failures occur only to banks, but the complete story of business shows that failures of American banks have followed the failures of business enterprises, and have not been a cause of those failures, Dr. Harold Stonier, National Educational Director of the American Bankers Association, declared in a recent address here before the American Institute of Banking.

"It is true that we have had more failures in our banks than in the banks of a number of other countries," he said. "It is also true that we have had more failures in drug stores, grocery stores, railroads, and in every other type of business enterprise. At the same time, it must be said that we still have left after all our failures, more drug stores, more grocery stores, more railroads, and more banks than any other country."

People do not realize, he said, that we have in excess of 108 banks which have been in existence over a century and we have more than 2,000 banks which have been in existence over 50 years.

"In other words, we have more banks over 100 years of age than any other country—we have more banks over 50 years of age than any country in the world," he declared. "The American banking system has not fallen down—it is not in danger of decay. Such failures as it has experienced are due to the price we pay for too rapid development of business enterprises, but that is the American spirit."

U. S. GOVERNMENT GREATEST BANKER

Runs Fifty-two Financing Institutions With Investment of Two Billion Dollars—Thirty-nine Agricultural

AMERICA'S biggest banker today is the Federal Government which is now operating fifty-two financing institutions, says Professor John Hanna of Columbia University in the American Bankers Association Journal.

"Forty of these are owned entirely by the Government," he says. "In twelve more the Government has already a two-thirds interest. Thirty-seven are intended to be permanent. Twenty-five of the permanent ones and fourteen of the temporary ones are agricultural.

"The capital stock held by the United States in these banks has a par value of $1,380,000,000. The Government's total investment is nearly $2,000,000,000. Resources of these institutions exceed $3,000,000,000. In addition the Government has detailed supervision over fifty-one mortgage banks, operating under Federal charter.

"The Government also supervises 4,600 local agricultural loan associations with Federal charters. All this takes no account of the relations of the Government to the twelve Federal Reserve banks, nor of the authority recently given to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to buy preferred stock in national and state commercial banks."

Consolidation Called For

The President has ordered the consolidation of the agricultural credit agencies into the new Farm Credit Administration, says Professor Hanna. He expresses the opinion that before the consolidation of the agricultural financing agencies too much machinery had been created to administer the financing institutions which the Government either owns or supervises.

"Existing institutions represent a considerable differentiation of function and any consolidation should be preceded by a careful survey of the actual activities of the various institutions," he continues. "The only consolidation the Administration has announced is that of the agricultural credit agencies in the Farm Credit Administration. As a permanent solution this arrangement is too closely bound up with politics."

The Value of the Colleges

THE physical properties and endowments of institutions of higher education in the United States are now valued at over $2,500,000,000. Endowments alone aggregate over $1,150,000,000. Thirty colleges and universities have endowments that average $18,000,000. Eleven out of the 30 have endowments that average $35,000,000. A very few of them have endowments of over $100,000,000 each. The annual operating income of institutions of higher learning amounts to over $500,000,000. Gifts to them in a single year have reached a total of $233,000,000.

WHEAT TAXABLE JULY 9TH

The Bures of Internal Revenue released today the following statement with respect to taxes imposed on wheat products:

"Under the Agriculture Adjustmens Act by proclamation of the Secretary of Agriculture and regulations issued by him and approved by the President, a processing tax on the first moment of July 9, 1933. Effective at the same time, compensating taxes are imposed upon all importations made on and after that date of articles processed wholly or in chief values from wheat.

Taxes are also imposed on floor stocks of articles processed wholly or in chief value from wheat, held for sale or other dispositions on July 9, 1933, except separate retail stocks. Articles processed wholly or in chief values from wheat include flour, cereal preparations made chiefly from wheat, bread, crackens, pretzels, macaroni and spaghetti, noodles. Such articles held for sale or other disposition on the effective date by millers, wholesalers and jobbers are taxable All flour owned by bakers, macroni manufactures, hotels, restaurants and other establishments who bake for sale any products whose ingredient of chief va ue is wheat or processed from wheat is taxable.

Retail dealers will not be required to pay tax on separate retail stocks of flour, macaroni, breakfast foods, bread, etc., which are sold to consumers within thirty days from July 9, 1933, but all retail stocks held on July 9, 1933, which are still on hand at the end of thirty days from that date are taxable in the hands of the retailer.

The enforcement of the floor tax provisions of the act will require returns from approximately 35,000 bakers, between 400,000 and 500,000 retailers, and about 4,000 millers.

Geo. V. Shelburne

Geo. V. Shelburne was killed and a number of other people were injured by man car wreck at Cloversplint, Ky., on Friday June 30th.

Mr. Shelburne was for many years one of the leading cattle dealer of South West Virginia, this fact was clearly demonstrated by so many farmers and cattle men from Lee and adjoining counties attending his funeral.

He was honored by those with whom he had traded for his fair dealings.

Since the trading conditions for some few years had not been very favorable. He had turned his attention to a position at the mine of which his brother-in-law H. T. Graham, formerly of Lee County is General Manager and he to had made many friends.

The funeral was conducted at his home Church Sunday July 2nd, 10:30 a. m. of which he had been a consistient and active member, by his pastor W. B. Moore, assisted by Rev. Parker, local pastor of M. E. Church South and Rev. A. E. Robertson of Gibson Station.

Attendance was the largest of any funeral in this section. Attesting his popularity as well as being connected with two of the best known families of the county having married the daughter of the late J. H. Graham.

Girls Win

Rose Hill—In the contest between the boys and girls of the Epworth League the girls presented their side of the argument Sunday night and there being only two judges, they defeated the boys 2 to 0. The boys will give the girls a picnic on Willow Tree road Thursday evening.

The girls gave an inspiring program and boys showed good sportsmanship in defeat. More interesting progams will follow at the League meetings.

SMOKIES CONTINUE LEAGUE LEAD

By Virgil Q. Wacks

After a week end visit down among the cabins in the cotton, in Atlanta and Macon, Georgia I find that the Atlanta sports writers are riding the Knoxville Smokies heavily, calling them Edgar Allen's Knoxville surprises because they have attained the league leadership in the Southern League after being in the cellar during the first half the same case in the Lonesome Pine League with the Lee Smokies, as they continue to tighten their hold on the league leadership, is some what different among fans and news papers in our neighboring league town because they are well convinced that R. P. Stewarts Smokies have the goods and are well on their way to the top of the flag pole with 4 victories and no defeats thus far in the second half parade.

Lynch follows a close second with 3 wins and only 1 defeat with a greatly improved club which is going to give those in first division plenty to worry about.

Bonny Hollinsworth made himself a place in the hearts of the Lee Smoky fans Sunday as he breezed his zipping fast ball by the Jenkins club allowing only

Cowboy Barker is not only a hard hitting centerfielder to the Smoky fans, he seems to have turned dentist as he was asked by a smoky fan last week to remove a jaw tooth for the fan with a pair of pliers, cowboy did so, and the fan went away happy with the big tooth in his hand.

"I should say not. I would be broke if I had."

LEE SMOKIES WIN TWO

The Lee Smokies won both of their games over the week end defeating Norton and Jenkins.

They defeated Norton here Saturday by the score of 7 to 5. Jim Cox started on the mound for Norton but had to be relieved in the second inning, Peters relieving him and finishing the game. Lefty Scott went the route for the Smokies and only allowed five runs and eight hits and struck out thirteen men. Cox for Norton allowed three hits and two runs Peters allowed seven hits and five runs. The leading hitters were: Brooks for Norton getting two hits out of four trips to the plate. For the Smokies Cook getting two hits out of three trips, Rogers and Scott getting two hits out of four trips to the plate.

Pennington Boys Among Twelve High

Ernest Myers, Buddy Skidmore and Orville Kelly represented the Pennington Gap F. F. A'S as their judging team at the Blacksburg Rally in June. Ernest Myers stood among the twelve high men in the first two day's judging. The third day Ernest stood sixth in this special class of twelve who "placed" the first two days and who competed in special judging the third day. This is the best showing yet made by a stock judging team from Pennington at the Rally. Both the other boys did very creditable work. Instructor S. L. Carpenter accompanied the boys on their trip.

June Output Chevrolet Increased

Production of new Chevrolet cars and trucks in June more than doubled output for the corresponding month last year and was the largest single month's production in two years, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company announced today.

With a total output of 81,573 units, June compares with 36,142 in June last year and with 68,538 in May this year, previously the best month since June, 1931, Mr. Knudsen said.

He emphasized that the high June total was made possible only by the splendid morale and co-operation extended by the more than 36,000 employes now on the company payrolls. Mr. Knudsen said he hoped, through the share-the-work plan practing by his company in recent years, to hold the employment curve flatter this summer than has been possible in past seasons.

Every effort has been made through the depression, he pointed out, to provide for the regular Chevrolet workers. Through regulating hours of work per week to retail demand, and by building up parts stocks in lean seasons, it has been possible for eleven months of each year since 1929 to hold Chevrolet payrolls to within ten per cent of the average of 32,500 men, Mr. Knudsen stated.

June production exceeding May is unusual in his company's experience, Mr. Knudsen said, since either April or May are normally peak months of the year.

PELLAGRA

HOW TO TREAT IT

Five of Scalf's Remedies are used in treatment Pellagra. However, no patient will need all of them at a time.

All Pellagra patients should take SCALF'S INDIAN RIVER TONIC to aid digestion and help purify the blood.

If the patient suffers from diarrhoea — SCALF'S KOLO should be taken to relieve the bowel troubles.

If the skin is rough, scaley or blistered—SCALF'S SKIN OINTMENT should be used.

For sore mouth and burning skin, apply SCALF'S PAIN KILLER and CATARRH BALM.

If Scalf's Indian River Tonic will RELIEVE, it should also PREVENT. Because of the widespread of this DREADFUL DISEASE called PELLAGRA, every one should be careful to keep the system in the best possible condition.

If your druggist fails to have any of the above medicines write New Scalf Medicine Co., Harlan, Ky.

More Atheletics in the Schools

Add to the effects of the economic depression the decreasing importance of interscholastic atheletic contests among Virginia schools. It is an expensive procedure to transport atheletic teams from one town to another. An adequate substitute of satisfying sports within the single school has long been sought by school authorities. Evidence that one activity is being developed to answer the need in some degree is afforded in the report of medals awarded during the year for excellence in local literary and athletic contests.

These local contests put emphasis upon parcipation by all pupils and reward them for success in reaching various standards of achievement; the pupil's competitive instinct operates to correct his own weakness rather than to triumph over his fellows. Schools utilizing this program of play and physical fitness increased by one-fourth during the year, and the number of successful participants who received gold, silver or bronze medals rose from 819 to 935.

The contests are adaptable to the uses of all kinds and sizes of schools. Complete information about them will be furnished by the Virginia High School League, Extension Division, University, Virginia.

STEEL ALONE IS NOT ENOUGH!

CHEVROLET

CHEVROLET Why is it that every 12-cylinder and 16-cylinder car in America has bodies of steel reinforced by hardwood? Why is it that every make of car selling for over $4000 uses bodies of exactly the same type? Why? For the same reason that Chevrolet uses it exclusively. Because every test and every experiment has definitely proved: STEEL ALONE IS NOT ENOUGH!

The trouble with steel alone is that it stands just so much shock and punishment! Steel alone is also inclined to rumble and rattle. BUT—when you put the two together—a heavy, staunch steel body over tough, solid hardwood—then the hardwood reinforces the steel—and vice versa! And the result: the strongest, safest type of body, such as Fisher builds for Chevrolet.

The Book Sampler

Population problems, dissatisfaction with boundaries and trade, nationalism are again rampant in opposition to the "brotherhood of man" theme which came out in chorus shortly after the war. With another boil threatening to rise on the world's neck, there is small wonder that, with bitter experience behind him, he examines into the symptoms of the last one, hoping to avoid what, to say the least, would be another very unpleasant experience.

A mild example of this symptomatic literature is Joseph A. Swain's "Beginning the Twentieth Century", starting with Europe of the 80's and 90's and tracing the growth of tendencies in philosophies, science, reforms and politics. Diplomatic history is especially treated in its change from prestige of individualistic leadership to rottenness and vacillation of petty bureaucrats who had no thought beyond keeping on the good side of John or Jacques Citizen or anybody else at home. The profound ignorance concerning European affairs of American statesmen at Versailles while other Allies were keenly bent on realizing national ambitions makes an enlightening section, (Contrary to W. E. Dodd's deification of Wilson, our war President's idealism has been accounted by some the basis for blunders that are still making for international unrest.) There is pretty staight talk in this important volume about conditions that in many ways approximate those prevalent today.

"A Century of Progress" is the subject of a symposium, edited by Charles A. Beard, composed of thinkers from Frank O. Lowden to Fiske Kimball and Henry Ford in relation to science, invention, literature, architecture and social reforms. Some of these Pollyannas are justified in their views when "progress" is termed "freedom within which the individual can grower", but on the other hand will ex-Governor Lowden please explain what more farm progress made in this period "Than in all the centuries since the dawn of times" is actually doing for the price of potatoes?

BOOKS & COWS

Though only fourteen years have passed since the Armistice, the leaders of the pre-war period seems as remote as Gladstone or Cavour. Publications of public documents since the war gives us better knowledge of this period than was possible fifty years after former wars. Already it is possible to write without passion the history of the war and immidiate post-war period.

Professor Langsam lists as the fundamental causes of the World War nationalism and irredentism, militarism and military alliances which dominate the civil powers of government, economic rivalry and imperialism, internatiotional anarchy and secret diplomoncy resulting from the lack of any machinery for the cooperation of nations. The immediate causes include the animosities between Seabia and Austria, the assassination of the Austrian archduke, Russian mobilization, France's refusal to remain neutral in a Russo-German war, and the invasion of Belgium by the German army which forced England th defend Belgium neutrality.

In a scant seventy pages the much abridged account of the war itself is compressed under such headings as operations in 1916, the war in the air, poison gas, propaganda, peace moves and war aims, and the new world. The narrative hastens through the Peace Conference and the treaties, the League of Nations, and reparations, stopping to give charactor sketches of the leaners in each instance. Wilson is pictured as no match for the crafty diplomats at Paris, as presumtious in assuming he spoke for the American people in his peace making; as in error in asking for the election of a Democrat Congress in 1918 and in going to Europe in person. His ideals were often over the popular head and he did not always fully explain them.

In less than five pages Professor Langsam enumerater with unusual clarity and force what is believed to be the twenty outstanding effects of the war on world conditions in general. These range from the sweeping away of four great autocracies to the need for the complete economic reorganization and rehabilitation of the world, from the distrust of democracy and rise of dictatorships to the great stimulus given science by the war, from the establishment of the League of Nations to the breakdown of religions. The remainder of the volume is really a country to analysis of the direction of these twenty effects of the war, covering all the European countries, Russia, Turkey, Japan, China, and the United States. Impartial and detailed accounts are given of the Soviet system, Facism, and the new Turkey.

Professor Langsam omits all treatment of the effects of the war on South American countries and stints the details of its effect of the British Dominions. To him Southeastern "Europe remains "Europe's witches' cauldron", Boundary rovision and restoration of the Hadsburg cloud Hungarian domestic and foreign affairs. Eastern boundaries, union with Austria, the repudiation of sole war guilt, reacquisition of her colonies, revision of reparations, and armament equality are the vital issues of Germany. Nationalism and the pressure of population on resources in Italy will complicate the future of international politics. The French character, with its thrift, prudence, realism, suspicious and jealousies, is at once the power and cause of worry to the French government, and a riddle to foreign statesmen. The failure of the efforts of statesmen to revive the economic health of Britain raises the serious question of whether "the sun of England's glory is set."

Glomily, the author concludes that virtually the same factors which led to the world war are rampant in the world today. Only by abandoning the path of reparations, debts, super-nationalism, and every heritage of the late war, can another catastrophe be avoided.

The volume has a splendid bibliography, a number of good maps, and several highly useful charts.

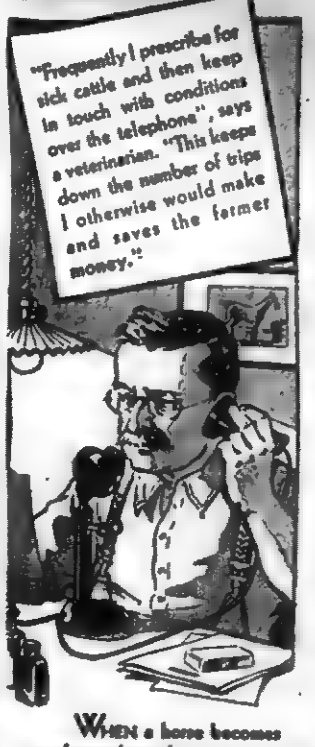
WHAT A VETERINARIAN SAYS ABOUT THE TELEPHONE . . .



"Frequently I prescribe for sick cattle and then keep in touch with conditions over the telephone", says a veterinarian. "This keeps down the number of trips I otherwise would make and saves the farmer money."

WHEN a horse becomes overheated or when cows get bloated from overeating, the difference of an hour or so may mean the saving of valuable live stock. ● The telephone has become indispensable to modern farm life. It brings help quickly in emergencies such as sudden illness and fire. Keeps the family in constant friendly touch with the neighbors. And the cost is so low as to be negligible.

Rev. P. H. Larmer

For four scores God allowed Rev. P. H. Larmer local preacher of the Pennington Gap M. E. Church, South to live and bless his community. Uncle Pete as he was affectionaly known in his neighborhood was born on Wallins Creek Lee County, Va., December 18, 1853. While still a schoolboy he was converted under the preaching of Rev. Reuben Steele, father of Rev. C. E. Steele and immediately joined the church. The record of his labors in the kingdom was a most worthy one for many years he served as superintendent of the Sunday school at Preston's Chapel his home church and throughout that period was also stewart and trustee. He was largely influential in making substantial repairs to the church building and was a member of the building committee that erected the present building at Roller's Chapel. He was licensed to preach December 7, 1888. by Rev. George D. French, since 1904 he had lived in Pennington Gap where his labors have been abundant for 23 years he served in the capacities of steward, trustee, local preacher and Sunday School superintendent, since that he had been most faithful as teacher of a class of young men in the Sunday School, Then in recognition of his services the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Pennington Gap charge in 1928 elected him superintendent emeritus of the Sunday School. Throughout the years brother Larmer's life had been b'essed with the companionship of a faithful wife, who has remained true since she gave him her pledge on their wedding day December 31, 1872. seven children blessed their home, five of whom are now living. There are also seven grand children, two great grand children. The church honored brother Larmer for his faithful and devoted service. He was deserved popular in Pennington Gap and was recognized as a christian leader by all religious groups regardless of denomination and despite his advanced age he was one of the most active members of his local congregation those who knew and loved him are confident that brother Larmer has layed down the cross to take up the crown. Brother Larmer for the past two years had been in bad health and grew more feeble each day up until his death, he passed away July 1st, 1933 and is at rest with Jesus.

Services were conducted Monday at the M. E. Church South at 2:30 by Rev. C. F. Watkins and assisted by Rev. M. H. Carder, Rev. W. D. White and Rev. W. B. Moore. The remains were laid to rest at the Cecil Cemetery.

He is survived by his faithful wife Mrs. P. H. Larmer, four daughters, Mrs. F. S. Howard, Pennington Gap, Mrs. W. A. VanHuss, Corbin, Ky, Mrs. J. V. Walker, Corbin, Ky., Mrs. Mattie Daugherty, Pennington, Gap. One son, Curtis A. Larmer, Dallis, Texas. Seven Grand-children, Mrs. O. C. Economy

In their efforts to increase the economy and efficiency of their operations railroads of this country have been and still are engaged in extensive research work, it is stated by the July L&N Employes' Magazine which points to a special appropriation of $2, 000,000 authorized by the railroads and recently spent in a study of air brakes; to the recently completed scientific investigation, at a cost of $125,000, of the various types of draft gears; and to the development of a plan for chemically treating water used in locomotive boilers to prevent corrosion and scale, which have saved the roads several millions of dollars. A survey of 44 roads, the items states, indicates that on these lines there are investigations about completed or under way on 272 subjects pertaining to locomotives, freight and passenger on 272 subjects pertaining to locomotives, freight and passenger cars, mechanical methods and tools, engineering, signals, and telephone and telegraph installations.

Abandonment of 32 Mile Branch Road

Announcement of the abandonment of 32 miles of branch line, between Princeton Junction, Tenn., and Gracey. Ky., is made by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in the July issue of the L&N Employes.' Magaxine. The last train run over this line, known as the Clarksville & Princeton Branch, on May 13.

The decline of business on the branch to the point where its operation was no longer justified was the reason for its abandonment. It has been operated by the L&N since December 1, 1887.

"How did you get that black eye, Mrs. Higgins?"

"Yes."

"And I wished him many happy returns."

Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever

Richmond—A representative of the Virginia State Department of Health was called recently to investigate two cases of a somewhat unusual disease in this State. It was found that both cases were caused by a tick bite which six or seven days later produced a red rash, pains in the head and muscles in the back and limbs of the patient, and a feverish condition. After a laboratory examination of the blood, these two cases were pronounced Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, Eastern Type.

This disease was first recognized and identified as such in several sections of the Rocky Mountain districts of the United States. It was found to be similar, in many respects, to typhus Fever, which occurs occasionally in epidemic form in varions parts of the world. It is also similar to Endemic Typhus Fever or Brill's disease which has been recognized in the United States for the past thirty years.

Recent research carried on by the United States Public Health Service has shown that there are two types of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. One is the Western Type which is extremely fatal and is transmitted by the tick commonly found in the Rocky Mountain area. More recently it has been found that a similar disease occasionally in the eastern part of the United States is transmitted by the common tick found dogs or in the woods. The Eastern type of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever is not as fatal as the Western Type, but should be guarded against. Persons living in the country and those who are exposed to ticks found in the woods or dogs should take every precaution to avoid being bitten.

This disease is probably quite widely spead over the United States. Since the year 1931, when efforts were first begun to recognize it, about fifty cases have been reported to the Virginia State Department of health. The fatality from Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, Eastern Type, is sufficiently high to make it advisable that all persons take precautions to prevent possible bites by wood ticks or dog ticks.

Mother—Willie, please keep quite. My head is just about to split.

Willie—Aw, gee, Ma. If I keep quite can I see it split?

"Why does a red-headed woman always marry a meek man?"

"She doesn't. He just gets that way."

Deer Missionary of Augusta County

Richmond—Carl H. Nolting, Chairman of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, reports that last year a fawn was found lying in a public road in one of our eastern counties. It was turned over to the Game Warden who properly delivered it to the State Game Farm in New Kent County, were deer, in addition to quail and wild turkeys, are raised for distribution throughout the State. It was necessary to feed the fawn on a bottle at first, but he thrived nicely and developed into a healthy young buck.

This Spring he was sent to the Big Level Refuge in the Natural Bridge National Forest, near Stuarts Draft, in Augusta County, to be liberated with other deer that Justus H. Cline procured for this Refuge.

Owing to his having been raised by hand he was very tame. While apparently enjoying his freedom he did not forget his human friends and makes regular visits to the surrounding residents. He comes to their homes in perfect confidence of a generous welcome. The children pet and fondle him, give him sugar, salt or bread, and he seems to enjoy their companionship. After his visit he returns to the Refuge. It takes about two weeks to make his rounds and when the time approaches, the children, as well as the grown-ups, eagerly look for him. It is said that he is the best missionary for the conservation of our wild life that the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries has ever sent out.

New Rules

Completing a study that was begun in 1927 the L&N Railroad has revised and republished its operating rules pertaining to train movements and appartenant services, it is announced in the L&N Employes' Magazines for July. The new book is entitled "Rules of the Transportation Department" and went into effect on the road July 1. The purpose of the change was to increase the safety and efficiency of train operation, it is said. All transportation officers and employes of the road verse required to undergo a thorough examination on the new rules prior to the date of their effectiveness.

Bob—That so? What does she believe?

Evelyn—That she can wear a number two shoe on a number six foot.

"Tom is horrid. When we were out tonight a little bug flew into my mouth, and I asked him what that was a sign of."

"What did he say it meant?"

"That I should keep my mouth shut."

DISPELS MYSTERY OF BANK BUSINESS

Country Banker Explains to Neighbors How Banking Cooperates With Other Business

A COUNTRY banker recently prepared the following simplified statement for his neighbors on just how a bank goes about helping them:

"It is the most important part of a bank's business to lend money. Of all the money deposited in a bank, the law requires that a certain percentage be kept on hand as a reserve to meet the demands of depositors. It is the business of its officers to lend the balance conservatively and safely.

"The loans of a properly managed bank are invariably made to [illegible] it believes are able to repay, and always on condition that they be repaid at a stipulated time.

"The promise of an individual to repay a loan to a bank on a certain date is as sacredly inviolable as the promise of a bank to repay its depositors on demand, or, in the case of a [illegible] of deposit, on the date it falls due. When it comes to be known of an individual that he 'always pays,' his credit is established and his bank is always glad to extend him needed accommodations.

"A well managed bank never capitalizes industries. That is, it does not place its loans in fixed form, but puts them where they are to be used for temporary requirements and where they will be taken up at the time specified.

How a Bank Lends

"It is not the function of a bank to become a partner in industries, nor could it be legitimately done with the money of depositors. Its loans must be kept in 'liquid' form, —that is, repayable in cash at stated intervals.

"A bank must use the greatest discrimination in making loans. A stranger cannot expect accommodations. It is customary for the borrower to make a statement of his financial affairs, which is kept in the bank's records. It is a punishable offense to make a false statement for the purpose of borrowing [illegible].

"Naturally, in their dealing with the regular depositors of the bank, its officers become well acquainted with their characters and their resources and are thus in a position to determine how large a line of credit each one is entitled to. That is one of the great advantages of being a bank depositor.

"The man who knows how to get into debt wisely, that is, who borrows money with which to make more money through legitimate enterprise, is the borrower whom the bank is looking for. By the frank interchange of opinion and a free discussion of various projects, the borrower is often guided and helped by his banker.

"In order to procure a line of credit at a bank three things are important:

"1. A statement of assets showing a basis of credit in the way of invested capital, or collateral of sufficient value to cover amount of loan, or

"2. An endorser whose credit is established at the bank; and

"3. Average deposits of a sufficient amount to justify the extension of the desired accommodation."

AS WILL ROGERS SEES IT

Will Rogers recently told why the banks had got into trouble. "Don't blame it all on the bankers," he said. "When we all needed money they loaned it to us—but when they needed it we couldn't pay it back."

Advertising Aids Business Revival

NEW YORK—Aggressive concerns are expanding business by effective advertising despite, depressed business conditions, declared A. W. Diller, advertising counsel, at a bankers' conference here recently.

"Is 1933 a good year in which to advertise?" Mr. Diller asked. "Yes, if 1933 is a good year to stay in business, to reinforce the public's confidence in you, to put more business on the books. There is new business to be had today and aggressive companies are getting it. But new business will come in only if you go out for it. Advertising certainly goes out for it.

"Will people read newspaper advertisements these days? They will read anything that interests them. There are plenty of present-day arguments for business. Instead of asking 'How often should newspaper advertising appear,' it would be better to ask 'How often is it wise these days to neglect contacts with possible customers?'

"Advertising men are being pressed to cut down advertising expenditures and use small newspaper space. Too short copy often degenerates into a mere reminder that you are still on earth. Cut down your talk to a man to a mere 'how do you do' and 'goodbye' and you won't get very far with him. The best advertisements are those which guide the reader. You can't get much guidance in a small advertisement. Newspaper advertising can warm up the reader even though he is not an immediate prospect."

Berta — Did you say he doesn't know how to kiss?

Nora—No, I said he didn't know how to kiss.

Hyde—Too bad about Blane going blind. What does he do for a living?

"Yes" said the self made man, "I was left without a mother and father at nine months, and ever since I've had to battle along for myself."

"How did you manage to support yourself at nine months?"

"I crawled to a baby show and won the first prize."

Hoaxer—My uncle is feeling pretty sore.

Coaxer—Which uncle?

Hoaxer—Carbuncle.

Father—Don't you speak to him any more?

Daughter—No? Whenever I pass him I give him the geological survey.

"Geological survey?"

"Yes, that's what's commonly known as the stony stare."

Sergeant—Say. Top, how would you like to lend a friend a five?

"I hope you got my check!"

"Yes, twice—once from you and once from the bank!"

Him—Oh, well, we'll split the furniture.

Her (coldly)—Go ahead. I wouldn't even waste an ax on the junk.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Well, all I know is what I read in the papers and learn from the Lonesome Pine League managers about new ways to win baseball games, for instance if you desire a home run and your player pops out a long fly and an outfielder catches it, just go charging out and insist that it's a homer and shove him on around the bases, thats a new one in baseball and they tell me it takes a great man to figure out new ones in the ole game these days.

Another one the Piner managers have tought me is if you have prepared a very strong club and your new twirler is getting his shoes knocked off, just lay it on the umpire because he is the poor guy that gets all the blame anyway. Thats bum business but I have seen it happen in recent games.

The game is never over until the third out is made in the last of the ninth proved to be a very true saying last week in the Pennington - Rogersville colored game, in the ninth frame the score stood 13 to 0 for Pennington when Rogersville came to bat, before the third out was made, Rogersville had put across 11 runs and a miscall on a runner going to third prohibited what might have been a victory for the visitors.

Coeburn has placed an order in both Bristol and Knoxville for new players with which they expect to improve their club to the extent of winning heavily in the last half with this idea in view some strong competition can be expected in Pennington Saturday.

The Lonesome Pine publicity departments had better hurry down before the Powell Valley clubs gets ahead of them in advertising and increase their attendance because the P. V. men have resorted to aeroplane advertising almost completely.

Birthday Party for H. C. T. Dean

Guests were: W. C. Fugate, W. S. Hamilton, R. D. Fugate, M. B. Richmond, Dr. J. P. Edmonds, D. V. Richmond, H. T. Ritchie, R. H. Blessing, W. E. Breeding and W. E. Blessing.

She was assisted in serving by her daughters, Misses Wandaleen and Louis Dean.

British guide (showing places of interest): "It was in this room that Lord Wellington received his first commission!"

American tourist (suddenly interested): "How much was it?"

Lee County Makes Health Gains

Statistics received by the Virginia State Department of Edcation indicate that remarkable health gains have been effected in Lee County during the last school session. Intensive immunization campaigns in the rural schools have brought the smallpox immunity status of their 7,500 children up to 100 per cent. Progress has been made also in the fight against diphtheria: the number of rural school children protected against this disease was raised from 320 to 4,400 an increase of 4,080 during one school session!

This work has been done in spite of financial difficulties, and much credit is due to S. J. Shelburne, School Superintendent for the county, members of the School Board and other local agencies.

Citizens of the county also have evidenced a spirit of cooperation with school and health officials in their efforts to raise the health standards of the county. For the past six months the Virginia State Department of Health has been mailing out return postal cards to the parents of every one-year old child in the State, asking if that child has been immunized against diphtheria, and if not, why not. No county or city in the State has sent in a proportionately larger number of positive answers than Lee county.

Stallard Re-Union

Dungannon — Dungannon will play host to the Stallard families of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, and mid-western states on Sunday July 30 when members of the Stallard family gather at Dungannon for the first annual re-union. Professor A. J. Wolfe, of Big Stone Gap, who has been writing a history of the Stallard families of the United States, and by whom the re-union was planned, states that a large number of members of the Stallard families of Indiana, Illinois, and other Mid-Western states are expected to attend the re-union. The official program has not yet been announced but tentative plans call for addresses by several of the attending Stallards, a sermon by Dr. J. N. Hillman, President of Emory and Henry College, and a business session to perfect a permanent organization of the Stallard families of this section. The Committee in charge requests that all persons attending bring lunches for themselves and one other.

Rose Hill

Miss Vera Bayless of Dunbar, W. Va., is here for an extended visit with relatives.

Lee Smokies motored to Lynch Sunday to play ball and run into some new rules in baseball.

The Smokies had Lynch 2 to 0 in the fourth inning, when Hennegar hit one to left field Tyler caught the ball and the umpire Stallard called it a home run, the managers of the Smokies decided that they could not win baseball like that so they left the game and came home.

The management decided that when they go back to Lynch to either leave the outfielders at home or on the bench as they are not needed in the outfield.

The outcome of this game is not known at this time.

It is understood that Jenkins, Coeburn and Norton combined to leave only four clubs in the Lonesome Pine League.

Lynch came out victorious in the game that was played there Sunday on the account of the Smokies leaving the field. Lynch and the Lee Smokies are now tied for first place.

WHY A PUBLIC LIBRARY

"The better part of every man's education is that which he gives himself, and it is for this that a good public library should furnish the opportunity and the means." James Russell Lowell.

The educational value of reading, both during school days and after they are over, is recognised by all thinking people today It is no use teaching to read unless books will be available after they leave shool. A taste for good books and the reading habit can best be acquired while young, and access to a larger collection than the school itself can afford is needed. Adults have discovered that they can keep on learning as long as they live and the present adult education movement is giving fresh emphasis to the need of adequate public libraries. The wholesome recreation afforded by reading good books is not less important. For these reasons, a progressive community today considers a public library an essential part of its equipment.

A good library is a community asset; a poor library an unwarranted expense. A first class library should go hand in hand with good schools, churches, and active, social civic organizations for it has much to contribute to all of there.

Pennington Gap is a progressive community, gifted with a good school, good churches, active social and civic organizations, but lacking a good library. Shall we allow this condition to exist? Other communities smaller than ours, have acquired public libraries, So can we. But first a movement must be started as a means to that end.

Available statistics for Virginia, as of 1931, show a population of 2,421,85I, of whom 1,131,327 live within service area of its 63 public libraries. But 1,290,524 people do not have public library service. Of the many counties in Virginia only 4 appropriated money for public libriaries; 69 counties are entirely without public library of any kind.

Isn't it fun to read? Thru the medium of the printed page Spain, India, Labrador, no place is too remote for easy travel thru books. You are free to choose a steamship or sailboat, mule back, dog sled, or jin-rikisha; you are unhampered by train schedules, fatigue or expense, you can travel in the fifteenth century with Columbus or in the twentieth with Lindberg. You may open a travel book only for a change of scene but the book will also bring you new experience, acquaintance with strange places, and understanding of people who differ from you.

The best of comrads are to be found in books; comrades who make no demands upon your friendship but always ready when you want them. In books one meets the greatest of men and women, sharing their ideas, enjoying their companionship. Books contain countless tales, funds of laughter, wonder, fascination, suspense,; a pagentry of imaginary people who seem as real as one's nearest neighbor.

With a library travel, companionship and recreation is readily available. Neither should we forget those books which deal directly with the different professions and occupations. But without a library such things are almost impossible because it would require large funds for one to have a private library containing the worthwhile books. Yet, a public library, after once started, can easily build to a good collection of intellectual, yet recreational, literary masterpieces.

In answer to "Why a Public Library in Pennington Gap?" let us heartily respond, "Why not a Public library for our fair city."

PELLAGRA

HOW TO TREAT IT

Five of Scalf's Remedies are used in treatment Pellagra. However, no patient will need all of them at a time.

All Pellagra patients should take SCALF'S INDIAN RIVER TONIC to aid digestion and help purify the blood.

If the patient suffers from diarrhoea — SCALF'S KOLO should be taken to relieve the bowel troubles.

If the skin is rough, scaley or blistered—SCALF'S SKIN OINTMENT should be used.

For sore mouth and burning skin, apply SCALF'S PAIN KILLER and CATARRH BALM.

If Scalf's Indian River Tonic will RELIEVE, it should also PREVENT. Because of the widespread of this DREADFUL DISEASE called PELLAGRA, every one should be careful to keep the system in the best possible condition.

If your druggist fails to have any of the above medicines write New Scalf Medicine Co., Harlan, Ky.

Safety Instruction

One of the essential elements of a child's education forced into the school by modern conditions is instruction in prevention of accidents. Not only the dangers of crowded city streets, but the other perils that threaten childhood must be explained and precautions practiced until knowledge is made functional, if America is to reduced the appalling accident rate which brands it as the most careless civilization in history. Safety instructions is shot through all the teachings of modern schools, reinforced by numerous devices of patrols, campaigns, and school projects.

An effective method of presenting the subjects to young children is the creation of accident-producing situations by means of pictures that serve as a basis of discussion. Forty slides with accompanying stories prepared by the supervisor of safety demonstration in the New York City schools tell graphic stories of the dangers of streets, bicycles, sleds, and water; of unrecognized perils in the home like poisons, knives, stairs, guns, sewing machines, electricity.

Any parent or teacher may use these slides without cost except for packing and postage. Applications should be addressed to the Extension Divisions, University, Virginia.

50 Year Men

The ranks of employes who have served the Louisville & Nashville Railroad for 50 years without a break have been augmented by four recent additions reported in the L&N Employes' Magazine for July. Diamond-studded gold buttons, tokens of the L&N's recognitions of half a century in its service, were awarded during June to J. M. J. DeBlanc, station baggage agent, New Orleans, La.; Frank J. Buehler, engineer, Louisville, Ky.; Felix Miller, hostler, Covington, Ky.; and William M. Cummings, colored, machinist helper, Boyles, Ala.

Clean Up Your Premises

As this is the season of the year in which Typhoid Fever occurs, it is important that every precaution should be taken to prevent its appearance and prevalence.

While we have adequately protested our water supply; having installed a eblorinating system; and having the water regularly tested; yet we expose ourselves to the infection if we neglect to maintain sanitary privies, or if we allow flies into our houses and having them come in contact with food upon our tables. To neglect the protection of Typhoid Vaccine is a certain risk, for this measure affords a certain immunization for two or three years.

We are in danger of the infection in several ways. Some one may contract the disease while away from home and bring it here or in the case of a stranger visiting with us. Then there are persons who have had the disease within the last year or two and are carriers; that is the germs still linger in their bowels and when these persons use unsanitary privies or handle food eaten by others they can transmit the disease. This explains many an otherwise unaccountable appearance of the disease in a healthy community.

Hence all householders should see that their premises are sanitated by preventing the free access of flies, and if a privy is used to have same so built that flies cannot contact with human excreta, and that the surrounding soil will not be polluted.

As far as I know, we have two cases in one family in our immediate vicinity; which case was contracted on a visit to a neighboring town, I know of no others. So while there is nothing to be alarmed about, we must not forget the danger of neglect.

Travel Increase On L. & N.

Travel on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in April of this year numbered 190,711 passengers, 84,022 more than were carried in the preceding month of March and 29,526 more than in April, 1932. This sudden increase in passenger business on the L&N is attributed to the inauguration of the two-cents-a-mile coach fare and the three cent fare in Pullman cars on April 1, according to the L&N Employes' Magazine for July.

L&N's passenger revenue for April 1933, the first month the reduced fares were in effect and the last months for which complete figures are available, showed an increase of 14.6 per cent over March 1933, but was 26.38 per cent under April 1932. This percentage of decrease, however, being substantially smaller than the percentage registered for the first three months of 1933 under the same period of 1932, is accepted by the road as an encouraging sign, especially as unofficial compilation indicate that revenues in May and June continued the upward trend. In April 1932 the average passenger on the L&N rode 93 miles and paid an average fare of $2.73; in March 1933 he traveled an average of 97 miles and paid an average fare of $2.74; in April 1933 he rode 99 miles and paid $1.70.

No Injury Month

The month of July has been designated by the Safety Department of the L&N Railroad as "No Injury Month" it is learned from the L&N Employes' Magazine for July. The road is conducting a campaign to go through the entire month without a reportable employe injury.

The Book Sampler

"Beginning the twentieth Century" has been mentioned as a mild example of symptomatic literature. Well, Walter C. Langsam's study can be called more than mild. "The World Since 1914" appears to be in a terrible state. All sorts of national prejudices are running wild; nobody's satisfied with anything boundries and reparations in particular. If reparations are paid, the payer harbors a grudge; if they aren't the would have been payee does a lot of explaining to to himself on the ground of national temperment. And that isn't all, if you don't believe it, read Mr. Langsam's book and be convinced.

Contrarawise, the world considerably after 1914 is going to be another Utopia. Some sort of a convulsion of nature or other kills off most of the inhabitants and the remainder collect on the shores of Africa. There everything is rosy, the climate is synthetic, one walks about in synthetic Greek tunics, sniffing balmy breezes savored with synthetic perfumes. But one natural trait is left-curiosity. The people are curious about that strange American civilization which had flourished so long before. So they set out on an expedition to the wild regions of Broadway. It's enough to make the reader homesick. Robert Herrick may have made a success of his other novels, but in "Sometime" he has created a situation that is too perfect. Aldous Huxley has done a much better job.

To top it all off, Storm Jameson thinks there's "No Time Like the Present". That title is applied to her war memories, a sort of introspective biography of thoughts and feelings in the days when things were strenuous, gay in spots, but very, very, pathetic. The writing is beautiful and courageous; though the chances are it will have little popular appeal, it's a pretty fine thing.

Books applicable to any time may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Social Hour

Rose Hill—Several young people met for a social hour in the vacant first floor of the hardware building. About twenty were present and enjoyed games, and dancing the Virginia reel. Chaperones were Mrs. Ross Stickley and Mrs. Anna Rice. Music was furnished by S. Witt, Silvester Thompson and H. B. Seale.

"I keep thinking this is Thursday."

"Why, this is Thursday."

"I know it-that's why I keep thinking about it."

L&N Grants Pensions to 14

Andrew Kohler, 67, engineer, 1742 Frankfort Avenue, Louisville, Ky., has, after serving the L&N Railroad for 49 years, retired from active work and has been granted a pension by that company.

Martin E. Batts, 65, roadmaster, Pensacola, Fla., 34 years.

Frederick W. Langebrake, 69, car repairer, 3014 Arlington St., Evansville, Ind., 38 years service.

"Are you the gentleman who gave my brother a dog last week?"

"I am the man."

"Well mother says to come and take them all back."

The teacher had called for some verses on the possiblity that spring might have arrived. Her youngsters all tackled the muse with somewhat doubtful results, save in one case. This won the contest:

It came upon a midnight clear When Congress passed a bill for beer.

Then folks who came from far and near Sang "Hail Columbia, Spring is here."

Organic and inorganic kingdoms was the professor's subject, but his pupils were dull.

"By way of illustration," he said patiently, "now if I shut my eyes-so-and drop my head-so-and remain perfectly still, you would say I was a clod. But I move I leap. Then what do you call me?"

There was a breathless pause for an instant; then one pupil ventured: "A clod-hopper, Sir!"

Newsboy: "Sir, my beautiful sister is dying of starvation. Will you buy the rest of my papers?"

Camping Grounds New Site of Camp

Richmond—Over a century and a quarter ago, General Cornwallis rested for the space of a week just outside of Williamsburg, before that historical denouement at Yorktown. The spot which the General selected was seven miles from the town, cut off from the highway by a dense forest and sloping gently down to the waters of the river James. This location is now the site of a beautiful 4-H Club camp which has been in operation for five successive summers.

Its sixth camping season has opened and through the months of July and August, it will be the playground for some 1,500 to 2,000 campers who are seeking rest, refreshment and recreation.

State health officials have inspected the grounds, installed several wells, and just this spring, two new pumps, constructed adequate sewage facilities, provided for the disposal of wast by installing an incinerator, and recommended other sanitary measures for the protection of the campers. Not satfied with ascertaining the condition of the drinking water at the beginning of the season, the State Department of Health makes periodical examinations of samples all during the summer.

This 4-H Club camp was begun in the interest of agricultural club members and largely through the efforts of Mr. C. J. Jehne, agricultural agent of the C. & O. Railroad. Through an arrangement made by him, the camp was begun and is still operated on a fifty-fifty basis for every $50 raised by the clubs members the railroad puts up fifty.

Members of the 4-H Clubs from the counties of Charles Aity, New Kent, Henrico and Accomac, all of which have contributed their quota toward the building of a lodge, enjoy the camp for five weeks during the summer. They come in groups of 100 to 125 at a time and remain for one or two weeks, at the end of which time they make way for others. Their camp program is planned and supervised by the Extension Division of V. P. I. A well planned schedule consisting of classes in agriculture, tennis, swimming and handicrafts, makes the time pass all too swiftly for the young folks.

Other groups of young people besides 4-H Club members are welcome at the camp, many church organizations taking advantage of the opportunities thus offered. Last year an agricultural club from Henderson, North Carolina, spent a happy two weeks at the camp, attracted by its beautiful location, modern sanitation and reasonable rates.

One week during the camp is open to adults. The program for this week has been made especially attractive by the direction, for several years past, of Miss Ella Gardener of the Children's Bureau in Washington. Miss Gardener has offered unusual opportunities for parents in teaching them many useful things concerning the all important task of child training.

Week ends are open to parties who are looking for a pleasant, comfortable vacation spot. Already the program for 1933 has been filled, except for one or two weeks in July. Arrangements can made by applying to Miss Mabel Massie, Home Demonstration Agent, Williamsburg, Va., or to Mr. V. B. Berty, Providence Forge, Va., both of whom are members of the Board of Directors for the camp and will be glad to furnish further information.

Ten Year Plan

On May 10 a car of strawberries was shipped from Decatur, Ala., via L&N RR to an Eastern market. It was, according to the July L&N Employes' Magazine, the first carload of strawberries ever shipped out of Decatur and provided the first concrete evidence that Decatur's Ten-Year Plan is actually functioning.

This plan, adopted in 1932 and sponsored by the Decatur Chamber of Commerce, purposes to coordinate the efforts of the farmer, the banker and the business man of that vicinity in a methodical ten-year campaign for mutual prosperity, the L&N Magazine explains.

The farmer is prevailed upon to supplement his cotton crop (upon which he has long depended for his cash income) with other crops that can be successfully grown and marketed; the banker and the business man aid in the established of local markets for certain products, and in arranging for the cooperative markets of the balance at profitable prices. A third aim of the plan is to increase the number of farm owners.

A total of ten carloads of strawberries were shipped from Decatur during the 1933 season, indicating that the balanced farm program of the Ten-Year Plan is actually under way.

Mistress: "You will cut and roll the lawn, weed the gravel path, pot some chrysanthemums, plant all those rose bushes, clean out the greenhouse, and see to the heating apparatus, and-"

New Gardner: "Excuse me, madam, but is this a day's work or a five-year plan?"

He: "Only a mother could love a face like yours."

She: "I'm about to inherit a fortune."

He: "I'm about to become a mother."

Rural Life

Blacksburg—A dramatic sketch of rural life, under the title "Hill and Dale", written by Henry O. Grosscloss, a founder of the Future farmers of America and professor of agricultural education at V. P. I., will be the headlining event on the college and extension division program over WDBJ at noon Friday.

The monthly review of economic trends in agriculture will be given by Dr. H. N. Young, agricultural economics, during the same program. Dr. W. J. Schoene will discuss the spray residue problem. And a few minutes will be used in a preview of a series of meetings which starts Friday.

Tuesday, July 25 the program will be divided between the Rural Minister's Summer School and the 4-H Club Short Course. "Meeting an Emergency" will be the general theme of the two talks given by leaders in the minister's school. The half of the program from the short course will include "Greetings to the Folks Back Home," by Jack Eller, state club president, Smyth County; "High Lights of the All Star Conference," Downing Wood, Big Chief, Rappahonnock county; "Work of the County and District All Star Chapters," Miss Gertrude Drinkos; "The 1933 State Short Course Gets Under Way," G. A. Elcan, state agent for boys' clubs.

". . . and I am gaining on this awful food they serve at the dorm, too! I weigh 120 stripped, but I don't know whether those scales down in front of the drug store are right or not."

When an automobile stops by the roadside in daylight, that's trouble. When it stops after dark, that's romance.

It was Pat's first day on the job as train conductor. Forgetting the name of a station they stopped at, he shouted to the passengers: "Here ye are for where ye're going. All in there for hese come out!"

The professor was delivering the last lecture of the term.

"The Examination papers are now in the hands of the printer," he concluded.

"Now, are there any questions you would like answered?"

Silence prevailed for a moment, then a voice piped up, "Who is the printer?"

Diner: "Have you any wild duck?"

Waiter: "No, sir; but we can take a tame one and irritate it for you."

"What you doing these days, Ole?"

"I bane make in roundhouse."

"What's that?"

"A viper."

He: "Do you really think there is danger in kissing?"

She: "Wait till I go to the stairs and listen if papa is asleep or not."

This is what fires cost the farmers of America every year. For protection against fire—the quick summoning of neighbors' help—a telephone is a necessity. And in the meantime it gets the best prices in buying supplies and selling produce. It flashes fast messages to doctor and veterinarian. It keeps the family in touch with their neighbors. If you have a telephone, use it more. If not, don't be without one another day. Ask our Business Office and see how low the rates are.

Ewing W. M. S. Meets

Ewing—The June meeting of the Ewing Southern Methodist W. M. S. was held with Mrs. S. M. Bailey. Mrs. H. C. T. Dean was leader for the afternoon. The worship theme was "God in the open air." The meeting was opened by the singing of the hymn "Holy, Holy, Holy, followed by prayer by the leader. An appropriate hymn was read by Mrs. F. B. Crockett. The scripture a special lesson, was read responsively. The hymn, "For the Beauty of the Earth," fittingly concluded the devotional exercises.

The study topic was the work of our deaconesses, and was given in two parts, the first a letter given by Mrs. T. L. McDaniel and Mrs. W. S. Morley, and the second a playlet "A Church Deconess Conference," Mesdames W. E. Blessing, R. H. Blessing, S. M. Bailey and R. N. Russell.

A poem, "Gates of Heaven," was impressively given by Miss Bashie Kincaid. Mrs. G. C. Frazier presented Stewardship. The W. M. S. News was given by Mrs. H. T. Richie.

The next hymn was followed by the closing prayer, and the meeting was then turned over to the president, Mrs. McDaniel, for the transaction of business.

Several items of business were disposed of, and the society enjoyed a social hour, during which the hostess served delicious ice cream and cake.

Mrs. M. S. Thompson was a visitor during the afternoon.

Students Make Good Record at Blacksburg

Ewing—The following boys have returned from Blacksburg, where they attended the recent F. F. A. rally, and represented the Ewing High School in the live stock judging contests, and in the leadership school. Lester McDaniel, Chester McDaniel and Duard McDaniel, who entered the judging contests, and John Morgan, who attended the leadership training course. They were accompanied there by their instructor Prof. W. H. Starnes. Lester McDaniel was high score winner for the team, and was high scorer in the horse judging contest, with a grade of 98.6. The individual scores in the contests entered were:

Chester: beef, 89; beef, 89.5; hogs, 76.8; sheep, 93; and corn, 91.8.

Lester: beef, 87.8; beef, 89.6; hogs, 86.5; horses, 98 6; corn, 85; cows, 85.6.

Total points 2015.7.

There were 55 judging teams entered in the live-stock contest.

In the general rating, among the 117 full time agriculture department in the state, there are only 33 above Ewing, while 83 are below. A decided improvement is shown over last year's judging, with last year's score being 1734 points against 2015.7 this year. The average grade this year is 85 86. The departments are graded for this rating on the folfowing features: enrollment per cent of enterprise completed, per cent improved practise completed, average labor income, quality of supervised practice, evening, part time, etc., quality of program, advisory council meeting, objectives reached, summary of year's work, publicity, per cent former pupils reached, class room rating, and F. F. A., activities.

The visible results of this year's work should be very gratifying and encourging to the students, to the patrons and to the instructor in this department.

"Now here's $125. We'll split it fifty-fifty."

"Yeh, but who gets the extra twenty-five?"

"I want you to tattoo a butterfly on my knee."

"A giraffe or nothing, lady."

"Sir, my wife said I was to ask for a raise."

"Good: I'll ask my wife if I may give you one."

The astronomy professor had shown his, fair young visitor all through the observatory and explained the work in minute detail.

"I can understand how a new star might be discovered," she remarked sweetly, "but how do you clever people ever find out its name?"

Baker-Hitchcock

Rose Hill — The announcement will prove of interest to a number of relatives and friends in this section and throughout the South. Mrs. Robert Lee Baker, of the bridegroom, was Miss Mattie Edds, daughter of W. T. and Cynthia Bales Edds. Mrs. Baker was widely known as a teacher and artist in this section.

Her sisters are Mrs. Fayne Anderson of Harlan, Ky., Mrs. Charles Beaty of Harrogate, Tenn., Mrs. William Edward Beaty of Huntington, W. Va., Mrs. Sterling Lawson of Rose Hill. Among her cousins are Mrs. Robert Crockett and Mrs. Hettie Wainwright of Middlesboro, Ky.

Dr. Baker, father of the bridegroom, is of Hancock county Tenn, and has been pastor of a number of the largest churches in the South, including churches in Baton Rough, La., Atlanta, Ga., Jacksonville, Fla. and New Orleans, La. Carsons-Newman College bestowed the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. Baker when he was pastor of the First Baptist Church of New Orleans.

New Britain, Conn.—Miss Agenes Hitchcock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Rogers Hitchcock of New Britain, was married here July 1, to Robert Lee Baker, Jr., son of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Lee Baker of Lake Charles, La., at the home of the bride's parents in Maple Hill.

The ceremony was preformed by the bridegroom's father, assisted by the Rev. Dr. William Ross, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Mrs. Harold Stead served as matron of honor and Dr. Felix I. Shafiner of Harvard University was best man.

The bride attended Northfield Academy, Boston University, from which she was graduated in 1919, and the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

Mr. Barker, an associate editor of Current History Magazine, receive his Ph. B. and M. A. degrees from Brown University in 1924. After a year of graguate study at Columbia University, he attended Corpus Christi College, Oxford University, as a Rhodes scholar, and received the degree of B. Litt. in 1928. He was secretary to the round-table on Western civilization at the Williamstown Institute of Politics in 1930 and a year and a half he was connected with the Council on Foreign relations and Foreign Affairs quarterly. He has traveled extensively in Europe and the Near East.

After the ceremony, an informal reception was held in the residence of the bride's parents. After a brief wedding trip, the couple will live at 787 Madison Avenue, New York. New York Times.

LEE SMOKIES DIVIDE GAMES

Lee Smokies defeated Coeburn at Dryden, Saturday by the score of 6 to 4. The reason the game was played at Dryden was on account of the ground being to wet here, it did not rain at Dryden at all. A small crowd of fans followed the Smokies to Dryden.

Cook in the first inning robbed a Coeburn man of a hit by making a sensational catch with his bare hands. Scott pitched for the Smokies and only allowed four runs and five hits.

Rosenbalm started for Coeburn and allowed six runs and eight hits. Grizzle finished the game allowing no hits and no runs.

The leading hitter for the Smokies was Rogers getting 2 hits out of 3 trips, for Coeburn Rosenbalm getting 2 hits out of 3 trips. Lee Smokies had left on bases five. Coeburn six.

Home runs, Barker, Rogers. Three base hits, Rosenbalm.

More About Stallard Reunion

Dungannon — Between 500 and 1000 members of the Stallard families of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, West Virginia, and mid-western states are expected to gather at Dungannon on Sunday July 30 to attend the annual re-union of the Stallard families. All persons of the clan Stallard are invited to attend. The grounds and buildings of Dungannon High School will be utilized for the re-union.

Rev. A. J. Wolfe, of Big Stone Gap, who has general charge of the re-union, states that many members of the Stallard family from Indiana, Illinois, and other mid-western states have announced their intention of attending the re-union.

The program of exercises calls for an address at 11:00 a. m. by Dr. J. N. Hillman, President of Emory and Henry College. Prior to the Hillman address will be registration of visitors and an assembly at which an address of welcome will be made to his visiting kinsmen by Mayor H. L. Stallard, of Dungannon. In the afternoon will be heard brief addresses by several members of the family; a business session will be held; and an organization of the Stallard family perfected. There will be side trips to the various points of interest around Dungannon.

An old-fashioned basket dinner will be served at noon on the campus of Dungannon High School. All who attend the re-union are requested to bring lunches.

Among the members of the family from distant points who have announced their intention of attending the re-union are Hon. Charles T. Stallard, attorney, of La Fayette, Ind.; Mrs. John A. Humphries, of Glen Ellyn, Ill.; Judge H. H. Stallard, of Pikeville, Ky.; and W. M. Phipps, professor in Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Dr. J. N. Hillman and Rev. A. J. Wolfe are collaborating in writing a history of Stallard families.

Caylor defeated the Ewing team Saturday 2 to 1 in a thrilling pitchers battle between Chadwell and Click. Chadwell allowed only one hit while Click allowed two, Batteries for Caylor were Chadwell and Robinson; for Ewing, Click to Click.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Legg and children, of Eustis Fla., are guests here.

Mrs. J. W. Anderson, of Jonesville, was here Tuesday.

QUEEN OF THE BLUEGRASS

Gate City—Crowning of the "Queen of the Bluegrass" will be the climactic event on the day's program of the annual meeting of the Blue Grass Trail Association at Natural Tunnel, 15 miles west of here August 5th.

Section of the Blue Grass Queen will be made by a judging committee from a list of finalists who will have been chosen by the local publicity committee from the entrants from the entire Blue Grass area.

C. D. Quillen, chairman of the local publicity committee, said today that no limitations have been placed on the number of entrants from any one county, and requested that entrants mailed to him in at Gate City a photograph or snapshot which will serve as a basis on which the finalists will be chosen.

Preliminary to the final choice on the day of the Blue Grass Trail Meeting, eleven of the most beautiful girls will be selected from the photographs or snapshots in the hands of the publicity committee.

Just prior to the coronation ceremony, the Queen will be selected from 11 finalists and the remaining ten will act as her court.

Mr. Quillen futher announced that all entrants must have their photographs in the hands of the publicity committee not later than August 1st.

This feature of the program is the first time the selection of the Queen of the Blue Grass Trail has not been limited to the county in which the meeting has been held. The meeting this year is the first ever held in Scott County.

Another feature for which plans were completed today called for a huge motorcade from Gate City to the Natural Tunnel, leaving here at 9:45 preceded by a brief band concert and parade through Gate City.

Leading the procession will be cars carrying visiting dignitaries, officers and executive committeemen of the Blue Grass Trail Association, officers and directors of Southwestern Virginia, Incorporated, and members of local committees in charge of arrangements. State highway patrolmen will escort the motorcade and govern traffic enroute and during the day.

Local committees are fast completing details of their work leaving nothing undone to make the meeting this year special in the annals of the Blue Grass Trail Association.

With this immediate section assured of a part of the Virginia allocation of $7,400.00 under the National Industrail Recovery Act officials of the Trail are working in conjunction with Kentucky road officials for the extension of the highway to Cumberland Gap, as soon as possible.

This particular item of business will be taken up and plans, as definite, as possible formulated at the forth coming meeting, of officials the trail said today as the program committee continued its work of outlining the activities for the day.

Not What the Book Says

The enriched curriculum of modern schools relieves teachers and pupils from depending solely upon the textbook. Not one but many books will have to be consulted by children who are learning to draw their conclusions. Furthermore a reality of experience will be sought for them through investigation of the agencies and institutions of the community by excursions to factories, shops and places of historical interest, and by examining actual objects and pictures of things, people and events. The new cirriculum now being prepared as a huge cooperative enterprise by 12,000 Virginia teachers will put renewed emphasis emphasis upon visual materials.

The fact explains the importance of a leaflet, just issued, listing sources of visual aids. Over a hundred governmental agencies and commercial organizations offer free or at nominal charges exhibits, models and spicimens. The very abundance of such materials make difficult a careful selection on the basis of suitbility and educational worth.

Readers of the News interested in these new learning aids will need the list of "Sources of Visual Aids." Copies are furnished free upon request addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

The R. A. society of the Baptist church, accompanied by Miss Jewel Lunsford, spent Thursday and Friday at Dryden Bridge.

Mrs. Allie Bailey, of Woodway, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. T. Laughham.

The Missionary society of the Baptist church met at the church Thursday.

Mrs. V. S. King and children have returned from Morrisburg Springs, Tenn.

IN ANSWER TO A LADY'S LETTER

A lady writes to say that she does not understand why an 8-cylinder car does not cost more to run than a car with fewer cylinders. She refers to my statement that our Ford V-8 develops more power on a gallon of gas than any car we have made.

The use of 8-cylinders does not mean the addition of two or four extra fuel consumers. It is not, for example, a 4-cylinder engine multiplied by two. Our 8-cylinder engine takes the fuel supply of an ordinary 4-cylinder engine and divides it eight ways. And why?

By reducing four larger explosions into eight smaller ones, we get engine smoothness and quietness. Eight-cylinders indicate the way the gas is used, not the amount. It is just the difference between going upstairs in four long jumps or in eight ordinary steps.

Two things use up gas—bad engine design and useless car weight. Besides having an engine that gets a high percentage of power out of the fuel, the Ford V-8 has a light, strong body and chassis so that no power is wasted in moving excess weight.

The only extravagance about the new Ford V-8 engine is in the building of it. The extravagance is ours—the economy is yours.

The whole question of car economy needs clearing up. An economical car gives economy all round. Price, operation, upkeep, all play their part. If what you save on gas you lose elsewhere, that is not economy.

As to upkeep, our dealers say that in recent years the improved quality of Ford cars has cut down their repair business 50 per cent.

As to price with quality,—judge for yourself.

As to economy, here is the record of a stock car three weeks out of shop in Oklahoma:

On a run of 10,054 miles at the rate of 1,000 miles a day—the Ford V-8 gave 18.8 miles per gallon of gas. Not a drop of water was added to the radiator. The oil was changed once in 1,000 miles.

That should answer a lot of questions.

The Book Sampler

Gentle reader, it is with greatest pleasure that we present the Count Nicolas de Toulouse de Savine, K. M. - Baron Munchausen, Cassanova, pathetic and charming old man rolled into one. His existences is problematical, he may still be alive in the poor hospital of some Eastern port, or he may be a figment of the imagination of that versatile novelist, Stella Benson. But in either event, such a meeting should intrigue and delight. Now, a word about the Count himself should be necessary. He is of a long line of noble and intricate ancestry, was sometime member of the Russiam Horses' Guards, and is at present playing baker opposite Stella Benson's prince of darkness in "Pull Devil, Pull Baker". In the presentation of this wonderful tale, the baker Count has first his innings, telling of marvelously incredible adventures; then Miss Benson, in the guise of the devil, pulls his work to pieces in critical comment, or retells to suit herself. Some of the Count's adventures, if true, would give interesting sidelights on the working of European politics since the assassination of Tsar Alexander II, but his main contributions are anent Loving Stories of "sweet-hearts" with blue eyes and smole fiets". Poor, dear Count! even though his spelling displays fully as much imagination as his adventures, literature is very glad to have found him.

And now to "The Romantic Exiles" by Edward Hallet Carr, authority on things Russian. This book is the personal story of men and women who left Russia because of some romantic idea of revolution, and of Alexander Herzen, his wife Natalie, the German poet Herwegh and his wife, who in their wanderings found time for romantic complications of another sort. In meeting these, you will be brushing shoulders with characters of history, no less interesting because true.

These are only a few of the characters that may be met in books borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

F. F. A. Meet Friday July 28

The local F. F. A. will meet Friday, July 28, at 6:30 o'clock in the High School building to decide on the summer camping trip. All F. F. A's are urged to be present as a good time is in view this year.

"Have you seen much service in the navy, young man"?

"Service? I havn't see any. Why I even have to wash my own clothes,"

Carrier Pigeon Found At Caylor

Jim Howard, Caylor, has in his possession a carrier pigeon from Camp Lee, a C. C. C. camp near Hartford, Kentucky. Howard saw the pigeon feeding on grain around his barn, and threw a rock at it trying to scare it away. Instead, he hit the bird and broke its wing. When he picked it up he found an aluminum band on its leg, bearing the name of one of the officers of Camp Lee, and the camp name and number. The bird is recovering rapidly, and will soon be able to continue its journey.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Secretary Edgar Allen of the Knoxville smokies was in town Saturday and motored to Dryden to look over the Lee Smokies in search of material for his Southern League Club of Knoxville, after four inning past Mr. Allen left the field and immediately returned to Knoxville to prepare the contract for "Lefty" Hobert Scott the speed ball artist of the Lonesome Pine. Scott immediately signed and reported to the Smokies Tuesday in Atlanta where they were engaged in a series there with the Crackers.

In a special call from Knoxville Monday Mr. Allen arranged to trade Carl Doyle who is now property of the Knoxville Club to manager R. P. Stewart of the Lee Smokies in exchange for Scott for the remaining part of the season. Doyle will return from Atlanta Thursday to join the Smokies of the Lonesome Pine.

The Lee Smokies will suffer another severe loss August 3rd when Mr. Allen will sound the call to arms for the most outstanding hitter of the Lonesome Pine League Clay "Cowboy" Barker who will make his debut in a Smoky Southern League uniform.

The third prospect of the Lonesome Pine in the opinion of Mr. Allen is Bauford Rhea who is now playing with Dryden, Rhea will probably get a big break with the Knoxville club soon.

In a special conference with the News Sentinel Sports staff Monday night at Knoxville it was learned that if the protested game between Lynch and Pennington is brought to Knoxville for a final decision that they will, rule for the game to be played over.

STEEL ALONE IS NOT ENOUGH!

—neither strong enough, nor safe enough, nor quiet enough for the body of a quality car like CHEVROLET

CHEVROLET There is only one type of body construction which Chevrolet will permit on the chassis of the cars it builds: That's the type which every test—and every experiment—and every experience has proved to be the safest, strongest, and best. Not steel alone, because steel alone is not enough. But a Fisher body of steel reinforced by hardwood! The very same kind of construction used on practically all the highest-priced cars in America.

If you're thinking of buying a new low-priced car, better watch this matter of bodies, and watch it carefully. Insist on steel reinforced by hardwood! Fortunately, the only low-priced car with this preferred type of body is also the only car with a proven valve-in-head six; with Fisher Ventilation; Cushion-Balanced Power; a Starterator. That car is Chevrolet—America's most economical automobile.

EX-GOV. HENRY C. STUART DEAD

The only Virginian ever to be elected Governor without opposition is dead. Henry Carter Stuart, 78, governor from 1914 to 1918, died at his home at Elk Garden at 3:30 p. m. Monday.

Gov. Stuart was stricken by a heart ailment three weeks ago.

Altho Gov. Stuart neve sought office, but many public honors and distinctions came to him unsought. In response to a general public demand he became a candidate for Governor in 1913. He was unopposed, both in the Democratic primary and in the general election. President Wilson summoned him to Washington at the close of Gov. Stuart's term and appointed him a "dollar a year" man to head the National Agricultural Advisory Committee.

In 1916 he was delegate at-large to the Democratic national conventions.

His farming and stock raising activities are famous, centering at Elk Garden. They occupy a domain of 50,000 acres, covering portions of Russell, Tazewell, Washington, and Smyth Counties. He regularly produced for the market each year about 1500 heavy finished beef cattle, much stock cattle, hogs, sheep, blooded horses and great quanities of wheat, corn, tobacco, flour, meal and other products.

During the later years of his life, Gov. Stuart become probably Virginia's greatest traveler. He made close studies of the stock raising methods of Argentina and South Africa.

At his own request there was no eulogy Wednesday at funeral services in, Elk Garden for Henry Carter Stuart, 78, former governor of Virginia, who died Monday afternoon.

Funeral services were held at his late home at 4 p. m.

Four Southern Methodist ministers were in charge. They are the Rev. E. W. Dean, pastor at Elk Garden; Dr. S. D. Long, presiding elder of the Tazewell district; Dr. J. N. Hillman, president of Emory and Henry College; and Dr. E. E. Wiley, presiding elder of the Abingdon district.

The program for the service follows:

Choir, "Abide With Me."

Scripture reading, Mr. Dean.

Choir, "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

Prayer, Dr. Long.

Reading of Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," Dr. Hillman.

Choir, "How Firm a Foundation."

Dr. Wiley was in charge of services at the grave.

Governor Stuart's seven nephews and a yonng cousin, William G. Smith of Elk Garden, served as pall bearers. The nephews are: Stuart B. Campbell and Fitzgerald Campbell, Wytheville; Harry C. Stuart, John White Stuart and Walter P. Stuart, Abingdon; and Henry C. Stuart Jr., Boston, Mass.

Among the distinguished out-of town persons who attended the service are: Senator Harry F. Byrd, E. R. Combs of Richmond, Colonel James P. Woods of Roanoke, Stuart Chevalier of New York City, Col. Peter Sanders of Richmond, Mrs. E. B. White of Leesburg, and Col. Julien H. Hill, Col. R. McBullington and Mrs. Frank D. Williams of Richmond.

From many distinguished Virginians and others came expressions of regrets, some in messages, to the family. A few of them follow:

Senator Harry F. Byrd: "I feel a deep personal loss in the death of Governor Stuart, I loved and admired him. In the long history of Virginia few men leave a more lasting impression on the welfare and progress of the state.

"Governor Stuart gave to Virginia a system of taxation which has promoted the state and stood the supreme test of the present period with a balanced budget. He was president of the Pay-As-You-Go Loan Association and successfully led the fight against the bond issue for roads.

"His influence and prestigate have always been exerted for the best interests of our people. His vision and wisdom will live long in Virginia for the betterment of the people he loved so well."

Congressman John W. Flannagan: "In the death of Governor Stuart, one of the nation's greatest men passed away. You have my heartfelt sympathy."

Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson: "I am distressed beyond measure over the death of Governor Stuart. I held him in highest regard and esteem, I regret the impossibility of my attending the funeral."

Governor John G. Pollard: "It is with deep regret I learn of the death of my dear friend, Governor Stuart. I extend to his family my most heartfelt sympathy."

Senator T. P. Gole of Oklahoma: "Share with all members of the family our deepest sympathy."

Senator Carter Glass: "Please accept and convey to other members of the family my profound sympathy in the death of your distinguished father, I regret it is impossible to attend the funeral."

Alexander Forward, former member of the state corporation commission and now an executive of the American Gas Association. "The governor's death is in the deepest sense a personal loss. His interest and friendship to me meant everything both in earlier and later years. To my deepest regret it is not possible to pay a tribute of regard by attending the ceremony."

W. A. Rodenburg, ex-Congressman from Illinois: Mrs. Rodenburg joins me deepest sympathy in the passing of Virginia's greatest old man. To know Governor Stuart was to love and admire him as no finer or nobler character ever lived."

C. W. Harris, former member of the state supreme court and ex-Congressman: "I learned with great sorrow of the death of Governor Stuart. He was universally beloved as a noble citizen and patriotic public servant. Please express my sympathy to his family."

Christopher B. Garnett, ex-chairman of the state corporation commission: "Please be assured my sincere sympathy is with you and other relatives of Governor Stuart.

The state has lost one of its best and noblest figures. I have lost a beloved friend."

Josepe T. Deal, candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination said: "I have known Governor Stuart intimately for a great number years. He has been a strong and influential man in Virginia and it is with profound regret that I learn of his death. His passing away will be a great loss to the state."

Obituary

July 2, 1933—A huge Throng attended the funeral services of George V. Shelburne, age 56 years highly regarded Lee Countian, who met his death, on Friday June 30th, 1933, by accident, at Clover Splint, Kentucky, on a man-trip that was conveying him to his work as hoist-man operator for the Clover Splint Coal Company.

Mr. Shelburne, who was considered one of the County's outstanding citizens and a leader in religious endeavor, was also for many years one of the leading cattle dealers for Southwestern Virginia, this fact was demonstrated by the many farmers and cattleman from Lee and adjoining Counties attended his funeral. He was honored by those with whom he had traded for his fair dealings. Since trading conditions for some few years had not been very favorable, he turned his attention to a position with the Clover Splint Coal Co., of which his brother-in-law, H. T. Graham, was General Superintendent and formerly a Lee County man.

His funeral was conducted at his Home Church, of which he was Sunday School Superintendent, Sunday July 2, 1933, at 10:30 a. m., by his pastor W. B. Moore, assisted by Rev. Parker local pastor of M. E. Church South, and Rev. A. E. Robertson of Gibson Station. Interment was made in the family Cemetery.

The survivors are his wife, Rose C. Shelburne, and two children Jack and Hannah Shelburne, mother Mrs. O. A. Shelburne; four sister, Mrs. W. E. Orr, Mrs. M. M. May, Mrs. J. M. Graham, and Miss Ella Shelburne, of Lee County. Two Brothers Rev. W. J. Shelburne, Versailles, Kentucky and S. J. Shelburne of Pennington Gap.

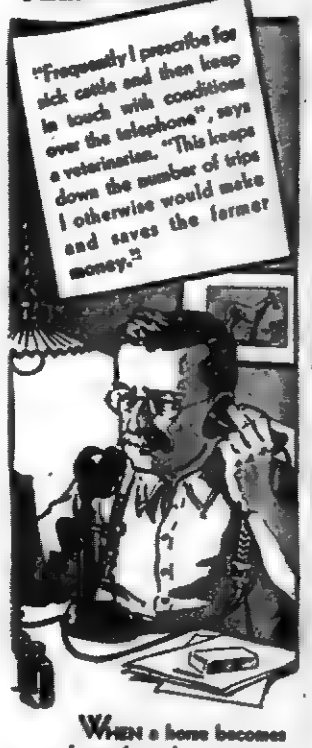
WHAT A VETERINARIAN SAYS ABOUT THE TELEPHONE . . .



"Frequently I prescribe for sick cattle and then keep in touch with conditions over the telephone", says a veterinarian. "This keeps down the number of trips I otherwise would make and saves the farmer money."

WHEN a horse becomes overheated or when cows get bloated from overeating, the difference of an hour or so may mean the saving of valuable live stock. The telephone has become indispensable to modern farm life. It brings help quickly in emergencies such as sudden illness and fire. Keeps the family in constant friendly touch with the neighbor. And the cost is so low as to be negligible.

Call our Business Office today and ask about the charges.

DISTRESS AFTER MEALS
Relieved By Black-Draught

"I had sour stomach and gas," writes Mr. Jess Higgins, of Dawsonville, Ga., "and often I would have bilious spells. I read about Thedford's Black-Draught and began to take it. It relieved me of this trouble. I keep it all the time now. I consider it a fine medicine. I take a pinch of Black-Draught after meals when I need it. It helps to prevent sick headache and to keep the system in good order."

This is what fires cost the farmers of America every year. For protection against fire—the quick summoning of neighbors' help—a telephone is a necessity. And in the meantime it gets the best prices in buying supplies and selling produce. It flashes fast messages to doctor and veterinarian. It keeps the family in touch with their neighbors. If you have a telephone, use it more. If not, don't be without one another day. Ask our Business Office and see how low the rates are.

Miss Benson, so the story goes, met the Count Nicolas de Toulouse Lautrec de Savine who was annoyed when people abbreviated his name to "Count de Savine" in a Hong Kong hospital. The Count de Savin was seventy-seven years old, had no money at all, and was living off the gullibility of people like Miss Benson by selling them stories. The stories, judging from the samples given by Miss Benson in "Pull Devil, Pull Baker", were chiefly concerned with what a fine man the Count Nicolas de Toulouse Lautrec de Savine was: they tell how he nearly became King of Bulgaria, how he fooled Jewish pawnbrokers, and how he handled his love affairs. They are given in "original" idiom of the Count, an idiom that does violence to the primary laws of orthography and grammer. These stories tare, in run, interspersed with comment by Miss Benson, who looks upon herself as the devil pulling candy with the baker of Toulouse Lautrec de Savine letting the baker have his round with a story, and then taking her innings with explanations to the reader that the more passionate the Count becomes the worse his spelling is, or with her reasons for not including the story of "The Beautiful Peruvienne," or why she found it neccessary to abridge "My Ant Emr," a shameful story of "Lilie, the Noty Gerl", or why she fell "quite feveriah" and "as a goose might feel in a barnyard crowded with hens, pigs, turkeys, ducks and cows" when she read a marked copy of "The Ancient Mariner".

The odds are roughly about a thousand to one against there being any real Count. It would be of some interest probably to readers of "Pull Devil, Pull Baker" to discover that there really is no such person, though the Count himse'f, in his first inning, says that he is "a very good known man, who belongs to one of the most distinguished aristocratic familys of Europe, pretty well known all the world other."

"Other" in the Count's dialect means "over". Miss Benson, or more properly Mrs. J. C. O'Gorman Anderson, seems to be in some doubt herself about the Count's identity, for in the devil's second inning she says of him, "Although he really lives, I have to invent him. Indeed, he is so unlikely that he invents himself".

The reader may safely assume that the Count is a rather charming creation of a novelist who has aspirations of becoming a ghost writer, and has an enthusiasm for "Tristram Shandy".

Toward the end of the volume the "editor" allows the breaker a short series of his "Loving Stories", a succession of "hyg" romances with "sweethearts" who all had "blue eyes, gold hairs and smole fiets". "Fiets are feets". These, interspersed with the author's own random comments, and the Count's own philosophical dicta on marrage, politics, crowned heads, morals, and what-not, combine to make the book "pull devil, pull baker". America to the Count is "the Contry of the Gold Devil" where he was "brought to a strugle for life - american strugle who is worst as anywhere", but the Count preferred "the american strugle to the imorale atmosphere of Paris", and London to him was "the greatest bisness town on erd, but not a town for enjoy life. I not be surprise that the british people suffer from aplin, as the life push to it."

If the publishes want to, they can make of "Pull Devil, Pull Baker" another "Trader Horn". It needs only to be ballyhooed like a new brand of cigarettes, or for that matter like "Trader Horn" was ballyhooed. It is pleasant enough reading. It is lightly enough conceived, wittily enough written, and so totally lacking in the seriousness of purpose and conventionality of form of the average novel, that it will appeal to a sense of novelty even where it strains a sense of credulity.

Short Crop Does Not Solve Wheat

"In spite of the shortest wheat crop since 1898, there is every reason for going ahead with the Government plan for wheat control."

This is the answer given by Secretary Henry A. Wallace when asked if reports of an unusually small wheat crop this year would change the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's program for bringing wheat production into line with effective demand by reducing acreage.

That the basic condition which have depressed wheat in America during recent years are not changed by the temporary relief of one short crop is pointed out by officials of the wheat adjustment plan. Permanent improvement, with a balanced wheat situation, can come only through basic changes in acreage and controlled production over a period of years, in the opinion of those who have made careful study of the wheat problem.

The carryover of wheat in the United States, as of July 1, 1933, is estimated at 360 million bushels. This year's short crop has been placed at about 500 million bushels, giving a total of about 860 million as the supply for the coming year. Disappearance, or consumption for the year, including domestic uses, seed, and possible exports, is figured at about 660 million bushels. This would leave a margin or carryover for next summer of aronnd 200 million bushels, figured conservatively.

An average crop next year, on the basis of normal seeded acreage, would run about 845 million bushels, giving a total supply of a billion bushels or more. This would mean an immediate return of the conditions responsible for the ruinous wheat prices of recent years, with a carryover of at least twice normal.

One average crop, in other words, would destroy all the temporary relief possible from this year's small crop. Controlled and reduced production, to bring about a balance between wheat supplies and demand, is held to be essential.

Another factor which should be taken into consideration, according to the wheat control administration, is the danger that present raised prices may have a tendency to stimulate increase in seeded acerage unless the production control measure is carried out.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Day dreams of making a debut on the silver screen is very likely to become true to Lonesome Pine players in the latter part of August when plans are to be perfected to film "Stars of 33" a complete movie of the base ball clubs and the selection of an all star team of the year.

Arrangements are to be completed at once with a large number of theaters throughout Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee for the showing of the picture that is expected to draw the largest attendance of any picture ever shown in this section.

Quite a number of the best looking girls of Southwest, Virginia and Eastern Kentucky will add the romatic flavor in the bonquet scenes in the final shots of the picture. The fans at the games too are to appear in the picture.

New feeling is brilliantly sparkling in the bosom of hundreds of local enthusiast this week since the battling Lee Smokies have once again retained the league leadership of the Lonesome Pine, several pounds of new punch seemed to have been injected into the bats of some of the Smoky hitters to drive out a volley of base hits to quell the fighting Lunch Bulldogs in a double bill over the week end.

Cannon Ball Baker and Bonny Hollingsworth twirled wonderful ball which shoved the Lynch men into second place and set the Smokies into first place by one full game.

Add Rogers deserves honorable mention in the Ballyhoo colums this week for some mighty hard slugging in both the week end games that meant much in winning both tilts.

Home runs were popular again this week in the loop Hennegar, Rogers, Young, Dorton, Henderson and Cunnute each collecting one.

Dryden and Lee Smokies will meet in a struggling double battle this week end come out and really see some truly fast ball.

Surprise Party

Rose Hill — Several friends of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Grabeel surprised them with a party at their home in East Rose Hill Tuesday night. Those present were Misses Mellie, Rhea and Gladys Grabeel, Vera Bayless, Zelma Johnson, Ruby Nell Smith, Vivian Hobbs, Eula Carter, Ethel Giles and Fern Cawood and Messrs. Haskey Seale, Bryan and Saunders, Carter Cawood, Lewis Smith, Lon Tyler and Charles Snavely.

Dana—Yes, but you had better use your hands.

LEE SMOKIES TAKE LEAD

The Lee Smokies took the lead in the second half by defeating Lynch in both of their games, Saturday and Sunday. Lee Smokies defeated Lynch at St. Charles Sunday with Hollingsworth pitching stricking out ten men and allowing five runs and five hits, six errors were made behind him, four by Herndon the short stop, one by Briggs and one by Cook. Lynch only earned one run and it was a home run by Hennegar in the fifth inning. Taylor started the game for Lynch, but had to be relieved in the fourth inning by Jim Cox who finished the game. The Lee Smokies collected six runs and eleven hits off the offering of Taylor and Jim Cox. The leading hitters for the Smokies were Cook getting two hits out of three trips, Tritt getting three hits for four, Young and Rogers getting two for four. The leading hitter for Lynch was Hennegar getting two for three, one which was a home run.

The Lee Smokies defeated Lunch at Lynch Sunday by the one sided score of ten to three. This game was featured by home runs, Henderson, Young and Rogers getting one for the Smokies and Connute getting one for Lynch.

Baker went the route for the Smokies allowing three runs, and five hits and making two errors behind him.

Lynch had to use four pitchers starting with Stevens, then Monhollen, Taylor and finally Ty Disney finished the game. The Smokies leading hitters were Rogers getting four for five, one of them a home run, Young getting two for five one of which was a home run.

For Lynch there wasn't any leading hitters or hardly any hits as Baker had their number. Connute got the longest hit and it was a home run in the ninth inning. Connute had went hitless till that time.

Mrs. Wm. Limon and daughter Marie of St. Louis, Mo. are visiting her mother Mrs. A. J. Galloway.

Recent week-end visitors of Mrs. J. D. Russell were Mrs. Neil McKinnon, Sr., of New York City, and Rev. and Mrs. Neil McKinnon, Jr., and little daughter, Flora Vista, of Clintwood, Virginia enroute home after visiting relatives and friends in Sulphur city and Fayetteville, Arkansas and Mountain Grove and St. Louis, Missouri. While in Mountain Grove they visited Charles D. Russell, Uncle of Mrs. Neil McKinnon, Jr. He is the only member living from a family of twelve and is a former Lee Countian.

Clean-Up Campaign in Pennington Still in Action Department of Health Official Coming From Richmond, August 7th or 14th

The Clean-up Campaign in Pennington, called for by the town officials for the 17th-22 has met with splendid success. Three features were stressed in the work.

1st. The citizens were appealed to for the removal of old discarded cars or trucks that might be standing, or parked, either on streets or vacant lots.

2nd. The mowing of all lots and side streets and the removal of all cans and rubbish of every nature.

3rd. The repair or building of out-toilets to come within the aproved plan of the Virginia State Board of Health.

These three features were badly in need of attention, and it is gratifying to observe that a great deal of the above has been accomplished. This is to announced that the CLEAN-UP provisions of this Campaign are still required, since five days mentioned above was not sufficient time for all to accomplish the work undertaken.

The Mayor of Pennington mentioned in his Procia-mation that the Virginia Department of Health would be called on for the enforcement of the above provisions in the town of Pennington. In a letter of the Department of Health, Richmond, of the 28th it says: "Our Regional Director of Sanitation, M. D. Fuller, will be in Southwest early in August. He will be in Pennington Gap the 7th or the 14th; the 7th if possible."

The Mayor of Pennington wishes to announce that all parties who have not complied with the above call in Clean-Up matters are still urged to do so by or before the Department of Health official arrives to enforce the law. The Mayor is very thankful and appreciative of the splendid cooperation so far given the Clean-Up week and only hopes that a 100 per cent report can be made by the 7th of August on all three of the above features of the town.

Professor—What is density?

Student—I can't define it, sir, but I can give you a good example.

Professor—Your illustration is good; sit down.

Archie—And why do you call me Pilgrim?

Mabel—Well, every time you call you make a little progress.

He—Are you hungry? What do you say we eat up the street?

She—No thank you. I'd rather have a steak than asphalt.

Agricultural Student Conducts Project

Ewing—Duard McDaniel of Ewing High School purchased 550 Buff Rock baby chicks April 1. By careful feeding and management he has raised 195 of them. An oil breeder was used and the breeder house was disinfected frequently with a good disinfectant. The temperature was carefully regulated and the floor of the house was cleaned at regular intervals. Clean litter was used to prevent breeder pneumonia. Duard attributes his success to keeping his house clean, using a disinfectant, feeding of the right kind of ration, keeping clean fresh water before the chicks at all times. Eighty three cockerels are being fed for market. One hundred pullets have been selected for fall and winter egg production.

A boy to be successful in his supervised practice work must develop written plans. These plans serve as a guide in conducting the enterprise. Duard believes plans are absolutely necessary and no student studying agriculture can succed without them.

Russell County Citizen Killed

Lebanon — Walter A. Howard, former treasurer of Russell county, was accidentally killed at his home near Honaker Saturday afternoon when he went out to shoot hawks which had been attacking chickens on the Howard farm.

He was crossing a stile and apparently slipped on the steps, causing his gun to discharge. The load struck Mr. Howard in the head. No one saw the accident, but a boy nearby heard the report of the gun and returned in time to see Mr. Howard fall.

Dr. C. H. McFarlane was summoned and arrived within five minutes after the accident, but Mr. Howard died before anything could be done for him. The accident occured about 1:30 o'clock.

Mr. Howard had engaged in large scale farming. He served as county treasurer from 1912 to 1916 and was formerly president of the First National Bank of Honaker.

Surviving are his wife, who was Miss Alice Banner before marriage and three daughters, Mrs. Herndon, of Pennington Gap, and Misses Eula and Annette Howard, who lives at home.

Helen Heartstill—Is your boy friend the kind that can smile when things look dark?

Lily Lovesick—Yes, that's the way he likes the parlor to look.

She—So you are not going to get married again?

He—No, dearie, I've become a pacifist.

Bandit—Now, then, put 'em up quick!

Postmistress (familiar with American gangster thrillers)—Now, that's entirely wrong to start with. You should say, "Stick 'um up, baby, and make it snappy!"

She—No, Howards I don't see how I can marry you.

Howard—Oh, just this once!

If Not College, What?

The abnormal conditions prevailing indicate difficult problems of further study will be intensified for high school graduates this year. Already federal reports have shown an 800 percent increase in the number of unemployed postgraduates thronging into the high schools, a total expected to reash 100,000 in the nation next fall. There, unless the school has not suffered the usual reductions imperiling its work, they constitute an unsatisfactory part of the group because no special adjustment can be made for them. Yet many of them are destined to enter college, and nine-tenths of them have the definite purpose of completing entrance requirements or gaining advanced standing.

For such students, whether returning to high school or depending upon their unaided efforts, there are facilities for reading and directed study afforded by colleges and universities throughout the land. Reading lists, outlines and syllabuses, and correspondence courses in hundreds of subjects are available, and they offer a chance to "keep on keeping on" when every other door seems closed.

Information concerning educational opportunities suitable for school graduates is obtainable by application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

One of the phychology students visiting at an asylum, noticed one of the inmates wheeling a wheelbarrow upside down.

"That's not the way to push that thing," the visitor said. "You've got it upside down."

"Oh, have I?" answered the lunatick. "Well I used to push it the other way and they put bricks in it."

"Why has Neckmore stopped running out nights by himself?"

"He's afraid his wife won't miss him the next time!"

"The bride's father looks more scared than the bridegroom," said one of the guests at the wedding.

"Yeh!" replied the other one, "he's afraid they will come back to settle down on him after the honeymoon."

"That Miss Brown can't tell a thing without exaggerating."

"Did you ever ask her age?"

Septic Sore Throat in Virginia

Richmond—An outbreak of septic sore throat was recently reported to the Virginia State Department of Health and an investigation showed the milk supply to be the probable source of infection. Hemolytic strebtococcus organism were found in the milk and in the throats of two dairy workers. Eleven cases had occured in a camp supplied by the dairy and it was found that the milk for the camp was not pasteurized. Health officials advised the boiling of all milk, in view of the lack of pasteuoization facilities.

Septic sore throat is a disease which is usually carried by milk and there are two ways in which the milk may become infected. Milk from a cow which carries the organisms will be infected and milk may also be infected if handled by a person carrying the organisms. Pasteurization for all milk is urged by health officials as a method of preventing the spread of this disease.

Show Gain in Health Work

Richmond — Statistics which are coming to the Virginia State Department of Education indicate that during the last session there has been a considerable increase in the health status of the rural school children over the previous session. In spite of financial difficulties, statistics from the first 51 counties to report show that due to the intensive health programs in the schools, there has been an increase of 2,000 children who fulfill all requirements for the Five-Point Certificate. Intensive diphtheria and smallpox immunization campaign conducted by school and other local agencies in these 51 counties also show encouraging results. At the close of the recent session there were 4,600 more rural school children immunized against diphtheria than the previous year, and the number of those who had received smallpox immunization was 21,700 more than before. Outstanding gains have been made in Highland, Lee and Culpepper counties and health and education authorities are pleased with the work that leading educators in these counties have made possible.

Reports which are yet to be received from various counties will doubtless indicate further increases and so raise the standard of health for the State as a whole.

Blinks—My wife learned something today.

Jinks—Yeah? What did she learn?

Blinki—That traffic cops are not stationed at street corners just to keep other drivers out of her way.

The Book Sampler

If you haven't read "State Fair" you must have seen the picture in which Will Rogers starred. Just such another story is Phil Stong's "Stranger's Return". It is primarily of the Iowa soil and characters indigenous to it: Grandpa, with his hearty but unsentinental love of life; Simon, hired a man extraordinary, who cannot be depended upon drunk or sober; a couple of females whose machinations nearly result in Grandpa's being placed under restraint; Guy Crane, who should be teaching in the East but isn't; Granddaughter Louise, who, though born in New York, returns to the farm to prove herself more Iowan than the pigs and chickens. The humor, like that of Mr. Rogers, is never forced, but finding its way mong the threads of plot with homely sense. It has been called a "rip-tickling comedy with a dash of bitters", and as such is now fairly on its way to become a favorite.

Isabel Ross, newspaperwoman of some rebute, now writes "Marriage in Gotham". The basic idea that in marriage one should use his head is pretty sound. But, though the situation around which the story is built rings true enough, the same cannot be said for the characters themselves. If one were to judge this book only, it would seem that Miss Ross is better at reporting sensational stories than writing them.

Epward J. O'Brien's selection of the "Best American Short Stories, 1933", and William Rose Benetas collection of self-selected work of "Fifty Poets" intend to give an idea of what is top-notch in these two branches of writing. The stories are mostly experimental, but they are an excellent lot to be read and enjoyed. On the other hand, it seems that the poets themselves are poorer judges of their own work than the much-perated critics.

American Legion Sponsoring Dance

The American Legion is sponsoring a dance at the American Legion Cabin, Pennington Gap, Friday August 4, 1933. They have succeded in securing Charley Ford and his Commanders to furnish music for the occasion. This is one of the best orchestras for many miles around and it will really be a treat to hear them. Come and bring your friends.

UNTIL WE LEARNED BETTER

Until we learned better, we used to mix wood and steel in our car bodies and wheels.

It was the best way to make bodies—then. But the state of the art has advanced.

Of course, it is more expensive to make an all-steel body than to make a wooden frame and nail steel panels on to it. The better way involves an initial expenditure of several millions of dollars for new dies, which renders a change very costly. Cars, especially large expensive cars which are produced in small volume, cannot afford this, because the dies cost as much for one car as for a million. That alone explains why all-steel bodies are not used in all cars.

But our basic policy from the beginning is to make a good car better, regardless of cost.

For example, when we discarded wood-steel body construction, it was not because we lacked wood. We still have some thousands of acres of the best hard wood in America. Economy would urge us to use up the wood first, and then adopt the better all-steel body. But we decided that quality was more important than expense.

We weighed the reasons, for and against, before we made the change.

We could see only one reason for retaining a mixed wood-and-steel body—nailing the metal on, instead of welding an all-steel body into a strong one-piece whole. That reason was, it would be cheaper—for us.

Our reasons for adopting an all-steel body were these: A wood-steel body is not much stronger structurally than its wooden frame. In all American climates, wood construction weakens with age. Every used car lot gives evidence of this. Rain seeps in between joints and the wood decays. A car may have a metal surface, and yet not be of steel construction. Under extreme shock or stress the steel body remains intact—dented perhaps, but not crushed.

Steel does not need wood for strength or protection. Wood is fine for furniture, but not for the high speed vehicles of 1933.

In the Ford body there are no joints to squeak, no seams to crack or leak.

The all-steel body is more expensive—to us, but not to you.

By all odds, then, steel bodies seem preferable.

Wheels also have become all-steel. No one argues that an electrically welded one-piece steel wheel, such as the Ford wheel, needs to be "strengthened" by adding wood to it.

The one-piece all-steel body is the strongest, safest, quietest, most durable body made. That is our only reason for making them.

Peery Wins For Virginia Governor

George Campbell Peery, of Tazewell, the "redeemer of the Fighting Ninth," who wrested control of the Ninth Congressional District from the Republicans in 1922 after a quarter-century of control under the Slemps, is the Democratic nominee for governor of Virginia.

The lanky southwesterner, who stands six feet three without the aid of shoes, piled up a tremendous majority over two opponents, Joseph T. Deal of Norfolk, and State Senator W. Worth Smith, Jr., of Louisa, to win the nomination in yesterday's primary.

Lee County gave Peery 1949, Smith 55 and Deal 27. The majority in the Ninth District gave Peery 19,503 and the state 41,749. He carried every Congressional district except the Eighth, Smith's home, where the Louisa senator held a substantial lead, and won the home counties of both Deal and Smith.

Peery was elected on a platform built around the continuation of the governmental policies of Gov. Pollard and former Gov. Harry F. Byrd, now a United States Senator.

He advocated repeal of the Eighteeth Amendment, a referendum on a liquor control plan in the state and reductions in automobile license fees.

He also favored a balanced budget, and liberal support of public education and legislation to permit temporary changes in utility rates pending investigation.

Both Deal and Smith sent telegrams to Peery concerning their defeat. The Democratic nominee issued a statement urging party harmony.

60 MEN CAME TO THIS FARMER'S AID/. . .

"There's a fire at Mr. Flotter's farm," called the telephone operator hurriedly. She rang up the neighboring farms and soon 60 men were fighting the flames. A neighbor discovered the fire while the family was away. She notified the operator who located Mr. Flotter while calling other farmers. This quick work saved the home and other farm buildings. Many cases like this show how the telephone reduces the hazards and losses of farm life.

Eighteen Thousand More Men at Work

Detroit—Eighteen thousand more men are at work in Chevrolet and Pontiac today than at the same time a year ago, W. S Knudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company stated in discussing the employment situation.

In emphasizing this picture of rising employment, Mr. Kundsen also pointed out that payroll figures of the two companies are now at a higher stage than any year since the boom period of 1929.

In the single week from July 8 to July 15, inclusive the number of men employed increased by approximately 4,000 at the 20 plants throughout the United States and from the 15th up to the present, approximately 2,000 more men had been added to the payroll.

Since June 10, declared Mr. Knudsen, as he analyzed the figures, a small army 11,000 men have found employment with Chevrolet and Pontiac. Total employment today is above 46,000 persons.

Thousands had been added to the rolls before the proclamations of the President calling on the country to shorten hours and raise wages in order that the working men, on what the country depends, might have additional funds to maintain the American standard of living.

"Statisticians tell us," said Mr. Knudsen "that the average family is composed of four persons. This means that approximately 164,000 persons are benefited by either wages or salaries from the Chevrolet and Pontiac plants. The addition of 11,000 men alone has done much to spread the wave of employment in the cities where those men are employed".

That his companies have whole-heartedly participated in the program of the President is shown by the fact that a salary raise of 15 per cent was granted all factory wage earners effective August 1, making a total increase of 20 per cent over March, 1933, since a 5 per cent increase was announced in May. In addition, Mr. Knudsen also raised the pay of all salaried workers receiving under $1,800 per year by 10 per cent.

It is estimated that these increases will place more than a million and a quarter dollars at the disposal of Chevrolet and Pontiac employees, for the balance of the year.

"What did the doctor say about you, John" anxiously inquired his wife.

"Huh!" he growled; "from the number of things he found the matter with me you'd a thought it was the garage man telling me what was wrong with my car."

How All the People Had a Hand In Building Nation's Credit Structure

Banker Describes the Way Loans and Securities of Banks Are Based on the Hopes and Plans of All Classes—Values Dependent on Public's Ability to Meet Obligations

By FRANCIS H. SISSON,
President American Bankers Association in The Forum

CREDIT may be informally described as future hopes, plans and good intentions converted into present purchasing power. The farmer, the manufacturer, the merchant, the home buyer, the purchaser of household goods, the investor and the speculator all borrow at times. They plan to repay with the earnings of their crops, proceeds of the sales of their goods, incomes from their wages and salaries or profits from the resales of their securities at enhanced market values, each as the case may be.

F. H. SISSON

The greater part of these various forms of credit is obtained by the borrowers directly or indirectly through the expansion of the loans and investments of the banks. It is this which creates the notes, securities and mortgages in the portfolios of the banks. The banks are able to extend these loans because people deposit money with them.

Even under the best conditions the plans of a small percentage of borrowers go wrong through mistakes, hard luck or dishonesty, and the judgment of the banker in such cases is proved by the after event to have been at fault. The losses caused under such conditions are ordinarily fully met by funds set aside out of the earnings of the banks for just this purpose and do not affect the depositors' money.

In the vast majority of cases and in the overwhelming volume of business involved the confidence of the bankers in their customers and the confidence of the customers in their own ability to carry out their plans and obligations to successful conclusions are wholly justified. This is the normal economic situation under which credit adds to the welfare and progress of society.

The Faith of the Banks

Such was the structure of hopes, good intentions and common confidence in one another that existed among all classes of the nation's community life when the series of economic shocks began to shake the nation's social fabric in 1929. The people had deposited billions of dollars with the banks because they had confidence in them. The banks had loaned large volumes of these deposits on farm and home mortgages and on notes of manufacturers, business men and finance concerns, and had invested in the standard securities of the nation's corporations, state and local governmental units and the national government itself, because they had confidence in the citizenship and the business conditions of the nation.

Their mortgage and other loans to owners of farms aggregated $6,600,000,000. Loans on urban real estate were $4,000,000,000. Loans to individuals secured by U. S. Government, municipal and corporate securities, totalled $11,000,000,000. Loans to industrial and commercial enterprises in connection with the production and distribution of the nation's infinite varieties of goods amounted to almost $19,500,000,000. Investments in Federal, State and municipal bonds were almost $6,000,000,000, and in corporate securities $11,000,000,000.

This great credit structure was built while the country was at peace, while the farms and factories were productive, while the nation and the world provided great active markets for their outputs, while the earnings of all kinds of enterprise were large, while the working people of the nation were fully employed, while wages and salaries were steady and generous, while prices of commodities were strong and while the minds of the people were dominated by confidence.

Great Changes Come to the Nation

Then suddenly, almost as if the sun itself had lost part of its vitality, everything changed. Our foreign markets failed and disappeared. Industry slackened. A rapid drop in all kinds of commodity values set in. The earnings of business fell. Unemployment developed. Wages and salaries went down. Domestic markets shrank. Fear became general. The securities markets became panic-ridden as the prices of stocks and bonds withered to fractions of their former values. It was the greatest disintegration of human plans, economic conditions and worldly values ever witnessed.

These destructive changes cut right through the qualities and values of the loans and investments, the notes and securities in the banks. Business men and manufacturers could not repay their notes to the banks as due. Many governmental units and corporations defaulted the payments on their bonds. Property underlying real estate mortgages became worth less than the face of the mortgages. The market values of standard securities became less than the banks had paid for them as investments or accepted them at as collateral for loans.

This meant, in fine, that the ability of borrowers to carry out the future hopes, plans and good intentions that I have defined above as the basis of credit, had become impaired to a far greater extent than had ever before occurred in the nation's history. The resulting losses could not be absorbed by the banks alone out of the normally ample funds that had been set aside against the expectancy of a certain inevitable percentage of human plans gone wrong.

Banks Showed All Reasonable Care

It was in loans and investments whose values thus became so unforeseeably impaired, that the banks, in all confidence, in all good faith, in all humanly reasonable care and good judgment had entrusted the billions of dollars of deposits customers entrusted to them.

Those loans and investments were, under all normal conditions, as good as gold itself. Indeed, if the banks instead had filled their vaults with gold bars, and then some unknown cosmic ray had transmuted them into lead, the results would have been scarcely more startling than the depreciation that was caused in the assets of the banks by the unforeseeable economic forces which permeated and debased them.

The inevitable result was that, when the banks urgently needed the money they had entrusted to those agents, so that they could meet the unreasoning demands of their depositors, they could not get it back.

It was not that our banking system and methods were of themselves weak or reprehensible, apart from the rest of the life of the nation, as has been made to appear.

It was not that our banks were permeated with incompetency or dishonesty or with lower standards of business ethics than were the other forms of human activity with which their own fate and activities were inextricably interwoven, so, it almost seemed at times, there was a concerted national conspiracy to lead our people to believe.

The great fact of American banking is that it shared fully in the plans and hopes and hazards of the American people,—and when those plans went wrong, the banks carried their share of the burden and suffered their share of the misfortune.

FARM ACCOUNTING CONTEST LAUNCHED

Bankers Evolve Plan for Stimulating Important Aid to Farm Success

THE Cache county, Utah, bankers recently added a stimulus to banker-farmer cooperative work by launching a farm accounting contest. At a meeting of the Clearing House Association the project was put before the bankers and accepted.

Each bank in the county agreed to enroll a minimum of five farmers in the farm accounting project. The names of the farmers when enrolled will be sent to the Secretary of the Clearing House, and also to the Extension Division of the Utah State Agricultural College. The bankers agree to cooperate and keep in close touch with each farmer they enroll so as to insure the completion of a maximum number. The bank which succeeds at the conclusion of the contest in enrolling the largest number of farmers completing the project will be given a special recognition.

The banks of Cache county have agreed to subscribe to an award fund, which will be presented to five winners as follows: first prize, $60.00; second prize, $35.00; third prize, $20.00; fourth prize, $12.50; fifth prize, $7.50.

In addition to the cash prizes, every farmer customer enrolled, who scores sixty per cent or more, will be awarded a special certificate issued by the Clearing House Association and the Extension Service jointly in cooperation with the Agricultural Committee of the Utah Bankers Association.

The scoring will be done on the following basis:

Farm and home account records (accurate and complete).....30%
Success of year's operations as brought out in the summary of the year's business.....35%
General appearance of farm and improvements and condition of livestock and poultry, (judging to be done during the summer months).....35%

The contest will end December 31, 1933. The judges will be the County Agent, the County Key Banker, a representative of the Clearing House Association, and two representatives selected by the Extension Division of the College.

Pennington to Have Library Soon

Vocational Students Grade Potatoes

Ewing—Agricultural student of Rose Hill and Ewing High Schools are being given individual help on grading and marketing their potatoes. Several have been shown how to grade before offering the potatoes for sale. The potatoes are graded and sold as U. S. No. 1. Potatoes in order to be classed as U. S. No. 1 must be not less than one and three-fourths inches in diameter, free scab, cuts, injury and must not show any signs of disease. Potatoes less than one and three fourths inches are placed in grade number 2 and sell for only one-half as much as grade number 1. The price received has been satisfactory; the lowest being seventy-five cents and the highest $1.25 or an average of $1.00 per bu. Certified seed is used and such varities as the Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain are grown since these varieties meet the demands of the market. It pays to grade potatoes and the grower who fails to do so is going to be disappointed when he offers his potatoes for sale because he will be compelled to take a very low price or cannot sell at any price.

Several students treated their seed potatoes for scab last year. Every student who has a potato project the coming year will be assisted in treating his seed. Should farmers in the community desire to have their seeds treated students and their instructor will be glad to give seed treatment demonstrations. One of the many objectives of the department is to make the department serve the community and to teach proficiency in farming.

The Library Committee, a special committee, appointed by the Lions Club, is now making plans for the opening of a Library in Pennington Gap in the near future. The success of such a movement will depend largely upon the response of the public.

The committee is soliciting private donations of books and will publish weekly a list of contributors with titles of books donated. If you have any books that you would like to contribute to such a worthy project, or have friends or relatives who would rally to the cause, "phone or see any member of the committee and arrangements will be made for the collection of same, or bring them to the Economy Store where arrangements have been made to take care of such contributions.

Soliciting your cooperation".

Teacher—On what do cows principally subsist?

Pupil—Subsist?

Teacher—Yes, what do cows principally eat?

Pupil—Milkweed.

Swash—And will your wife hit the ceiling if she catches you sneaking in this late?

Mashie—Yes, she's a rotten shot.

Fortune-teller—Beware! A dark woman is following you.

Walker—Well, she'll soon get tired of that. I'm a letter carrier.

"Do you believe in dreams?"

"No more than when I'm awake—I'm a cynic."

Shrimp—Is your wife a good driver?

Lobsterpot—Well, I'm not sure whether she is or whether all the other drivers she meets are.

BOOKS OF TOWN

Celtic mysticism and Celtic lyricism are very appealing elements in literature when they are given full force and are directed by a writer of genius. In anything but perfection of manner these so moving elements sour the whole. In "Pigeon Irish" and "The Coloured Dome", Francis Stuart gained the attention of many entusiastic readers and an approving quantity of criticis. His mystic and passionate qualities are those most noticed. In "Try the Sky" these fail him.

Had Mr. Stuart been writing a story that pretended to no mysticism, to no passionate lyricism, he himself would have seen how feeble a thing was "Try the Sky". The chocking which he feels in his throat would have been disclosed as a personal choking which did not communicate a feeling of sorrow elsewhere. Had he been otherwise occupied then with the exhiliration of feeling passionate about life, Mr. Stuart would have seen that the characters in "Try the Sky" were not only unusual but, in addition, ludicrous and unreal.

Fraulein Laufen has some reality as a pretty young Viennese. Jose has momentary reality as a young Irishman who is in love with her, who knows about horses and racing, but who is very vague as to what he wants and what Carlotta Loufen needs. Beyond these two, reality takes a mortal cropper. Comes Buttercup, a red Indian princess, married to a Canadian, wondering about Europe in an effort to find some undisclosed aid that will save one sacred spot in Canada from the ravages of the white and machine age. She is full of dreams of this holy earth, of the savage's love of the cruel, naked soil; but I do not think that a reader will be impressed by Buttercup, not even when she poses in the nude amoung the figures in a Viennese waxwork exhibit, not even when she breathes deeply in the wind blowing over the Englischer Garten.

With Buttercup in Beltane. He is married to her; but he plays Patience while Buttercup goes off with jockeys or posses in waxworks. To him she is a Princess, the daughter of a great chief. He has simply given her his name as an official passport into the white man's social world. He, poor devil, would like to live in elegant hotels, drink a great amount and see brilliant looking people. What tragedy that he has to knock about with Jose-Irish lyric mystic, horse trainer, lover of Carlotta, young man generally confused with Buttercup, and even with dear little old Carlotta. He didn't have nerve enough to try to pinch her. He contented himself with making such verbal passes at her as calling her "that angel".

There is a great deal of wondering on the Danube, in a poor sort of launch, alongshore and into the cities. Vienna and Hunich are the scenes of the general confusion, with the Irishman named Jose vaguely choking for Ireland. Then Carlotta is wounded, while she and Jose are in a Hunich hotel, when there is some political upheaval and Naxi demonstrators are being shot at. At this point a mystic German doctor-a mystic German who might ask you th have beer for breakfast comes into the story. He is builder af "The Spirit", an airplane that is going to a world-shaking flight for the soul of the world. He is also something of a forceful man; for good old Jose, Carlotta, Beltane, and Buttercup are all going to fly with the doctor in "The Spirit" without being quite aware of what they are going to do.

It all winds up after a public orgy in the Englischer Garten in the mud of Ireland. Carlotta and Jose have descended from the plane, the doctor is planning to push on into the air over the Atlantic, Buttercup is sadly looking toward Canada, with just a touch of red laughter left in her, and Beltane is still playing Patient. Nowonder. It's probably a good game. It is, in all events, the one thing that seems normal or for a moment attractive in the wild inner life of the mentally innature characters which Mr. Stuart has made the mistake of creating for us in "Try the Sky".

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

"Well, to t-t-tell th-th-the tr-tr-tr-truth it h-h-hh-has b-b-begun t-t-t-to st-st-stutter."

Oldwed—Does your wife know the traffic rules?

Newed—No, but then she's young and good-looking.

Wifey—Mrs. Nextdoor says you flirt something terrible.

Hubby—That's a boost. Would you want me to flirt like an expert?

Relieves Women's Pains

Here is an example of how Cardui has helped thousands of women: "I was very thin and pale," writes Mrs. F. H. Scott, of Roanoke, Va. "I suffered from weakness and a severe pain in my back. The pain unnerved me, and I did not feel like doing my work. I did not rest in my places, and felt worn, tired, day after day.

"My mother had taken Cardui, and on seeing my condition she advised me to try it. I have never regretted doing so. I took three bottles and it built me up. I gained in weight, my pain was better and the pain left my back. I am stronger than I had been in some time.

Cardui is sold by local druggists.

Governor Pollard To Marry

Richmond — Announcement of the approaching marriage of Governor John Garland Pollard to his executive secretary, Miss Violet Elizabeth McDougall, which was published Thursday, has resulted in a flood of congratulatory messages reaching the executive offices. These messages, however, find Governor Pollard in San Francisco, where he is attending the twenty-fifth annual convention of states exeentives. Miss McDougall has not been at the executive officers here since the announcement was made.

While no definite date has as yet been set for the nuptials it is understood the ceremony will take place during the present year and before the expiration of the term of office of the governor. It is believed that Governor Pollard, upon the expiration of his term, will make his home at Williamsburg, where he will resume his association with the College of William and Mary.

Miss McDougall is among the best known women in Virginia. For the past four consecutive terms she has served as executive secretary in the office of the state's chief executives, filling this important position under Governors Davis, Trinkle, Byrd and Pollard. She is a daughter of Mrs. Ellen McDougall, of Winnipeg, Canada, and a woman of outstanding ability and attractiveness.

Due to her long familiarity with routine work in the eqecutive offices Miss McDougall had come to be looked upon as an almost indispensable part of state governmen. The approaching ceremony which will remove her from the executive offices to the executive mansion has occasioned state-wide interest and prought congratulations to herself and the governor from all sections of the county.

Clinton, Tenn. Woman Praises Scalf's Indian River Tonic

Mrs. Sarah Petree, Clinton Tennessee, writes: "After having typhoid fever I suffered for years from stomach trouble. For days at a time I was afraid to take a drink of cold water and most everything I ate caused gas and too, I had attacks of acute indigestion. After taking a few bottles of Scalf's Indian River Tonic, I felt like a new person. I try to keep a bottle of Scalf's Indian River Tonic in my home.

"I want to tell my experience to other sufferers. I always recomend Scalf's Indian River Tonic to my friends, hoping they will be benefited as I have."

LEE COUNTY YOUTH HELD AS SLAYER

A 16 year old youth accused of killing a 9 year boy as the lad pleaded for his life was held in Lee County jail.

Carl Burk's hearing on a charge of shooting Charlie Catron, 9, was set for Friday.

The killing occurred near Purcell, about four miles east of St. Charles, Wednesday night, said Sheriff Napier. I went there to investigate. Armanda Smyth and M. C. Healand were witnesses. I was told that Burke walked up to the Catron home with a shotgun in his hand and aimed directly at the Catron boy. The boy pleadingly asked that Burke remove the gun, but witnesses said that Burke fired. The load struck the child in the chest, killing him instantly.

Burke claims that the shotgun went off accidentally, acording to the sheriff.

AMERICAN LEGION TO ELECT OFFICERS

Chester Haburn Post No. 33 will hold its regular monthly meeting on Monday August 14th. Post officers for the coming year will be elected, also delegates to the State Convention. The latter will be held in Bristol, August 21 to 23. Every member of the post is urged to be present at this meeting.

During the week the following orders were received from National Commander, Louis Johnson.

Comrades of the American Legion:

Our country is in the middle of the greatest battle in its history. It is the Argonne of 1918, a fight to the finish to end conclusively the war of economic forces that has brought us all to the threshold of disaster. This battle must be won as decisively as that first battle of the Argonne in 1919 in France. Victory will be swift and certain if every loyal American citizen does his part. No politics whatever are involved. This is no time for slackers or conscientious objectors. This is the fight to bring contentment and plenty back to millions of American homes that otherwise face another winter of hunger and misery. It is a fight to give an honest job with an honest living wage to every bread winner who wants to work.

We must not fail. We dare not fail.

To the end that these objectives shall be reached swiftly and definitely I call upon all of the 10,790 Posts of the American Legion to convene in meeting; to immediately offer their loyal cooperation and services to the official representative of the National Recovery Administration in in their respective communities; and to cooperate in achieving its objectives. These are "battle orders."

In addition I call upon every individual Legionnaire to pledge his individual services in this great effort to end unemployment, increase purchasing power and banish the forces of depression, with their attendant suffering, from our gates. Let us as The American Legion march a million strong into the battle lines of this struggle for national recovery and economic justice.

The day after President Roosevelt was inaugurated, in a radio address to the Legion, the President had this to say:

"The men of the ranks of the Legion, in the trying days of fifteen years ago, offered for the welfare and preservation of their country the ultimate contribution that a human can give".

The deep necessities of peace are no less serious.

"To the end that the efforts I am giving in these first days of my administration may be crowned with success and that we may achieve a lasting restoration of national well being, I invite the support of the men of the Legion and all men and women who love their country, who know the meaning of sacrifice and who, in every emergency, have given splendid and generous service to the nation."

We shall never have a better opportunity to render such services to our country and our fellow citizens.

In the name of the welfare of our country, in the name of the thousands of our own comrades who are suffering, I ask you to enlist wholeheartedly and spontaneously in this campaign; to follow your Commander in this battle as faithfully as you followed your Commander in the World War.

For God and Country the Legion is again on the march. As patriots we can do no less.

Louis Johnson
National Commander

Post No. 33 will take action on the National Commanders orders at the meeting on August 14th.

WHO HAS TO PAY

The General Assembly moving into special session next week will be confronted with the virtual collapse of the agencies of government which contribute intangible and immaterial services to social life. Services like public health, welfare and education have borne the full burden of administrative reductions of thirty percent of their appropriations, yet their share of the state's revenue is only seventeen millions while twenty-five millions of segregated funds have been protected from such drastic cuts.

Sixty-two counties are officially reported as unable to provide a minimum school term next year. One reason is that for a decade Virginia "has been pouring money into into its highway system". For new construction alone the state spends nearly as much as for education; for all road expenditures, twice as much as for education. The cost of poor schools is paid in part by taxes upon the children deprived of education will pay heavily in the future.

A bullitin of information on state support of its various governmental functions may be obtained upon request addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Rose Hill

Prof. and Mrs. M. F. Starnes returned Monday to their home in Fredericksburg after spending several days here.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Rowlett and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Ely motored to Middlesboro, Ky., Sunday.

Miss Ruth Bales, Beckley, W. Va., arrived here Wednesday to spend the remainder of the vacation with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bales.

Dinner guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ely were Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bales, Mrs. W. W. Bales and children of Beckley, W. Va., and Mrs. Jennie Fulkerson.

Joe McClure, St. Charles, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Lester Ely.

A woman had her radio tuned in on a sermon and, not being much interested in the sermon, she turned quickly to another station. The last word she heard the reverend say were: And the Lord was with Joseph," and the first words that came through from the other station were, "and he made a touchdown!"

3 Percent Tax on Electrical Energy

Section 616 of the Revenue Act of 1932, imposing on the consumer a tax of 3 per cent on amounts paid for electrical energy furnished for domestic or commercial consumption, was amended by the Act of June 16, 1933, (Public No. 73-73d Congress) so that the vendor of electrical energy sold on and after September 1, 1933, for domestic or commerical consumption will be liable for payment of the 3 per cent tax, based on the price for which sold.

Under the provisions of section 616 now in effect, the tax must be paid by the domestic or commercial consumer of electrical energy furnished up to and including August 31, 1933, irrespective of when payment for the energy so furnished is made.

On and after September 1, 1933, all vendors of electrical energy will be liabel for tax on energy sold for domestic or commercial consumption, and not for resale, at the rate of 3 per cent of the price for which the energy is sold. The law specifically provides that a public owned electric and power plant will not be liable for tax on electrical energy it sells, even though such energy is sold for domestic or commercial consumption.

In case of an owner or lessee of a building who purchases electrical energy for resale to tenante therein, the law regards the initial sale of the energy to such owner or lessee as the taxable sale for consumption, and the resale to the tenant is not considered a sale for consumption.

Marine Corps Has Openings

The Savannah Marine Corps Recruiting Station, located in the Post Office Building will have vacancies for graduates of high school or from institutions of higher learning during the months of August and September, according to an announcement by Lieutenant Colonel A. B. Drum, Officer in Charge.

Men accepted will be transferred to Parris Island, S. C., for a few weeks intensive training before being assigned to some school, ship or Marine Barracks for duty.

The Marine Corps offer many educational advantages both scholastic and scenic. Some men are selected for aviation, radio and clerical work upon completion of preliminary instructions. Many are assigned to ships and stations in the United States, and a few to foreign lands.

Applications will be mailed high school graduates upon request.

PLANS VITAL TO T.V.A. WORK

Proper Planning is Necessary Preliminary to Development of Tennessee Valley

The necessity of proper planning as a preliminary to achieving the full objectives of the Tennessee river basin development is comprehensively set forth in the following statement by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the board of directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority charged with that program:

"The amount of careful work that must go into the planning of a project like that at Cove Creek is only vaguely sensed by the public. The Cove Creek Dam, now planned as one of the dams of the country, would have been the highest dam in the world twenty years ago. The reservoir will be one of the world's greatest artificial lakes. Rarely has such a vast quantity of water been stored behind such a high dam. Any flaw would cause such great damage that the structure must be planned with utmost caution.

"One of the best designed dams in America is the great Boulder Canon Dam on the Colorado river. The public will never realize the painstaking work expended on that design. For instance, the heat generated by the setting of the huge mass of cement may be so great as to weaken and endanger the safety of the dam. Therefore, a great system of cooling pipes was [illegible] to lower the temperature of the cement. This, in turn, made it necessary to do extensive work in careful chemical study of the materials at every cement [illegible] shipping distance, and in invent new types of cement of [illegible] but which will [illegible] overheat.

"This is just one of the many problems that had to be solved. The same staff of engineers that planned the Boulder Canon Dam is now at work on the plans for the Cove Creek Dam. Every effort is being made to secure rapid progress. The directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority are proceeding with the utmost expedition consistent with the ultimate safety of the work. They have taken every advantage of the comprehensive preparatory work done by the Army Engineers and are now engaged in studying all problems connected with the project.

"As is customary in preparation for dam construction, a survey has been made of the railroad grade to the Cove Creek site, and estimates of cost are about complete. In addition, surveys for a highway were begun after the board was organized a month ago, and are not [illegible] finished. A study is now being made of the cost of hauling materials by truck to Knoxville compared with the expense of building and operating a railroad. A truck highway may be cheaper. We will know shortly.

"The purpose of the Tennessee Valley Authority is to help in the general, all-round, permanent development of this region. Aside from planning and building public works, it hopes to encourage the development of small industries in the small towns in the hill region. To accomplish this it plans to enlist the help of men from the small towns in building the dam; and while they are working on the dam it is hoped they may be shown how to carry on some industries back in their home towns by correspondence professional training. These local activities inevitably will largely increase the prosperity of the larger cities which primarily are supported by the agricultural and industrial life of the Tennessee river region.

"As is well known, the Tennessee Valley Authority is planning to transmit cheap power to the smaller communities. But this service will have little value if the people in these communities lack the facilities to utilize it. A man in a small town fifty miles away cannot afford to send to Knoxville or Chattanooga for an electrician to wire his house. There should be a neighbor living in his own home town who is able to do that. The same is true of other skills necessary to round out the full, comfortable social and industrial life of these communities.

"The most important point to be understood is this: The Tennessee Valley Authority is not primarily an emergency unemployment relief measure. In its various programs the United States Government has provided about five billion dollars to overcome the depression. A considerable proportion of this sum is to be spent in the Tennessee valley by various other agencies of the Government. Only one per cent, roughly speaking, was allocated to the Tennessee Valley Authority. The money should be used as far as consistent to relieve unemployment. But that is not the main purpose. The main purpose is to make the business and social life of the farms and the small towns permanently prosperous, to get the help of the young people in training competent folk to carry on the small industries, and to add to the capacities of the old and young to enjoy their lives where they were born. It is a pioneer job, requiring the pioneer spirit and the pioneer patriotism of those who originally peopled the valley almost two hundred years ago. The historic origin of the people, and their sturdy, independence of character, as well as the great natural wealth of the valley, and its ideal geographical relation to the rest of the continent, bid the nation to place the responsibility for the success of this undertaking on the Americans of the Tennessee river basin.

"The consciousness that these rich potentialities are dormant here has caused the nation to provide the funds for a demonstration of a better industrial, agricultural and social life that will be a shining example for the inspiration and education of the whole country."

Chevrolet Trucks Registration's Gaining

Registrations of motor trucks in the first six months of this year, with only four states missing, show that Chevrolet has materially improved its position in the field as compared with previous years, according to H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

In the first six months of this year, Mr. Klingler states, Chevrolet had totaled 43.7 per cent of all truck registrations, as compared with 32 8 per cent in the same period in 1932, and against an average of 30.4 per cent in 1929, 1930 and 1931 combined.

"The increase in Chevrolet trucks business is due to several causes," said Mr. Klingler. "One of the most important factors is the tendency retailers to turn to lighter delivery equipment, which probably accounts for the very large increase in the sale of one-half ton units. These comprise about one third of our volume. With lighter trucks, the retailer's fleet can travel faster and at the same time effect considerable economies in costs, which have become very necessary in these competitive days. Then, to, the merchants realize the advertising advantage of attractive delivery equipment traveling in all parts of the city.

"The brewery revival has also been instrumental in bringing us considerable business. We have sold many unite for both barrel and case delivery. Some of the fleets used for the latter purpose are in every way as pleasing in appearance as department store jobs.

"Because of multiple taxes on heavy equipment, truck operators are changing over to lighter units. They have found that Chevrolet trucks stand up in this service. The result is that they cut costs and effect important economies. To sum the situation up, there is a general trend towards the light, strong, fast, economical truck unit."

In commenting on the rising proportion of Chevrolet trucks registrations in comparison to total registrations in comparison to total registrations in the first six months, Mr. Klingler said they were in keeping with the dominating position of Chevrolet car sales and registrations, which are far ahead of competitors in its price class.

The Book Sampler

Two of the latest books receiving favorable notice from most critics and people who should know are Francis Stuart's "Try the Sky", and Richard Aldington's "All Men Are Enemies".

The first is by one of our ever-present Iris writers who with his ever-present posey of spirit tries something symbolical. It appears that a wandering Irishman named Jose finds himself in Austria and in love with Carlotta. As a lover he seems a bit etherial. There, also, is a moron who marries a Red Indian princess in order that she may advance the cause of the vanishing aborigines. These two couples join forces with a mysterious German doctor who wishes to make a flight for the soul of the world. They fly with him, after a farewell party in the Englisher Garten, only to finish in the mud of Ireland. If you read and understand this, you are one of the elect.

"All Men Are Enemies" has more to go on. A Britisher wrote it; and the British like it. It starts out in the prologue on Olympus where man is given divine gifts, the greatest of them being sense of touch. But the recipient of these gifts, the greatest of them being sense of touch. But the recipient of these gifts doesn't put them to such divine uses. He has an affair here sense of touch comes in encounters war, then marriage, then an affair for which he (apparently) was destined from the time of the generosity of the gods. In this affair both he and the senses are consummated. It wouldn't be fair to say that in this novel there are not moments of poignant beauty, but it is that same beauty of D. H. Lawrence, the sort which makes one realize that there might have been points about those earnest Victorians. Taken all in all, in spite of much that is objectionable, "All Men Are Enemies" is really the better book of the two.

By way of forming first hand opinions on these novels, read them as loans from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Joe—Me and Gus are partners in the same business but we don't carry the same goods.

Jim—How's that?

Joe—Gus goes around selling a stove polish that leaves a stain on the fingers, and two days later I go around with the only soap that will take it off.

Smith—Before I married my wife made me promise to quit smoking.

Jones—And you kept your word?

Smith—Yes. Now I'm doing my best to get her to promise.

Ida Plumpleigh—Don't you think I should lengthen my skirt a little bit?

Dora Spindleleg—Let your chassis be your guide.

Customer—To what do you owe your extriordinary success as a magazine salesman?

Salesman—To the first five words I utter when a woman opens the door—"Miss, is your mother at home?"

The American publishers recommend Richard Aldington's new novel, "All men Are Enemies", to anyone who wishes to believe in the beauty of life and in fineness of human destiny. Ther advertisements have been headed "Not since the first books of D. H. Lawrence." And they speak of the admirers of "A farewell to Arms". English critics, quoted on the dust-coves,, refer to the book as extremely courageous, a perfect love story, a human document, something that moves, shakes and delights. The American public, however, will be chiefly interested in "All Men Are Enemies" as a specimen of what the Irish Free State bans as immoral.

The book starts with a two page author's note, intended appasently to indicate the author's seriousness about his new opus. He intends that no one shall mistake what he has to say, so he tells them before he starts; We have been taught so long that life must have some exterior end and justification that we have forgotten that living is itself enough, that to be alive and conscious is itself an excellent and miraculous experience. By "Life" Aldington is willing to admit that he means "the life of the senses, the life of the deep, instinctive forces". The life of Tony, the introspective hero, is supposed to show all this

The novel starts in a Greek heaven, with Aphrodite giving to the new born babe the "divine" sense of touch. He gets other things from other gods: a modicum of knowledge from Athena, strength from Ares, and several things from Isis that in the light of the novel turn out to be nearly meaningless. But touch is the main thing. "Divine touch.

Between 1900 and 1914 Tony has a couple of sexual experiences that please him and allow him to exercise his divine sense of touch. He goes to war, but Aldington mercifully spares another war novel by skipping from 1914 to a night in 1919 when Tony is having a nightmare. Tony is back in England, a shattered man. He looks for his lost love, finally gives her up as dean, marries and upper-class English society woman whom he had seduced some years before and who nearly succeeds in seducing him early in 1919.

Then he settles down for a few years to business and a humdrum marital life. By 1926 he is beginning to revolt against the common conception of life as in "acquiescence in a set of formal belief", as nothing more than getting and spending money. All of his idols have crashed, all men (and most women) have become his enemies, and he starts to wonder around. Then there is a lot of wandering around. Finally he gets in touch with his first love. This is on page 476. The next hundred pages expound the primary thesis expressed in the preface "that the complete human being is formed by a man and a woman". And Tony proceeds to complete his being.

A novel has what readers today demand: a good deal of rather gummy introspection, a certain amount of plain sexual talk with fairly decent limits, long soporific and frequently cynical passages that make people believe they are thinking, and much talk about the unsatisfactoriness of modern standards of business. Good speeches can and probably will be made on the novel by the "advanced members" of the women's clubs, who will overlook the few real merits of the book in a genuine excitement about searching for beauty in life, and making profound appeals to the human heart. To these "All Men Are Enemies" is heartily recommended. To others, it can be said that there is occasionally some splendid characterization (Serope is good, for example), but it is mixed in with much that is bad. Neither of the chief characters is very real in spite of Aldingtyn's protestation at the beginning. And most of the others, notably Robins, are merely caricatures.

A average reader needs to know only that the book is 574 pages long Some may be interested in knowing that there are eight or six of Rockwell Kent's commercial sketches sprinkled through the book.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

AFTER AN OPERATION

Scalf's Indian River Tonic Proved a Blessing

Mrs. H. Ray Davis, 2050 Highland Ave., Middletown, Ohio, says: After I had an operation I could not sleep and was just a nervous wreck. Gas would form on my stomache and give me so much pain that it seemed as I couldn't live. I was so weak that I could not leave the hospital, although it had been almost two months since my operation. One day the doctor who owned the hospital advised me to try Scalf's Indian River Tonic and I am so glad to say that I could sleep by the time I had taken one-half bottle and it was remarkable how quickly I regained my strength. This wonderful Indian River Tonic went right after the gas in my stomache and drove it away. My nervousness soon disappeared and I was again feeling well and happy. I highly indorse this Master Medicine.

Virginia's Repeal Referendum Oct. 3

State Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, of Fort Royal, today said general approval of his proposal that Virginia vote on repeal October 3, indicated the probability that the state referendum would be held on that date.

Not only would the date preclude the possibility confusing general election issues, but it would afford Virginia the opportunity of being among the first 36 states to vote, he said.

Senator Weaver advanced the October 3 referendum proposal immediately after the call of the special session of the general assembly for convention on August 17.

LEE SMOKIES WIN TWO

The Lee Smokies defeated Dryden two games over the week end to keep the lead in the Lonesome Pine League. They defeated Dryden at Dryden Saturday in a thrilling game by a close score of 5 to 3.

Dole pitched a nice game for Dryden, getting a home run in the sixth inning with one man on base to put Dryden in the lead, but the Smokies came to life with the stick in the seventh and scored two runs.

The leading hitters for the Smokies were Herndon and Barker getting three hits for five trips, Rogers and Tyler getting two for four, for Dryden Ely getting three for four, Rhea and Herndon two for four.

Hollingsworth pitched a nice game for the Smokies, Dole and Hollingsworth tied in strike outs each getting eleven.

Ewing Scout Report

Ewing—The Scout's four day camping trip was taken early in July. Sixteen were in the party, 12 Scouts and two boys invited for the trip, and Joe Morley, the mascott, and Fletcher Mitchel, the Scoutmaster, Rev. C. H. Browning and Ast. Scoutmaster W. S. Morley. The ast. scoutmaster did the cooking with one scout detailed to help at each meal.

The swimming regulations were for 30 minutes before each meal.

The troops were divided into two patrols. Duard McDaniel was chosen as leader of one patrol, and I of the other.

We rode both to and from the camp. We broke camp Thursday morning.

Ray Click, Scout scribe.

Two colored gentlemen had just reduced the population of a farmer's hen coop were making their escape.

"Laws, Mose," gasped Sam, "why do you suppose them flies follow us so close?"

"Keep gallopin', nigger," said Mose, "them ain't flies. Them's buckshot."

"I found a $10 bill this morning."

"That shows you are lucky. You have a gift for finding."

"My gift stuck by me too long. Next I found the owner".

"Healthy-looking office boy you've got."

"Yes, He's a good lad. Doesn't smoke, whistle, gamble, or want to go to football matches."

"You're lucky."

"Oh, he's got one fault. He won't work."

Corrections

"Agricultural Student Conducts Project", which appeared in the August 3rd issue. The number of chicks purchased should have been 250 instead of 550. The words oil breeder and breeder house should have been oil brooder and brooder house. The number of pullets kept for winter egg production should have been 112 instead of 100.

Motorist (stopped car)—I say, you! what are you lying stretched out across the roadway for?

Tramp—Well, dis is de only sure way I knaw to escape being run over.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Well maybe were two games ahead of Dryden and maybe were three. The official standing of the News-Sentinel which has been kept by the Sports Editor says the Lee Smokies lead by three games so until a further checking is completed we will assume that the Smokies are masters of the big parade by the News-Sentinel count.

Get your "thens and thens" done up eary Saturday and hurry out to the park if you expect to get a good seat because one of the largest crowds of the season is expected to attend to witness one of the hottest games seen in many weeks.

New faces, new pitchers, new expressions on the faces of those who believe they have the best hopes of winning, and what an expression on the map of manager who does win after the ninth inning closes because this win or defeat will mean much in detemining whether the Lee Smokies will cinch the flag or fall in the rut with a vast possibility of loosing it.

Dryden will have some mighty strong timber and no doubt managers Stewart and Hall will be smiling from the dug out with some heavy timber too who will be capible of cracking them out of the lot, maybe.

Should the Smokies win this week you can get set to shuffle off to the series, if they loose, well thats something else.

Potash and Perlmutter

Potash and Perlmutter, Montague Glass's famous cloak and suit partners who are on the air over the WJZ network on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock, are thinking of sending this letter to General Hugh S. Johnson of the NRA to see if he does not think it a violation of "fair trade practices".

It read:

Potash & Perlmutter,

Dear Gents:

We have your letter in which you say you want the money for the goods.

If a check, we can send you right away if it's money you want, you will have to wait.

We also note that you say you cannot ship the second order until you have been paid for the first.

Please cancel the second order as we cannot wait that long for the goods.

Yours truly,

Fishbein & Blintz.

Recent Changes On L&N

As a result of recent changes made in the engineering department of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, as announced in the August L&N Employes' Magazine, W. H. Courtenay, formerly chief engineer of the road, has been appointed consulting engineer and is succeeded as chief engineer by G. R. Smiley, formerly assistant chief engineer. Both will have headquarters at Louisville, Ky.

Mr. Courtnay, a graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, at Troy, N. Y., has been with the L&N since 1879. He has been chief engineer since 1905. He is 75 years of age and resides at 1110 S. Third St., Louisville.

Mr. Smiley, a graduate of Washington & Lee University, served in the engineering department of the New York Central and of the Florida East Coast railroads before connection with the L&N in 1912. As superintendent of construction for the Florida East Coast he had charge of the building of the Key West extension of that road. From 1920 to 1931 he was chief engineer of construc- for the L&N. He is 52 years old and lives at 120 Hillcrest Avenue, Louisville, Ky.

Eight Meetings Field Officials

Detroit—First of a series of eight meetings which will bring more than 2,000 field officials of the Chevrolet Motor company into two-day conventions with central office executives got under way here this week.

Several similar meetings are being held at regional headquarters in the following order: Atlanta, Ga., New York, N. Y., Buffalo, N. Y., Chicago, Ill., Dallas, Texas, and Oakland, California. Four weeks will be required to complete the schedule.

Laying the groundwork for an expanded 1934 program, and determining broad basis policies to be followed in the coming year are primary objects of the conventions. H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager, assumes personal direction of them and has on tour with nine sales department heads.

At each meeting all zone managers, their assistants, office staffs and field representatives in that region are in attendance. Each departmental head details for the audience the immediate future plans and campaigns pertaining to his specialized department.

Similar meetings have been held annually at this season for the past few years.

Tennessee Valley Authority

The Tennessee Valley Authority is arranging to transfer the remains of early patriots from pioneer buring grounds within the area to be flooded by the great Norris Dam at Cove Creek, near Knoxville. Contained in 92 cemeteries in the region to be inundated are 4,269 historic graves. Some of these old cemeteries date from the days our hardy forefathers first pushed westward across the Alleghenies. Buried here many soldiers of the Revolution, including some heroes who fought in the notable engagement at King's Mountain, also relatives of Daniel Boone, Davy Crocket, John Sevier, Sam Houston, Andrew Johnson and others whose names figures on history's pages.

The village of Loyston, Tennessee, and a portion of the famous Daniel Boone Trail will be obliterated by the reservoir which will covey nearly 55,000 acres with a maximum storage of 8,200,000 acre feet. Located within the basins of the Clinch and Powell rivers, tributaries of the Tennessee river, an artifical lake will be created in Anderson, Union, Grainger, Claiborne and Campbell counties that will extend up the Clinch river 45 miles by airline from the Norris Dam, and 25 miles up the Powell river. This reservoir, 1,050 feet above sea level, will have an area of nearly 83 square miles and a normol shore line of 800 miles.

The Authority will have the cooperation of patriotic bodies, the local clergy and civic organizations in moving, at Government expense, remains now in the reservioir area to a new memorial cemetery, the site of which is to be selected by the Authority. At a meeting at Union County Baptist Church citizens of the area to be flooded gave assurance to W. R. Woolrich, of the Authority's engineering staff, that they would aide in every way to make the memorial cemetery plan a success. The hallowed task of transferring the remains will be performed with signal honor to the dead and with due difference to the living.

Mt. Vernon

By E. E. Parsons.

Mt. Vernon, the ancient home of the immortal Washington, is one of the most beautiful as well as interesting of all our great national shrines, and it is only a few minutes drive down the Potomac from the Nation's Capitol.

A little while ago I went there to visit the place where the father of our country once lived and I shall never forget the many odd and queer looking things that I saw there then.

The great house stood on a little knoll immediately west of the river with a low range of rolling green hills, dotted here and there with smartly painted houses, rising slowly toward the west.

The approach to the place was along a gravley walkway from the east, and on reaching the crest of the hill we found ourselves within a stone's throw of the grand old mansion. We pause here for some time before going on to the house. It was a beautiful midsummer morning and the sun was shinning brightly.

The sweet fragrance of June was in the trees. The lazy drove of bees and insects came from the nearby hedges and lawns, and the stately old trees that had stood there so long nodded gracefully down at us through the flowers and vines. To the south of us lay the broad Potomac shimmering in the morning sunlight like a yellow loop of liquid gold, silent, sluggish, peaceful, as if reluctant to go futher on in its course.

A mile down-stream the water was being troubled, and I saw a low, flat monster with the American flag floating from its mast-head laborously toiling up puffing boilers and drifted lazily upward into the haze above the trees. I watched the approah, and as it came nearer I could see the white foaming water rushing to the surface above the churning propellers, and could hear the band playing on board the deck. Huge waves of mad swirling water surged angrily about its hulk as if trying mightily to submerge it, then retreated helplessly shoreward to beat and lash the banks mercilessly.

Slowly the powerful giant fought its way on up the river, and after the passing countless smaller waves rippled up and down the river as far as I could see for a long, long time.

We then approached the house and as I entered the building I felt as though I were in the unseen presence of a God-created King it seemed so different to other noted landmarks where I had gone. But a friendly atmosphere pervaded the entire place and polite servants showed us through the premises.

Everything was in order about the house and as neat and clean as a pin. The old-fashion and out-of-date things to be seen there is like going backward for more than a hundred years. I saw the military uniform and side-arms that the General once wore all shined and polished as though he had used it but yesterday, and I thought about Bunker Hill and Valley Forge.

From the walls hung numerous pictures of prominent men and women of that day with their funny hair wigs and all garbed in Colonial fashion. Then I saw the old Stage coach in which the first President of this great nation rode to the Inaugural Ceremonies at Philadelphia so long ago.

Like a funeral procession, a steady stream of sightseers from almost every walk of life, sober, silent, thoughtful, came and went in orderly fashion.

At last after we had tired of our inspection of the house and its surroundings we went down under the crown of the hill to see the tomb and to rest under the shade of the trees.

It was a magnificent structure made of marble and granite, and as I stood and gazed through the iron grating into the dark, silent chamber at the sarcophagus which contained the ashes of that great man, the past rose before me like a dream and we were once again engaged in a war. I could hear the grand wild music and the tread of marching feet. I could see fluttering banners and the gathering forces, and I thought about the life and public career of the greatest soldier and statesman of the modern world.

Bookkeeping Records Not Indorsed

The Bureau of Internal Revenue has had its attention called to several cases in which business concerns have been solicited to purchase certain forms in connection with keeping records for Federal tax purposes. In some instances the salesman has intimated that he was an officer of the Government or that the forms and services that he offered for sale had been approved by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

For the information of thepublic, the Bureau wishes definitely to state that it has not indorsed or approved, nor authorized any of its officers or employees to indorse or approve, any particular accounting system or any prescribed forms for keeping accounts or rendering Federal tax returns issued by a private individual or firm. Instructions of the Bureau of Internal Revenue specifically prohibit its employees from officially indorsing or aiding in the promotion of any private enterprise.

This matter is brought to the attention of the public with a view to correcting any misunderstanding that may have existed as to the Bureau's attitude toward such undertakings. If the salesman intimates that he is an employee or officer of the Federal Government, there is a very near if not actual violation of the Federal Statue which provided that whoever with intent to defraud either the United States or any person shall falsely assume or pretend to be an officer or employee acting under the authority of the United States shall be fined not more than $1000.00 or imprisoned not more than three years or both. Any incident of this kind may very properly be reported to the United States District Attorney of the District in which it occurs.

CHEVROLET We didn't actually plan on elephants when we chose the bodies for the new Chevrolet. But we did choose bodies rigid enough, and strong enough, to support six tons of elephant, or anything else you can name. . . . Fisher bodies . . . steel bodies plus a hardwood frame . . . exactly the same type of bodies used on all 12 and 16-cylinder cars. Steel alone is not enough to make you as safe and secure as we want you to be in a Chevrolet. A steel body, welded into a solid wall of protection plus resilient hardwood reinforcing to take up stress, absorb shocks and prevent the steel from following its natural tendency to buckle under pressure makes the sturdiest body of all—the kind used on the Chevrolet, and on no other low-priced car. LEE SMOKIES DIVIDE GAMES

The Lee Smokies divided games over the week-end with Lynch won Saturdays game by the score of 4 to 2, Lee Smokies came back Sunday and defeated Lynch by the score of 8 to 3.

The Lee Smokies have either a three or two game lead over Dryden. Dryden claims it is only two. Dryden has lost three to the Lee Smokies, one to Jenkins, one to Lynch, one to Coeburn and one to Norton, so that is a three game lead as the Smokies has only lost four, Lynch two and Norton two.

The Lee Smokies had another game taken away from them at Lynch Saturday by the score of 4 to 2, the umpire won the game for Lynch, not the players.

Hollingsworth pitched for the Smokies and only allowed six scattered hits, and one of these hits was a foul ball, but the umpire said it was fair.

Farmer started the game for Lynch and was relieved by Stevenson who finished the game.

Young was the leading hitter for the Smokies, while Dinsey was the leading hitter for Lynch.

Farmer and Stevenson struck out five, while Hollingsworth struck out eight.

The Lee Smokies defeated Lynch at St. Charles Sunday by the score of 8 to 3.

Cannon Ball Baker had Lynch well under control and only allowed nine scattered hits and three runs.

Lynch used four pitchers, they started with their ace in the hole Miller a south paw but he didnt last the first inning, followed him with Stevenson, then Farmer and finally Taylor. The Smokies collected only nine hits off the four Lynch twirlers, and eight runs.

This makes Lynch three full games behind the Smokies in the second half, Dryden and Lynch are tied for second place.

The leading hitters for the Smokies were H. Herndon getting two for three, Barker ann Young two for four. For Lynch Roberts two for three, Hensley and Haynes two for four.

MINERS NOT ON A STRIKE

The miners of the St. Charles field and others where they are not working at the present are not out on a strike like it has been published in the different daily papers that are being sold in the St. Charles field, they reported that they are ready to go to work at any time that the company hangs up their sign for work. The company are trying to get the men to own up that it is a strike. Mr. Cross, Mine Foreman of the Bonny Blue mine told the Mine Committee that it was only a wild cat strike and nothing else.

The miners in the St. Charles field are ready at any time to do their part if the company will only do theirs.

The Book Sampler

"Twenty Years A-Growing" was written by Maurice O' Sullivan, a Doublin policeman-written in their native Gaelic for the people with whom he was raised on the Great Blanket the only inhabited island of a groupe off the coast of Kerry. Since the account was not designed for any but his friends, he wrote very simple and utterly without self-consciousness of the home life on the Blasket, hunts, junketing and fights, outgrowth perhapr of the cheer giving porters, wooing which were native mixture of sentiment and cupidity and in general of a life that is lived to the fullest in legend, fancy and fisticuffs. And, with a true blarneying tongue, all the men wore handsome, the lasses all fair. There is a harder side to this life presented in the struggle with the sea which means subsistence for these islanders, the sea across which the king of the island brings mail from the mainland, potatent and and letter carrier being in this instance synonymous, and which has selected the spot till the inhabitants ponder that "Strange indeed, are the ways of the world!" An Oxonian discovered this work, and since then England and America are taking it to their hearts. Cold, indeed would these hearts have to be to not receive it warmly.

For those who, with summer almost gone, still have a yearning for travel, there is Edward D. Dunn's "Double Crossing America by Motor", a sort of glorified guidebook to these our United States. Then, further afield, there is an account of the rediscovery of Shakespear by Christopher Morley for the benefit of a class from the University Hawaii on a raft in the middle of Waikiki. Admirers of Shakespear and Morley, especially of the latter, will find this slight volume attractive.

The questioner asked: And what is the white line in the middle of the highway for?"

Sam replied promptly: "Fo' bicycles".

"What caused you to beat that guy up?"

"He insulted my girl."

"Why, all he said was that she danced like a zephyr."

"My mistake! I thought he said heifer".

Binks: "My car runs a little way and then stops."

Health Bulleting You Should Read

Richmond—The State of Virginia maintains a Department of Health which functions in the interests of the people throughout the State. Naturally it is that the public should wish to know what is being done by its health department. For the benefit of all public minded citizens, for the use of students, teachers and persons interested in activities which concern the welfare of the public, the Virginia State Department of Health has recently issued two bulletins.

The bulletins entitled Major Activities of the Virginia State Department of Health explains in a brief, clear manner just what the functions of the Health Department and how these functions are carried out. The organization of the Health Department, its relation to the State Board of Health and the Governor of Virginia are explained in the bulletin and made clearer by an organization chart on the back cover. Public health work as it is promoted and conducted by the various bureaus within the department, by the library, and by the three State tuberculosis sanatoria, is outlined in simple concise language. This Major Activities bulletins may be identified by its green cover and can be secured through public health officials throughout the State or by request to the State Department of Health.

For a long time it has been the desire of the State Department of Health to issue a publication containing health news of general interest which would promote a greater interest in and desire for health, which would emphasize the the supreme importance of the prevention and control of disease, and which would facilitate disease control by discussing health problems and striving to give advice of the most practicable and helpful nature. With these aims in view, the Department of Health has recently issued the first number of Health. This little blue book will appear from time to time and is intended for the benefit and use of the public, particularly those who are immediately concerned with public health affairs, Any suggestions, contributions or comments concerning Health will be welcomed and may be sent to the Publicity Department of the State Department of Health, State Office Building, Richmond.

The Highest Realms of Research

Next to the conservation and dissemination of knowledge, the foremost function of institutions of higher education is research, the pursuit of truth and the revelation of information hitherto unknown. The highest realms of research are represented in the dissertations of graduate students completing the requirements for the coveted degree of doctor of philosophy.

Thirteen doctoral dissertations accepted for the highest degrees during the past spring are summarized in the annual leaflet issued by the University of Virginia. A prevailing tendency of the times is revealed in the emphasis upon the newer sciences, physical and social. Investigations of light non-habit forming drugs, undulant fever and its causes, represent the exact physical sciences, while inquiries into the expenditures of municipal governments, federal anti-trust legislation and theories of social institutions represent the dominant interest in the world of men's relationships. English, the Romance languages mathematics and philosophy are other subjects in which new frontiers of thought and knowledge were established.

Readers of The News may obtain without charge a copy of "Abstracts of Dissertations, 1932-1933" upon application addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Smallpox Vaccinated

Richmond—Every child who will begin school in September and who has not been vaccinated for smallpox should be vaccinated immediately in order that any soreness or inconvenience from the vaccination may be over before school opens.

Vaccination of school children is compulsory, as the law of the State reads: "Every teacher and every pupil shall, within ten days after entering a public school furnish a certificate from a reputable physician certifying that such teacher or pupil has been successfully vaccinated or is entitled to exemption by reasons of peculiar physical condition."

It is unwise however to to postpone this step until just before the opening of school are as soon thereafter, as the resulting soreness may impend the normal progress of the pupil from the start and make a bad beginning which can be avoided by taking this precautionary measure ahead of time.

BOOKS TO OWN

Chicago has a right to the reputation it enjoys abroad as the typical American city; for it proclaims, in its hundred-year rise from a mud flat to a metropolis, all the qualities of determination, Zeal, and practical improvisation that have given the United States its present position in the world, and its iniquities are perhaps the mo t spectacular illustrations available of the peculiar failings of the America temperament. To me the most interesting thing about Chicago is the amazing neatness, throughout its history, with which rascality has kept pace with progress. In the frontier days of the 1830's and 40's, its knavery was naive, and confined itself to Indian cheating and land speculation. In the lush days of industrial youth after the Civil War, a more complicated technique of roguery was developed in bribing officials, thimble - rigging franchises, and browbeating labor. And now, in the days of her metropolitan splendor, Chicago can boast the astronomical peculations of Mr. Insull and the gaudy slayings of Mr. Capone. There is, of course, another side to the picture: the unbonored doggedness of a host of a workers in rearing a city of three million under the worst possible conditions. For Chicago had not only an impossible physical location, poorly drained and unhealthy; in addition it suffered with dreary regularity from starvation periods brought on by the speculative greed of its masters. To cap all, fire practically wiped it out in its first flush of victory. That it survives at all is a tribute to some quality that does not get written up in the crime news of the crime news of the day.

In "The Tale of Chicago" Edgar Lee Masters attempts to trace these interweaving strands in its history. In spite of his birthplace, Mr. Masters as his life of Lincoln showed him, is a State-rights, Jacksonian Democrat, and he looks on the plutocracy which made Chicago in much the same way that Jackson looked on the Bank of the United States. It is therefore, a dreary tale that he tells. There are few redeeming figures. He has a good word for the early French explorers, but they hardly count in the history of Chicago. Stephen A. Douglas and John P. Atgeld appear as men of principle crucified by the mob. The Carter Harrisons throw a little light of aristocratic liberality on the Puritan darkness of the city. And Mr. Masters has nothing but praise for the Chicago architects who created the skyscraper, the World's Fair of 1893, and the Lake Front. The rest is darkness of rugged individualism in the raw, of social brutality, and of outright corruption. At the end of the book we find Mr. Masters wondering, in despair, if anything can turn Chicago to an effort that will match the splendor of its skyline with a life that holds happiness or beauty for its inhabitants.

Mr. Masters has written a serious book. He has nothing in common with the smart writers who have grown papular by holding up to light scorn the quaint virtues and the quainter vices of variously tinted decades. In fact, he is a little too studious in his eschewal of the pictorial; he holds himself too rigidly to the moralities of his thesis. But the really serious defect of the book is that it is overloaded with facts. The minute descriptions of physical changes in the city are obviously of no value to the stranger (particularly in view of the complete lack of all illustrative material in the book), and should be curtailed or omitted in a book for national distribution. At times the array of facts seems to bewilder Mr. Masters himself, and his narrative skips about in a way that is bound to puzzle the reader. Even more surprising than the roughness of the narrative is the lack of clarity in Mr. Masters' portraits. There is none of the incisiveness of "The Spoon River Anthology" even in his pictures of his favorites, Douglas and Altgeld. The men never emerged from behind the records of their deeds. All of this, in a man of Mr. Masters' ability, points to a hasty job, and throughout the book there are faults in grammar and general construction that bear out this diagnosis. In spite of the genuine feeling and sound conception embodied in "The Tale of Chicago", Mr. Masters would have done well to have written it more slowly and re-shaped it more carefully than he has done.

Use This Laxative

made from plants

Thedford's BLACK-DRAUGHT is made from plants that grow in the ground, like the garden vegetables you eat at every meal. NATURE has put into these plants an active medicine that stimulates the bowels to act — just as Nature put the materials that sustain your body into the vegetable foods you eat.

In Black-Draught you have a gentle laxative, free from synthetic drugs. Its use does not make you have to depend on cathartic chemical drugs to get the bowels to act daily. Now you can get Black-Draught in the form of a SYRUP, for Children.

Stream Improvement Better Fishing, Va.

Richmond—Virginia has made great strides in her conservation work during the past eight years. The Old Dominion State is far more conservation-minded now than at any time since the days of Captain John Smith.

This is due in a large measure to the work of the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries established at the beginning of Senator Byrd's term as governor, under the leadership of Major A. Willis Robertson and his associates. This Commission has developed a sound progressive plan for the restoration of Virginia's wildcat resources. President Roosevelt's recovery program came along just in time to help put some of the Commission's plans into operation.

One of these is the improvement of trout streams of the State so that they will produce a larger annual crop of finny denizens to lure more of Virginia's own citizens into the great outdoors, also to attract thousands of visitors from other parts of the country.

While Virginia has always attracted her share of outdoor enthuiasts, the new Shanandoah National Park, the two easily accessible National Forests, and the abundant supply of fish and game which will be developed when the Commissions plans are brought to full fruition, will bring literally millions of visitors to Virginia's gates begging for admission.

These visitors will leave millions of dollars in Virginia annually, dollars earned elsewhere and spent with the people of the Old Dominion State. But remember it takes more than pretty scenery, excellent climate, and southern hospitality to attract and hold visitors, especially to bring them back year after year.

Yes, there must be something more than pretty landscapes at the end of the trail. Nothing will do more to bring people into Virginia than good quail, turkey and deer hunting, and fine trout and black bass fishing.

President Roosevelt's recovery program came along at the right time to help fulfill some of the cherished ambitions of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries. The Emergency Conservation Workers are cutting fire lines through State game refuges and preparing the ground for the planting of food for wild life. Other camps, operatingunder the supervision of the U. S. Forest Supervisor, John McNair of Harrisonburg, are doing important stream improvement work, something the Commission has been recommending for several years.

This is all very fine, but the citizens of Virginia themselves must do similar work in the areas where C. C. C. camps are not located if the best results are to be obtained.

Then the question arises: Just what should be done to improve trout fishing waters.

Only the high spots can be touched in this brief article. In short however, any water impending or retarding the flow which will furnish more food and shelter for trout will improve the stream. The average trout stream in Virginia has a rapid flow with long shallow riffles between pools, many of which go dry, or nearly so, during the low water months.

There is no use stocking such a stream unless the the fishermen will aid the State in improving it so that there will be many pools as hiding places for the trout when the flow gets low, otherwise raccoons and other enemies will fishout the trout faster than the State or Federal goverments can stock them,

The simplest way to build low dams, not over 15 to 18 inches in height, on the average mountain stream is to use either large boulders or to imbed old logs in the bottom of the stream with about three feet extending into the banks on either side.

On a stream with a slow sluggish current it is often wise to build deflectors of logs imbeded into one bank and jutting out about half way across the stream. Such logs should be placed on the bottom. This will cause the action of the water to wash out pools for the trout. Shallow dams can also be built in streams with soft bottoms by laying a log across the stream and driving planks or heavy oak slabs into the stream at an angle of about 30 degrees. This will form pools below the dam as above.

Shelter can also be built by nailing pieces of slabs or planks to logr and weighting them to the bottom of the stream with rocks. Even trees cut three-fourths off and felled into the stream at an angle of 45 degrees making dandy hiding and feeding pl ce. for trout.

In a small stream no dams should be built higher than 20 degrees. Even though heavy rains fill up the dams with stones, gravel and silt, the pools below will furnish shelter and more feeding grounds for the trout.

In building a feries of low dams and deflectors on the average trout waters in Virginia care should be used so that the back waters from one dam will not extend more than half the distance to the next dam above, as certain kinds of trout foods thrive best in riffles and not in deep pools.

If the organizations and individuals in the trout water sections of Virginia will build a series of pools and deflectors on every stream Virginia's annual trout harvest will be increased many fold.

Virginians will be pleased to learn that Harry Flood Byrd and Congressman A. Willis Robertson have already distinguished themselves in national conservation affairs during their short term in Washington. Senator Byrd has become a member of the Senate Committee on Wildlife, and Major Robertson is leading the movement for a similar committee in the House of Representatives.

But all these efforts must be backed up by the outdoor people of Virginia, and one of the best ways to do it immediately is to this stream improvement program with all their might.

Extraordinary Session

Richmond—The extraordinary session of Virginia's General Assembly was called to order Friday at noon. Bills were promptly introduced bearing on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, the Layman Act, the legalizing of beer and matters affecting the state budget.

Governor Pollard appeared before a joint meeting of both legislative bodies to deliver his message. He recommended legalizing beer, a state-wide vote on the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and of the Layman Act, and a commission to study liquor control.

"I am a prohibitionist", and the Executive, "but not enough of a prohibitionist go to against the will of the people. First, because this would be against majority rule, and, second, because prohibition against the people is worse than useless."

The state's beer control bill, together with the bill repealing the Layman Act, which is the state prohibition law, will get their first public hearing on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock before a joint session of the house and senate finance committees. Both measures were introduced in the assembly as soon as the session opened,

The question as to the length of the present session is undecided, many members holding to the belief that it will be ended within fifteen days. Others contend that it will run the full length of thirty days. This latter opinion is held by many old members.

In that part of his message dealing with beer Governor Pollard said, in part:

"Beer should be sold in the open and not behind screens. I have decided to recommend for your consideration the North Carolina rate of 10 cents per gallon and 1 cent per bottle of 12 ounces.

"I recommend that an election be held on Tuesday, October 3, next for the purpose of electing members to the (national repeal) convention.

"I propose that at the election to be held for the selection of delegates to the convention to pass on the eighteenth amendment the people be given the right to vote on a separate ballot (1) as to whether they favor continuance of state-wide prohibition; (2) if the majority be against state-wide prohibition, whether they favor the dispensary or license system."

The beer bill is expected to be passed within a week.

60 MEN CAME TO THIS FARMER'S AID/. . .

"There's a fire at Mr. Flotter's farm," called the telephone operator hurriedly. She rang up the neighboring farms and soon 60 men were fighting the flames. A neighbor discovered the fire while the family was away. She notified the operator who located Mr. Flotter while calling other farmers. This quick work saved the home and other farm buildings. Many cases like this show how the telephone reduces the hazards and losses of farm life.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Considerable rumors have circulated since the week end games that the Lee Smoky management let up on the Saturday game in order to make the series more interesting Sunday, this was very evident when Hollingsworth was refused relief when he was being paddled to all corners of the field in the Saturday tilt. Sundays battle, however, proved to be some what more difficult to win than some expected as Carl Doyle held the Smokies well in check according to the hitting column.

If you took time to pick an All Star Lonesome Pine club, recheck your list and see how near correct you were, here they are officially with no partiality to any one as all players were selected according to averages.

Batting Average of Lee Smokies

Sand Cave Trip

Rose Hill—The following people enjoyed a picnic at the Sand Cave Tuesday: Mesdames: Ross Stickley, John Carter, Robert Rosenbaim, Jonesville, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kincaid, Lynchburg, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Ely, Mrs. P. F. Dean, Kansas City, Mo., Miss Carrie Lee Spencer, Morristown, Tenn., Miss Bashie Rincaid, Ewing, and Miss Ray Kincaid, several children also went.

LEE SMOKIES DIVIDE GAMES

The Lee Smokies divide games over the week-end with Dryden to remain two full games in front in the second half with only two games to play with Norton, while Dryden plays two with Lynch.

The Smokies lost Saturday by the one sided score of 14 to 4. Hollingsworth went the route for the Smokies allowing fourteen runs, twenty-six hits. The Dryden boys were all hitting anything that he threw them. Dryden collected nine runs and eleven hits in the sixth inning.

Parsons started the game for Dryden but didn't remain in the box long till he threw up his hands and called on Stevenson a Lynch hurler who finished the game. Dryden was well represented with Lynch players having four.

Trivitt led the hitting for the Smokies getting a home run and two singles out of four tripe, Wax and Tritt collected two for four. For Dryden the whole team done the hitting everybody on the team getting two or more hits.

Add Rogers the Smokies star catcher had the misfortune of getting his foot hurt in this game, he says he will be o. k. for the series with Norton. We all hope so.

The Lee Smokies defeated Dryden at Dryden, Sunday by the score of three to two. It was a pitching duel between Baker and Doyle. Doyle only allowed the Smokies four hits two of these in the ninth inning. Doyle and the catcher from Lynch donated the game to the Smokies, Doyle making a wild pitch allowing one run to come in and Connute missed one hit that allowed the other score. But the final score that was made in the ninth inning was not donated, it was the only earned run of the game as Dryden got both of their scores by errors. Cannon Ball Baker allowed seven scattered hits, the first hit coming in the third inning by Rhea who tripled to left.

Doyle had the best of Baker on strike outs he struck out eleven Smoky men while Baker only struck out four. Richmond and Borum led the hitting for Dryden while Bacon the Smokies new catcher while Roger is out of the game led the Smokies at the stick.

Rogers said he didn't know how exciting a ballgame was from the fans stand point till Sunday.

Baker said he had beat all the clubs separately and Sunday beat them all combined as Dryden had all the players they could find loose or borry.

The New State Commander

Election of Homer K. Bowen, Wytheville, as Commander of the Virginia Department, American Legion will be pleasing to Southwest Virginia in particular. A native of Giles, Mr. Zeal for the Mountain Empire in his work as executive secretary of Southwestern Virginia, Inc., a regional chamber of Commerce which has enjoyed notable success and which had played a most valuable part in promoting and cementing the bonds of unity and a spirit of cooperation between the several parts of the territory embraced in its jurisdiction.

The responsibility of directing the course and policies of the Legion at a time like this by no means light but Mr. Bowen will redound to the benefit of the organization and the good of the state. He brings to the duties of the post ability, enthusiasm, devotion and experience in leadership qualities that bespeak success in work of the nature of that which has been entrusted to him for the ensuing year by the Bristol convention.

Cawood-Smith

Rose Hill—Mr and Mrs. Henry Smith announce the marriage of their daughter, Ruby Nell, to Mr. Carter C. Cawood at the Morgan Memorial M. E. Church, Sunday, August 20, at 2:30 p. m. Rev. S. N. Elben, the pastor officiated. Only Mrs. Eblen and Mrs. Oscar Smith, the bride's sister, witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. Cawood is a graduate of Rose Hill High School and has taken courses in music at L. M. U. and at peabody Conservatory of Music at Baltimore. For the past three years she has conducted the music department of the Rose Hill High school.

Mr. Cawood is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Condy Cawood of Hagan and is a graduate of Ewing High school. Since his graduation, he has been employed on his father's farm.

Immediately after the wedding the young couple left on a short wedding tour. Their plans for the future are not definitely known.

Bride: "Why did you tell your friends that you married me because I was such a good cook? I can't cook a potato!"

Husband: "Well, I had to have some excuse."

FISH SUPPER AT PERLES CABIN

A most delightful luncheon was presented Sunday evening at Perles Cabin in honor of the Lee Smoky baseball club and their backers by manager, R. P. Stewart which was highly appreciated by all who attended.

A special shipment of high grade fish was ordered for the feast from Norfolk and it was a strong belief that many over ate as the feed was gorgeous.

Johnny Brooks served perfectly as master of ceremonies introducing each guest personally, each one responding very favorably with speeches that received great applause. The speeches of Clay Barker, who gave a reading on the speed of our loyal George Washington, Lefer Herndon who discussed and rehearsed some scenes of certain players cursing out umpires and Rich Orr prescribing Cannon Ball for the best remedy to cure your baseball ills headed the list as the most applausable speeches of the hour, Barker was given one dollar for his oration on George Washington. Many other speeches from very active promoters and boosters were highly appreciated and applauded also.

A unanimous appreciation of quite an enjoyable evening was presented to Mr. Stewart as the party adjourned.

SAVE THE SCHOOLS

Whatever may be said about the virtures of economy and balanced budgets, the estimate of the State Department of Education that at least sixty-two Virginia counties will have school terms of less than eight months during the comming session is sufficient to give pause to every Virginia citizen.

Of later years Virginia school officials have been talking in terms of a minimum program for elementary and secondary school, of improving the standards in these schools, and of giving equal opportunities to all the children of the Commonwealth to receive an adequate common school education. But in the face of this commendable effort to meet the needs of our schools, Governor Pollard's 30 per cent reduction in general fund appropriations has actually thrown the schools backward.

It becomes increasingly apparent that something must be done to save the schools from this threatening blow to their work. The State's aid to school in the present fiscal year is, under the executive order, to be reduced by $2,103,127.50, and yet $700,000 will make it possible for these sixty-two counties to keep their schools open for a minimum term of eight months.

According to Governor Pollard the responsibility for this reduction rests with the General Assembly which passed the 1932 appropriations act. Legal opinion elsewhere contends that the Governor was given discretionary power to avoid a deficit by making such reduction.

The letter of the act may be to force such destructive economy upon the schools, but what member of the 1932 General Assembly will admit that it was his intention ever implicitly to endow the Governor with such power?

It is simple truth that the school system faces a tricis. Something must be done, and if not by the special session, then by the regular session just as soon as it convens in Richmond.

It appears that the localities are doing the best that they can and that it is the State's aid which is being seriously reduced. Other departments have, of course, been affected, but not to the degree that the school has.

School officials have repeatedly called the attention to the fact that the education of children cannot be delayed. Governor Pollard himself expressed these sentiments to the Governor's Conference in California recently; and George C. Peery, the Democratic nominee for Governor, has taken a stand favoring the minimum educational program as forulated by the state Board of Education.

The members of the Virginia Legislature need to ask themselves these questions: What will it profit the children in sixty-two Virginia counties that will have to close their schools shortly after Christmas, if nothing more than a balanced State budget is to be our boast? What will it profit Virginia to fail in the minimum education of several thousand children in order that $700,000 may be saved a State whose credit is second only to that of the Federal Government?

These questions answer themselves. And if adequate education for the youth of this State means anything more than empty talk, then Virginia's schools must stay open the full eight months' term in the coming session, irrespective ot the vain satisfaction on either the Governor's or the Legislature's part in ending the biennium without a deficit.

SCHOOL AND ROADS

While Virginia's public school system languishes in the depression which threatens sixty-two counties with school terms of less than a minium of eight months, the state road program advances into the present fiscal year with a normal amount of funds and automobile taxes continue to hold their own in the face of declines everywhere else in State revenue sources.

This situation is sheer anomaly. Here we see two of the central government's chief functions operating at widely divergent levels and entirely because road funds are segregated and schools must be supported out of the general fund.

The problem is really deeper than a question of schools and roads. It is really a question of general fund activities versus activities supported from these segreated accounts which, it must be recalled, have grown far beyond what the framers of the original law ever expected.

With the growth of receips from automobile taxes there has been an almost proportionate decline in general fund receipts especially those from the tax on railroad gross receipts. Time was when the traveler rode the trains and as a result paid money into the general fund of the State. Now he uses his automobile and pays the tax into a segregated fund for a highly specialized service. Unless he falls within State income tax levels, this motorist citizen pays nothing directly to the support of general fund services which he enjoys.

Here is the key to the school situation; namely, that segregated funds in Virginia have gradually been drawing money from the general fund and the State begins perforces to look for additional sources of revenue with which to carry out functions as important, if not more important, than the building of roads or the regulating of the highways.

To say that motor vehicle revenues should be used solely for the benefit of highway users is to argue that income tax collections should be spent by the State is a political and social unit and should not attempt to limit its services soley to those groupes who pay the taxes.

The time is here now for the General Assembly to take stock of its central government tax structure and to guard against the mushroom growth of specialized services at the expense of other and equally important services.

What has been the occasion for Governor Pollard's economy order which has reduced the purchasing power to State employees to bare necessities and, in several departments, threatened the continuation of a minimum of service? Certainly not a decline in motor vehicle revenues. The occasion for this extreme economy program which, incidentally, is open to serious doubt is the falling off of general fund revenues.

State taxes must be considered as a unit and the services rendered by the central government should be regarded in the terms of their social value. To select from these services a single one and build a legal fence around it is bad government to the degree that such discrimination harms other activities to which the government is committed.

As matters stand at present, Virginia is ready to proceed on an annual road program with practically the same amount of money she had for such a purpose in 1929, whereas the public system, lacking only $700,000, must face the year with the assurance that 62 per cent of her localities will be unable to provide even a minimum term of school.

Does this mean that roads are more important than a child's education? What answer to this question do members of the General Assembly have?

Editorial, Times Dispatch, Richmond, Va., August 5, 1932.

She: "Yes, I wish I'd married Mahatma Gandi."

BOOKS IN REVIEW

In his latest novel Louis Bromfield, winner of the Pulitze in 1926 with "Early Autumn", again turns to the middle west for his inspiration and material. "The Farm" is an astonishingly faithful picture of the development of that section of America, from the days of the pioneers to the advent of the present industrial era.

Specifically the book concerns itself with a detailed account of the lives of two pioneer families and three generations of their descendants. In 1815 Colonel MacDougal, a gentleman of eighteenth century culture and refinement, leaves his native Maryland to explore and develop a grant of land in what was then called the Western Reserve. With characteristic energy and determination he and his companions clear forests, build roads, plant crops, and establish a homestead known affectionately by subsequent generations simply as "The Farm". Joined later by his wife Susan, the Colonel prospers, and in the years that follow his home is the scene of many happy family reunions.

Another pioneer is Jorge Van Eesen, vigorous, muscular, and broad of shoulder "forever wavering between extreme virtue and the wildness of a libertine endowed with enormous vigor and a relentless animal energy". Then there is Jamie Ferguson, a giant young Scotch Presbyterian, who after exciting adventures in Panama and California, settles down on the farm and marries one of the Colonel's daughters. Sympathetic accounts of the lives of the children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren of those early set tlers constitute a considerable portion of the book. There are literally score of characters, pictured always against a background of contemporary life and customs.

It is with the gradual but inevitable transition from an agricultural to an industrial society that Mr. Bromfield is chiefly concerned. He resents this change, for he feels that the really worth while things in America life have been lost. "Her father," writes Mr. Bromfield of Mary Crane, "was one of the first of the first of the old line of farmers to go down before the hopeless conditions of the New Day, the Millenium of Prosperity". He proceeds to describe vividly in its effect upon the lives of the Colonel's descendants the tragedy of the disintegration of agricultural life and the concentration of population in urban centers. America is seen as a nation dominated by a passion for business. The old characteristics of independence, integrity, idealism and individualism are sacrificed to attain political and economic success. Mr. Bromfield describes with obvious bitterness the exploitation of foreign labor by sanctimonious industrialists, the prevalence of corruption among political leaders, and the swallowness and hypocrisy of life in the town.

However, "The Farm" is not concerned exclusively with social problems. Innumerable scenes of the past century are pictured with defty accuracy of detail that calls to mind contemporary Currier and Ives prints. Perhaps the most delightful passages are those describing customs and institutions of the past: church suppers, Sunday dinners, and family reunions; the "hired girl", the livery stable, the county fair, and the stock company.

Mr. Bromfield views the passing of the good old days with keen regret. "The Farm", says he in a dedicatery letter, "is the story of a way of living which has largely gone out of fashion, save in a few half-forgotten corners and in a few families which have stuck to it with admirable stubbornness in spite of everything. It was and is a good way of life, and although you live to be as old as the Colonel, I doubt that you will find a better way". In a few sentences that is the underlying philosophy of the book. Carefully and capably written, it is a vigorous plea for a return to the idealism and integrity of our rugged American forbearers. According to the author, they are "tough qualities needed in time of crisis".

The Only Entry

Montague Glass, who writes the Potash and Perlmutter comedies broadcast on the WJZ network on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock, is also a composer.

Some years ago he won a prize offered by a large woman's magazine for the best song submitted with words and music. Rupert Hughes was the judge.

A little later Glass met Hughes and asked him:

"Rupert, doesn't your conscience bother you for awarding the prize to a friend?"

The editor of a country newspaper retired with a fortune. When asked the secret of his sucess, he replied: "I attribute my ability to retire with a $100,000 bank balance, after thirty years in the newspaper field, to close application to duty, pursuing a policy of strict honesty, always practicing rigorous rules of economy and to the recent death of my uncle, who left me $98,500."

Comptroller Combs Commended

Richmond—Under a caption of "Hair-splitting Makes for Disruption" the Commerce and Industry Magazine, of New York, in its current issue publishes a handsome tribute to the ability and efficiency of State Comptroller E. R. Combs. The New York publication regrets that Mr. Combs should have recently been subjected to attack for political purposes. In its editorial section the magazine says:

"This is no time for petty quibbling. This goes for politics as well as for industry. This is a time for complete and wide-spread cooperation between men and organizations. A vast task of reconstruction faces all of us, requiring concentrated efforts. Personal and party prejudices must be set aside. This is as true of the internal workings of our governmental bodies, as it is of the industry of the nation.

"The political and personal attacks against the Comptroller of the State of Virginia, E. R. Combs, is a case in point of avoidable controversy. This is particularly true when one considers the fact that these allegations placed against a responsible and able official are designed primarily to embarrass the functions of that office. Citizens of the "Dominion State" know full well the meaning of having a man of Mr. Combs quality and integrity in office. They also know that charges against him are unwarranted.

"The disposition of state funds, by a former clerk in the Court of Appeals over a long period of years, does not reflect on the efficiency of the Comptroller's office. Mr. Combs reported this deficiency when he assumed office. Incidentally one must bear in mind that this clerk's speculations, the basis of present charges, occured also during the administration of a former governor and a previous comptroller. The absurdity of the charges are obvious, and the action regrettable. They are, however, instrumental in causing unnecessary dissention at a time when cooperative effort is the by-word."

John Patton Speaks

John Patton Speaks, son of William and Sarah Speaks, was born June 1, 1851, and died August 17, 1933, age 82 yrs. 2 months and 16 days. He is survived by one brother, Hardy Speaks, of Granby, Missouri, and 3 sisters, Mrs. Emily Thompson, Bristol, Mrs. Lizzie Ball, Powhattan, Kansas, and Mrs. Martha Rosenbaum, Rose Hill.

He was married to Frances Powell in 1885 who went home to Heaven about 12 years ago. Mr. Speaks was converted and joined the Methodist Church early in life and has been a true follower of Jesus both in word and deed, all through the years; A citizen the community has always been proud of, interested both in religious and political matters, ever on the side of the issue he thought to be right, a man ever ready to take up and help carry on any good cause for the betterment of his country.

When the Psalmist wrote that beautiful first Psalm, "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." I am sure the Psalmist was talking about men like John P. Speaks.

Kindness and love are the atmosphere which the soul of a christian brethern, and Mr. Speaks spoke the universal language of kindness, the language all the world can understand. Men, women and little children loved him and his memory and acts of kindness to them will not be forgotten during the passing years.

The funeral was conducted Friday at Speoles Chapel Church by the pastor Rev. J. C. Cloris of Jonesville, burrial followed in Speaks Cemetery near the home.

Wheat Allotment on Reduction Control For Lee County

S. L. Carpenter of Pennington Gap has received instructions regarding wheat production control in Lee County, and has blanks to be filled in and signed by any wheat growers who wish to reduce their acerage. On account of the small amount of wheat grown in the county, there is no separate association for Lee. Those farmers "who sign up" must give their acerage and production for the past three or five years. Any farmer who is interested should see either S. L. Carpenter or W. H. Starnes of Ewing, during the first week in September.

Chevrolet Men at World's Fair

Chicago — Hundreds of Chevrolet salesman and zone executives from every part of the United States are visiting the World's Fair this month as the result of a nation-wide sales contest sponsored by the Chevrolet Motor Company and its dealer organization.

This contest, which embraced the months of May and June, is believed by H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager of Chevrolet to rank among the outstanding events of its kind ever staged in the automotive industry. The grand total results, which have just been complied by Mr. Klingler's office after weeks of checking sales in thousands of cities and towns, show that 958 salesmen sold 20,713 new cars and trucks and 15,514 used cars, a total of 37,227 vehicles, during only the months of May and June. These 958 salesmen with a number of zone executives, 1,074 in all, are now visiting the Fair relays.

While the populous New York zone carried off the individual zone honors, it was closely pressed in the two months' race by the Baltimore and Tarrytown zones. The Houston, Detroit, Pittsburg, St. Louis, Kansas City, Norwood, O., Syracuse, Harrisburg, Oklahoma City, Dallas, Buffalo and Philadelphia zones also recorded high sales performance.

Highest individual honors were captured by J. H. Metz, of Dover, Del., in the Baltimore zone. He sold 39 new and 65 used cars, 194 in all. Salesmen in small cities and towns in every section of the country turned in remarkable performances, total sales of 40 to 75 cars and trucks being numerous.

One of the gratifying revelations of the contest came from the great farming sections where sales were from 100 to 300 per cent above those reported by the same men a year ago.

Mefoofsky, one of the better known inhabitants of Bronx-on-the Subway, went into a delicatessen and looked around. He inquired the price of various articles such as cakes, fruits and so forth, and finally got around to a big Virginia ham. Looking cautiously around to see that none observed him he secretively asked, as he pointed to the ham: "How much"?

Just at that moment there came a terific crash of thunder, and a bolt of lightning that seemed to rend the very heavens. Picking up his package of herring and making for the door Mefoofsky cried:

"Mine Gott—can't I even esk?"

Build Up Health and Pains Go Away

WOMEN who suffer from weakness often have many aches and pains which a stronger state of health would prevent.

Women in this condition should take Cardui, a purely vegetable tonic that has been in use for over 50 years.

Take Cardui to improve the general tone of the system in cases of run-down health and "tired nerves." Women have found, in such cases, that Cardui helps them to overcome pains and make the monthly periods easier. CARDUI is safe and wholesome for women of all ages. Try it!

The Book Sampler

It's only a picture book, but, as one magazine has it, it is "by general consent the best history of the war". Five hundred thirteen illustrations in chronological order combine to make up a graphic presentation of "The First World War", with its pity, horror and bravery. Lack of explanation and minimum of captions doesn't mar the general effect, it only heightens the illusion of witnessing these past events and leaves an element of mystery. This very quality perhaps brings out the lack of understanding and senselessness of the whole thing. From the assassination of the Archduke to the long rows of unburied dead, Laurence Stallings brings back sensations that attacked pits of stomachs when reading the morning papers back in 1914-18.

The interests aroused by Herbert Agar's "The People's Choice: From Washington to Harding" bids fair to be sensational. The title is challenging and ironical, and the facts more so. In explaining why, of our first seven presidents, six were above average in intelligence and ability, and of the later twenty-two only four maintained a high standard, Mr. Agar has gone into many forbidden facts in our life as a nation. He starts out with the growth of the oligary which produced such leaders as Washington, Jefferson and John Quincy Adams; then the Jeffersonian democracy which eventually succumbed to the policies of Hamilton. With the advent of Jackson and the spoils system democracy turned to that most democracy turned to that most democratic game of grab-and-get which has continued in some form up the present. Mr. Agar's language is pithy and to the point. Though many will feel that he has been unfair to McKinley and others and that he has given Washington a break, he gives cause for discussion and food for thought which is much more than the dry as dust factual recounters have been able to do.

A Generation Ago in Education

For the first time the life and work of Richard Rateliffe Farr, "Readjuster" superintendent of public instruction in Virginia, has dealt with in a factual and interpretive account just published.

Superintendent Farr, although his election was a political one bitterly contested by hostile factions, proved himself an able administrator in one of the most trying periods of Virginia's educational history. The state system of schools was in its infancy. No normal schools had been founded. There were no trained teachers to rely upon. Equipment and resources were pitifully inadequate. These difficulties, under the leadership of Mr. Farr, were remedied in large degree. Teachers' institutes and reading circles were begun, the first normal school was established, the initial steps toward high schools were taken. Because time and political animosity may have obscured the record, it is well that such a study should be made of a man who made significant contribution to the life of the commonwealth.

Copies of "Education in Virginia under Superintendent Farr", a bulletin of 165 pages, may be obtained without cost upon application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

SHE MAKES MONEY BY TELEPHONE!

We know a farm woman who sells many things by telephone. In one season it is strawberries. At other times it is eggs, cream, dressed poultry. People pay her a premium to get things fresh from the farm. She says these telephone sales bring many additional dollars into the family purse.

Your telephone can help make your farming profitable. Yet the cost is only a few cents a day.

Millions of Dollars Paid to Railroads

Detroit—How one transportation system supplements another was revealed here today in the statement by the Chevrolet Motor Company that in the first six months of this year the company moved by railway freight 69,506 full carloads of income materials and outgoing finished parts and automobiles.

This represents an increase of 38 per cent over the full carload movement in the same period last year, according to C. R. Scharff, Chevrolet Traffic Director, and does not include 72,000,000 pounds of railway freight carried in less-than-carload lots, an additional 2,100,000 pounds moved by railway express and 24,000,000 pounds by freight forwarders.

Millions of dollars have already been paid to the railroads this year by Chevrolet for the traffic haulage essential in the movement of parts and raw materials to the company's twenty domestic plants, and the outbound carriage of parts and finished automobiles to dealers and zone warehouses, Mr. Scharff pointed out.

The long sustained buying market for automobiles this year is reflected in the Chevrolet freight movement in June, the last month for which figures are available. In this month alone the company handled 16,409 full carloads of freight, or more than three times as much as in June, 1932.

Mr. Scharff stated that 65 3 per cent of all freight handled by Chevrolet in June was moved by rail. The remainder was divided between motor trucks, drive-aways and water transportation.

"R. S. V. P."

Potash and Perlmutter, who are acquainting the public with the inside of the cloak and suit business on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings at 8:30 o'clock over WJZ and the blue network, have been getting social invitations in their fan mail.

"Mr. and Mrs. I. Seiden request the pleasure of Potash and Perlmutter's presence at the wedding of their daughter Leah to Mr. Marks Pizinski on Sunday, July 12, at Newrika Hall, 2973 Wendover Avenue, Bronx.

"R. S. V. P. to the Nonpareil Waist Company, I. Seiden, proprietor, waists and silks, voiles and marquisettes, a large stock of laces and embroidered waists constantly on hand. Ring us up and a salesman will call."

Which made Perlmutter ask, "What does that mean, R. S. V. P.?" And Potash replied, "Remember send wedding presents."

LEE SMOKIES CINCH SECOND HALF

The Lee Smokies defeated Norton two games over the week end to cinch the second half.

The Smokies winning Saturday's game by the score of nine to eight.

Jonnard started the game for the Smokies but had to be relieved in the sixth inning, by Rudolph Parsons a new Smoky twirler and a darn good one at that. Jonnard allowed eleven hits in six innings. Parsons only allowed three hits and they were after he was hit in the head by a pitched ball by Creech.

Peters started the game for Norton but had to be relieved by Creech who finished the game for Norton, each team tied in the number of hits each getting fourteen.

Young led the hitting for the Smokies getting four for five, H. Herndon getting two for three, Wax two for four, Rhea and Barker getting two for five. For Norton Peters getting three for four, Taylor three for five, Creech two for four, Ford and Dorton two for five.

The Smokies defeated Norton at Jenkins Sunday by the score of four to two. Creech and Peters again were on the mound for the mound for Norton Norton made two runs in the first inning but that was all they was able to collect off the offering of Cannon Ball Baker who only allowed two runs and nine scattered hits, the Smokies collected eleven scattered hits off Creech and Peters, one of these being a home run by Trivett in the first inning.

The leading hitters for the Smokies were Young getting two for two, Rhea three for five, Baker and Trivitt two for four, for Norton Creech and Ford each getting two for four.

The editor of a country newspaper retired with a fortune. When asked the secret of his success, he replied:

"I attribute my ability to retire with a $100,000 bank balance, after thirty years in the newspaper field, to close applicatihn to duty, pursuing a policy of strict honesty, always practicing rigorous rules of economy and to the recent death of my uncle, who left me $98,500."

LEE SMOKIES DEFEAT PINEVILLE

The Lee Smokies defeated Pineville here monday by the score of six to zero. Rudolph Parsons was on the mound for the Smokies and only allowed two hits and struck out eleven men. While Rose on the mound for Pineville was met with base blows in the first inning the Smokies making five runs and five hits in the first inning.

The leading hitters for the Smokies were H. Herndon getting three for four, Barker getting two for four, for Pineville Massingil and Pettus being the only ones that could get a hit off Parsons.

No Bar to Learning

"I have a son and daughter ready for college and have always thought I would be able to send them, but this year I find that due to the failure of our bank, sickness and death, I will be unable to do so. The thought is the greatest disappointment of my life. I am interested in any way that will enable them to get this college work."

This letter is typical of dozens of inquiries from recent high school graduates and their parents. Youth now has no place whatever in the ranks of wage-earners, and there is acute need of education opportunities to make up for the lack of college training. Fortunately there are established agencies offering useful facilities to students determined to overcome obstacles. A college course is the easiest but not the only path to future education. Evening and home study courses and lists of directed readings make forging ahead possible for all who are persistent.

Information concerning opportunities for continuing education at home may be obtained by readers of The News upon application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

"So the doctor's trial marriage has been found out?"

"Yes, and he's been arrested!"

"What's the charge?"

"Practicing without a license."

Damage to the C&P More Than $150,000.

Repairs to the poles, wires, cable, telephone instruments and private branch exchange switchboard systems of the Chesapeak and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia damaged by the unprecedented storm of August 23 will involve expenditures of more than $150,000, according to a statement made by Charles H. Weber, general manager of the company. Repairs to the telephone plant in Norfolk and vicinity were estimated to be $70,000; Portsmouth and Suffolk, $20,000; Newport News, Hampton, Williamsburg and Lee Hall, $20,000. The remainder covered other sections of the state.

As a result of the storm, 12,236 telephones were reported out of order throughout the state. The greater number of these were located in the Tidewater area, where 7,892 telephones were put out of commission temporarily by being inundated or the lines broken by falling trees, poles snapped off, and buildings being washed away or torn down by the wind.

In the interest of restoring all telephones to normal as promptly as possible, officials of the telephone company ordered all available linemen, repairmen, cablemen and other workmen into the areas affected by the storm.

This activity resulted in more than 400 men being engaged in restoring telephones to service, many of them being rushed from areas less seriously affected by the storm. In less than a week after the damage occurred telephones had been completely restored to service in practically all areas in Virginia with the exception of Norfolk and Portsmouth. Telephones remaining out of service in these cities were due largely to cable troubles were electric light wires had fallen across the cables or they had been burned by lightning.

A severe thunder storm a few days after the hurricane caused a number of recurring troubles in Norfolk, Portsmouth, Ocean View, and in Williamsburg and Lee Hall.

Repairmen clearing up the damage to the telephone system worked long hours practically from daylight to dark, while cable men worked in double shifts far into the night, so that there would be but little delay in restoring to service telephones put out of commission in the cables.

In the Norfolk-Portsmouth area, the restoration of telephones to service in office buildings and in the market buildings of the respective cities, was delayed by reason of the basements of these structures being filled with water. The cable terminals in each case were located in the basement and in a number of instances, the water was several feet over the terminals. In such cases, it was necessary to wait until the water was pumped out of the basements by the owners or occupants of the buildings and then to replace the wet cable terminating in the boxes with new sections. Many of the terminals contained 1,600 wires.

Also a large number of private branch exchange switchboard systems had to be replaced in their entirety as well as about 1,000 telephones which had been soaked by the flood waters resulting from the storm.

Rev. Frank Trotter, Misses Vivian Wright and Elizabeth Wetmore, of L. M. U., Harrogate, Tenn., were the week end guests of Gladys and Curtis Creech.

Betty Jean, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Smith, is recovering from a serious attack of diphtheria.

PROGRESS OF SANITATION CAMPAIGN

The Sanitation Campaign in Pennington is still growing and expanding. Officers repore that nearly Seventy-five per cent of out-toilets have been or are undergoing a make-over to conform to the requirements of the State Health Department and the town ordinance.

Mr. Fuller of the Health Department has stated that he will return to make inspection. It is the intention of the town to give the time specified to complete the Sanitary Toilets.

This is a very gratifying report and all the citizens of Pennington should feel proud of the progress. There are still many old hulks of cars and broke down trucks in evidence. A great many were removed which has helped the appearance of the town wonderfully. It is hoped they will continue to disappear. The lot mowing of weeds, still needs attention here and there. Lets clean up Pennington and keep it tidy.

Miss Nell Hall

Miss Nell Hall was born June 5, 1916 departed this life September 1, 1933, age 17 years 2 months and 27 days. She leaves to mourn her loss a mother, two sisters, and three brothers, her father having preceeded her to the grave by 3 months and 24 days.

Her life was the example of purity and sweetness and her lovely personality was enriched and intensfied by the entrance and in dwelling of Christ in her life. To know Nell was to love her and her departure from ones company only left a sweeter and purer atmosphere. The Lord was especially considerate it seems in allowing her a glimpse of heaven and her father waiting for her. She leaves abandant testimonies of Christ Abode in her life, and she is waiting to welcome, with her father her many friends and relatives who are wise enough to believe in her Lord.

Mrs. A. L. Brown and daughters, Misses Johnnie and Opal Brown, of Eagan, Tenn., are visiting Mrs. Brown's daughter, Mrs. W. J. Richards.

DESCRIBES FARM ADJUSTMENT PLAN

Agricultural College President Says Federal Program Seeks to Adjust Output with Reduced Exports

The Federal farm adjustment program is partly guided by the belief that export of agricultural commodities will not soon recover its volume of five or ten years ago, in the opinion of F. D. Farrell, President Kansas Agricultural College, writing in the August issue of the American Bankers Association Journal.

"Nobody knows whether the farm adjustment program will succeed," writes Mr. Farrell. "Its sponsors describe it frankly as an experiment. It seeks to socialize agriculture at least to the extent that farmers, in what is believed to be the public interest, will restrain their production activities and that processors, distributors and consumers will contribute something toward paying farmers for exercising this restraint. The adjustment programs definitely are based on the fact that prices are determined primarily by supply and demand. They also are based on the assumption that the export business in agricultural commodities will not soon return to its volume of five or ten years ago.

Dependence on Public Support

"The plan offers wheat price insurance for 1933, 1934 and 1935, for the domestically consumed portion of the wheat crop. The insured price is to be sufficiently high to give the domestically consumed portion of the wheat crop pre-war purchasing power. If the plan is as effective as its sponsors hope it will be, the reduction in supply may influence wheat prices so that the entire wheat crop will have pre-war purchasing power.

"If the adjustment program succeeds, its launching probably will mark the end of an era of extreme individualism in agriculture in the United States," says Mr. Farrell.

"[illegible] fundamental changes led Secretary Wallace to say, 'What we really have to do is to change the whole psychology of the people of the United States.' This is a large order. It involves the whole program of farm adjustment as well as the larger national economic program, of which farm adjustment is a part. If the people decline to participate in the program to the extent necessary to give the experiment a fair trial, we shall never know whether farm adjustment as now proposed would have succeeded or not if it had been given a fair trial."

BANKERS PREPARE FARM FINANCE BOOK

Tells Bankers and Farmers What to Consider in Making Sound Loans

A book on "Making Farm Investments Safe" has been prepared by the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association, summarizing material published by it during the past ten years. It presents a compendium of scientific facts, practice and experience in farming, with timely and helpful suggestions to serve as a reference and guide in the daily routine of banking and farming. From it practical workers in these fields can obtain an idea as to what extent and in what manner farm loans should be limited by soil erosion, weeds, plant diseases, rodents and fire hazards.

The book also indicates how much is added to the security of a farm loan by the farmer who keeps accounts and practices good business methods, as well as the extent to which loans are safeguarded by crop rotation, production of legumes, judicious use of commercial fertilizers, the use of quality seed and the providing of home grown feeds.

Another section sets forth the precautions that should be exercised by both the banker and farmer when negotiating loans to increase or improve dairy production, or beef, sheep, swine or poultry production, as well as what factors should be considered in the economic marketing of products and the way efficiency in production affects efficiency in marketing. Many other everyday details of farm life that have a practical financial significance are treated in the book.

Banks Repay R. F. C. Loans

Among the loans of $2,819,000,000 made by the Federal Government through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the highest percentage of repayments, official reports show, has been made by the banks, indicating the return of stability as the chief unsettling element of public fear has been lifted from them.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has authorized cash advances, fully secured by sound collateral, to 6,278 banks since it began operations in February, 1932, and made actual disbursements to them in the amount of $1,221,878,000. Of this amount, however, $546,072,000, or over 44 per cent, has been repaid by the banks. All other classes of borrowers combined have repaid about 14 per cent of their loans.

Card of Thanks

We take this method to express our thanks and appreciation to our many friends and neighbors for their kindness during the sickness and death of loved ones, Carrington and Nell.

Also we thank every one for the lovely floral offerings.

Virginia Eggs Placed Fifth

Richmond—The Virginia State Poultry Federation today announced that the quality of Virginia eggs placed fifth among eggs from eighteen states selected at random from hundreds of cases of eggs shipped by Federation members to the New York Market, in a survey just completed by the marketing committee of the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council. The result of the survey is highly gratifying to members of the Federation, M. C. Kilpatrick, executive secretary of the State Federation and vice-president of the Council, said today.

"It means that in the future Virginia eggs, which have had little standing in the past in Virginia's markets outside of the State and even in Virginia's own cities, have been proven to grade and measure up to the highest standards set by the Federal government", Mr. Kilpatrick said.

"The work of this association has done much to influence poultrymen in Virginia to follow standard methods of egg grading and for years the Federation has worked to obtain recognition for the quality of Virginia eggs. The report is proof that Virginia poultrymen can and do produce eggs of high quality and are able to deliver them to Eastern markets in condition to complete with the best eggs produced in the East.

"The Council's report is based on the results of a survey of egg quality on the New York wholesale egg market for a given period. One hundred and forty-six cases of eggs representing shipments from eighteen states were selected at random in wholesale egg houses and graded by members of the committee according to United States official egg grades. In the comparison on the basis of the best case from each state, Virginia placed third, being surpassed by a narrow margin by Connecticut and New York. In comparing the average quality of all eggs from each state examined by the committee, Virginia ranked fifth, being surpassed by New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Maryland, while more than two thirds of all Virginia eggs inspected were found to be of U. S. extra quality grade or better.

"This official recognition of the quality of our eggs is in marked contrast to the prejudice and discrimination against Virginia eggs which existed a few years ago. During the past three years the Virginia State Poultry Federation has been of great service to Virginia poultrymen in their efforts to produce better eggs and in securing recognition of this improved quality."

Annual Regatta

Richmond—Richmond's Fourth Annual Regatta, scheduled for September 9 and 10 at Berkeley Hills, on the James, already has attracted entries from approximately 100 motorboat racing pilots including two national championship holders and the world's speed record holder in class B. outboard racing, S. King Fulton, racing secretary of the Regatta Association stated here this morning.

The entries include Bill Feldhausen, of Stapleton, Long Island, who won this year the national marathon at Albany, Charles Cobot, Champion of the East and 1932 Albany marathon winner and C. C. Thompson, Jr., of Suffolk, who set a world's record in B. Class outboard speed recently when he traveled faster than forty six miles an hour while being officially clocked by a racing committee.

Some of the Richmond entrants this year include James W. Mullen, Thomas L. Moore. Robert Haskins, Miss Isabelle Christian, J. Pinckney Harrison, John W. Knowles and Bradford H. Walker. Don Flowers has entered from Oyster Bay, N. Y., Jed Hanley, of Warren, R. I., is another professional to enter the lists. Towson, Maryland, is sending William Roche, Miss Maryland Codd and Phillip Gore and from Baltimore a number of entries have made among which are Milton Ross, G. E. Stagmer, Bus Stagmer and Roland Geary. Other entries of note include H. F. Senior, and Edward Sasnett of Washington, Robert Snadeki of Westover, C. S. McCallum, A. E. Laud, Jr., Milton S. Baker, Bentley Byrd, Jr., Miss Eloise Colonna and Emory Cox, Jr., of Norfolk and Freeman Collier and Julius T. Herbst of Newport News.

The race program includes ameteur events for outboards not over Class D. inboards not over 50 horse power, inboards in the 125 horce power class, unlimited class inboards, class B. B. and C. outboards, ladies outboards, and unlimited class in power outboards.

Twenty seven prizes and tropies besides the three special challenge tropies which must be won three times for permanent ownership.

Regatta Association officials say that they already have made reservations for approximately seventy visiting yachts at the club, for the races.

Miss Green (purchasing golfing outfit)—And I shall want a small rifle.

Salesman—A rifle, madam?

Miss Green—Yes, I heard my cousin say he shot two birdies and an eagle one day last week.

Warning

Due to a very favorable season for development, Blackleg in cattle now largely prevails throughout Lee County. Further loss can be prevented by using Blackleg Aggreesin in 5 Mil. doses on all calves up to six months of age, revaccinating at six months to produce solid immunity. Although a calf is known to be generally (not always) immune at two years when not vaccinated, the writer sustained a loss of a two and one half year old purebred Hereford steer from Blackleg. For this reason my pratice is to vaccinate all cattle I purchase regardless of age, as I would rather be safe than sorry.

Supplies of Blackleg can be secured at 6 cents per 5 mil. dose in ten dose bottles through the Hon. Geo. W. Koiner, Commissioner of Agriculture, Richmond, Virginia.

Yours very cordially,

WHAT BANKING WENT THROUGH

By JOHN E. PUBLICKER
American Bankers Association

J. E. PUBLICKER

BANKING in its long career has been compelled to withstand many serious shocks, but it ran into the most perplexing entanglement of its whole history since the general breakdown of values in 1929. The commercial structure of the entire world seemed to have been shaken from its foundations and the marvel is that the banker, with everything breaking down all around him, was able to come through as he has.

General business failures, agricultural stagnation, income losses, capital losses, inabilities to meet debts and therefore inabilities of bankers to pay back depositors when loans were not paid, were the reasons, in most instances, for the bank failures.

No profession, no department of life is without its weaker elements, but had proper consideration been given to the relatively few instances in banking, had exaggerated and startling headlines been kept in true proportion, had banking not been used as a target for political self-seeking and with vote-seeking motives, had unfounded rumors not been spread the people's confidence might have been retained and far less would have been their losses.

There were factors in our banking experience which every earnest banker deplores — factors which many had worked years to eliminate, which it was fearfully recognized would aggravate any difficult days which might arise. One of the worst of these was due to political regulation which chartered many banks that should never have been.

That there have been incompetence and dishonesty in banking is admitted. That the instances that did occur were used grossly to increase fear in the public mind, we affirm. We shall continue to strive for higher attainments in our profession and strive for laws that require competence and ability in management. That we cannot legislate honesty and unselfishness into either a banker or a borrower must be conceded, but dishonesty, wherever found, should be punished. It is as true in banking as elsewhere that no matter how good the law, dishonest and incompetent men can make it ineffective. Good laws are essential. We must strive for ever better ones, but their enforcement will come only as the public recognizes that it is a matter not of laws or codes alone but of the men who administer them.

Our people must be brought to realize that the welfare of our country depends upon its banking system, that the strength of the banking system depends upon the public's faith and understanding, that the majority of banks, because of faithful service rendered, even through the whole of this general breakdown, had the right to expect the people's trust and confidence.

In every great catastrophe, no matter what its nature, no matter what its cause, someone must be crucified. The banker was this time selected. In the late 90's, political agitation started a tirade against the railroads. Some railroads may have done reprehensible things, but the agitation became so general and so violent as almost to destroy one of the fundamental factors in the progress of a country. Today the same thing has been done to the banker. In spite of all that has happened, the fact remains that even most of the banks which failed are paying out infinitely better than investments in almost anything else.

Bankers Aiding Agriculture

State associations of bankers in many agricultural states are giving time and financial support to encourage practices among their farmers that will bring about better farm results.

The major activities reported from one state to the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association which is nationally active in promoting this line of cooperation are as follows:

1. Drought relief work: Local banks have played a vital part in this work, being represented on the county committees for passing on all seed loans. These committees met practically every day during the spring to pass on the loans in order to get as quick action as possible. A total of 914 applications were received and handled by one committee, 833 being granted.

2. Four-H Club work: Bankers helped stimulate 4-H Club work, financing many members who otherwise could not have enrolled. They also helped finance fifteen 4-H Club delegates to the club convention.

3. Livestock feeding: The banks cooperated with the Extension Service in this state and the railroads in interesting the amount of livestock feeding. Assistance was given the feeders in securing finances.

4. Crop improvement: The bankers took part in the crop standardization program of the Extension Service and encouraged the farmers to use pure seed, and in many cases made loans for this purpose.

The Book Sampler

Here are two novel of success, if you like—An Englishman, Alec Waugh, writes with rather irritating bonhomie of Yankees whose lives are changed by "The Golden Ripple" of oil. It all came about between The Humber was mixed up with a woman and didn't wish to return to Trinidad. So he sent a message encouraging his employer to drill. People who have never heard of him, owners, purchasers, and their relations, became involved in the ever-widening eddies of the golden flood. Better than that, F. W. Bronson creates "An American Hero" with millions and according prestige out of a Pennsylvania washerwoman's son. Embryo financiers please note that it was Johnny Green's grin that did it and his ability to use his friends.

Booth Tarkington's effort at "Presenting Lily Mars" as a lady of the stage is distinctly disappointing. Lily is too fascinating, too platitudinous, and too tiresome for words. On the other hand, Kathleen Newlin Burt's "Beggars All", a mystery romance from which little was expected, for that very reason seems a bit better. No one is expected to believe all about the ancestral estate on an island off the Carolinas and what happened there when the hero ran afoul of a lovely girl and a master crook, but the tale is amusing for all that.

Uncle Galahad Threepwood of risque memory, and the Empress of Blandings LordEmsworth's prize pig, go on to further episodes of riotous fun in "Heavy Weather". For a while the threatened publication of Uncle Gally's memoirs complicates life for several respected members of the gentry, but to the rescue come Providence and the pig. Ament P. G Wedehouse: it is rumored that even the intelligentsia are taking him up.

These books are a few of the new light fiction which may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

DANCE AT LEGION CABIN

The American Legion is sponsoring a dance at the Legion Cabin, Friday September 8, at 9:00 p. m.

A good time and plenty of entertainment is in store for those that attend.

Gidsberg: "Mister Ottlet, I vant you should make me a doughnut sign."

Painter: "Certainly, Mr. Ginsberg, but I thought you were a butcher, not a baker."

Ginsberg: "Sure, I am a butcheh; I vant it a sign: "Doughnut Hendel de Feesh."

The battleship was in port and visitors were being shown around. The guide was exhibiting a bronze table set in the deck.

"Here is where our gallant captain fell."

A nervous old lady interrupted him.

"No wonder, I nearly tripped over it myself."

BOOKS OF OUR OWN

If Mr. Carleton Beals has recorded his facts faithfully as he has recorded them graphically, "The Crime of Cuba" will have little competition when selections for the most ironical title of the year are made. Mr. Beals is fortunate in being able to present his book at a time when popular interest in Cuban affairs has reached a new high level for this generation and when the crimes of the Machado regime has focused attention on the problem which he has worked out so carefully. America is not so fortunate, for, it develops, we as a nation have forced Cuba into bondage, sustained a form of government which long ago sickened every decent element in Cuba, and through blindness or sheer avaries we have allowed a situation to develop which speaks eloquently of American stupidity and mismanagement.

From the day the Platt Amendment was too weak to resist, America has, wittingly or otherwise, been the cause of much of Cuba's misery. Mr. Beals attempts to prove this. Professor Miguel de Araunuz, brilliant mathematics teacher before the Machado regime, a baker now, when he can find employment, expresses for us the conviction of the author:

"... do you know the real crime of Cuba? For nearly four centuries we were bowed under the iron rule of Spain. For nearly a century we fought to throw off that yoke. Not a spot of soil in cuba is not drenched with the blood of patriots and martyrs.

"Then came America... You said, to free us... All you did was snatch victory from our grasp... Free Cuba? ... Ha!... We are bound and gagged, hand and soul we are bound ... We are bound by our dollars, by your bankers, by your politicians, by your Platt Amendment, by your greedy little politicians who pose as statesmen ... Freedom? ... Our government, our President, is but a puppet of your dirty dollars.

"And that is the crime of Cuba, my friend. For all the blood and sacrifice of our people, of your people, we merely changed masters ... We are exiles in our own land ... That is the crime of Cuba."

And that, in brief, is what Mr. Beals has to tell. He develops his theme admirably. Beginning with a series of descriptions, anecdotes, and episodes from the early history of Cuba, moving on through the Spanish-American war period and the period of corruption and greed which followed, he relates the tragic history of Cuba's gradual surrender to American political and financial interests. Through two hundred and fifty pages author Beals works up slowly to Machado. It is that portion of the book dealing with this man and his crimes which will make good copy and boost sales. A terrible picture, indeed, but, says Mr. Beals, "American influence is all that sustains it at this moment." (He wrote this as Machado reached the height of his tyranny.) Let us look at the picture.

Here is a country in which one needs a military permit to assembly a group of more than thee persons, where a police-decree provides for the arrest of any person appearing in public without a hat, where young men and women boys and girls, in fact are thrown in jail without trial and without being told of their offense, where lawyers who try to defend political prisoners are found dead with the members of their families. And who is responsible for all this? Machado is the immediate agent, of course, but behind Machado, supporting him, approving his government, assuring people everywhere that all is well, are many American financiers and politicians. Mr. Beals does not stop here with vague intimations and hazy generalizations. Charles Mitchell, Harry F. Guggenheim, Woodin, and Norma Davis (chapters headings for the last two) are but four of a large number who received personal treatment. The Chase National Bank and the National City Bank play a prominent part in the narrative. A severe indictment of America, if true.

The last section of the book treats briefly of the progress made by certain American corporations closely linked with the Machado power. Readers may object to an excess number of parentheticla jibes in this section, but these jibes assist one to a more complete understanding of the author's attitude and cannot well be overlooked. The author is obviously upset.

There is an appendix, a very good selected bibliography, a twenty-six page index, and a portfolio of photographs by Walker Evans, who was sent to Cuba by the pubilshers for photographs to accompany this book. Some of Mr. Evans' photographs speak even more eloquently than Mr. Beals most fiery passages.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, ginia.

Unlawful To Have Shotgun or Rifle

There seems to be misunderstanding relative to Regulation 117 adopted by the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries on August 3rd, which reads as follows:

"That it shall be unlawful for any person to have both shotgun or rifle, and dogs in the fields, forests and other lands or waters of this State in the day time between January 31 and November 15 of each year, where deer and bear may be lawfully hunted during other periods of the year and except as to hunting rabbits and squirrels by landowners on their own lands."

This regulation does not prohibit the hunting of squirrels, with shotgun or rifle, in season, it simply prohibits the squirrel hunter from hunting them with the aid of a dog between January 31st and November 15th in any year.

It does not prohibit the exercising or training of other hunting dogs but if such are exercised or trained, owners or trainers are not permitted to have their guns and rifles with them while training January 31st to November 15th each year.

In many parts of the State pre-season wild turkey hunters under the guise of squirrel hunting take their dogs along to flush wild turkeys; in many parts of the State quail are killed before the opening of the regular season by people under the guise of training or breaking their dogs. It is not really necessary for a quail hunter to use a shotgun to make his dog steady to wing and shot, he can use a pistol or revolver to shot over his dog and if he leaves his shotgun behind he is not tempted to violate the law by killing quail before the season opens. The objective of this Regulation is simply to curb pre-season turkey and quail hunters and prevent them from taking an unfair advantage of the legitmate hunters.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q Wacks

Hurrah! Pepper Rea is in town, the screaming wildcat catcher of the Knoxville Smokies who came home with Lefty Hobart Scott and Barker Sunday evening after having finished the season in the Southern League.

All the breathtaking, exciting plays of the second game of the series at St. Charles Sunday will be seen on the screen at the Lee Theater next week in connection with the showing of the Miners Union Parade taken in Pennington Labor Day. Don't miss the opportunity of seeing yourself and your friends on the talking screen.

The third game of the Lonesome Pine series will take place in Pennington Saturday between Norton and Lee Smokies. Norton will be there with bells on and gee what a crowd you better come out early if you desire a choice seat.

The fourth and fifth games which will end series will be played in Norton Sunday setting the finals with a doubleheader.

If the Lee Smokies have no objection I will devote a little space to football. Coach Johnny Richmond paraded to the field this week about 28 big stiffs from the St. Charles High which has been producing some very favorable results. The boys seem to have taken on a lot of weight since last year which will probably eliminate their previous reference as the "Midgets" if they produce satisfactory results which Richmond is very confident they will probably draw and popularize another name.

Coach Kilday of Pennington High joyfully announces very satisfactory results with his first experience with the PHS Gladitors who seem very promising which will toe the scales at probably a 160 pound average.

Mr. Kilday is very confident that he can produce a winner with the present prospective eleven, while there are still more good possibilities coming in each day.

DANCE AT LEGION CABIN

Lum Redmond and his celebrated orchestra will be at the American Legion Cabin, Friday night, September 12, from 9:00 p. m. to 1:30 a. m.

Dance sponsored by American Legion.

LEE SMOKIES WIN TWO

The Lee Smokies defeated Norton two games over the week end to get a comfortable lead in the five game series to determine the championship of the Lonesome Pine League.

Norton won the first half and the Lee Smokies won the second half.

The winner in the five game series will meet the winner of the Kentucky series to determine the champion of the two states.

Corbin has already come out victorious in the Kentucky series and it looks like the Smokies in Virginia.

The Smokies won the first game of the series at Norton, Saturday with Carl Doyle pitching for the Smokies and only allowing two hits.

On Sunday at St. Charles the Smokies again defeated Norton with Cannon Ball Baker pitching and only allowed seven hits.

Norton used two pitchers starting with Sloan and finished with Stevenson.

Norton is out to win the series and the Smokies are going to have to play baseball to beat the Norton boys out.

Chevrolet Increase Over Last Year

With an increase in production of cars and trucks in August of this year, which more than trembled August 1932, W. S. Kundsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, announced that it had passed the half millionth car in the year's output.

August production of 78,433 units was 204 per cent over the same month a year ago. It brought production for eight months to 511,433 units, as compared with 364,000 for the full twelve months of 1932.

When compared with 1930 and 1931, August, 1933, shows large increases, over those two years and the exceptionally large margin over August of last year show clearly and emphatically how business has turned for the better, Mr. Kundsen said.

The month just passed ranks fifth in point of production in August history. It was exceeded only by August of 1926, 1927, 1928 and 1929.

Father—You have been calling on my daughter for nigh on two weeks, young man. What are your intentions?

Young Man—I hope to become an addition to your family.

Father—Oh, no! You'll have to subtract, not add, young fellow!

SPECIAL TRAIN TO CORBIN, KY.

Arrangements are being made for a fifteen coach special train to be run to Corbin, Ky., for the Virginia-Kentucky series that is to be played between the Lee Smokies and Corbin, Ky., winners of the Kentucky league.

The first game will be played at Pennington, Saturday, September 23, and on Sunday, September 24, Lee Smokies go to Corbin, Ky., for the second game.

The Lonesome Pine Special will leave some time Sunday morning and return the same day, schedule is now being worked out for the special.

Taxpayers Cases Tried at Early Date

The Bureau of Internal Revenue, in cooperation with various taxpayers having cases pending before the United States Board of Tax Appeals, desires in so far as possible to dispose of these cases before the end of the present calendary year.

The Legal Department of the Bureau, known as the Office of the General Counsel, has been reorganized and is in position to expedite the trial of many of these cases if the taxpayers would indicate a desire to have them tried at an early date.

There are many cases throughout the country that have been set down for trial that could be expedited by having the same tried at Washington. Many others have not as yet been set for trial. It is the purpose of the General Counsel's Office to expedite these cases as rapidly as possible if the taxpayers or their representatives will indicate their desire to have them tried in Washington. In all of these pending cases where there is an earnest desire on the part of these pending cases where there is an earnest desire on the part of the taxpayers to get them disposed of, a letter addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C., stating their wishes in the premise, will receive prompt attention, and arrangements will be made to have the cases set down for hearing at an early date. The Bureau's program requires prompt trial of all cases wherin the Government has been ready for some time to proceed to trial, even though taxpayers have shown no disposition to cooperate with the Bureau in the settlement of such cases.

Union Mine Meeting

Bonny Blue — Friday night September 8, was the scene of the largest gathering of young people this county has witnessed in a number of years the general union was held at the camp ground and various leagues over the entire country, joined together to make it the biggest meeting of the year.

Miss Irma Shulenberger of Pennington Gap assistant director of young peoples work in Lee County was in charge of the meeting assisted by Grimsley of Swanee, Tenn., president of the Lower Union and Joe Gibbs of Bonny Blue president of the Upper Young Peoples Union of Lee County.

The meeting in itself was sufficient to inspire everyone present to attain even greater heights in Young Peoples work After the main business session a delightful picnic supper was immensley enjoyed by all.

An invitation was extended to president Joe Gibbs that the Upper Union meet at Benedict for the October meeting.

Ajournment followed with 400 people present.

LOCALS

Lady—Not when he clapped them over his ears.

Bonny Blue

Rev. Clifton Fleenor left last week to attend Hiwassee College at Madisonville, Tenn., Rev. Fleenor plans to study for the Methodist Ministry.

Bonny Blue recieved a sudden surprise Wednesday night, when the announcement came that Herbert Stone and Miss Eloise Holmes popular young couple had secretly married at Harlan, Ky., their many friends wish them a continued success.

Joe Gibbs Jr., was a recent week end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Ely at Middlesboro, Ky.

Several of the young people here plan to enter college this year.

A A A To Consider Poultry

A practical solution to the puzzling problems of increasing prices of poultry and eggs to pre-war parity is being sought through informal conferences at agricultural headquarters in Washington.

In value of product the poultry industry in Virginia ranks second in the agricultural scale. The last census shows $12,238,000 worth of eggs and nearly $7,000,000 worth of chickens sold from Virginia farmers in a year. The total national income from poultry was about $600,000,000 in 1932 as compared with $848,000,000 in 1929.

Any plan to wipe out some of this 150 million decrease will benefit most Virginia farmers, for poultry is raised on about 98 per cent of the 170,000 farms in this state.

A hatchery code is reported to be under consideration; the adoption of this will likewise affect poultry raisers in Virginia, and it is hoped that the code will do much to improve the industry.

They met in the village High Street.

She was about to pass him, but he caught her arm.

"I say, Doris," he said miserably.

"What's the idea? You cut me last night at the dance although I saw you twice."

She tossed head haughtily.

"I always cut people who are in that condition!" she replied.

Ida Claire—Did father seem pleased when you told him of the $500 you had saved?

Bobby Kew—I think so—he borrowed it.

Pa—Well, ever block must have an alley!

LEE SMOKIES NEED ONE

The Lee Smokies need only one game out of three to be champions in the Lonesome Pine League. Norton is scheduled here Saturday, and it is reported that they are loading up plenty to try to take three straight games and win the Lonesome Pine Championship. But the Lee Smokies don't believe they can do it. They are out to win Saturday's game and clinch the championship.

The Lee Smokies will have some new and old faces in Saturdays and Sundays game, Lefty Scott and Cowboy Barker will be back and Rea the Smoky catcher for Knoxville will also be wearing the Smoky uniform.

TWO GAMES AT JONESVILLE

Jonesville winners of the Powell Valley League first and second half will play two games with Middlesboro, Ky., of the Cumberland Valley League in Kentucky, Sunday, September 17th at Jonesville Fair Ground the first game will start at 1:00 p. m.

On next Saturday, September 23, Jonesville will play Rogersville at Jonesville Fair Ground.

A series is being arranged for the Powell Valley League as soon as the Lonesome Pine League champions and the Cumberland Valley League champions finish their series. This series also will be with a Kentucky team.

BOOKS OF OUR OWN

"Nira, you have the fault of angels. . ." said Blanche; "it's what Alexander Pope said. . . He said ambition was the glorious fault of angels and the gods." But strange to say, Nira had less selfish ambition than did any of her acquaintances. All she wanted was to add the lacking ingredient to the life of the inland city of Dorchester which like the rest of America she announced sadly to be "wizzout heart" - - and this in spite of the philanthropies of the great and kindly Mr. Ganson, who had endowed various portions of the local university, a music school, and a symphony, in addition to the opera which Nina's husband Val Arenkoff came from New York to conduct. Day by day she worked on Mr. Ganson, reading to him and haranguing him to some end which only she could fully understand, with the sole practical result that he finally disappointed her by falling in love with her, old as he was.

She did not, however, confine her activities to Mr. Ganson; there was John, the best of her new friends, who was general factotum at the theatre (the story is told from his point of view); there was Blanche, and austere and sensible but warm-hearted young lady of independent means; there was blue-eyed Lydia, the harpist in the orchestra, with whom John might have been more intimate but for Nina's affectionate and blundering interference ("You have affection, is all? Zen Jon, must go to your room and sleep wizzout lady. . . Is love to come, some day, wiz real beauty."); there was Mr. Ganson, magnificent and lonely, whom no one but Nina would have dared to approach as a friend; there was Mrs. Kane, the only person in town who tried to rival the magnificence of Mr. Ganson's parties, a tasteless and common person who was among the first to turn against Nira; there was Hubert, the English leader of the symphony, who had known Nira in Paris, whose manners were a little florid but whose thoughts were gracious; there was Val himself, for whom alone Nina reserved her true love; there was Mr. Schwartz, really a visiting Grand Duke, who brought to Nina and her intimate friends a tragic glimpse of Russia and her past life; there was Julia, a retired opera singer who was alternately friendly and hostile to N na in her own sincere, peculiar way; there was Hilda Latcher, and aged, asthmatic, red-haired violinist, who adered Nina and was at the last attached to her menage; all are drawn with an air of complete intimacy and affection, so that they stand and move before us like our own friends.

One person with whom Nina became involved more than once was John's landlady, Mrs. Bliss. John once remarked in conversation that landladies had a weakness for their roomers, and intimated that Mrs. Bliss was in love with him. Nina took him. Nina took him seriously, and John arrived home one afternoon to find the portly Mrs. Bliss protesting in tears while Nina consoled and advised her about her hopeless passion. Again, when Martin Bliss lost his position in a department store because he was charged with stealing five pairs of silk stockings, Nina confessed the theft and John stood in the police station with her while she lectured the astonished judge on the responsibilities of his high position, gave him twenty dollars for the poor and departed entirely ignorant of the fact that the arm of the Law had merely accepted her money as so much sugar. It was no wonder that John fell in love with Nina, that he nourished a lingering hope that some day she would love him in some other way than "like brozzer, like friend".

As for comment on this Harber Prize Novel, "The Fault of Angels", none could be made without spoiling the effect which is the book's greatest and most unique, virtue, for any critical definition would consist merely in stating certain things which the author wisely and capably develops only by implication. The remark on the jacket about its being a "witty and satiric comedy" is a gross injustice. Underneath its tender study of the human heart at its best lies a profound understanding of nationalities and of the maladies of races, and sympathy outweighs satire at every breath. "The Fault of Angels" is one of those books that get into your heart and push from the inside.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

She—What makes these frightful wars?
He—Probably fright.

Her—Did you ever love another girl like you do me?

NRA MEMBER U.S. CHEVROLET

"Proud and glad to do our part"

WITH President Roosevelt's acceptance of the NRA Automobile Code, Chevrolet, the world's largest builder of motor cars, officially begins operations in accordance with the administration's recovery program.

Although the official code was signed only a few days ago, it will be of interest to Chevrolet's many friends to learn that the Chevrolet Motor Company started to carry out the spirit of today's recovery program over three years ago!

At that time, we put into operation a "share-the-work" plan, whereby our workmen cooperated in spreading the work to give more men jobs. By means of this plan, as well as by regulating hours of work per week to meet retail demand, and by building up parts stocks in lean seasons, it was possible to carry 33,000 men on our payroll through the depression. For eleven months of each year since 1929, we have kept our employment within 10 per cent of this average. We are justly proud of that record. We are also proud to say that Chevrolet workmen did not, at any time during the depression, become a burden on public welfare departments.

On August 1st of this year, Chevrolet announced a blanket wage increase as well as the adoption of a 7½-hour, 5-day week and the employment of 12,000 additional men. This wage increase was the second in the last 4 months, Chevrolet having been among the first to put a blanket wage increase into effect.

We feel that the President's recovery program deserves the whole-hearted support of every citizen and manufacturer in America. It is a bold, swift, courageous plan to start the ball rolling toward economic recovery. Its sincerity is unquestioned. Its objectives are admirable. And the direct, forceful steps the President and his associates are taking to make it a success, should stir the pride and admiration of every American.

We are proud and glad to do our part. And we are deeply grateful to the American people for the patronage that has enabled us to anticipate the present recovery program and to play our part today. After all, the immense number of men employed by Chevrolet is a direct result of the continued preference America has shown for Chevrolet.

Enforce Strict Birth Registration

Accurate birth certification is being stressed by officials in the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the Virginia State Department of Health and they consider that schools are the most effective means of reaching parents concerning this matter. Special efforts to secure information regarding the birth registration of school children in Virginia have been initiated by the State Department of Health within the last two years.

A considerable amount of work was accomplished last October in Lee County where two representatives of the Department of Health worked in schools and obtained encouraging results due to the whole-hearted cooperation of the school superintendent, the teachers, registrars and parents. Pupils were requested to produce the notification of birth registration which is issued to parents upon certification. It was discovered that some 1,442 children who had been certified by the Bureau of Vital Statistics were unable to comply with this request, thus indicating that the documents had been destroyed or lost. Furthermore, a total of 500 children never had been registered.

The two representatives who were conducting the survey succeeded in registering 250 children during their stay in Lee County, and it is a particularly gratifying fact that through the continued efforts of local registrars, parents and teachers, the birth registration of the school children in that county is now practically one hundred per cent.

Similar work has been conducted in Charlotte, Prince Edward, Carroll, Roanoke, Greyson and Culpeper Counties, but a lack of funds makes it impossible for this work to be continued by the Health Department.

However, this does not mean that these activities must come to an end. School superintendents and teachers can cooperate by requiring all pupils to show a notification of birth registration and by sending to the Bureau of Vital Statistics a list containing the names, date and place of birth, parent's name and addresses of all children who do not produce the notification. Parents can also help by carefully preserving these documents which are necessary for the determination of age when securing driver's permits, government compensations, and various other legal documents.

"Where do you live?" the reporter asked the bridal couple.

"At the Old Manse," replied the bride.

And so the newspaper said: "Mr. Hardup and his bride, the former Miss Millions, have returned home from their honeymoon. They will live with the bride's father."

This exceptional lubrication is brought about by the Germ Process—exclusively Conoco's patented formula. By adding extra oiliness and penetrativeness to the very highest quality motor oil, complete protection is achieved.

With all these qualities, the total cost of this oil is low . . . five miles for a penny.

College Classes Outside of College

When the process of living are so inter-related with and dependent upon those of other persons as in modern complex civilization, not individual merit but the economic organization or "system" largely determines one's success in illustration, consider that of the high school graduates eligible to enter college this month, many will be barred for no other reason than a lack of resources which is usually no fault of the youth and perhaps not of his parents. To select for democracy's highest training on the basis of ability to pay is a travesty of democracy.

So many of these graduates have come to a dead stop, without work or college ahead, that a concerted movement has been begun to furnish them educational advantages. Already more than twenty groups of graduates, both urban and rural, are organizing for part-time instruction in regular college courses.

Through the cooperative teaching program of Virginia colleges and universities the whole range of beginning courses, except laboratory sciences, can be given in almost any place. Catalogues and announcements may be obtained on request addressed to the Extension Divison, University Virginia,

Infant Mortality Rate In Virginia

Richmond—The drop in infant mortality rate during the year ended December 31, 1932, in the cities of Virginia was greater than in the cities of any other State in the Union according to the Census Bureau in Washington, while statistics at the Virginia State Department of Health show that the mortality rate of infants one year old and under throughout the entire State dropped from 77 per 1,000 live births to 67. This means that ten more lives for every 1,000 live births were saved during the last year, and facts indicate that the reduction was accomplished largely through the education of the public in the proper medical attention for mothers and children.

It is interesting to note that in twenty-five Virginia counties in which there was no infancy and maternity work last year the death rate of infants showed a slight increase, while in twenty-five counties having a full-time health unit there was a reduction of fifteen deaths per 1,000 live births.

In 1932 the infant mortality rate per 1,000 live births in Virginia was 101, approximately thirty-four more than it now is. Such results prove the value of the efforts which have been expended toward instruction and education in maternity and infant welfare.

The State Health Department has maintained for several years past a definite program for the advancement of this work. Doctors' Helper's Institutes have been conducted at educational centers throughout the State; classes for the instruction of midwives and home-makers have been given by specially trained public health nurses, and information has been spread by the distribution of literature. Attendance at a series of classes of this type which were conducted in sixteen Virginia counties two years ago amounted to 43,000 and results of this instruction were outstanding last year in these sixteen counties where there was a drop of thirteen points in the infant mortality rate.

Side Quit Hurting, Got Stronger, Well; CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntsville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am very cheerful when I am well and don't easily get nervous. I knew I ought to take something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well."
Cardui is sold at drug stores here.

The Book Sampler

A jolt to our national inattention has been the recent revolution in Cuba which ended in blood and gunpowder the long, disgraceful reign of President Machado. To read and believe Carleton Beals' account of the regime just past is to agree with thinking people in calling this uprising a step forward. For nearly a century Cuba tried to throw off the yoke of Spain. America came to the rescue, and Cuba exchange one yoke for another yet more galling. Beginning with the acceptance of the Platt Amendment by a country too weak to resist, the author paints graphically the picture of this second bondage to rotten politics, sugar interests, and the dollar-the real "Crime of Cuba". Machado's regime is exposed for what it was, and the stern accusation made that it was, and the stern accusation made that it was supported by no single decent Cuban element, but by American influence alone. Mr. Beals goes even further in his indictment of blindness and cupidity by accusing individuals and corporations by name. It is stirring-though not flattering-reading for the average citizen, and the portfolio of photographs appended to the work preaches even a stronger sermon than that from the author's flaming pen.

At least one person mentioned in "The Crime of Cuba" comes in for attention in "Mirrors of Wall Street", among a dozen other "mysterious master minds" controlling our country's financial solar plexus. J. P. Morgan, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Otto Kahn, Charles G. Dawes, Charles E. Mitchell are taken out of their sacred seclusion and dusted off for the popular inspection. Since the author writes anonymously, this seems a little like hanging over the back fence-but with a difference. Personalities and implications are on a grander scale.

These books are among these on subjects of popular interest which may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS

Inasmuch as many inquiries have been made concerning the attitude and policies of the American Red Cross with reference to the present situation in the coalfields of this county, the executive committee of the Lee County Chapter hereby issues this official statement.

First; with regard to Red Cross policy. The American Red Cross is a non-partisan organization, seeking to serve humanity wherever there is actual need. It cannot, therefore concern itself with the present controversy between coal operators and miners. Red Cross is absolutely neutral. Let it be understood, however, that the American Red Cross will endeavor to relieve actual distressed conditions wherever they exist as far as its capacities will permit. In other words, union laborers will neither be favored nor discriminated against.

Second, Red Cross resources are seriously limited. To those who have criticized this organization for possesing fabulous sums and refusing to make them available for emergency relief, let this explicit answer be made. The local chapter has in its treasury less than seven hundred dollars with which to carry on its entire program, of which emergency relief is only a part. If, for example, this entire amount could be made available for relief of distressed miners, it would provide about the equivalent of one sandwich to each person affected by the present crisis. The treasury would then be depleted and the Red Cross program over the county virtually paralyzed, and in two hours the same group would be hungry again.

Third, there is another angle to the situation. It is common knowledge that in recent months the American Red Cross has acted as distributing agency for the United States government in supplying needy families with flour and clothing materials. In this case, Red Cross simply acts for the government. At the present time the quantity of government flour held by the Lee County Chapter is almost exhausted. And, whatever unfolded rumors may say, this chapter has had official notification from National headquarters that no further shipments will be made. Cotton materials sufficient to supply approximately four hundred families will be received in the near future and distributed wherever greatest need exists over the entire country.

Fourth, this information setting forth the official position of the Local Red Cross Chapter is hereby furnished the press and any others interested at the request of the executive committee.

Signed E. L. Crump, Chairman.
Mrs. W. R. Pennington, Secretary.

60 MEN CAME TO THIS FARMER'S AID/. . .
"There's a fire at Mr. Flatter's farm," called the telephone operator hurriedly. She rang up the neighboring farms and soon 60 men were fighting the flames.
A neighbor discovered the fire while the family was away. She notified the operator who located Mr. Flatter while calling other farmers. This quick work saved the home and other farm buildings.
Many cases like this show how the telephone reduces the hazards and losses of farm life.

Treats Wheat for Weevil

Hubert Wheeler is using what he learned while studying agriculture. Hubert is a successful farmer and has recently treated his wheat for weevil by the following method:

First, make sure that the bins or barrels are tight. If they are not tight, spread or tack several thicknesses of newspaper over the inner surfaces, overlaping so as to close all crevices.

Measure the inside of the bin, counting in the space above the grain, and for each cubic feet of space enclosed in the entire bin allow 2½ drams of carbon disulphide. In 1 pound (avirdupeis) there are 256 drams, and as one pound suffices for about 100 cubic feet of of air space. If it becomes necessary to fumigate at a lower temperature than that stated, then the dose must be preporionally increased. Moist seeds absorb the gas, and the danger of injuring their germinative power increases with their moisture content.

After the bins are made tight, arrange for covering the top. If wooden covers are lacking, it is possible to lay sticks across the top of the bin, and then, by placing newspapers between blankets, to arrange a satisfactory cover which will confine the gas quite effectively. When all is ready, place some old pans on top of the grain or seeds, pour in the liquid, and close ever thing tightly. Leave for thirty-six hours and then open up and air thoroughly, shoveling over the grain so as to let the gas at the bottom escape.

Do the work in the day time and keep all fires away, since the gas is extremely explosive if ignited. It is also poisonous if breathed.

Pure carbon disulphide costs from 30 to 75 cents per pound when purchased retail at a drug store, but a grade which is just as good for the purpose may be had of the makers in 50 pound drums at 6 or 7 cents a pound.

Carbon disulphide is an evil smelling liquid which changes quickly to a gas when poured out at ordinary temperatures. The gas is heavier than air, and it settles down through the seeds, penetrating to all air spaces and crevices. It will not kill many eggs, and, therefore the fumigation may have to be repeated. A new fumigant, known as "weevilcide," is now available. It has all the advantages of carbon disulphide, is not explosive, and costs about the same or less.

Business Good on the Average

"Business, on the average throughout the country not only continues good for the late summer months, but in many places is actually far above expectations," said H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, after he had read some thirty or forty telegrams sent him in response to a quary for a brief report on up to the minute conditions from zone executives and dealers.

"The most encouraging note in the telegrams," continued Mr. Klingler, "is the cross country improvement and rising happiness. We expect good news from the larger centers of population, but in addition we get enthusiastic messages from the great farming regions and evidence of brighter times in the eastern coal districts where things have been slow for a long time."

"The conclusion is plain now that hundreds of our dealers will do a great deal more business this year than they did last. Some reports increases of 100 per cent, others 200 per cent, and some, even higher. The evidence also is at hand that August will continue the splendid records that Chevrolet made in May, June and July, and that prospects are encouraging for September and the balance of the year."

In the Southeastern section, the Atlantic zone reports the outlook as excellent. Typical of what dealers are experiencing there, one reported sales of 257 units in the first seven months of 1933 as against 204 in all of 1932. Another at Greenville, S. C., reports that he will sell 450 cars and trucks this year as compared with 290 in all 1932.

In the Jacksonville zone, August sales were the largest for the month since 1928. Dealers are reporting 100 per cent increases in sales with prospects equally good in September. In the Birmingham region, sales for the first 20 days in August indicated that it would be the best month this year. The dealer in Sunflower, Miss., in the heart of the cotton belt reports his sales this year will exceed quota by 500 per cent. The dealer at Yazoo, Miss., sold more cars in August than in all 1932.

In the east, scores of dealers have already far surpassed all of last year's business. In the Boston zone, August first 10 day sales were nearly 30 per cent ahead of July, and July this year was 172 per cent over July 1932. Many large fleet sales were reported from this district. Many factories are working 24 hours a day and employment is improving at a rapid rate. Patterson, N. J., shows great pick up. The dealer at Bridgeport, Conn., reported this August as 300 per cent better than last August.

Philadelphia county sales have already passed those of last year, and registrations as well. The year will end with an increase of 100 per cent in sales. Revival of the steel industry in Pittsburgh has brought an increase in sales of nearly 100 per cent in McKeesport alone. Portland, Maine, reports this August 90 per cent ahead of a year ago. The New York zone reports many 100 per cent increases from dealers and large fleet sales of cars and trucks.

In the central west the flood tide of sales continues. Cincinnati will double its 1932 sales. August sales trebled August 1932. Many dealers are running 100 and 200 per cent over a year ago. Wisconsin, great dairy state, shows increased sales. In Minnesota, August sales were far in excess of a year ago. A Des Moines dealer is 150 per cent over August 1932. The Federal Land Bank in Louisville has just bought 175 cars. A Cleveland dealer had the best August in his history with large truck sales. At Davenport, Iowa, sales are up 200 per cent for the year. There is an unusually optimistic attitude in Chicago with sales to match.

In the South West, rural business is showing a rapid increase. Oklahoma City took more cars in the first six months of the year than in all 1932. In the Arkansas oil fields, sales are 350 per cent of quota for the year. The truck market is expanding by leaps and bounds. Kansas is very optimistic, with outlook much better in small towns. Dealer sales are up from 100 to 500 per cent for August alone. Passage of the beer bill and bonus money for cotton farmers has boomed business in Texas. Sales of Huston dealers are more than 100 per cent over all 1932 sales.

Similiar favorable conditions prevail on the Pacific coast. One Portland dealer had the best July in 19 years. In Los Angeles, July sales were 100 per cent over a year ago with August accordingly. San Francisco reports the best fall outlook in years.

Mr. Klingler said that many other dealers and regions reported similar favorable present sales and future possibilities, but these gathered from every part of the country were a fair index of what virtually all were doing.

"Rockabilt, the great multi-millionaire, is going to take a rest."

"Can't help himself I guess, it's the only thing left he hasn't already taken."

Crops Reduced: Livestock Increase

Though there has been a definite reduction in crops, livestock and livestock products are still being produced in large quanities, say agricultural economists in viewing the the mixed agricultural situation developed in August. Largely because of weather conditions, wheat, corn, and potatoes will be much below the average in yield. Cotton would have been a very large crop had it not been for the acerage reduction campaign.

The livestock situation is marked by production of cattle, hogs, and dairy products, each at a high point in the cycle. Through agreements in the dairy industry attempts are being made to adjust production. Producers in Virginia for the Washington and Baltimore, Richmond, and Roanoke areas and other producers the country over are under or formulating regulatory measures for milk. The national emergency marketing plan for hogs is a designated to make some adjustments in this situation, but agricultural officials have stated a permanent plan for reduction in both hogs and corn must follow.

Cattle raisers face a crisis, in the opinion of R. E. Hunt, professor of animal husbandary at V. P. I. Low feed costs have favored the keeping on farms of cull animals for some time rather than sell them at figures below cost. If feed costs increase, and it seems likely they will, it will no longer pay to keep these animals on the farm Many dairy cows and heifers must go to market, adding to the large number of cattle already on hand.

Prof. Hunt stated that many cattle raisers cannot sell this season steers purchased last fall and winter fed and pastured this summer for as much as they paid for them a year ago This condition is general and represents tremendous loss. Prices of live stock have been so depressed that they are lower now than a month ago. This combined with the sharp drop in grain prices from the middle of July, has lowered the farm price index 5 points. However, this index stands at 72 compared with 59 a year ago.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

If you would like to know how you look in the movies, or how the local folks around Pennington Gap and St. Charles look smiling on the screen just get set and shuffle off to the Lee Friday or Saturday night and there will be several thousand folks in the Labor Day Parade picture and at the series games of the Lonesome Pine play off between Lee Smokies and Norton.

See the Lee Smokies in action on the screen and many exciting plays that took place in the series. You too, will see close ups of each player on both clubs.

Well, after all protest have faded and only faint memories linger of them. The headlines are flashing the winners of the Lonesome Pine League which are the Lee Smokies of Pennington Gap and St. Charles. Manager R. P. Stewart deserves wonderful credit for capturing the L. P. title two consecutive years. The Gold baseballs will be presented to the Smoky players this week as a token of having won the championship.

The St. Charles midgets got off to a fine start last week end by winning their first foot ball game of '33 from St. Paul by the score of 12 to 6. Many of the boys did some outstanding work to attain the victory.

Jonesville will take on Smyths dairy in a little world series to decide the state champions of Class "B" leagues Sept 30th, Smyth's dairy won out in the Harlan Coal field league.

Will see you on the Lonesome Pine Special Sunday.

Low Rates Asked

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad has filed petitions with the Interstate Commerce Commission and with the various state commissions for permission to extend for another six months the two-cent and three-cent passenger fares which it has had in effect since April 1, it is learned from the September L&N Employes' Magazine. If the permission is granted these low rates will remain in effect through March 31, 1934, unless further extended.

Since its two and three-cent fares have been in effect L&N passenger travel has greatly increased, it is stated. Although passenger revenues for the first three months (April, May and June) under the reduced fares are less than the revenues for the same period of 1932, when higher rates were in effect, it is believed that the percentage of decrease is much less than it would have been without the reduced fares.

Lee County Gets Immediate Value From Norris Dam

Forestation Camp in County to do Erosion Work. Five Thousand Men in Forestation Camps in Norris Dam Development Area

Lee county is to have immediate returns from the (Cove Creek) Norris Dam development. The Lee county Board of Supervisors have approved plans which assures the county to get a Forestation Camp. The purpose of this Camp is to do erosion work. (Filling up gullies) Not only the county gets a Camp but another large camp is to be located at Kyles Ford Tennessee which will repair gullies in Lee county which lies south of Powell's Mountain in the Blackwater, Hickory Hill section. The Kyles Ford camp will have 200 men and 100 of these will work in the Clinch Valley eastward and the other 100 will work westward toward Sneedville. Mr. J. H. Nicholson, engineer from the Tennessee Valley Authority, Knoxville has been in Lee last week and at work making preliminary surveys for such Camp at Kyles Ford. He makes a sketch of all farms in the area, making record of acreage in timber and those cultivated on each farm, makes note of all gullied plots, and this record is turned over to the Camp authority, who will supervise and fill all the gullies with the Forestation crew which is soon coming from North Carolina to this point. The Lee county camp will also soon be located and at work. Each camp has ten or more trucks and these boys are switched around for ten or more miles and repair al eroded spots or gullied places on the farms. The farmers are requested to cooperate with this work The work will be done at no expense whatever to the farmer. This will be one of the greatest blessings to the farmers since the Civil War. This abuse in farm lands have been going on since that time.

It is figured by those in authority on the subject that if the present gullied areas are left un-repaid, that such exposure would fill up the Norris Dam resivoir 25 per cent in twenty-five years. This rate of filling would cost the development $400,000 per year. Hence it is good policy not to allow this great loss in the enterprise, and hence farmers in this area will be called on to check their habits in allowing their lands to wash down in the streams and rivers to the Gulf of Mexico.

Mr. Bennett of the Valley Authority has already made a trip through Lee county and Powell Valley up through Russell and Tazwell counties. He was elated with the high type farming he found in the Virginia counties. Nevertheless, there has been abuses and it is these gullied abuses that will get the immediate attention. Mr. Bennett is one of the foremost authority on erosion work in the United States. He has been and still has erosion work under his direction at Boulder Dam Colorada. At Boulder Dam, it is said the most leachable soil perhaps known, and unless some method is developed, this dam would become useless in a very brief number of years.

Navy Boy Dies in Puget Sound

Rose Hill—Carson Tyler Mullins, 22, who has been in the U. S. Naval Service, died of bronchial pneumonia in Puget Sound hospital at Bremen, Washington, Saturday, September 2. The body arrived here Saturday, September 9. Funeral services were held at Silver Leaf, Sunday, at 2:00 o'clock, and the services were conducted by Rev. Jones. Burial was in the Silver Leaf cemetery.

The young man is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wayman Mullins, two sisters, Edna and Quinnie, and three brothers, Grover, Broten, and Fred.

ROSE HILL HIGH

With an enrolement of a hundred and thirty for the year 1933-34. Rose Hill High School is expecting a very good scholastic year. Sixty-seven of these are in high school, and two-hundred and sixty-three are in the grades. There are nine in the Senior class.

Rose Hill has the same High School faculty as of last year. These are: Professor O. F. Stickley, Hagan, Va., Mr. Campbell McNiel, Rose Hill, Miss Mary Vivian Haile, Ewing, Mr. W. H. Starnes, Ewing, and Miss Anne Gibson, Ewing. In the grades, there are new teachers in the primary, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grades. These are: Miss Ruby Bailey, Dryden, Miss Jimmy Sloane, Ewing, Mrs. Golden Clark, Rose Hill, Mr. Cale Gibson, Rose Hill, respectively, Miss Florence Bayless, Rose Hill, and Miss Nellie Grabeel, Hagan, make up the rest of the faculty.

The Junior League, composed of all High School pupils, will be very active in their work this year the first year of its founding. League committees plan chapel programs, act as colorguards to raise and lower the flag every school day, plan social activities, hold class elections, care for song books, etc. Officers of the League are: Rachel Davis, president, Patton Giles, Vice-president, Fern Davis, Secretary and Earl Flanary, Treasurer. The League is now planning a carnival for Hollow'een.

Miss Ann and Mary Louise Smith spent the day with Misses Dorothy and Imogene Burgan Saturday.

W. B. FULTON STRIKES OIL

Rose Hill—After two previous drillings, one by the Rose Hill Oil Development company, and one by A. J. Asher, Pineville, W. B. Fulton, of Gate City, struck oil in 'Possum Hollow, three miles south of here last Friday.

Mr. Fulton had been drilling about a week and had reached a depth of 380 feet when the bucket brought out oil. The oil is of the best, being about 45-gravity. According to Mr. Fulton, the strike will yield about 25 barrels a day.

Car Loads On Increase

In August 1933 the Louisville & Nashville Railroad handled more than 100,000 carloads of freight, the first time in nearly two years that carloadings have exceeded this mark, says an article by E. A. deFuniak, freight traffic manager of the L. & N. Railroad, in the September issue of the L. & N. Employes' Magazine. Despite this fact, however, the article continues, carloadings in August on the L. & N. showed a slight decrease when the month's percent of normal is compared with the July 1933 percent of normal. Carloadings in August registered 65.2 per cent of the L. & N.'s normal for that month as contrasted with 66.5 per cent in July and 64.4 per cent in June.

August 1933 carloadings were actually about 3 per per cent greater than those in July but, the writer explains, as August business is normally about 5.6 per cent better than July, a lower percentage of normally business resulted in the latter month.

Coal carloadings on the L. & N. continued to improve but other freight and freight received from connections slipped back a bit as compared with several of the immediately previous months, the article states.

Total L. & N. carloadings in August 1933 when compared with those in August 1932 showed an increase of over 26 per cent, the writer says.

New Bridge Over North Fork River

A handsome steel bridge is now near completion across North Fork for the farm homes of this enterprising section. They have long, been subjected to the abuse of a dangerous wooden bridge, and now the State has made a retaining wall and two abutment of concrete (the abutments are wide enough for a two-way bridge but the present bridge is a one way bridge.)

NEW DEAL

The Tennessee Valley Authority recognizes the "new deal" as extendiog to the inclusion of women in announcing the appointment of Mrs. Florentine D. Goodrich of New York to be Treasurer of the Authority. The Authority already employs a representative number of women but this is the first member of that sex to hold a key position.

But it is not because of her sex that Mrs. Goodrich has been selected for the important office of Treasurer of the Tennessee Valley Authority. Mrs. Goodrich has had a varied and valuable experience in her chosen profession. Much of her time has been spent in the South and her duties have been such as to give her an exceptional understanding of social as well as economis matters, factors which richly fit her for her new post.

A native of New York City, Mrs. Goodrich was graduated from the Pace Institute of Accountancy of that city and rounded out her studies at Columbia and New York Universities. A widow and one of the countrys' few woman Certified Public Accountants, she has made a name for herself in fields usually reserved to men. She has served as executive accountant of the Reo Motor Car Company of New York and has been controller for Long Island University and for the National Board of the Young Woman's Christian Association, besides holding other executive posts in public accountancy. She is a member of the New York and national C. P. A. associations.

Mrs. Goodrich will maintain her office in Knoxville.

Woman Tie-Hewer.

The hewing of railroad ties is generally considered to be a man's work, but according to the September L&N Employes' Magazine there is a woman tie-hewer near Falkville, Ala., who thinks differently.

Mrs. Lena Corley, age 23, has been hewing out oak crossties for three years. She walks three miles to her work each day and turns out from six to eight ties that are said to be models for the men to follow. Mrs. Corley likes her work which she declares is much easier and better for the complexion than an afternoon of bridge.

Public Demand Still for Chevrolets

Domestic retail sales of Chevrolet cars and trucks as reported by dealers for August were 68,650. This is an increase of 39,420 units, or 134 per cent over the same month in 1932, according to H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager of the company.

Total sales for the year to September 1 were 441,405 units. Total sales for all of 1932 were 378,811. Thus the sales for eight months of 1933 exceed those of 12 months of 1932 by 62,594 or 16.5 per cent. The original sales object for this year was set at 450,000 cars and trucks. A new quota, well above the 500,000 mark was set in June by Mr. Klingler when it became apparent that the upward trend of May and June was being sustained.

Not only did August distinguished itself by surpassing every month in 1932, but it was the fourth best August in the long history of the company, being exceeded only by August of 1927, 1928 and 1929.

Particularly gratifying was the definate rise over July, indicating a continuation of the strong demand from the public which set in in May and putting August in second place for the year. Thus far it has been exceeded only by June.

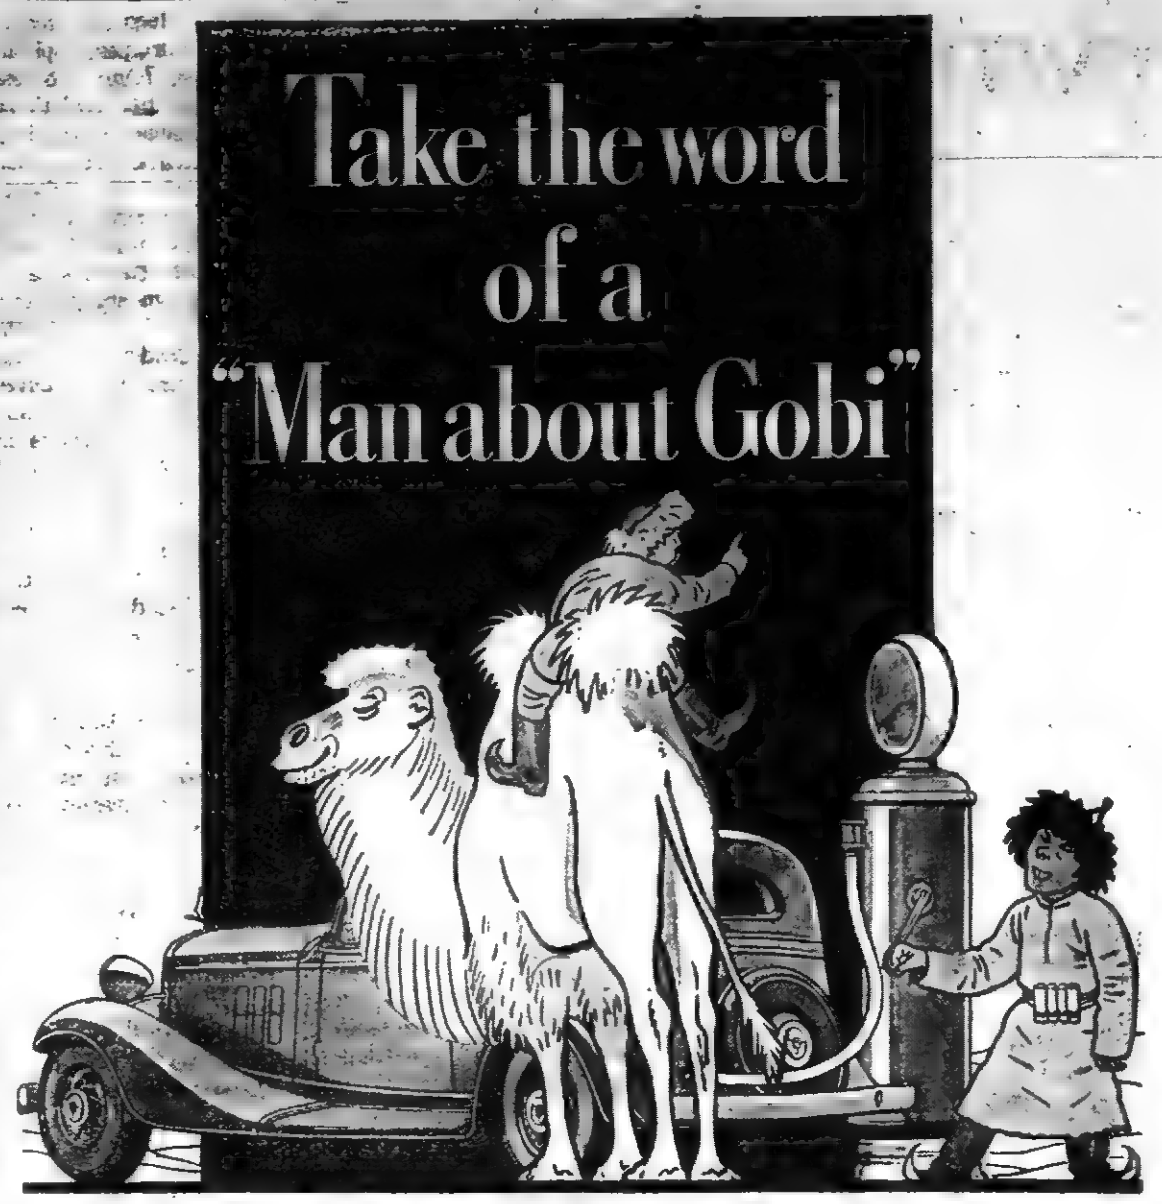
LIONS GLUB

At the last regular meeting Thursday September 14, Senator L. M. Robinette made a very interesting talk on the Constitution. This talk being very imely as it was Constitution week.

Attendance is urged for the next meeting, Thursday September 28, at 6:15.

Clendenin

"Clendenin" is a goldfish that is a goldfish, according to a yarn in the L&N Employes' Magazine for September. "Clendenin" is the property of Travis Clendenin, and L&N brakeman, of Paris, Tenn. He is 8 years old, 14½ inches long and weighs nearly two pounds. Somewhat barrel-shaped and covered with bright golden scales, "Clendenin" has a catfish mouth and takes life rather leisurely. He delights in entertaining the numerous visitors who call to see him in his pool in the yard of Brakeman Clendenin's sister, Mrs. Brooks Martin, on Porter Street in Paris.



Next to a Camel

Chevrolet gives most miles per gallon

CHEVROLET No argument about the camel. When it comes to miles per gallon, there's nothing in all the Gobi desert—or anywhere else—that can beat him. No argument about Chevrolet, either. It's the most economical full-size transportation on wheels.

More miles on a tankful of gas. More miles on a filling of oil. More miles without worry and trouble and repair! And they're smoother, safer, more comfortable miles, too, due to all these features exclusive to Chevrolet in the low-price field: A cushion-balanced six-cylinder engine. Fisher body. Fisher steel-plus-hardwood construction. Fisher Ventilation. Starterator. And many more!

Travel in comfort and save as you go. Save with a new Chevrolet. In addition to being America's most economical car, it's also America's fastest selling car by the widest margin of leadership in history.

Curing Tobacco

After tobacco has been cut it should be left in the field long enough to wilt, because it will occupy less space in the barn and can be handled without bruising. The tobacco is then hung on tier poles which are far enough apart horizonally to accomodate the stick and are far enough apart vertically so that the tiers will not crowd each other.

Air should be admitted freely through ventilators. Top ventilators are provided for the part of the crop put there. In dry weather the ventilators are kept open day and night, but on damp nights they are closed. In very hot weather it is necessary to close the ventilators during the day and open at night to keep the tobacco from curing too fast. In damp, drizzley weather it is better to keep the ventilaters closed day and night until the tobacco begins to sweat, when ventilaters had better to opened. If conditions are favorable for pole sweat or barn burn to occur ventilation of the barn is useless. In that case a stove could be used to drive out the surplus moisture. By increasing the temperature 20 degrees in the barn the moisture holding capacity of the barn is doubled. This of course would not be necessary unless prolonged periods of rainy weather occur.

The most favorable temperatures for the first stage of air curing lie between 70 and 100 degrees and the relatives humidity should be about 85 per cent. Under these conditions the leaf will gradually lose its water, but will not become brittle, and the curing will proceed smothly. The first stage of curing is complete when the leaf turns from a green to a lemon yellow. Nothing can be done to hasten the first period of curing. It must take place under natural conditions. In the second stage of the curing, when the leaf begins to turn brown, there is no longer any need for keeping the air in the barn so moist, and the leaf should be allowed to dry rather rapidly until the stems have become brittle. It is desirable to prevent the tobacco from coming into very high "case" that is, from becoming very moist, after curing and before it is taken down so it should be stripped and asserted as soon as possible after the curing is completed.

Locomotives and Freight Cars

The sale of 4,380 pieces of obsolete and depreciated rolling stock has been consummated by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, according to the L&N Employes' Magazine for September. The equipment was bought by the David J. Joseph Co., of Cincinnati, who will dismantle it and dispose of it as scrap.

Included in the sale are 251 locomotives, 8,671 freight cars, and 368 units of work equipment all obsolete stock of small capacity unsuitable for service in modern trains. The locomotives involved have all seen in excess of 30 years of service, and the cars are of various classes of modern equipment. The original cost of the entire lot was approximately $7,000,000, but this value has been largely depreciated at the time of the sale, it is stated.

The work of dismantling was started by the Joseph company in a plant on the railroad's property at South Louisville about the first of September and will be completed in approximately six months. A portion of the work will be done in a second plant at Boylst, Ala.

Books Of Own

Mr. H. G. Wells has always had a keen interest in the turning of wheels, mechanical, social, and political. His fascination, however, has never been a detached one. He is not content with hearing the snapping of sparks and the slapping of belts nor watching the blurred circle of the cogs. Inevitably he has found it necessary to oil here, to crank there, and to attempt the adjustment of a complexity within a complexity. His latest work, "The Shape of Things to Come", is no exception from the point of view of interest. Nowaday, however, the self-appointed mechanic of the world has taken on the habiliments of the seer. Unfortunately, the garments fit him but loosely.

Given his proper sphere, the criticism of things past, Mr. Wells has at all times presented an admirable figure. His "Outline of History", despite a hoarse cry from the deep dyed historians themselves, has been judged worthy and cogent analysis. Insofar as his present book is a continuation of his earlier study it is significent. When it passes the borderline of 1933 its grotesqueries are but illy concealed behind the robes of Wellsian propaganda. The propaganda, however, is of an amusing and interesting nature and is well worthy of inspection. In brief it pictures a coming millenium, a World State, devoid of the ties of family, race, religion and country, but bound together by the common interests of an absurbly human race.

Mr. Wells had difficulty in accounting for his vision. So much so that he was forced to the hackneyed measure of inventing a Dr. Philip Raven who in a species of twilight sleep sees clearly the episodes of the future. But the less said about the Raven the better. It is with the Wells who is a critic of his own time that we are interested. The book beginnig with a survey of the back grounds of social and political life that led up and through the World War of 1914-1918. The episodes of the Ford Peace Ship and Wilson at Versailles he sees as precursors of his World State. Here definitions and descriptions are handled freely and vigorously. The picture of Woodrow Wilson who "visited all the surviving courts of Europe and was feted and undone in every European Capital" will linger long. No less vivid are his definitions. The League of Nations "was a league not to end sovereignties but preserve them." It was not capable of ending war because, "The existence of independent sovereign states is war, white or red . . ." Of the Polish Corridor it is noted that "Germany, like Dives in hell, was to look up and see Poland like Lazarus in Woodrow Wilson's bosom." Democracy falls under the lash with the statement that, "It expressed a political fiction of a very extraordinary kind: that every subject of the contemporary state was equally capable of making whatever collective decisions had to be made." In such a manner is the ground cut out from under our present day establishments. It is not hard to see where Mr. Wells is headed. Such a line of thought necessarily leads to a foreordained collapse of modern society.

This collapse is brought about despite President Roosevelt the Second who was a good man but not good enough. (we wonder how Mr. Wells views the N R A.) Its immediate causes were monetary inadaptability, the disorganization of society through increased productivity, and a great pestilence which halved the world's population. War was not a direct cause but a circumstance. Our author, however, has much to say of the horrors of the Polish Wars in 1940.

If you are interested in the socialistic rise of future civilization out of this imminent chaos, you will find the latter part of the book interesting enough. The reviewer must confess, however, that he found a certain tedium and a certain buffoonery there that do not mix well with the able analysis exhibited in the open pages. Perhaps of more interest than the rest is that bitingly sarcastic picture of the United States in liquidation, the President doing his own gardening, and Columbia University and Harvard still squabbling (this is 1958), over what they called "The General Problem of Recovery".

A School Frill Passes

In slavish aping of their elder brothers and sisters in Colleges, high school pupils have strained their resources to issue elaborate annuls or yearbooks. Desire to outdo previous classes and love of display combined to multiply expensive features, until it is generally conceded that the educational value of the annuls is small in comparison with the outlay of time and money it requires. The depression has helped to correct these unfortunate practices.

The coming tendency to issue the annuls in simplified form as an accurate and dignified record of the school year is illustrated "The Virginian" of Bristol High School. Although the cost of the publication was sharply reduced, it was selected as the best in the state. The work of typing and arrangement was done by pupils, and the appearance is distinctly pleasing.

Editorial stags will gain valuable hints from collections of the Virginia High School League made available for their inspection. They may be borrowed, for postage cents alone, from the Extention Division, University, Virginia.

Pick-up and Delivery Service

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, in July 1933, recovered 14 million pounds of freight from other forms of transportation directly through its pick-up and delivery service, according to a statement in the L&N Employes' Magazine for September. L&N's total less-carload tonage for July 1933 exceeded that of the same month in 1932 by 39 million pounds. Part of this increase is attributed to improved business conditions.

LEE SMOKIES WIN PENNANT

The Lee Smokies won three out of five games series to win out over Norton in the Lonesome Pine League, the Smokies won the first two games, lost the third and won the fourth to cinch the Pennant.

Norton defeated the Smokies here Saturday by the score of 4 to 3, Doyle started the game for the Smokies, but had to come out in the 6th inning on account of a sore arm, Lefty Scott finished the game.

Pepper Rea and Young were the Smokies leading hitters, Taylor and Haynes led the hitting for Norton.

Lefty Toney went the route for Norton allowing three runs and nine hits.

Norton collected eight hits and four runs off Doyle and got only two hits off Scott.

The Smokies lost the second game to Norton, Sunday by the score of four to two. Edwards Norton pitcher kept the Smoky hits well scattered allowing only seven, Norton only collected seven hits but they counted for four runs and that is what it takes to win ball games.

Beauford Rhea the flash again stole home in this game in the first inning, he got a hit, stole second, went to third on a fielders choice and made a clean steal of home the catcher didn't even try to tag him.

Fox and Rhea were the leading hitters for the Smokies, while Taylor and Haynes led the hitting for Norton.

Not like any other cigarette

The United States Government granted Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company the right to use "Chesterfield" for cigarettes

THIS means that the Chesterfield formula—that is, the leaf and the manufacturing formula—is different from that of other cigarettes.

For a cigarette to be milder and to taste better, it has to have in it ripe, mild, mellow tobacco, and the right quantity of the right kinds of Turkish tobacco. Then the cigarette has to be made right.

You can prove for yourself that Chesterfields are not like other cigarettes. They're milder . . . they taste better.

The Book Sampler

Conceded that the title of G. McPherson's "Grey Cottage" is unfortunate; conceded also that it is impossible to see any of the characters in the flesh unless it be Margaret's exterior which is so different from the real Margaret; yet there will be a few books printed this year which will give half its pleasure. Michael, an artist, wishes to live apart in his grey sanctuary by the sea; Margaret personifies this life of his desire. But two women attempt to draw him out into the main current of living, and life conspires with one of them. The charm of the story lies in its being possible to live with the characters, listen to their thoughts, guess their philosophies, reach out and touch them in the dark, then behind it all hear the swish and feel the damp of the sea. The narrative itself is too gentle for suspense, but a sense of personal experience grows upon one.

"Priest or Pagan" has no more reality than a Renascence painting of devils and angels and is executed with the same colorful pageantry. John Rathbone Oliver, priest and psychiatrist, in telling of a youth a good and evil mentor each struggling for possession of his soul, pluges into a realm of spiritual adventurewhich discloses an idea. Perhaps it is an allegory.

Because of previous books H. M. Tomlinson is known as a good author, and as such his works deserve attention. Now he writes "The Snows of Helicon" were a conflict between lust for power and the essence of beauty is typified by an architect's dreams in steel and concrete and his later realization that there is something more. Somewhere along the line Mr. Tomlinson wonders off into a stratosphere where the reader gasps helplessly. It would take another 267-page book to explain just what Mr. Tomlinson does mean.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q Wacks

To Corbin on the special was wild and woozy for many of the fans while many took it more quietly than they did last year when on the Pineville trip, the ten coach doubleheader train to the doubleheader baseball game was crowded plenty with about three times the number that the Lonesome Pine special carried to Pineville last year.

The St. Charles Band which accompanied the baseball club on the choo-choo did their part in supplying the music both on the way to, and returning.

Gold baseball charms for the champions of the Lonesome Pine League were presented to the sixteen players on the train as they returned home, the balls which were very attractive indeed were highly appreciated by the players who had rightfully deserved them by winning the Lonesome Pine flag.

The Mountain Empire Series now stand one all and the third and deciding game between Corbin and Lee Smokies probably will be played at Corbin Sunday.

Well-Well, the titanic went down last Saturday with both Lee County football elevens aboard, Pennington loosing to Big Stone Gap by score of 14 to 0 while the St. Charles midgets gave the Appalachia champs of 32, workout to the tune of 63 to 0. Applachia being superior in strength over the St. Charles lads to the extent that they was able to put one across the fatal white line most any time they desired, for a six point counter.

The Wise County elevens, especially Appalachia and Big Stone and Norton too, will be included are far ahead of the Lee County football squads both in experience and weight and of course in many other ways as they herd them into school in large squads up there while down here in Lee County they head for the coal mines or somewhere else to seek a job soon as their age will permit letting school and athletics become second nature and interest. Why can't Lee County promoters and fans get behind their football boys like baseball and herd into school some real prospects and mound winners like their competitive schools in nearby Counties.

Minister--Don't you ever attend a place of worship?

Youth—Yes sir, I'm on my way to her house now.

Sally—I've been married more than you.

Mayme—Yeah, you're two chumbs ahead of me.

"Ten dollars fine for stealing chickens."

"Will you take the chickens judge?"

He—You look nice enough to eat.

She—Well, I do eat.

LEE SMOKIES CORBIN TIED

Lee Smokies defeated Corbin here Saturday by the one-sided score of 18 to 2 in the first of a three game series to determine the champion of the two leagues the Lonesome Pine and the Cumberland Valley.

Hobart Lefty Scott went the route for the Smokies allowing Corbin only two runs and seven hits.

This game was featured by home runs one by Soapy Wax and one by Cow Boy Barker.

Brawley a South Paw was on the mound for Corbin allowing eighteen runs and twenty two hits.

The leading hitters for the Smokies were Soapy Wax, Beauford Rhea, Scott, Monhollen led the hitting for Corbin.

The Lee Smokies lost to Corbin at Corbin Sunday by the score of 6 to 5. The second game went four innings and could have been finished but for the poor sportsmanship of the Corbin team and management. The Lee Smokies were leading the Corbin outfit by the score of 5 to 0 in the second game at the end of four innings. The late start is due to the late arrival of the special train that carried the Lee Smokies and baseball fans to Corbin, Ky., about four hundred tickets were sold at Pennington for Corbin. It is hard to understand how a train could be one hour and twenty minutes late from Norton when it is only an hours run.

This leaves the two teams tied in the play off series, each having won one and lost one, the second game of the double header was declared no game by the umpire.

The leading hitters for the Smokies in the first game were Beauford Rhea getting three for four, for Corbin Hennagar getting three for four, Taylor two for four, Turpentine two for three,

GLADIATORS LOOSE TO BIG STONE GAP

The Pennington High Gladiators lost their first football game of the year to Big Stone Gap at Big Stone Gap, Saturday by the score of 14 to 0.

The Gladiators made more first downs and gained more from line of scrimmage than Big Stone did, but bad breaks against the local boys gave Big Stone the game.

The Gladiators made nine first downs to Big Stone Gap three, gained 213 yards from line of scrimmage to Big Stone Gap 136.

Local fans that saw the game are very well pleased at the showing of the local boys and with another week's practice will be ready for Norton. The Glads had seven new men in the lineup that had never played football.

Mrs. J. M. Crockett Entertained Sat.

Hagan—Saturday afternoon September 16, 1933, Mrs. Crockett was hostess to the Jonesville Missionary Society and a number of neighbors, this party was given in honor of Mrs. Crockets Little Missionary Sister, Mrs. John Wynn of the Camp Gronnd, on arriving each one registered to a glass of punch which was refreshing. After an afternoon of "much chat" each was served with a delicious plate lunch, and watter mellon "Golone".

NORTON CHILD KILLED BY AUTO

Norton — Returning home from school at noon Monday Hazel Murray, 14, was struck by an automobile, picked up by the bumper of the car and knocked into a ditch, and was dead before she could be carried to her home 100 yards away.

The girl was the third oldest child of Mr. and Mrs. Jeter M. Murray.

F. R. Hess of Roda was arrested near the Thelma store above Tom's Creek, 10 miles from the accident, and is held in the Wise jail charged with blame for the accident. Deputy Sheriffs Jerry Stallard and Willie Moore placed him under arrest. Moore said Hess denied any knowledge of the accident. The officers said a charge of driving while intoxicated also would be lodged against Hess.

American Legion Furnished Chevrolets

Chicago — When the American Legion Convention gets under way here next week leading officials of the organization will find at their disposposal fifty special automobiles provided by the Chevrolet Motor Company.

The cars furnished by Chevrolet all will be Mas-Six Sedans finished in dark Baker blue with gold wheels and appropriate lettering. Each car will be provided with its own driver wearing a white uniform and sailor cap.

Cars will be dispatched from a central point at the call of desigoated Legion officials and will transport them to any point within reasonable limits of the city for the duration of the Convention.

On the doors of the cars will be the Legion seal carrying the lettering: "National Legion Convention". Tire covers in the rear will also have the desiguation: "Official Legion Chevrolet".

The company decided to provide cars for the Legionnaires, officials said, following the success of a similar venture when the National Convention was held at Detroit two years ago.

Jack Kelly Found Dead

Jack Kelly, 28, son of Mr. and Mrs. Newt Kelly of the Cove section was found under his Chevrolet automobile by a co'ored man early Wednesday morning, near Wort Allens, near Dryden.

Bill Roller said he heard a racket about 9:30 Tuesday night like some one having a wreck, he sent some boys out to investigate but they could'nt find anything.

Jack had a bruised place across his side and head where the car had been on him.

It is thought from the looks of the car that he was making too much speed and it caused him to turn over.

He is the only son of Mr, and Mrs. Newt Kelly.

Dental Survey State School

Richmond—State wide surveys of the conditions of children's teeth in Virginia, Maryland and North Carolina were planned at a tri-state meeting in Washington on Friday, September 15, and are expected to result in detailed examination of the teeth of children from kindergarten through the seventh grade.

Directors of mouth hygiene of the state health department of the three states met at the request of the American Dental Association and the U. S. Public Health Service. Dr. T. C. Messner, Dental Surgeon of the U. S. Public Health Service and Chairman of the committee for the survey of the dental association, presided at the Washington conference. Campaigns were organized to enlist the volunteer services of dentists, who, assisted by county clinicians, will conduct detailed examination of the teeth of the children. The information which the surveys will furnish has been requested by the American Dental Association of all states.

"Our goal in Virginia," said Dr. N. T. Ballon, Director of the Virginia Bureau of Mouth Hygiene, "is a complete survey of 100,000 children."

In order to reach this goal, health authorities seek the cooperation of parents, teachers, dentists and all organizations concerned with public welfare.

Beginning this month, a series of dental clinics will be conducted in the public schools throughout the entire State and the information thus gained will lay the foundation for what is expected to be the most extensive program of dental corrections ever carried out in Virginia.

Entered at the Postoffice at Pennington Gap, Virginia, as mail matter of the second-class.

One of the freshmen, bless their little hearts, was bearing up rather nobly under a particularly weary R. O. T. C. drill when he very inadvertenly passed by the captain without saluting.

"Say, buddy," said the captain with characteristic sweetness, "Do you see the uniform I'm wearing?"

"Yeh," said the rookie, looking enviously at the captain's almost immaculate uniform, "Look at the thing they gave me!"

A jig-saw jigger called up the jig-saw department of a downtown store and asked whether any new ones had come in from jigsawville.

"Yes, we have a new one just in," the young saleswoman replied.

"What's the title?"

"Alright—send it out."

But when the jig-saw jigger received the new jig-saw puzzle the name on the box said:

"The Rhododendron!"

"Jack proposed to me in such an original way!"

"How, dear?"

"He asked me if I would permit him to add another engagement to my collection."

Patient—Doctor, tell me frankly, what are my chances?

Doctor—Oh, pretty good—but dont start reading any serial stories.

June—Do you ever get down on your knees?

BOOKS TO OWN

Calvin B. Hoover's "Economic Life of Soviet Russia" has been adjudged one of the sanest and most intelligent of the numerous studies of Societ affairs which our awakened interest in Russia has brought forth in the past three years. And now his "Germany Enters the Third Reich" is surely destined for an equally high rank among the many books dealing with the rise of the Nazis. Certainly the hysterical tone of practically all of the recent comment on Hitler and his party would have presaged a delay of many years before a reasonable appraisal of the National Socialist movement could be attempted. But Professor Hoover, in spite of the fact that he has not been able to unearth all of the important facts and despite his own liberal bias, has achieved as nearly as is possible an historical perspective. It is a really remarkable achievement, when one considers that most of the events which he treats are less than a year old, and so clouded over with propaganda from all directions that even the most clear-sighted have been befogged.

As a resident in Germany during the last year, Professor Hoover had the opportunity to interview many of the actors and witness many of the scenes which ushered in the Third Reich. Accordingly, the factual testimony which he gives, while far from supplying the complete story and he is the first to point out the gaps, has at least the virtue of first-hand information. More important still, Professor Hoover, possibly from his experience in Russia, knows something of the nature of governments of power, and never lets himself be thrown off balance by the tides of emotional liberalism. The result is a book that has the objectiveness of history written ten years from now and the exciting contemporaneity of a war correspondent's dispatch.

The first three chapters of "Germany Enters the Third Reich" deal with social and economic conditions in Germany under the Republic. Professor Hoover points out the inherent weaknesses of the Social Democratic Policy as applied to post-war Germany, and describes the class cleavages which were the raw material for the Nazi machine. Then follows a narrative account of events from the fall of the Bruning cobinet in June 1932 through the first five months of Hitler's chancellorship. The least successful section of the book is that devoted to the "twilight period" of the presidential cabinets of Von Papen and Von Schleicher, when all factions were engaged in a mad game of secret bargaining and double-crossing. But it is hardly likely that this period will be cleared up until, if ever, the memoirs of the chief actors are published. The final three chapters deal with the fundamental characteristics, the economic aspects and the international consequences of Nazi rule. In these chapters, the meat of the book, Professor Hoover draws his conclusions as to the meaning and implications of Nazi domination; and his conclusions are the more startling for the calmness with which they are stated and the consistent that they make.

Professor Hoover's opinion that the Nazis are in to stay and that they are impregnable to attack from within, except in the event of a prolonged war, is one that the realistic fraction of the world has already accepted. His belief that Hitler is more than a demagogue riding the crest of popular insurgence will be disputed, but the evidence he gives conclusively proves that, whether or not Hitler turns out to be a statesman, he is certainly one of the most astute political managers alive today. Most debatable of all is Professor Hoover's conclusion that Nazi rule will mean a fundamental revolution in the economic set-up in Germany. Events will have to prove whether the Nazi scheme of state-appointed directorates will result in a genuine redistribution of wealth, or whether the industrialists will sabotage the system or find a means of circumventing it. But there will certainly be little disagreement with the author's final conclusion that Nazi Germany is the most serious threat the European peace that has arisen since the war. And as it behooves Americans to know what they may have to fight, or decline to fight about, "Germany Enters the Third Reich" is a book that should have the widest possible audience in this country.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

"Tom Brown is raising a mustache. Do you like a mustache on a man?"

"Sure! It tickles me almost to death."

"Well, Joan, you have a new baby brother."

"Oh, Dr. Scott, I'm so glad! Daddy was getting kind of girlish with just mother and me about."

The Fork of the Road

Every person is unique in mental make-up, in abilities, attitudes and interests. Education is a continuous process, unchecked by school commencements in June. To these fundamental facts education owes its modern developments.

Maturity increases differences in interests and need. Coinciding with the end of formal schooling, it puts upon the adult the responsibility of determining the quality and worth of the education he will continue to get. Open to him are two roads, haphazard, uninterpreted experience and directed study or exerience designed for definite goals. The great majority chooses the rambling, haphazard way, though only genius can follow it to real achievement. Others seek reliable guides to point the course of surest progress.

The offerings of these guides and teachers, representing many institutions and organizations, are readily available, but interested students are not always able to find them. Hence an educational advisory service for adults has been established for the practical purpose of citing applicants to the source of any desired instruction, whether vocational or cultural, china painting, auto mechanics or philosophy. Information concerning this service may be obtained from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

What does your wife think of your rich uncle's will that cut you off with a paltry $100? Henry Peck was asked.

She has the same contempt for it that she has for my will, sighed Henry.

Can there be any stronger recommendation for a car than this

America can't be fooled when it comes to spotting the best "buy" in any field. America knows too much about motor cars for that. So when one certain car wins almost as many buyers as the next two put together, you know the answer: IT MUST BE BETTER. And that's what the new Chevrolet Six most certainly is.

Better looking—it has long, sleek, aer-streamed lines—Fisher's smartest styling. Chevrolet has better bodies—they're built not just of steel alone, but of steel reinforced by a sturdy hardwood frame. Chevrolet has a better engine—six cylinders for lowest gas and oil consumption, cushion balancing for killing vibration. And Chevrolet gives better value—a long line-up of features, including the Starterator, Syncro-Mesh gear-shift, Free Wheeling, which no other low-priced car can match.

Now, in September, is the time to start thinking about a new car for winter! And when you do so, think of the way Chevrolet is leading all other cars in sales. What more could you possibly ask as a recommendation for a car than that?

PENNINGTON HI

Pennington High School opened with the largest enrollment in its history, and plans to have the best year it has ever had.

About 30 boys answered coach Kilday's call for foot ball material the first of school. Some of the boys are inexperienced, but with a few weeks of practice he hopes to turn out an exceedingly good team.

Elmo Keel had the misfortune of getting his knee injured last week and will knock him out for the rest of the season.

Prof. Bradbury is able to be out after a few days of illness. Mrs. Bradbury did a very nice job of substituting during his absence.

The Senior Class has an enrollment of 28, the officers were elected as following:

Sue Richards-President.
Thelma Kelly-Vice-president.
Lillian Howard-Secretary.
Kennith Skeens-Treas.
R. A. Thompson-Reporter.

Woodrow Riley, a member of the Senior class, who lives at Woodway, was absent from school two days last week.

Helen Shelbourne, of the Freshman class spent Sunday in Norton.

Kathleen Bays was absent from school Tuesday on the account of illness.

Miss Sewell's room held a class meeting last Wednesday and elected the following officers:

Jack Bruce-Presi'ent.
Billy Laningham-Vice-President.
Stella Mae Quinley-Secretary.
Flora Mae Fugate-Treas.
Helen Shelbourne - Reporter.

This group plans to form a Home Room Club and have many interesting programs.

The Junior class started the year off by holding a class meeting the first day and electing the following officers:

Howard Zion-President.
Elmo Keel-Vice President.
Vivian Lane-Secretary-Treas.
Charles Smith-Reporter.

Ruth Pennington is back in school after a week's visit at the World's Fair.

The Book Sampler

In recounting primary urges of life, it is strange that a man's lust for gambling is left out. Take, for instance, Jim (there are scores of Jim's in the world) who could no more keep away from the racing tracks than a moth could from a light For a while Jim was so much in love with Marge, his wife and later the mother of his child, that he cast aside all thoughts of easy money and become a clerk in a middle class hotel. But even Fate conspired, and he became manager of a track in the West where he met the loviest thing he had ever seen, the greyhound, Dark Hazard, who was as enticing with her slim racing lines as Marge was in her own particular way. So woman and dog, adventure and security, fought it out. In "Dark Hazard" W. R. Burnett gives us a rather pathetic picture of a very real person.

J. B. Priestley makes a "Wonder Here" of a poor English workman named Charlie Habble (which is no mean accomplishment in itself) and a Cinderella of a small town girl who won a beauty contest. In spite of the adulation of the crowds, they seek to flee from it all. But they shouldn't have bothered; it isn't long before both papers and public have forgotten or don't give a hoot. Though not brilliantly orignial satire, it is impossible that Mr. Priestley could ever be dull.

The granddaughter of the creator of Peter Ibbetson, Daphne du Maurier, goes in for a very earthy specimen of mankind. He is an Algerian Jew who rises to prominence in London for the very same qualities that cause him to preside at his daughter's birth and boast about it later on smallest provocation. "The Progress of Julius" (from the cradle to the grave) is a story of the "strong", tragic variety.

These novels may be borrowed from the extension Division, University, Virginia.

Father-Son

In Clarksville, Tenn., there is a yard engine crew who believed they hold the father and son record on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. For more than 17 years Fireman Earl F. Looney has been firing for his father, Engineer F. P. Looney, on a Clarksville yard engine. The L&N Employers' Magazine for September asks whether any other father and son can equal or better their record.

The elder Looney has served the L&N for 45 years and his son has been with the road for 17 years all on his father's engine.

"Does that story you are reading end in a modern way?"

"Yes, they are married and and live happy thereafter for a few months."

Golf Tournament

One hundred eighty employes of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in Louisville, Ky., are competing in a gigantic golf tournament staged over the L&N course in that city, it is learned from the September L&N Employes' Magazine. There are ten match play flights of 16 players each, and one medal play flight of 20 players, all executives of the company, including President W. R. Cole. The winner of the medal flight was C. H. Ryan, Jr., general freight agent-solicitation, of the L&N.

Silver trophies are to be awarded to the winner and runner-up in each of the flights.

Spinster—Has the canary had his bath yet?

Maid—Yis, mum, ye can come in now.

Policeman—This won't do, madam, your car has been here 20 minutes. I timed it by your clock.

Lady Motorist—By the clock in there?

Oh, you can't go by that, it's fast.

Hubby—Ah, let me back just one more horse, dear, and I promise you it will be the last.

Wifey—It usually is.

He—Life will never be the same if you refuse me.

She—I'd see that it wasn't even if I accepted you.

Squashtown Fire Chief—Yep! We put out the fire just ten minutes after we got there!

Drummer—Had it got a good start on you?

Squashtown Fire Chief—Had it! Why when we got there, there wasn't nothing left but the cellar!

Judge — Prisoner, explain how it was you stole those worthless articles and left a valuable gold watch close at hand untouched.

Prisoner (humbly)—Don't find fault with me for that, your honor; my wife has been hard enough on me for it already.

"How do you like this new tapestry brick, Mr. Mulligan?"

"Begorra, and it's not yet I've thrown one ov them!"

Fair Motorist (giving lift to stranger)—I'm very glad of your company as this is the first time I have driven, and I'm horribly nervous. Somebody to talk to will keep my mind off the driving.

Gertie—Are mine the only lips you ever kissed?

Bertie—Absolutely—and the nicest!

Mr. Newlywed—Why are you crying pet?

Mrs. Newlywed—Oh, Dick, I was thinking, suppose baby should grow up to be president and one of his daughters should have a White House wedding and you earned no more than you do now, I wouldn't have a thing fit to wear!

Mistress—Thursday is my at home day.

New Cook—Good. Its mine to. Perhaps we can arrange to receive together.

Dam Number 3 Suggested by T. V. A.

Construction of Dam No. 3 (the Joe Wheeler Dam) above Muscle Shoals is approved as a relief measure by the Tennessee Valley Authority providing the cost is met with public works money.

Chairman Arthur E. Morgan of the Authority has wired Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, and Senators Hugo L. Black and John H. Bankhead of Alabama, as follows:

"The Tennessee Valley Authority heartily approves the construction of Dam No. 3 above Muscle Shoals of the Tennessee River as an emergency employment relief measure, on condition that it is built with public works money and not with Tennessee Valley Authority money, and that the carrying charges and construction cost shall not be charged to the Tennessee Valley Authority until the demand for power justifies the construction for that purpose.

"The dam is an intergral part of the navagation program of the Tennessee River, and will be a part of the power development program when it is needed, The only disadvantage to building the dam now is that it will not come into full use at once. This disadvantage may be overweighed by the great advantage of providing employment, by favorable construction prices and the fact that the construction of Dam No. 3 will be a substantial aid to navigation on the Tennessee River below Chattonooga. The navigation locks at Dam No. 3 are, in fact, now in process of construction by the Army Engineers.

"This position we conceive to be in the interest of the public welfare. The Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority took formal action to this effect."

The site of Dam No. 3 is at the head of Wilson Lake, in Alabama, about 16 miles above Wilson Dam.

"Your husband's in politics, I see."

"And out nights."

"I am going to put you on a milk diet," said the doctor.

"I'm no cat," growled Mr. Grouch, "I lead a dog's life, and you better prescribe bones."

Rhodes—Poor Bassler: he has just joined the "silent majority."

Rhoads—What do you mean? He hasn't died, has he?

Rhodes—No, he's just got married.

"Son, is your financee efficient?"

"Runs her whole family, maw."

"Why are you in mourning? Is your husband dead?"

"No, but he has behaved so badly that I have gone back to mourning for my first husband."

Gives A Mountain To Virginia

Richmond—The princely gift of a 4,500 acre tract of timber covered mountain land in Patrick county has been made to the state by Junius B. Fishburn, Roanoke capitalist and publisher. The tract will be converted into the fifth in a chain of parks reaching from South West Virginia to the sea. The donor presented the park to the state in fee simple, including mineral and all other rights.

The new area is located 14 miles from Bassett, 19 miles from Martinsville and eight miles from Stuart. The body of the mountain is covered with hardwood timber and stands approximately 1,500 feet above sea level, with peaks reaching 2,500 feet. Three C. C. C. camps are expected to be put in the area very shortly, each camp to be composed of 200 men.

Prospective Plans provide for a dam on Goldmag Creek in which will impounded from 500 to 1,000 acres of water, thus forming a lake shore a 10 mile drive is contemplated, as well as the erection of 100 cottages of the log cabin type. The park will likewise include 40 miles of bridle paths, 20 miles of foot paths, together with a nature guide service and other features. It will lie on the main highway connecting the park near Marion and the seashore park at Cape Henry.

The gift from Mr. Fishburn should prove especially acceptable at this time, providing, as it does, not alone a picturesque and valuable addition to the park system in the state, but also large employment to labor during this era of depression. It is, indeed, a magnificent donation.

The state commission on conservation and development, which made announcement of the gift, also states that the 2,500 acre tract near Marion, recently presented to the Commonwealth by J. D. Lincoln and C. C. Lincoln for park purposes, is to be enlarged to 8,000 acres. All of the five parks so far arranged for by the state will be developed under direction of R. E. Burson, associate director of parks for the commission.

"You think eight hours a day is enough work for any man?"

"Plenty", answered Cactus Joe, "That only leaves him 16 hours to play poker and get a little sleep."

"How's your new drug clerk?"

"He's all right on pills but terrible on salads."

"What are you going to do when you arrive at your new country?"

"Oh, take up land."

"Much?"

"Only a shovelful at a time."

He—Will you sail with me on the sea of matrimony?

She—Yes, after you have made a raft of money.

Memoir

Marguerette Emily Bishop was the twelth child born to Franklin and Avalina Bishop on Dec. 31, 1857 and departed this life July 31, 1938 age 75 yrs. 7 mos She was left motherless when about 6 mo. old, but she fell into good hands. Rachel Pennington, the wife of the elder John Pennington who lived and died at Dryden, Lee Co., Va. her grandfather took her for a short time.

Then she was given over to her aunt Pattie Lucas at her aunt's request, who kept her until she was fourteen years of age. Next she went to live with her uncle John B. Pennington with whom she lived until the time of her marriage to William T. Orr Aug. 16th 1876. Her marriage was one of devotion to her husband She was true in every relation to the Congenial life Five children were born to this union; Minnie, Mattie, John, Lillie and Cora. Lillie died in infancy, the others all grew to woman and manhood. Then after being married Mattie then Minnie went to join the infant. The other two with the aged husband are left to mourn their loss. In the meantime she gave her youthful heart to Jesus when 13 yrs. old and they walked together until she passed over Jordan into Caanan Land safe at home.

She was converted and joined the Missionary Baptist Church, at old Clear Springs church near Dryden, but later in life she changed her church affiliation to that of the M. E. Church South in which she lived a devoted Christian until the Husbandman called in the laborer at evening time to give to her, her wages—the gift of Eternal life.

The writer knew her intimately for many years. She was a beautiful character, mild in her manner, pleasant, yet firm in her conviction for the right.

Her home was one of quiet peace. Her spiritual camp was always ablage on the candle stand in the home and community as well.

Thus we conclude and affectionate wife, a devoted mother and splendid neighbor has gone to live with Jesus. We weep not as those who have no hope. Her parting words to her husband were: "Shed not a tear, do not cry, this is nothing to cry about, I am ready." She took Cora by the hand and said: "I am going to take a long rest." While she is, and will be greatly missed by her aged husband, children and friends, Heaven is made richer by her going. May God wipe away all tears and reconstruct a now broken family in the City where falleth no night, is the prayer of the writer.

"Asleep in Jesus! Blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep!
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes."

SHE MAKES MONEY BY TELEPHONE!

We know a farm woman who sells many things by telephone. In one season it is strawberries. At other times it is eggs, cream, dressed poultry. People pay her a premium to get things fresh from the farm. She says these telephone sales bring many additional dollars into the family purse.

Your telephone can help make your farming profitable. Yet the cost is only a few cents a day.

T. V. A. To Use C. C. C. Camps

Prepatory plans are being pushed by the Department of Forestry and Soil Erosion of the Tennessee Valley Authority for taking care of and using the C. C. C camps which are going to be sent down into the Tennessee Valley from the far northwest within the next month or six weeks.

Mr. Edward C. M. Richards, Chief Forester of the TVA, announces that the program and plans for the location of the camps and the work to be done are being completed by his department. Mr. R. A. Winston, Technical of Soil Erosion in the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is now in Knoxville working with Mr. Richards department in locating the most critical soil erosion areas in the Norris Dam watershed. Every effort is being made by the Forestry and Soil Erosion Department to not only locate the boys coming from Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, and northern California in the camps in such a [illegible] that they will be comfortable, well taken care of, and pleasantly situated, but also that the Valley in the communities immediately around the camps will be benefited by the boys' present outlook is that a reasonable number of young men from 18 to 25 years of age will be able to find an opportunity to enroll in some of these camps from Knoxville and other parts of the Tennessee Valley. The details of this, however will be developed shortly.

The major problem of checking the washing away of soil and the protection of the great Norris Dam reservior from silting is receiving the earnest attention of the foresters of the TVA and Mr. Winston. So important is this connection between forestry and the prevention of soil erosion that the Department of Forestry and Soil Erosion of the Authority is adopting for its slogan the following: "Forestry For Protection, Power, And Prosperit :"

Notice

To the public who have relatives and friends, who are buried at Old Station Creek Grave yard.

A number of us are going to meet at this place on Saturday, October the 7th 1933, for the purpose of, cleaning off the grave yard, and church grounds, and take off the thorns, bushes and briers, which almost hide the graves and monuments, from public view to visit the graves of their loved ones who have passed on in this life.

We should not neglect the graves and monuments, of these old pioneers who made this a place for us to live and enjoy.

The old pioneers, such as A. J. Wilson, V. H. Kelly, Cowen, Charles, Frank, Wesley and Arch McElroy, and many others who sleep at this place, deserve more credit and respect than the people of this day and age are giving them. The rising generation should not see neglection of our dead. Lets all meet at the appointed time and make this grave yard, look at least that it was in a christian land. Bring a mattock, hoe or ax, and help in this great need. It would be well to bring a lunch, as we will be there after the noon hour. Mrs. Valarie Wilson Orr, and Mrs. H. C. Wade are among the number who sleep there. Talk it among each other, and lets get all to come who have loved ones buried at this place. All should have notice, lets make this day worth while.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Virginians and Kentuckians will bid farewell to the Lonesome Pine and Cumberland Valley baseball when the setting of the sun over Corbin hills Sunday afternoon will close forever the 1933 season as the final game of the year will take place there and another special train from Virginia perhaps will carry even a much larger crowd than the Lonesome Pine Special carried two weeks ago to see the striped uniforms in action the last time until '34.

Baseball thirsty, enthusiastis fans will pack the Corbin field in much greater numbers than ever before to greet either a Virginia Champion or a Kentucky Champion when the last ball is thrown in the final inning which will definitely decide the Mountain Empire champions of the two States.

Another series of interest will also take place over in Jonesville Sunday afternoon when Smyth's Dairy will oppose Jonesville in a doubleheader to decide the little State champs, Jonesville being the winner of the Powell Valley loop and the Dairymen champs of Harlan coalfield loop. The series now stand one victory for the Dairy boys while Jonesville needs both ends of Sundays doublebill to cinch the State flag in class B.

Coach Kilday's battling eleven of the Pennington High gave Norton plenty opposition Saturday although they dropped the four quarter bout by the count of 12 to 6, quite an improvement for the local boys. Gate City will roll in for four hard fought quarters with the local eleven Saturday and plenty of hot opposition because the local lads are all keyed up for a victory and Saturday would be a mighty fine time to grasp it although Gate City has a strong husky club and it will take every ounce of strength and battling to beat them.

Coach Richmonds St. Charles midgets were idle over the past week end, the scheduled game with Harlan was set back to a later date.

The two actresses were having tea together, and among the topics of conversation that came up was burglary.

"I always feel safe when there's a man in the house," remarked the brunet.

"I don't see why you shouldn't dear," purred the blond.

School Libraries Show Growth

Richmond—Miss Dorothy Brown, Assistant Supervisor of public School Libraries, State Department of Education, has charge of the Department Library which contains approximately 1200 books devoted to the various phrases of education and ten or twelve educational magazines. These books have been classified and cataloged for the use of the staff; but may be borrowed by teachers, principals, superintendents, and school officials in Richmond or elsewhere in Virginia. The library contains a card catalog, vertical file, book truck, magazine rack, book-ends, shelf labels and pamphlet boxes. It is used as a model library and is frequently visited by principals and school superintendents.

Seventy-six high schools in twenty-seven counties and thirteen cities were visited by Miss Brown during the year. Intensive organization work was done in school libraries in Appomattox, Pittsylvania, Brunswick, Greensville, Southampton and Nansemond counties Actual work was done in the classification of books; organization of student assistant groups; weeding out dead material; installation of adequate charging systems and introduction of plans for library publicity of reading interests. Suggestions for library development were given to the school librarian, principal and division superintendent. A letter restating the suggestions was sent to the librarian following each visit. Talks were given during the year to civic league groups, Parent Teacher Associations, womens' club and teachers' meetings. Some of the topics discussed were the importance of the school library in the modern educational program; the proper selection of books for children; the avoidance of wasteful expenditure of money in purchasing books; ways to stimulate reading interests; and the selection of books which are needed for the different age groups.

The supervisor served as a professor in the Library School of the College of William and Mary during the summer sessions of 1932 and 1933. Classes were taught in Classification, Children's Literature, Administration of School Libraries, Library Practice, Adolescent Literature. Personal conferences were held with students in the elementary curriculum classes. Suggestions for first purchase books were given to each student.

Mr. J.—If business doesn't improve, I'll go crazy. I'm literally up to my ears in debt.

Mrs. J.—Cheer up, dear. Just think how much worse it would be if you were a tall man.

Tame Bear Reverts To The Wild

Richmond—It has been contented that a young bear or cub, caught when very young and raised in captivity, will not revert to the wild state when released after it has reached the age and size when it ceases to be a pet.

When young there is no more interesting pet, of all wild animals native to Virginia, than a young bear, but they become dangerous when approaching maturity.

Two cubs were raised last year near Afton, Virginia. One got away, went completely wild and never returned to its friends.

Another cub was raised in Agusta County this year and a very interesting experiment is being conducted in returning it to the forests. This cub was released on one of the State Game Refuges in the Blue Ridge Mountains at a point most remote from any human habitation. Bread and brown sugar are placed in a stump each day to which the bear comes. It is noticed, however, that his visits are more infrequent and that he is not eating as heartily as at first and does not clean up his daily ration. This shows that he is learning to eat the wild foods such as gum berries, acorns and grubs. It is confidently expected that in a very short while he will cease depending on the food provided for him and will join the wild bears of which there are several in that refuge.

The principal reason for advising against turning these captivity raised bears out in the forests was the fact that they had lost their fear of man and would either fall too easy prey to hunters or would unduly frighten people, especially children when engaged in gathering berries or chestnuts in the mountain forests but it seems that this objection can be overcome if the above plan is adopted.

In Memory of Betty Anne Graham

Betty Anne, fourteen year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Graham, of Pennington Gap, Virginia, died at Lee General Hospital Saturday, September 30th, 5:30 a. m., after a two weeks' illness. Her parents, physicians, and friends united skill and loving service in a futile effort to prolong her life.

The funeral service was conducted from the local Methodist Episcopal Church, South, her father's church. In charge of the services were her uncle, the Rev. W. J Shelburne, pastor of the Christian church at Versailles, Kentucky; the Rev. W. B. Moore, pastor of the First Christian Church, of which Betty Anne and her mother were members; and the Rev. C. F. Watkins, local Southern Methodist pastor. The attendance was perhaps the largest ever noted upon a funeral occasion in this community. Gorgeous floral offerings declared their silent messages of the eternal hope. Fitting music was offered by a selected choir.

Betty Anne showed considerable talent in the art of painting. Several of her paintings adorn her home, making more precious still the sweet memories of her that linger there. She was fast learning to love and appreciate the beautiful things of life.

She excelled, too, in the fine art of living. Her doctors and nurses declared her to be a most submissive and appreciative patient, even to the point of remembering to express gratitude for every little kindness shown her in their efforts to relieve her suffering. From mere infancy she was taught the Christ way of living and only a few years later chose it for her own.

Her suffering ended with a day,
Yet lived she at its close,
And breathed the long, long night away
In statue-like repose.
But when the Sun, in all his state,
Illum'ed the Eastern skies,
She passed through Glory's morning gate
And walked in Paradise.

"What did she say?"

"She told me to bring a machine gun."

"That dog of yours seems fond of chasing automobiles. Why?,'

"He isn't much of a fighter, so automobiles are about the only things he get a chance to chase."

Pennington High Lost to Norton

The Pennington High Gladiators lost a very interesting game to Norton High Saturday by the score of 6 to 12.

Norton scored in the first part of the second quarter and failed to make extra point. Pennington also scored a few minutes later and failed to make extra point by place kick, the half ending 6 and 6.

Norton scored again in the third period and failed to make extra point. The Pennington boys showed some real fight in the last few seconds of the game but failed to score by about five yards.

Coach Kilday is putting the boys through some stiff workouts this week getting in shape for the Gate City game to be played Saturday at Pennington, the first home game of the season. Gate City trounced the Gladiators last year and the Pennington boys are out for revenge this year.

The field is very near the same place that was used last year, only the new road passes within fifty yards of the one used this year.

Long Hollow

There was a large crowd attended the Ice Cream Supper at Long Hollow Saturday night. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the school.

The farmers are busy making molasees, saving fodder and sowing wheat.

Marylee and Lucille Ward and Inez Giles were Sunday school visitors at Smyth's Chapel last Sunday and visited Mr. and Mrs. Roy Parsons and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Everage.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Ward and children was shopping in Pennington, Ben Hur and Jonesville, Monday.

Mrs. Worley Hugh and baby are with her parents Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Waddle, since the sudden death of her husband a few weeks ago, he was found dead by the roadside near his home at Dryden.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wolliver have moved back in our vicinity.

Mrs. James Edsel is on the sick list.

Mrs. Octava King is still very poorly she is improving slowly.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Ward and children and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Giles and daughter Inez are planning a motor trip to the Cove Sunday.

Mrs. Ellen Stewart is able to be out again after her recent illness.

Mrs. Manuel Coffman was visiting Mrs. W. P. Ward Tuesday.

"Arguing with his wife."

ROSE HI HIGH

The Junior League Cabinet, made up of its own and the four class officers met on September 25th. Tentative plans were made for a Halloween program, library supervisions, ground and house cleaning and a Junior League program for chapel.

All strange sounds being omitted by the High School pupils for the past week or two are traceable to the Juniors and Seniors who have been reciting Charcers "Prologue," in midland English for Miss Haines.

Rose Hill and Ewing had a base ball game at Ewing, Wednesday. The score was 6 to 4 in favor of Rose Hill.

The Junior League is giving a chapel program Wednesday. Some new League songs will be sung and Miss Gladys Shackleford will give a talk on the purposes of the Junior League.

A Literary Society has been organized and the following elected for office: Charles Hawks-President, Grant Seale-Vice President, Jim Bales-Secretary, Claie Nell Scott-Chaplin and Don Clark-Critic.

We have some new High School students this year from other schools, among them are:

CONTINUED FOR ANOTHER 6 MONTHS
Over Entire L. & N. System

In April, this railroad announced that it would conduct a six months' experimental period of drastic passenger fare reductions, lowering its rates to 2¢ per mile in coaches and 2¢ per mile each way for round trip tickets for transportation in parlor and sleeping cars, and 3¢ a mile for transportation in Pullmans where one-way tickets are bought. (When parlor or sleeping cars are used cost of space is extra). Announcement was made that the continuation of these experimental fares would be dependent upon their reception by the traveling public and the management is now glad to say that due to the encouraging response given to these fares the experiment will be continued for another six months beginning with October 1st and ending with March 31st.

These fares apply between all points on the L. & N. Railroad, and afford the most satisfactory and economical method of transportation providing similar comforts and conveniences.

Dogwood Trees Planted in Va.

Richmond — More than 45,000 dogwood trees were planted in Virginia this spring as the result of the drive of the Garden Club of Virginia to beautify the state. The figures were just announced by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce which is preparing to aid Mrs. Allan Perkins, of the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, chairman of the Dogwood Planting Committee of the State Garden Club, in a campaign this fall to bring the total to 1,000,000 for the year.

Clubs and associations of women have banded together and divided the job of beautifying Virginia through the planting of the state flowers, dogwood. One statewide organization has agreed to see if it cannot get dogwood trees planted in all public grounds of the cities of Virginia, such as libraries, schools and court and other public buildings. Another has accepted the job of cooperating with the Virginia State Highway Commission on the beautification of the highways another the parks and an organization of 1,600 farm women scattered throughout Virginia and headed by Mrs. Nelson Beck, of Charlottesville is taking the campaign to the farms.

Mrs. Perkins has just named her committee, which includes Mrs. Lawrence Davis, president of the Garden Club of Virginia, at Roanoke: Mrs. Joen G. Hayes, vice-chairman of the committee, of Richmond and Mrs. Nelson Beck, another vice-chairman of Charlottesville. Advisory council members just named by Mrs. Perkins include the Mesdames William R. Massie, of Greenwood, H. McK. Smith of Staunton, Joseph G. Walker, Woodberry Forest, Henry H. Little, of Norfolk and Janet Stuart Durham, president of the Virginia Council for the Protection of Roadside Beauty, at Richmond.

"But what about the crack in the wall?"

"Shut up, Joe. That's the breakfast nook."

"Have you ever tasted defeat?" whined the beggar.

"Yes", snapped the prosperous one, and I found it so bitter I refused to swallow it.

Jimmy, on being taken to see his brand new baby brother, gazed long at him and then said: "My, but you're a lucky kid. You won't have to wash your own ears for years and years."

Mr. A—Your daughter seems to have a great many suitors.

Mr. B—At least four or five.

Mr. A—Which one does she favor?

Mr. B—I don's know. She seems to be observing a strict neutrality.

"Our romance started in the rumble seat."

"I see—thrown together."

Betty Ann Graham

Betty Ann Graham, 14 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Graham, died Saturday morning, September 30th at Lee General Hospital, of double pheumonia.

Betty Ann first took sick about two weeks ago from a burnt place on her leg which set up blood poisoning, then double pheumonia followed.

Funeral was conducted, Sunday October 1, at 2:00 p. m. at the M. E. Church, South. The Funeral was conducted by Rev. W. J. Shelbourne assisted by Revs. W. B. Moore, D. W. White, and W. F. Watkins.

Burial followed in the Cecil Cemetery.

Nobody Starves

President Roosevelt says "Nobody starves in America." When will a president rise to new heights of statesmanship and declare that nobody's mind will be allowed to starve? American children by the thousand will find school doors closed this winter, and other thousands of American citizens, laying waste their powers in uselessness and mental stagnation, will be sunk in futility and despair. The appeal for books, for study, for guidance in intellectual interests is the cry for that something more than bread by which man lives. In the midst of possible plenty, society provides it in a too niggardly fashion.

Yet there are agencies and facilities equipped to serve educational needs, though very often they are remote and unknown to the interested person. Books and courses of all kinds can be dispatched to any point in Virginia. Particularly adapted to many purposes, as their growing popularity proves, are directed reading courses prepared by experts in a variety of fields. They are charts to educational progress in spite of handicaps.

Educational services designed for adults are described in materials furnished free upon request addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Mrs. C. H. Browning Honored

Ewing—Mrs. C. H. Browning was the recipient of a most delightful courtesy recently, by the Ewing W. M. S. The attractive home of Mrs. H. C. T. Dean was used for the occasion. A "Guest Book" was presided over by Mrs. H. T. Ritchie who was in charge of the entertainment for the afternoon. Two appropriate poems, written by Mrs. W. C. Fugate especially for the occasion, were given, one "Just Cry" as a musical reading, by Mrs. C. S. Thompson, and the other read by Mrs. Ritchie. Mrs. W. E. Blessing sang a very interesting solo. Mrs. T. B. Fugate was winner in a "shower" contest, and was awarded a prize. A shower including a complete and varied number of articals, was presented as the "Family Wash," presided over by Mrs. R. N. Russell, as a negro mammy.

A color scheme of pink and blue was most effectively in the refreshments favors. Pink and blue brick ice cream, with cake in the same colors, and also the mints were served by the ladies of the W. M. S. The guest list included 65 ladies of the community.

Sunday School Class Entertained

Hubbard Springs—Mrs Flora Noe entertained her Sunday School Class Monday evening from 7 until 10 o'clock. The members present were Madames, Medea Moles, Nora Bays, Ercelle Grable, and Beatrice Hall, Misses Monette Spangler, Billie Forrester, Amy Grubbs, Nola Collins, Belle Burgone, Tina and Roxie Carroll, Messrs. Roy C. Forrester, Jack C. Wygal, Eudil Grable, Eugene Hall, Earl Engle and Ellis Wilder. Outside guests were Misses Alpha Sergent, Katherine Spencer, Margaret Greever and Grover Johnson of Jonesville, Mrs. Laura Wilder, Rhea Wilder, Adolph Moles, Earl and Glen Spangler of Hubbard Springs.

Bible jig saw puzzles and other contests were enjoyed by all. A number of comic readings by Misses Spencer and Greever and music by the Moles String band added much to entertainment of the party.

The hostess assisted by Miss Margaret Greever, served punch with cake and homemade candy.

BOOKS OF TOWN

Somewhere in this book Mr. Walpole remarks that Thomas Hardy often has his people talk in stilted dialogue, that he knows none but the Wessex peasant world, and yet there is the force of life in his books. This source of life is what is mainly lacking in "Vanessa", Mr. Walpole's latest novel and the culmination of his four-part Herries saga, a novelized social history of England from Georgia day to 1932. There is in the book plenty of material, plenty of story, and yet something is missing, something without which the book could have no real authenticity. It is not created, one might say, meaning that all this material which Mr. Walpole has at his disposal has not been fused in an individual imagination into a solid whole. It hangs loosely together and seems made to order. It lacks the stamp of authentic personality. As Mr. Walpole remarks in the course of the book about the work of some of his contemporary novelists, this book might have been written by any number of people provided they had Mr. Walpole's literary equipment. It is not inevitably his. The first part of "Vanessa" is Dickensian in flavor and method, while the latter part has all the technical adroitness of a slick-paper magazine story. This might be called part of his art in depicting the changes in literature but that is going a bit far. The use of historical detail otherwise is often forced, as in the continual keeping up to date in the literature of the various periods the novel covers. There is a sameness, however, in the flavor of the book as a whole which prevented my feeling any other than a superficial change in the successive periods covered. The author says this is twentieth century and gives ample evidence to support his statement, but there is no feeling of change, only a knowledge of it.

Still "Vanessa" is pleasant enough reading and though it is a complete novel in itself, probably those who have kept up with the three preceding volumes of the Herries saga will be the most interested in it. This is the story of Vanessa Herries, the daughter of Adam who was the son of Judith Paris who was in turn the daughter of old Rogue Herries. Vanessa married Sir Ellis Herries when she should have married Benjie Herries. But Benjie was an irresponsible, gipsy-like sort of chap who could not be sure he way worthy of Vanessa and kept having her think over her wanting to marry him till at last they drifted apart, and he became involved with some girl or other and had to marry her. Vanessa then married Ellis because she pitied him. Her marriage naturally ended on the rocks as Benjie's did also, and she and Benjie lived together openly for a number of years in great happiness. They had an illigitimate child who was the scandal of the family. But then Ellis, who had been slightly insane before, became desperately ill and Vanessa responded to his pleas to have her near him. But instead of dying Ellis waxed strong again while his mind became weaker, and there was Vanessa, bound, she felt, in duty to her helpless husband. She finally died and her spirit remained with Benjie, who had never before believed in life after death, for the two hundred pages remaining before he dies too.

Books I like or dislike strongly I find it very easy to discuss, but books which I think neither very good nor very bad I find it difficult to say anything at all about. I find myself in this position when it comes to discussing the story or the characters of Vanessa. There is nothing remarkable about the book in any way, even in its being unremarkable. The characters are recognizable as individuals but we take the author's word for their existence rather than live with them through all they do. The writing is unobtrusive, but hardly such as to catch up the reader's interest and hold it till the end of the book. The story is interesting enough in itself, and yet it seems obviously manipulated by the author; there is none of the inevitability of development in which one event grows naturally out of the preceding.

"Vanessa" is a competently written novel, however, and if you have been keeping up with the Herries you will probably want to read it. It is for you the Herrics books were made, as were your favorite brand of cigarettes.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

The natives genius of an American had carried him to big success in business without much aid of education. He was asked to distribute the prizes at a school and make the usual speech of good counsel.

"Now, boys," he said, "always remember that education is a great thing. There's nothing like education. Through education we learn that twice two make four, that twice six make twelve, that seven sevens make . . . and then there's geography."

D about Cigarettes

Of all the ways in which tobacco is used the cigarette is the mildest form

YOU know, ever since the Indians found out the pleasure of smoking tobacco, there have been many ways of enjoying it.

But of all the ways in which tobacco is used, the cigarette is the mildest form.

Another thing—cigarettes are about the most convenient smoke. All you have to do is strike a match.

Everything that money can buy and everything that science knows about is used to make Chesterfields.

The right home-grown tobaccos—seasoned with just enough aromatic Turkish—are blended and cross-blended the Chesterfield way.

Then the cigarettes are made right—firm, well-filled. Chesterfield uses the right kind of pure cigarette paper.

There are other good cigarettes, of course, but Chesterfield is the cigarette that's milder, the cigarette that tastes better. Chesterfields satisfy—we ask you to try them.

The Book Sampler

John Hyde Preston, author o. a recent popularized history of our Revolution, has turned out the most amazing and amnsing bit of rot that could be expected. It is called "Portraite of a Women" but "motion picture" would be better because of the restlessness of its subject. This woman, Peter, inhabitant of a super sophisticated colony on the Connecticut coast, allows people to love her in the hopes that she may find one she can love. That's all very well, but the one she finally can and does love is much more interested in a career in the diplomatic service than blond Peter. There is page after page of clever nonsense, smart conversation, and something new in the way of a speakesy.

"Entertaining the Islanders" is a sugar coated example of the writers' urge to dwell on the muddled morals of the day, as though people since time immemorial havn't found morals a debatable question. Anyway, Struthers Burt takes a confused couple by devious routes to an exotic island in the West Indies. Here, between passionately emotional scenes, they plan a saner scheme of living. Light and entertaining, but it doesn't prove anything.

"Mandoa, Mandoa!" as the author says is a "comedy of irrelevance". Just imagin a small principality in Africa, Christianized at one time and than lost sight of until discovered by Prince's Tours, Ltd. Just imagine the type of sensation - seeking tourist who would fly there by plane, or the smart person who would go just because it was the rage. Add to the colorful setting a sort of "South Wind" charm in writing, and a love story thrown in to boot, and you may gain some idea of why Winifred Holtby's novel is going to prove one of the much-discussed books of this season.

These and other novels may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

By Virgil Q Wacks

Al Lee County hails the new 1933 baseball champion managers and extends their most hearty congratulations to the Connie Mack of the Lonesome Pine league Mr. R. P. Stewart who Sunday afternoon won his second mountain empire championship from the Champion club of the Cumberland Valley league in Kentucky, the Corbin screemers, and to Mr. Earl Hyatt the Bill Terry of the Powell Valley league who entered the finals against Smyth's Dairy with his Jonesville nine Sunday already with one defeat on his shoulders and captured a doubleheader to cinch the championship of class B from the Harlan coalfield champions which gave the Lee Countians the flag of both States.

Dock Tritt and Lefty Scott were the heroes of the day at Corbin Sunday as the ever slugging Lee Smokies battled their way to the championship of the two States, Tritt clouted the longest blow of the entire season over right centerfield wall at Corbin with Soapy Wacks on first base, for a homer which untied the score and gave the Smokies the victory, while the pleasant boy, Hobart Scott permitted the Corbin crew only three safe hits, holding them in the palm of his hand at all times mastering the situation in the championship battle as Carl Hubble did so well in the major world series.

Another southpaw of whom Lefty Scott imitates very much with his left hand performances is the Husky lad, Jim Mooney, former Star of the New York giants last season, and who tossed them for the St. Louis Cardinals this year. Jim pitched the first game at Jonesville Sunday taking it very easily permitting the Dairymen only three weak singles and one run, striking out ten men in 7 innings, Mooney considered this game merely a warm up letting the visitors hit the ball until it began to look like a rally then would breeze three across and that would be the end of the story.

Getting back to football, Evarts high will be the guests of Coach Kildays eleven here Saturday, Evarts has quite a smooth working eleven and will be anything but easy, so to attain a first victory plenty strong battling will be necessary by the local lads in order to cop a victory and give the enthusiastic grid fans something to really talk about it takes victories to create chatter, ask the Lee Smokies. St. Charles high will play at Big Stone Gap, Saturday.

Visitor—You take life pretty easily here, don't you?

Kentucky Mountaineer—Ya'as, about one fair shot usually does the business.

The Nark—That ain't no drive, my dear—that's a put.

"I found a four-leaf clover on my lawn today."

"I suppose you think that's lucky?"

"I do, I'm lucky to find anything in that lawn except dandelions and weeds."

Improves School Building

Rose Hill—B. C. Fugate, local supervisor of Rose Hill High, has been making some needed repairs and improvements on the building and campus. The steps at the front which fell some time ago, almost causing fatalities, were replaced Friday by a better and more substantial concrete structure. The windows are being repaired and panes replaced.

On Monday, Mr. Fugate with helpers moved the fountain which had been installed in the center of the town by the W. C. T. U. to the school campus. Drinking fatalities at the school have been very unsatisfactory to the installation of this fountain represents a valuable service to the school.

Storage of Sweet Potatoes

Proper curing and storage of sweet potatoes is as important as growing the crop. The prospects of higher prices this year makes it exceedingly important that potatoes be stored carefully.

Digging the potatoes when the soil is wet increases the amount of rots. Therefore, potatoes should be dug when the soil is dry.

After the potatoes are dug, place them in storage loose or in slatted crates that will hold three-fourths to one bushel and keep the temperature 80 to 90 degrees for three weeks. Keep the place well ventilated to carry off the moisture. After the potatoes are cured the temperature should be kept at 55 degrees. If it varies some it will not make much difference, but a temperature below 40 degrees will cause the potatoes to rot.

A stove can be used to maintain the proper temperature when the potatoes are first dug. When the surplus moisture has evaporated the potatoes should be kept dry.

If potatoes are stored in a cellar or a basement they should be far enough from the wall and high enough above the floor to permit free circulation of air.

The Mt. Carmel Epworth League has entered a Blue and Red contest with Jessuteen Wolfe leader of the Red side and Bartie Susong leader of the Blue. The number of those present Wednesday night, October 4, was 52 for the Blue and 35 for the Red. Everyone is invited to attend.

Production of Chevrolets Trebled

Production of Chevrolet cars and trucks in September practically trebled that of last September, the company in the month just ended having turned out 59,357 new units as against 20,995 in the comparable month of 1932, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager announced today.

For the first nine months of this year Chevrolet manufactured 571,781 units, or 45 per cent more than in the full twelve months of last year, Mr. Knudsen said. In fact, last year's total production was exceeded this year by the cars and trucks built during the six months ended September 30, Mr. Knudsen stated.

Output in September of this year was the largest for that month since 1929, and was exceeded by only a few Septembers in the 21 years the company has been in business, Mr. Knudsen announced.

He stated that more than 90 per cent of the September total was shipped to dealers located in the United States.

Assembly operations at the company's eight domestic plants have continued into October at a rate which will insure the current month's production exceeding last October by a higher margin than has been scored in any month so far this year, the Chevrolet President said.

LEE SMOKIES WIN MOUNTAIN SERIES

The Lee Smokies defeated Corbin at Corbin, Ky., Sunday by the score of 6 to 2. Lefty Scott on the mound for the Smokies only allowed 2 runs and three hits. The Smokies collected six runs and nine hits off Rhodes and Williams Corbin hurlers.

The leading hitters for the Smokies were Tritt, Scott and Herndon. For Corbin only three hits were collected one by Wilson, Haynes and Hennegar.

Bear Track Tritt hit a home run in the fifth inning with one man on base. It cleared centerfield fence by about 15 feet.

2,450 Enrolled at University of Kentucky

Final enrollment for the fall term of the 1933'34 school year at the University of Kentucky reached a total of 2,450 according to reports from the Registar's office Monday, September 25, the last day a student was permitted to matriculate for classes for the current semester. Every one of the 120 counties except nine was represented and in addition students were re-ministered from 34 other states, Braxil, Canada, the Canal Zone, China and Cuba.

The University of Kentucky opened for the first term Monday, September 11, with that day and the next devoted to freshman registration, classification tests and physical examinations for the new students. Upper - classman matriculated Tuesday and Wednesday, September 12 and 13 and classes opened Thursday morning, September 14. Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University, greeted new students at a general convocation Thursday morning.

Enrolled from Lee county is James Pierce Richmond, Ewing.

"That's one for the book," grinned Jones.

"What is?" asked Smith.

"This dollar bill Brown just paid me back," he replied.

"Jones' wife thinks the world of her husband."

"Does she?"

"Yes; she even believes the parrot taught him to swear."

"Are you glad your mother is going to get you a new father?" the son of the grass-widow was asked.

"Naw," he grumbled. "I'd rather she'd get me a new bike."

"I'm trying to work my baby's bank for a loan."

"I suppose you can put it over on the kid, hey?"

"Dunno, my wife is chairman of the board."

A B C's of Farm Fire Prevention

Fift-seven per cent of farm fires are traced to causes listed below and 43 per cent from unknown causes not mentioned.

If every policy holder will check over and heed these suggestions frequently, we feel a reduction will be noted in your assessments.

Examine Chimneys and Flues for defects at least twice a year and clean chimneys once a year.

Install spark arrestors on all chimneys and flues, where dwelling has shingle or paper roof.

Do not carry loose matches in pockets.

Do not smoke or allow smoking in and around barns or where smoking may prove dangerous.

We urge our members and those employed not to carry matches and smoke while threshing.

We urge the care in storing farm products which may cause spontaneous heating and combustion. Sprinkle a little salt on each layer of hay in mow if stored when not thoroughly dry.

We urge the care in using lamps, and lanterns in dwelling and barns.

Keep metal mats under stoves, screens for fire places and pipes to furnaces in repair.

We urge care in using Tractors or Gas Engines around barns.

We urge a constant check up of electric wiring in barns, outbuildings and dwellings, and a switch disconnecting the current from barn when not in use.

We urge every care in the use of Incubators and Brooders.

We urge the keeping of cellars closets and garrets free from rubbish.

We urge keeping matches away from children, when this is allowed, in many cases it means the loss of life and property.

We urge the use flashlights, in dark cellars, closets and garret.

Where lightning rods are used, we urge the importance of keeping them in good repair, a lightning rod out of repair is worse than none.

Be sure to extinguish Match, Cigar, or Cigarette before throwing away.

In case of fire, have family so organized that every member will know what to do.

We recommend keeping a fire extinguisher at dwelling and barn.

PENNINGTON HIGH TIES GATE CITY

Pennington High tied Gate City here Saturday by the score of 6 to 6.

It was a hard fought game all the way through, each gaining about the same amount of yardage. Gate City made their score in the second quarter by a pass, but failed to make the extra point, the half ending 6 to 0.

Pennington kicked off to Gate City and was held for downs. Pennington takes the ball and in the first series of plays make their only score, tying Gate City. Place kick failed for extra point by about two inches, hitting the cross bar and bouncing back, leaving the score 6 6.

In the last quarter both teams opened up on passes, but could not get them to work. Both lines fought hard and most of the yardage was made around the ends.

Pennington High plays Evarts, Ky., here Saturday at the High School ground, and promises to make it plenty tough for the local boys, but Coach Kilday is giving the boys the works this week and doesn't seem worried at all about the out come.

ROSE HILL HIGH

By Lorne Davis

With six week's examinations in the air, all of Rose Hill High School has been going about with preoccupied expression and books in both hands. Math classes are convinced that two and two are five, and Latin classes are laboriously reciting, "voco, vocas, vocat." However, the majority of the results, so far, has been optimistic, so we expect a large Honor Roll next week.

The Junior League, aided by the High School faculty, is going to have a very unique and entertaining Hallow'een Carnival. A big free program followed by side shows and amusements is planned. By special arrangement, we shall try to present Nephisto, the wonder horse. This will be only one of the many unusual acts.

Our literary society, organized under the auspices of the Junior League, gave a very good program Friday. "Current events" disclosed many interesting facts about pupils and faculty facts which these individuals thought no one except a few would know.

Great interest is taken in Mr. Gibson's Motorcycle, an admiring audience of grade pupils gives him a hearty reception and farewell every morning and afternoon.

A musical program was presented in chapel Wednesday. Popular songs by the High School Chorus, violin selections by Miss Haines, "Little Boy of Mine", by a quartet composed of Hassie and Minnie Osborne, Patt Giles, Charles Hews and a solo by Charles Smith, will make up the program. Thelma Turner acts as piano accompanist. Chapel program for the next four weeks will be in charge of a Junior League Committee composed of Patton Giles, Hugh Chance and Lola Saylor.

A basketball game was played between the girls of Rose Hill and Ewing High Schools. Keen competition exists between the two schools.

Honor Roll for the second, third and fourth grades consists of the following pupils:

Second:
Armour Dean
Thelma Cox
Cyntha Dash
Edith Cox
Wilma Ingle
Earl Long
Beulah Pratt
Kile Rosenbaum

Third:
Kathleen Cheek

Registered Nurses Meet at Bristol

The Southwest Virginia Registered Nurses Association, District Number 1, will hold their annual meeting and Banquet at Hotel Bristol, Bristol, Tenn-Va., October 21.

The meeting will be held in the Egyptian Room at 3 p. m. and the Banquet will be at 6 p. m. in the Crystal Ball Room. Interesting programs for both meeting and banquet have been arranged.

All Nurses holding membership in the State Association and residing in district number 1, are earnestly invited to attend the meeting and banquet.

Construction May Begin Next Month

Preliminary work on the Norris Dam project has progressed so rapidly that actual construction may begin next month instead of in January, as first contemplated, Chairman Arthur E. Morgan of the Tennessee Valley Authority, said today. It is expected that about 600 people will be at work on the dam by Christmas.

Bids for the construction of a five-mile heavy duty highway to connect the town of Coal Creek with the dam site will be asked on October 16. Plans and specifications for this work will be available at that time. It is expected that contracts will be let not later than October 27, because the work must be completed by February 1st. The cost of this highway is roughly estimated at $200,000. The Authority also will cooperate with the Tennessee State Highway Department in building a lighter connecting road to Knoxville Via Hall's Cross Roads, thereby giving a choice of good roads to the dam site.

The United States Civil Service Commission is now preparing an examination limited to Valley residents for skilled and unskilled workmen to form the nucleus of the Norris Dam construction force. The total number of workmen to be employed at the dam depends on whether the working week will be 24, 30 or 36 hours, and whether the men will work in two or three shifts.

JONESVILLE WIN TWO GAMES

With Big Jim Mooney, St. Louis Cardinal star, and Carl Doyle, Knoxville Smoky rookie on the mound, Jonesville, champions of the News-Sentinel Powell Valley League, defeated Smith's Dairy, champions of the N-S Harlan Coalfield League, in a doubleheader Sunday. This gave Jonesville the series. Smith's Dairy won the first game the week before.

Archery, Smith's pitcher, engaged Mooney in a duel in the first game as both pitchers allowed but three hits each. Base stealing, two hits and an error enabled Jonesville to win 3 to 1. Doyle allowed only six hits in the nightcap as Jonesville won 16 to 8. Lovette started for Smith's but went to the showers in the third. Three other pitchers were unable to halt Jonesville.

"Thank Goodness, Jim,

COLD WEATHER NEVER DELAYS US!"

Ann: "Betty would be late on our first air trip, but as usual when it gets cold, it's to be expected." Jim: "You mean that temperature actually has an effect on her promptness?" Ann: "Yes, she is very prompt ordinarily—it's a case of car trouble in cold weather. Bill doesn't see that the difficulty is in his choice of gas and oil." Jim: "Well, Ann, you couldn't expect everybody to buy Conoco, could you?" Ann: "If everyone knew how Conoco oil and gasoline protect both you and your motor against the difficulties of cold weather driving they would!" Jim: "Guess I'd better get Bill on the phone and see what the delay is!" Ann: "Please do!"

YOU DID GET HERE, I'M SO GLAD!
I KNOW JIM BUT BILL JUST GOT THE CAR STARTED AFTER HALF HOUR TRYING CAR TROUBLE? BETTER TELL BILL TO BUY CONOCO GAS NEXT TIME

Betty: "We had the most awful time, Ann! We were ready to leave in plenty of time, but when Bill tried to get the motor started, it wouldn't budge. After running down the battery he rolled the car out of the garage and got some one to push it till it started—and just in time. The car just doesn't seem to work right." Ann: "It isn't the car, Betty, it's the oil and gas Bill buys. Why don't you tell him to get Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil and Conoco Bronze Gasoline—they are more economical and have cold weather performance that gives us instant starting and 'Hidden Quart' protection." Betty: "I'm sold!—and Bill will be too just as soon as I get to him!"

CONOCO

at the sign of the Red Triangle

Full motor protection, especially in cold motor starting, can be found only in Conoco Germ Processed (Pan-American Base) Motor Oil because the protective oilfilm, called "The Hidden Quart" stays up in your motor and never drains away.

Instant Starting and Lightning Pick-up can best be obtained with Conoco Bronze Gasoline, and without sacrifice of Long Mileage, Greater Power and Anti-Knock advantages. For cold weather starting in contact be sanctioned.

Meet With Pollard October 16, at Wytheville

Richmond—The Boards of supervisors of twenty-two counties and the mayors and councils of fifty-five towns in Southwest Virginia have been requested to meet with Governor John Garland Pollard at the George Wyth Hotel, Wythville on October 16 to plan Southwest Virginia's participation in the public works program of the nation, which is designed relieve unemployment in every locality during the present winter and distribute federal money in the hands of business. Governor Pollard has named the chairman of the Board of supervisors of each of these counties as chairman of a committee to represent the county at this meeting and instructed the chairman to compose his committee of all other members of the supervisors and three citizens not connected with the government of the county. The fifty-five mayors have been instructed to name all of their respective councilmen and also to appoint three citizens.

Governor Pollard's party at Wythville will include Jay Winston Johns, of Charlottesville, Ben F. Moomaw, of Roanoke and Robert B. Preston, of portsmouth, who makes up the Federal Works Board for Virginia, Colonel James A. Anderson, engineer for the Board, M. L. Wallerstein, chairman of the Virginia State Planning, and Colonel LeRoy Hodges, managing director of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

With $3,300,000,000 of Federal funds appropriated for public works projects in America, engineers of the Virginia public works Board believed that Virginia should obtain in loans and free grants more than $35,000,000 as her share Many Virginia cities and counties have requested loans, but Governor Pollard is anxious to relieve unemployment evenly all over Virginia and at the meeting in Wytheville is expected to appeal to those present to cooperate with President Roosevelt's National Recovery program by promoting in their communities programs of public improvements which will aid in national recovery by distributing work in the community and bring money to the merchants and business men in the way of expenditures for materials and spending by those who are furnished jobs and by those who have been unable to buy previously.

Colonel Anderson outlined many projects which may appeal to the cities counties of the Old Dominion. He pointed to the possibility of using Federal money at the low interest rates and easy terms for the construction of schools, courthouses, jails and other public buildings, for the building of public wharves and toll bridges, the construction or enlargment of sewers and waterworks, for the creation of hydro electric power developments for towns and cities. the rebuilding of streets and roads, the construction of sewer disposal plants, and the construction of armories and markets.

Virginia communities should take stock of their needs for the next five or ten year period and try and originate this work now, so that the money can be turned loose in their communities and aid in the recovery of prosperity and the elimination of the relief efforts now being put forth by the state and nation. He said.

"If your community will have to spend money shortly, if you are in need of improvements which must be made eventually, what better terms can you expect than a 30 per cent gift of the total amount needed and a four per cent interest rate with a long time retirement plan on the principal? When will it be more desirable to turn this money loose in your commnnity?"

The counties asked to have committees at Wytheville are: Bland, Buchanan, Carrol, Craig. Dickenson, Floyd, Franklin, Giles, Grayson, Henry, Lee, Montgomery, Patriak Pulaski, Roanoke, Russell, Scott, Smyth, Tazewell Washington, Wise and Wythe.

The towns to be represented at Wytheville include: Grundy, Hillsville, Galax, Clintwood, Floyd, Rocky Mount, Boone Mill, Pearisburg, Narrows, Glen Lyn, Galax, Fries, Troutdale, Martinsville, Jonesville, Pennington Gap, St. Charles, Blacksburg, Christiansburg, Cambria, Radford, Elliston, Stuart, Newbern, Dublin, Pulaski, Salem, Vinton, Honaker, Lebanon, Gate City, Dungannon, Marion, Saltville, Chilhowie, Tazewell, North, Tazewell, Bluefield, Pocahontas, Cedar Bluff, Richlands, Bristol, Abingdon, Damascus, Glade Spring, Mendota, Saltville, Big Stone Gap, Appalachia, St. Paul, Coeburn, Wise, Norton, Wytheville and Rural Retreat.

The little city girl stood and watched the farmer milk the only cow he had.

The next morning the farmer was much excited, as the cow had been stolen during the night.

Farmer: "Drat the thief that stole that cow. He's miles away from here by now."

Little girl: I would'nt worry about it Mister, they can't go far away with it, cause you drained her crankcase last night."

T. V. A. CALLED FOR BIDS

The Tennessee Valley today called for bids on 675 miles of copper conductor for the tie transmission line to connect the Muscle Shoals power plant with Norris Dam near Knoxville, In an effort to spread employment, the Board of Directors announced that local labor will be utilized in the clearing of the right of way wherever feasible. Contracts will be made with the owners of the land across property the line is to extend. The owners will be permitted to retain the timber and will be required to pile and burn the brush. Special contracts, however, may be let wherever the right of way passes over large tracts.

According to David E. Lilienthal, director in charge of the Tennessee Valley Authority power program, this is the first of two transmission lines to be erected. While this line will furnish the current necessary for the construction of the Norris Dam, it is intended primarily as a tie line to connect the Wilson Dam power plant with the generators later to be installed at the Norris Dam. Later another line will be constructed along a different route so as to afford a wider distribution of power as well as to provide against interruption of service due to storms or accidents. The initial tie line will be 236 miles in length, or about eight miles longer than the air line distance between Wilson and Norris dams. An aerial survey of the right of way was recently completed.

Crossing the Tennessee River about 1200 feet below the site of proposed Dam No. 3 near Muscle Shoals, the line will pass near the site of the proposed White Creek Dam and come within 23 miles of Chattanooga and 18 miles of Knoxville. The Board of Directors also decided to have the foundations for the towers where the line crosses the Tennessee River near Muscle Shoals installed by special contracts, with the Authority furnishing the necessary cement and foundation bolts. Contracts for the steel towers will provide for delivery and erection both in the case of river crossings and terminals and substations.

Not only will the construction of the tie line afford considerable employment at this time, Mr. Lilienthal pointed out, but will result in a saving for material cost which are expected to be much higher later on. In addition, the use of Muscle Shoals power in the construction of Norris Dam will pay the carrying charges on the line for almost two years.

St. Charles

By Edna Hale

St. Charles Hi was defeated in a football game at Norton Saturday afternoon by score of 18 to 6.

Coach Richmond's Midgets did exceptionally good work throughout the entire game. The only score of the game was made by Gene Livingston. Cross received a pass and ran it for a touchdown, but it was called back on account of off sides.

The touchdown was made in the last minute of play when Captain Pannel threw a pass from the 20 yard line to Gene Livingston, right end.

"Shuh" Pugh was a caller in St. Charles Friday afternoon.

Webb Spurrier and Marshall Giles of Jonesville were social visitors in St. Charles Friday night.

Miss Ada Gaylor entertained quite a number of St. Charles High School students Friday night at her home.

Bradley Barker and J. C. Yeary were callers at Pennington Thursday night.

Mine activities in the St. Charles field are moving smoothly with all mines operating at normal time.

Cale Gibson and Elmer Walton of Jonesville are regular visitors in St. Charles.

"Peanut" Pannel entertained a number of the "younger set" at his home Wednesday night.

Miss Jean Hill a Senior at St. Charles Hi was visiting in Bristol Saturday.

Miss Edna Hale's grandmother, Mrs. Nancy Hale and her aunt, Mrs. Dan Watkins from Tuttle, Ky., have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Hale.

Billy Wagner from Knoxville, Tenn., was visiting in St. Charles Sunday morning.

The St. Charles Midgets will play Pennington Friday October 20. We think it will be a "one sided" game because the Midgets say they will beat Pennington.

Claude Sharp from Fort Myer, is now visiting in St. Charles.

"So you're out of work and want help? What's your trade?"

"I'm a painter, mister."

"Painter, eh? Well, now, my car needs painting. What would you charge to do that job?"

"I'd have to get two dollars an hour."

"Two dollars an hour? Why I would'nt pay Michelangelo two dollars an hour in times like these!"

"Well, mister, I don't know this here Michelangelo; but if he paints cars at less than two dollars an hour he don't belong to the union."

Reform of Disappear

Four distric homes house the papers of 28 Virginia counties with better care for the unfortunate and less expense for the taxpayers. Some counties save the overhead expense of jails by using those of nearby counties. Health units and school administrations often serve a district of two or more counties. A most far-reaching change is the surrender of road-building by all but four counties to the control of a unified state system.

Governmental experts agree that local self-government as it was known in the past is disappearing. State supervision of local functions, courts and police and finances, for instance, indicate the trend of one possible development. The alternative of quick and thorough reform of county government can alone prevent the abolition of counties through economic pressure.

Out of these changes and clashing opinions grow the issues of the twenty-first statewide high school debates next spring on the subject of the executive form of county government. Pamphlets and articles collected to furnish adequate references for preparation are now available for loan on reqnest addressed to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

PELLAGRA YIELDS

Kenver, Ky.—Mrs. Tom Depew says: "I suffered from a terrible case of Pellagra. My mouth, hands and limbs were blistered all over. My neck was so sore that I could scarcely turn my head. Even my fingernails were affected and finally came off. This Pellagra finally affected my mind and at times I would feel very queer. My stomache was raw and it was almost impossible to keep anything on my stomache. Food just seemed to disagree with me regardless of what or when I ate it. I tried medicine after medicine and they all proved worthless. I took a number of shots for this ailment, but seemed to do me no good. I used eighteen bottles of Scalf's Indian River Tonic and I am a well woman today. I really believe that I would have been dead had I not learned of this medicine and used it. I gladly tell of my experience, hoping that by so doing I may be the means of some other sufferer finding the wonderful health which I today am enjoying. I could not say too much for Scalf's Indian River Tonic, as it has really restored my health." advertisement 41-1t

Relieved By Taking Cardui

"I was weak and run-down and suffered quite a bit with pains in my side," writes Mrs. Nick Barranco, of Beaumont, Texas. "I was nervous. I did not rest well at night, and my appetite was poor.

"My mother had used Cardui with beneficial result, so I decided to take it. I surely am glad I did, for it stopped the pain in my side and built up my general health. I took seven bottles in all."

Cardui is sold at all drug stores.

Books Of Town

Perhaps it was sheer perversity, but many times while I was reading Violet Clifton's "The Book of Talbot" I thought of Casanova. What if Casanova had been the product of twenty generations of English and Scottish blood, had been reared in the inhabitions of the Anglo-Saxons, and had been turned loose with a fortune at the age of eighteen? Would he have scoured the continent lifting petticoats, or would he rather not, like Tolbot Clifton, have ransacked the waste, the unknown, and the dark places of the earth, always looking for new dangers and remoter lands? That, of course, is speculation that may be beside the point, but it is certain that the Talbot Clifton who emerges from his wife's biography had much in common with the Venetian adventurer, however greatly their individual destinies differed: a superhuman vitality and endurance; an amaizing dexterity in handling men and events; an insatiable curiosity; and egoism of mystical depth. These qualities, perhaps abetted by an unhappy childhood, led Talbot Clifton to desert his patrimony in England at the age of twenty, and to enter into a life of wandering that carried him to most of the inaccessible parts of the world: Alaska before the Klondyke Rush; Africa, North, South, and Central; the Barren Lands of Northern Canada; Tibet; the interior of South America; northermost Siberia. Always he went alone-except when his wife accompanied him-and always he sought the situations that would test every particle of his volume of Shakespeare and his flue. What drove him on? Partly it was his passion for hunting, which wasalmost mystical. Partly it was curiosity, and a desire to make the fullest use of his powers of observation, his shrewd ability at Judging men. Most of all, in the words of his wife, it was the quality of wonder. "He was full of wonder; at man; at strange places; at beauty hidden, unknown, and remote, wonder goaded him on through the earth, regardless of his body. Of that quality-vision of the saint-word of the poet; and, by its power, is straitened the explorer that cannot take, from another, the tale of the earth's grandeur, but must, himself, go forth, marvelling at the unknown."

Talbot Clifton was a shy and uncommunication man perhaps that is a partial explanation of his life. He wrote no books; he had no need to do so. When he was at home between journeys he was a typical English gentleman, minding his estates, caring for his family, hunting, yaching, and indulging in the other sports of English gentlemen. But it was his destiny to marry a woman as remarkable as himself. Violet Beauclerk had a nature as headstrong, as courageous, and as adventurous as his own; their marriage was a mating of equal spirits. "The Book of Talbot" is the product of their commingling. It is much more than a biography of Talbot by his wife; it is the passionate testimony of her love for him and of her belief in the greatness of his deeds and the rightness of the things he stood for. The sincerity of her love and faith makes her style, which at first seems mannered and falsely poetic, seem at last the just medium for what she has to say. And time and time again it makes the reader regard Talbot Clifton as she undoubtly regarded him, and as perhaps he should be regarded: as a returned Viking, the hero of a medieval romance, a reincarnated Elizabethan adventurer. His deeds in the far corners of the globe seem unutterably remote from our time; only the passion for adventure, the courage and hardihood of the man, the love and faith of the woman seem real.

It is difficult to find the exact place in literature for this remarkable book. It is built up of diverse materials, Talbot's diary, narrative episodes, and poetic interludes, yet it has a fundamental unity. In its manner it is constantly reminicent of older forms in literature sagas, medieval romances, Elizabethan prose diction, yet it is as individual as a hurricane. It is a biography, inasmuch as it tells of the Tolbot Clifton, who actually lived It is a romance. in that its aim is to show the high adventure of human destiny. And it is above all a poem in praise of the individual virtues of our Anglo-Saxon virtues seem to be at a discount just now in our rapidly collectivizing and depersonalizing world; but it is not a bad thing to have them celebrated once more before they depart for good. "The Book of Talbot" does that, and it is entitled to a secure, if out of the way, place in modern literature.

The Book Sampler

H. G. Wells has outfitted himself in wizard's robes, and taken it upon himself to forecast history for the coming century and a half. We are heading for a World State, which he sees mistily, among other advanced ideas. Mr. Wells seems rather skeptical about present affairs, especially those in the United States; evidence may be had in his utterances - propounded in the future-anent Roosevelt II "who was a good man but not good enough," and a touching scene in 1958 wherein the faculties of Columbia and Harvard are still wrangling over "the general problem of recovery". The main contributions of Mr. Well's seance are a brilliant analysis of contemporary history and an opportunity to make some very telling gibes. His conclusions as to "The Shape of Things to Come" seem lacking, however, in that he has'nt predicted another H. G. Wells.

One present problem upon which future history depends is that of Nazi Germany. Even more far-reaching than most of us realize will be the effect of its policies upon international relations and world peace. Based on his three-year stay in that country, Calvin B. Hoover has written a study entitled "Germany Enters the Third Reich," in which the outstanding figure of the Nazi movement, Adolph Hitler, is given his due, not as a theatrical figure, but as the cleverest political manager of our times, and the claim is made that Hitler and all he stands for are in to stay. Since Mr. Hoover is out to recount facts cooly which have otherwise been presented with hysterical bias, this is one book that every thinking citizen owes it to himself to read.

For relief, try "Mrs. Egg and Other Barbarians", a collection of Thomas Beer's reprinted short stories. Whether they are sane bits of frivolity, or frivolous pieces of sanity is debatable-but they are guaranteed to be good for what ails you.

Fire Prevention in Schools

Heating Plants should never be placed where they will be under stair ways or near doors. If this is the case in schools already built, the walls and ceilings should be protected by metal.

Most school fires start from heating plants, and if the plants are located under stairways or near doors, fires caused by them will prevent pupils from escaping in safety.

Where paper chute from upper floors are used, the chutes and all doors should be lined with metal.

Windows which are exposed to or open on fire escapes should have metal frames and should be equipped with wired glass.

All doors should open outward.

Candles must never be used.

Clothes and rags must be kept away from radiators and stoves.

Ashes must not be kept in wooden containers.

Cracks in chimneys must be repaired at once, and joists must not be allowed to rest on chimney walls.

Teachers and older pupils should know how to use Fire Extinguishers, and to call the Fire Department.

Chimneys should be cleaned once a year, and fire extinguishers must be recharged and tagged once a year.

In schools where cooking is taught, the walls around stoves should be protected by metal, and Fire Extinguishers suitable for grease and oil fires should be handy.

No windows, stairs, halls or doors may be blocked.

Ashes, paper and rubbish must never be allowed to accumulate.

No doors should ever be locked during school hours

Suitable Fire Eqtinguishers should be installed throughout the building.

All electrical devices must be disconnected when not in actual use.

Panic Bolts (to open doors by merely pushing against them) should be on all exterior doors.

Moving picture booths should be fire proof.

Only fire proof decorations should be used.

Proper and sufficient exits must always be provided.

Weekly inspections should be made, in order to have all Fire Hazards removed. Fire Drills should be held weekly, and at least once each month, firemen should supervise these drills.

Pupils should be taught the A. B. C. of fire prevention.

"I thought you told me, sir, that you were a young man of regular habits?" cried out Mr. Quackenbush, as his new assistant reeled into the hall last night.

"So I am," responded the young man; "so I am. This is one of em."

S. B. Payne Address Red Cross

Washington — Chairman John Barton Payne of the American Red Cross, a native of Virginia, will address a conference of Red Cross workers in Richmond, october 18th. Another speaker as tentatively announced will be Representative Schuyler Otis Bland.

This is one of a series of three conferences to be held in the State in preparation for the annual roll call in November. William Carl Hunt, assistant manager of the Eastern area of the Red Cross, will make addresses at the Richmond meeting and also at Lexington, October 17th, and Bristol 20th. Others at Lexington and Bristol will include Richard W. Thrush, assistant director of First Aid and Life Saving Services, and Mrs. Alice Ingersoll Thornton, assistant to the director of the Junior Red Cross. They will discuss the development of Chapter services in relation to changing conditions.

A featured speaker with Judge Payne at Richmond will be Walter S. Gard, assistant director of the Junior Red Cross.

More Loans of Books By Mail

For the fourth consecutive year an increase in the volume of book loans by mail has been recorded in the lending library whose shelves are open upon application to any citizen in Virginia. More than 11,000 books for general reading and reference were sent to over 16,000 borrowers during the past twelve months. Both figures represent an increase of ten percent over those of the previous year. Since the increases occurred in spite of diminished financial resources, the showing is especially commendable in view of the sharp curtailment of many cultural activities so affected.

Though the primary purpose of this public library is to furnish reference materials supplementing the offerings of local collections, the bulk of its work is in serving 645 "regulars" who have submitted lists of ten to forty books they wish sent to them at intervals. Most of the demand is for new books, a few of which are added each week as they are issued by the publishers.

Lists of these "New Books to Lend" are supplied free to readers of The News upon request to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

GLADIATORS BEAT EVARTS 40-0

The Pennington High Gladiators finally won a game after two defeats and one tie. They beat Evarts here Saturday by the score of 40 to 0. Zion was the outstanding ball carrier for the Gladiators making 4 out of 6 touchdowns.

Kirk was the outstanding ball toter for Evarts.

The Gladiators made 345 yards to Evarts 96. 20 first downs to Evarts 4.

Ely brothers were outstanding in the line being in on every play and most of the time making the tackle.

Evarts attempted 6 passes and completed 4. Gladiators attempted 4 completed 2.

Gladiators drew one 15 yard penalty for talking. Evarts drew 2, 5 yard penalties for off sides. Coach Kilday used his second string against Evarts about three quarters of the game and they looked plenty good.

Fiancee: "Oh, indeed! And who are the six girls you've been engaged to before?"

T. V. A. To Spend Million and a Half

During the next two months the Tennessee Valley Authority will spend a million and a half dollars for materials for Norris Dam and the tie transmission line between that dam and Muscle Shoals. About three quarters of this amount will be spent in Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Pittsburgh, New York and other cities for essential machinery, etc., nat obtainable in the Tennessee Valley.

The Authority has placed an order with the National Cast Iron Pipe Company at Birminham, Alabama, for 8,800 feet of eight-inch cement - lined cast iron pipe for the water supply at Norris Dam. The pipe will be used for conveying water from a large spring to a reservoir from which it will be distributed.

The Southern Railway is constructing additional unloading tracks at Coal Creek where the bulk of the equipment will be unloaded. From here it will be transported to the dam site at Cove Creek, about five miles distant, over a heavy duty highway, the cost of which is estimated at $200,000.

"The building of a modern dam is largely done in distant factories," explains Chairman Arthur E. Morgan: "The Norris Dam may seem local, bnt the unemployment relief it provides is nation wide,

LEE SMOKIES DEFEAT JONESVILLE

The Lee Smokies defeated Jonesville at St. Charles Sunday by the score of 5 to 0. Jonesville had a big battery, Mooney and Carr. The Smokies collected ten hits off Mooney. While Jonesville only collected three off Lefty Scott.

Green, and Courtney was the only one's that could connect for a hit off Scott, while Rhea, Zion and Tritt led the hitting attack for the Smokies.

Jonesville won the Class "B" baseball title of the Powell Valley League and defeated Smith's Dairy.

The Smokies won the Class "A" baseball title of the Lonesome Pine League and defeated Corbin.

Chevrolet to Occupy First Place at Show

Detroit—For the eighth consecutive year Chevrolet will occupy number one place at the 1934 national automobile show at New York and Chicago following space drawings here this week under the supervision of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager of Chevrolet, had first choice of exhibit space at the Grand Central Palace, New York, and the Chicago Coliseum by reason of his company's wholesale volume for the twelve months ended June 30 having exceeded that of any other member company of the National Chamber, which includes every automobile company except one.

Back in 1927 Chevrolet first occupied the top honor position at the National shows and has consistently remained in that position, each year by a growing margin. In five of these years Chevrolet not only led all members of the National Chamber, but also out-built and out-sold the only non-member to take leadership in the industry.

The awards of exhibit space here were made according to the relative standing of member companies on the basis of the wholesale dollar value of cars shipped during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1932, and ended June 30, 1933.

Controlling Smuts of Small Grains

Smuts of wheat, oats and barley causes heavy losses to these crops each year. During the 1933 growing season they were worse than usual in many sections of Virginia and the adjacent states of Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, according to James Godkin, plant pathologist, extension division. Mr. Godkin says further on this subject:

"In view of the National wheat policy every grower should treat all seeds of these crops before planting this fall. In this way the small grain growers insures himself of the best quality crops possible. Use copper carbonate at the rate of two heaping teaspoonfuls to the bushel for wheat. For oats use formaldehyde dust at the rate of three heaping tablespoonfuls to the bushel of grain. Mix these dusts thoroughly for two minutes, and then the seed may be planted right away or stored. In the case of oats it is best to at least store over night before planting. Materials may be bought locally or in any of the cities of Virginia. For further information see your county agent or write to the Department of Plant Pathology, Virginia Institute, Blacksburg, Va."

BE YOUR OWN FIRE INSPECTOR

An article in Safeguarding America Against Fire suggests that each person be his own fire inspector. It is not a difficult job, and requires only a little time plus a little knowledge. A couple of hours spent in searching for fire hazards on one's property, and planning a program to eliminate them, may save thousands of dollars and something much more valuable still, human lives.

A good place to begin the inspection tour is in the furnace room. Thousands of disastrous fires result from defective or dirty heating equipment. Clean out the furnace before it is put to winter service. See that non-burable containers are provided for ashes. Have the various parts and connections inspected for possible faults. Protect any combustible material which must be near the furnace, with asbestos. Make certain that rubbish and paders and waste are not allowed to accumulate nearby.

The electric wiring is worth looking at next. It's safe if it has been installed by a licened electrician, and has not been allowed to deteriorate. Many householder's, however, haven't had it examined since the day it was put in many others have committed the very dangerous practice of making amateur extensions and additions. If you're at all uncertain about it, call in an expert. Whatever his charge is, it will be cheap in view of the protection for person and property you will receive in exchange.

Keep your eye out for oil or rain-soaked rags that have been dropped about in corners. Thousands of spontaneous combustion fires occur annually because of them. They should be kept only in closed metal cans.

Another ordinary household hazard is gasoline. It is often carelessly stored, in unsafe containers and close to flames. Its use as a household cleaner is simply an invitation to disaster with R. S. V. P. written in the corner.

Finally, turn you attention to the house itself. Has it properly installed fire-stops? Are fire extinguishers handy and in good working order? Is it really fire-resistive, and up to underwriters' standards?

Get going on that inspection tour!

BOOKS TO OWN

"No Castle in Spain" is a mediocre book by a writer who some time ago established his claim to a modicum of greatness. It was written with facility and can be read with a surprising amount of profit for the amount of mental effort required. This is because of McFee's deep, tranquil understanding of certain large aspects of life, which underlies the trivialities of this novel. The characters and situations are unreal and uninspiring for the simple reason that the author had no feeling for them. He has passed the unsophisticated period of the novelist's life, and therefore, barring a rejuvenation, he has passed the period when he can be expected to write a masterpiece.

McFee has followed a modern trend in selecting as his theme the rather medival story of a man's adventures in rescuing a beautiful lady here a New York girl from a giant, who in this case happens to be her South American husband. The tale has a certain degree of freshness so long as McFee clings to the formlessness which is characteristic of many modern novels of the least vicious sort. As the plot unfolds, however, it falls more and more into the well trodden paths that lead to Hollywood, so that any avid reader of thrillers can forecast the next move. In the end the ogre husband satisfies the moral requirements by dying just as the lady has become the property of her rescuer, and not only that but the woman who has been angling for the hero marries the nice but unsuitable boy who had been waiting in New York for the heroine.

That is the dark side of the picture. The bright side is abroad and leisurely mapping of two civilizations that are merging, those of North and South America a moving portrayal of the beautiful and forbidding Spanish Indian edifice which is crumbling on the southern continent, and a skilful combination of the elements which have gone to the making of each of the two races what it is now and those which will make them something else tomorrow. Only a master could have given us the walled city and immense frowning stone buildings of La Concepcion, Don Federico de Manningbury's castle, or have shown us his pinched cousing and his aging Virgin sisters in juxtaposition to Yonne, the New York girl of English ancestry who came to be Don Federico's wife, and shown us so we'l in them all the incalculable, melancholy frightening difference between the two civilizations.

"No Castle in Spain" is the story of Bathsheba, better known by the nickname of Yvonne, a New York heroines deoriginally from the Middle West. Despite a vague sentimental charm she exerts on the reader, Yvonne never achieves reality in his eye. In justice to the author, it might be said that Yvonne resembles a certain numerous type of beautiful blonde American girl which never succeeds in appearing completely alive no matter how much energy it has to expend. The trouble is that we are asked to believe that this one has an intellect, and since McFee has been able simply to name it and not to demonstrate it, we suspect it to have been tacked on to round out the requirements for a heroine.

More correctly, the novel is the story of the hero, whose name is skilfully concealed through more than four hundred pages while he tells the story himself. Briefly, Yvonne, being engaged to Ronny, a nice boy, suddenly reveals to our hero that she has "had an offer to go to South America". Later it develops that her offer was to become the wife of Don Federico de Manningbury, half-English lord of immense holdings and a family that has grown stagnant in the strict application of the Roman Catholic religion. Some readers may violate etiquette by preferring them to Yvonne, this one did. But to return to the story, the hero's duty is to extricate Yvonne from the ruins of South America, partly of her own making after she has escaped from her husband. Here again the reader is perplexed, for although the teller of the story is not supposed to be intellectual he actually proves to be immensely so, which is only natural, for in reality he is McFee himself.

MUSCLE SHOALS NOW POWER "YARDSTICK"

Under Tennessee Valley Authority Big Plant Will Be Operated By and For The Public

Rates to encourage people to use more electricity and by so doing realize the leisure and comfort that are envisioned in President Roosevelt's "planned future" for the nation is the basis for the power policy formulated by the Tennessee Valley Authority. Under the new deal for Muscle Shoals announced by Director David E. Lilienthal, in charge of the Authority's power program, that mighty Tennessee River development takes its natural though long-delayed position as a self-supporting and self-liquidating business run by and for the public.

Under the act creating it, the Authority's favored customers are municipalities and cooperatives, with secondary consideration for private industries. Therefore, municipalities withhs transmission distance of Muscle Shoals, which own their own distribution systems, may obtain power from that source at an average cost of 7 mills a kilowatt hour half time use. In turn, the Authority proposes that these municipalities retail this power to individual residence consumers — rural and urban—at the following rates:

First 50 kilowatt hours—4 cents per kilowatt hour
Next 150 kilowatt hours—2 cents per kilowatt hour
Next 300 kilowatt hours—1 cent per kilowatt hour
Over 500 kilowatt hours—4 mills per kilowatt hour.

These schedules, both for town and farm, carry with them a requirement that the customer use a reasonable minimum amount each month. These minimum requirements vary, both in urban and rural territory, with the size of the customer's meter. Farm users will naturally have a larger minimum requirement wherever the greater distances between customers result in increased cost of service. The rates have been computed on a conservative basis. All costs of service are included. In addition, provision has been made for items of cost not actually incurred, such as taxes and interest, in order to make fair comparison with privately owned utilities.

Director Lilienthal believes that these very low rates will induce the people of the Valley "greatly to increase their use of electricity, with its attendant benefits—which is one of the objectives of the President and Congress." If this results, even lower rates are possible. "It is apparent," comments Mr. Lilienthal, "that the rates proposed are designed to encourage and make possible the widest use of electric service, with all the individual and community benefits which go with such service. We are at the very beginning of the power age."

The Authority holds that the interest of the public in the widest possible use of power is superior to any private interest.

On the other hand, the TVA does believe that where such conflict can be reconciled without injury to the public interest, such reconciliation should be made.

However, the new TVA doctrine of public rights goes on to say:

"The right of a community to own and operate its own electric plan is undeniable. This is one of the measures which the people may properly take to protect themselves against unreasonable rates. Such a course of action may take the form of acquiring the existing plant, or setting up a competing plant, as circumstances may dictate.

"The fact that action by the Authority may have an adverse economic affect upon a privately owned utility should be a matter for the serious consideration of the Board in framing and executing its power program. But it is not the dominating factor. The most important considerations are the furthering of the public interest in making power available at the lowest rate consistent with sound financial policy, and the accomplishment of the social objectives which low cost power makes possible. The Authority cannot decline to take action solely upon the ground that to do so would injure a privately owned utility."

To provide a workable and economic basis of operations, the TVA plans initial service in three areas: 1. The region immediately proximate to the route of the transmission line to connect Muscle Shoals with the Norris Dam at Cove Creek; 2. The region in proximity to Muscle Shoals, including northern Alabama and northeastern Mississippi; 3. The region in proximity to the Norris Dam, near Knoxville. At a later stage in the development it is contemplated to include, roughly, the drainage area of the Tennessee River in Kentucky, Alabama, Georgia and North Carolina, and that part of Tennessee which lies east of the west margin of the Tennessee drainage area.

While it is the TVA's present intention to develop its power program in this territory before considering going outside, the Authority may go outside the area "if there are substantial changes in general conditions, facts, or governmental policy which would necessarily require a change in this policy of regional development, or if the privately owned utilities in this area do not cooperate in the working out of the program." Among special considerations for going outside such area would be "unreasonably high rates for service and a failure or absence of public regulations to protect the public interest."

People want to buy Buicks and Pontiacs

Do you want to Sell them?

PONTIAC is the fastest-selling Straight Eight in the world today—and the leading car in its entire price class. Buyers all over the United States are turning to Pontiac in numbers that assure a good substantial market in any territory where a capable dealership is established.

Buick is outselling all other eights priced above $1,000, combined! Buick, for years, has been the most popular car in the medium-price field—it is a car backed by a 29-year reputation for value second to none in the whole automobile field.

We want a good business man to sell and service these two popular cars right here in this city! This is a real opportunity for the right man to establish himself in a pleasant and profitable business with a reasonable amount of capital.

Previous automotive experience is not essential—the man we want may be engaged in any line of business. We ask only that he have a reputation for fair and honest dealing among his friends and neighbors . . . an ability to sell and organize the sales abilities of others . . . and a strong desire to build up a live and aggressive Buick-Pontiac dealership. And, naturally, we want a man who has the ability to render the type of service that will help every Buick and Pontiac owner to get the most pleasure, satisfaction and economy out of his car.

If you have reason to believe that you are the man we want, write or wire us at once for complete information. We shall be glad to tell you all about the Buick-Pontiac franchise. Address—

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Once again St. Charles and Pennington will turn strong grid rivals though for only a period of a couple of hours Friday when the Pennington Gladiators and the St. Charles High Midgets meet at St. Charles in their first game of the season.

Not so much interest has been exercised in football this fall, so far, although Fridays tilt is expected to draw one of the largest attendances of all previous games either of the two teams have had the honor of playing before, much note interest among local fans in both towns is expected to be derived from this battle as both elevens seem to be matched about equal although past games give the Gladiators the edge by a small margin.

Two games will be played between the St. Charles Midgets and the Pennington Gladiators this fall, one game in St. Charles and one in Pennington which will take place at a later date.

Well after all was said and done, we really had the fun. The Lee Smoky players were interested in playing an exhibition game to raise funds to buy the Lonesome Pine Champs sport coats, Jonesville acquired the service of Big Jim Mooney, former star hurler of the New York Giants and accepted the challenge to play the local boys.

The exhibition took place at St. Charles Sunday, St. Charles using for their line-up six regular Lee Smoky players and three from the ranks of the Powell Valley loop, the locals crossed the pan once in the first inning and four times in the sixth off the star hurler for a total count of five runs while Hobart "Lefty" Scott held the visitors to three singles and no runs.

Jonesville put up a hard battle for the locals all the way through in the final tilt of the season that ended the horse hide rallies until April 15th of next year.

Insure Your Cake Success With Careful Measurements

THE adage, "You can't have too much of a good thing," doesn't apply to cake baking.

Knowing that baking powder leavens cake it is natural to assume that a half teaspoon more will give a cake greater lightness. The sad, strange fact is that too much baking powder may cause sinking in the center, tough gummy crust, coarse, dry crumb, or cake that runs over the pan—a dismal cake failure.

Let us rule out cake failure by following two simple baking powder rules. First, always use amount recommended on your baking powder can. This proportion has been worked out as best for that particular baking powder. Second, measure carefully—an excess of any type of baking powder gives undesirable results. A level teaspoon means that you must level off with a knife.

Make one of these cakes by these rules—you'll be surprised!

Caramel Layer Cake
(2 Eggs)

1⅝ cups sifted cake flour	⅓ cup butter or other shortening
1½ teaspoons combination baking powder	2 eggs, well beaten
1 cup sugar	1 teaspoon vanilla
⅔ cup milk

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, then flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in two greased 8-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375° F.) 25 minutes. Spread caramel frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake

Creole Fudge Loaf
(1 egg)

2 cups sifted cake flour	1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons combination baking powder	1 egg, well beaten
½ teaspoon salt	2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
½ cup butter or other shortening	¾ cup milk
	1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well; then add chocolate. Blend. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in greased pan, 8 x 8 x 2 inches, in moderate oven (325° F.) 1 hour. Spread boiled frosting on top and sides of cake. When frosting is set, pour on mixtures of 2 squares unsweetened chocolate and 2 tablespoons butter, melted, letting chocolate run down over sides of cake. Double recipe for two large layers.

SAVED... because of the TELEPHONE!

FIRE broke out in a farm home one Sunday morning after the parents had gone to church leaving five children, the eldest a boy of nine. The boy remembered to use the telephone to call help and neighbors arrived in time to put out the fire with little damage to the house.

The telephone protects your home and family. A single call may be worth more than the service costs in a lifetime. Rates are very low. Ask at our Business Office about them.

PELLAGRA YIELDS

Kenver, Ky.—Mrs. Tom Depew says: "I suffered from a terrible case of Pellagra. My mouth, hands and limbs were blistered all over. My neck was so sore that I could scarcely turn my head. Even my fingernails were affected and finally came off. This Pellagra finally affected my mind and at times I would feel very queer. My stomache was raw and it was almost impossible to keep anything on my stomache. Food just seemed to disagree with me regardless of what or when I ate it. I tried medicine after medicine and they all proved worthless. I took a number of shots for this ailment, but seemed to do me no good. I used eighteen bottles of Scalf's Indian River Tonic and I am a well woman today. I really believe that I would have been dead had I not learned of this medicine and used it. I gladly tell of my experience, hoping that by so doing I may be the means of some other sufferer finding the wonderful health which I today am enjoying. I could not say too much for Scalf's Indian River Tonic, as it has really restored my health." advertisement 41-1t

DISTRESS AFTER MEALS
Relieved By Black-Draught

"I had sour stomach and gas," writes Mr. Jess Higgins, of Dawsonville, Ga., "and often I would have bilious spells. I read about Thedford's Black-Draught and began to take it. It relieved me of this trouble. I keep it all the time now. I consider it a fine medicine. I take a pinch of Black-Draught after meals when I need it. It helps to prevent sick headache and to keep the system in good order."

Get a package at the store. Try it! Now you can get Black-Draught in the form of a SYRUP, for CHILDREN.

Pennington Chosen For Buick Pontiac

Pennington has been chosen as one of the towns in which every effort will be made to have a combined Buick and Pontiac dealership in the expansion program which is being pushed this fall preparatory to the 1934 selling season according to H. E. DeVault, field representative of the Buick Olds-Pontiac Sales Company who visited here this week.

Mr. DeVault reports that a survey was made of all towns in which Buick and Pontiac has no representation to learn whether the volume of business would warrant such an establishment. Mr. DeVault likewise reported that unless a town had sufficient population, industry and wealth to enable a dealer to make money on his investment, no attempt was made to establish a dealer there because the factory only wanted dealers who could make money for themselves. It is likewise desirable to have service facilities at hand for the present owners of Buicks and Pontiacs in Pennington and the surrounding territory.

"We are on an up market which could mean opportunities for men of business experience and some capitol to participate in the profits that will be made in the automobile industry in the next and following years," said Mr. DeVault.

"It is not essential that a man should have been in the automobile industry previously to make a success of this business. It is specialized, in a sense, but not any more so than the ordinary business.

"Few people realize that a dealer in no other business receives the help in guiding him that the automobile factories provide. The factories provide a dealer with an estimate of the cost of a building or the rental he should pay for the potential sales in his territory, the number of new cars he should have on hand, how to recondition used cars, the maximum time he should keep any used car, how many salesmen he should have and how to lay out his showroom. Courses are provided for training sales and service managers. These are but a few items of the business management guidance a dealer receives. I know of no other industry that has analyzed retail outlets, market potentialities and provides so many guiding tools as does the automobile industry. These guidances are not theoretical but based upon thousands of examples of dealers, experiences of which records are kept at the factories.

"How far have you and your wife got in your plans to purchase a new automobile?"

"We've got to the point where we don't speak."

The Book Sampler

That a woman stricken blind and deaf in infancy should become a Phi Beta Kappa and lecture from the platform is inconceivable. Yet, all this Helen Keller has done, and more. But, how did this woman overcome handicaps to become what she is? The answer is her teacher, "Anne Sullivan Macy." The early lives of these two women, later so closely entwined, from a sharp contrast. Helen was born to a comfortable Georgia household; Anne to poverty and a Boston almshouse. Eye trouble caused Anne to learn Braille at fourteen, and because of friendship for another unfortunate, she learned the manual language. With these qualifications she became the intimate of the little prisoner of darkness down South How Anne established contact with Helen, and how she afterwards surrendered her own personality to that of her brilliant pupil are among the finest things to be found in Nella Braddy's biography. It will remain for prosperity to decide which is greatest, the creation or the creator, but in light of time it should prove the last.

Talbot Clifton should have been a buccaneer, or soldier of fortune under Elizabeth. But coming later and in settled times, there is nothing left for him but seek adventure in far parts of the world. His wife's account of him reads like a Russian epic, or, after his marriage, like one of the medieval romances. In every truth, it seems that such a person could not have existed since the days of Francis Drake. In spite of the poosy of Violet Clifton's style, which is overflowing and impossible to parse, "The Book of Talbot" is a peerless contribution to biography, romatic adventure, and the whole world of books.

If you are interested in Gertrude Stein, read "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas". If not, don't bother.

These three remarkable biographies may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

"My brother never met with a disappointment in his life."

"How's that?"

"He never looks for anything but trouble."

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q Wacks

The gridiron classic of the year took place in St. Charles last Friday when the Midgets and Gladiators in the toughest and most interesting grid battle of all past history in St. Charles, with the largest attendance that ever saw a foot ball game on the local field present, and did they get their moneys worth.

I am not commenting on the game only because the Midgets won but because both elevens gave the fans what they came to see plenty of fight and action the kind that will make all of them and all their friends want to come back to see the same teams clash again.

The very clost score of 7 to 6 was almost breath taking as the final minutes rolled by with the contest yet anybodys ball game until the final whistle blew. Each team had a good chance to score a touchdown, each which failed to mature, St. Charles intercepted a pass in an open field, Cross carrying the ball about 25 yards then slowing down for reasons no one could figure out an letting an opponent stop him when he had a fine chance to keep going. Pennington had the ball on the six yard line with four downs to go for a counter but lost the ball on the three yard line as their efforts through the Midget line failed.

Gene Kirk and Goover Pannell did the outstanding work in thi back field for the Midgets while Cross, Goins and Henderson did some very outstanding work in the line. Hook Zion was quite the man of the hour in the back field for the Gladiators carrying the ball for more than a total gain throughout the game of 125 yards playing an excellent game both on the offensive and defense, the husky Gladiator line did some very fine work but not quite up to what was expected of them from the majority of the fans that looked on and gave their opinions, the St Charles line also had its defects although showing a great improvement in the fourth quarter which was indeed surprising, even to local fans.

The St. Charles Midgets will meet Harlan at St. Charles Saturday.

Aged Lady From Appalachia Dies in Camp on Cumberland Mountain

Death visited the overnight camp of a party on the Virginia side of Cumberland mountain Sunday morning at eight o'clock and took Mrs. Sarah Young, 84, who with her daughter and three grandchildren was enroute from North Carolina to Appalachia, to visit her son.

The party, consisting of Mrs. Young her daughter, Mrs. Lonnie Hammonds, 26, and grandchildren Kathleen Hammonds, 11, Bettie Young, 13, and Bib Young 12, came from Stearns, Ky., Saturday night to the forks of the highways on Cumberland mountain. There they got off the bus to wait for one going to Appalachia, as none came they made a camp a quarter of a mile from the forks of the road and spent the night.

Mrs. Hammonds, her daughter, stated that Mrs. Young had been complaining of pains in her chest since Friday night, and that she died while they were preparing breakfast. Vernon Gibson, who lived near the camp-site, was summoned and he in turn went for T. H. Ball, magistrate of the Rose Hill district.

Mr. Ball came to Middlesboro Ky., and notified Hobart Cawood who went for the body.

The body and the children were taken to Appalachia by Mr. Cawood Sunday afternoon.

"I could not," said Joe. "And if I had one in my mouth, I couldn't speak."

Lee County Court House Ready For Nov. Court

Lee county's new $60,000.00 two story modernized court building has been completed and is ready to throw open the doors for public inspection. Moving day for Lee county officials who have been scattered over the town of Jonesville since the old building burned on February 13th, is scheduled for Wednesday.

The new court building located on the site of the old burn, landmarks occupies a plot 70 feet by 85 feet. The building is two stories high with a large basement. Twenty - two rooms and a large court room occupying the greater part of the second floor provide ample quarters for departments of the Lee county government. The building is entirely fireproof, built of buff brick trimmed in stone. The style is monumental with a portico approximately 30 feet in width. Four large columns in the front give the building a very imposing appearance.

In the interior of the building the floors are tile-tex composition over concrete. Officers of the various departments occupy the two floors. In the clerk's office a two story fireproof vault, each room 24 feet by 24 feet, will hold the records of the county. Other records of the various departments will be kept in smaller fireproof vaults which open into each of the offices to be occupied by the several county officials. Each office is completely equiped with the latest telephone and lighting system. The building is steam heated, the temperature being automatically controlled by thermostat located in the clerk's office. The heating plant is located in the nearby jail building, coal being fed into the furnace by an automac stoker. The court room located on second floor is 70 feet by 48 feet and modern throughout.

The new building was constructed by the V. L Nicholson Company, contractors, of Knoxville, Tenn., the architect being D. R. Beeson, of Johnson City, Tenn. Construction work was started on May 1st. The total cost of the building is $60,000.00 including furniture which is supplied by E. A. Lanchester, of Johnson City, Tenn.

The opening of the new court house will give Lee county one of the most modern public buildings in the South.

Armistice Day Service at M. E. Church, South

For the first time in the history of Post No. 38 of the American Legion, they are preparing to hold an Armistice Day Service at the M. E. Church, South, in Pennington Gap on November 11th at 10:30.

This service will be in commemoration of those who gave their best for their country as well as in memory of that great day, November 11th, 1918, when peace was brought to a worn torn world. All the pastors of the various churches in town will take part and a short and appropriate address will be given by a prominent out of town speaker. The public is very cordially invited and every ex-service man is urged to be present regardless of whether he is a Legion member or not. Let's make it a real get together meeting in memory of that happy day when the order to cease firing was heard for the last time. Come and bring all your friends.

An Engineers Prayer

"This story is related of an old locomotive engineer who was converted, and being present at a meeting was asked to lead in prayer. He hesitated a moment and then with trembling but clear voice he said very reverently:

"O Lord, now that I have flagged Thee, lift up my feet from the rough road of life and plant them safely on the deck of the train of salvation. Let me use the safety lamp known as prudence, and make all the couplings of the train with the strong link of love, and let my bible be my book of rules. And dear Heavenly Father, keep all the switches closed that lead off the main line, especially those with a blind end."

"O Lord, if it be thy pleasure have every semaphore along the line show the green light of hope, that I may make the run of life without stopping. And Lord give us the Ten Commandments of the schedule and when I have finished the run on time and pulled into the great, dark station of death, may the Superintendent of the universe say: "Well done" thou good and faithful servant, come and sign the payroll and receive your check for eternal happiness."

Employer—We want a man who is able to take a calling down without giving any back talk.

Applicant—I'm your man, I've been married five years.

Betsy—What did you think when you first put your arms around me.

Bob—I wished I was an octopus.

And she was the dumbest girl I ever saw.

What makes you think so?

"I mentioned bacteria, and she thought that was the back door to a cafeteria."

Ethel—Did you know Josie had thrown Frank over?

Mable—Goodness, no! Why?

Ethel—Oh, the wretch stopped calling and writing and all that, I understand.

Mr. B.—What delightful manners your daughter has.

Mrs. W. (proudly)—Yey, you see she has been away from home so much.

Ena—What are the seven ages of man?

Artie—I don't remember. But the seven ages of women seem to be from 16 to 23.

Mrs. James—My brother is coming to stay a few days, dear. The poor boy looks very seedy.

Mr. James—Well, he's not going to plant himself here!

"Have you ever thought seriously of marriage?"

"Indeed I have ever since the ceremony."

My barber many yarns narrates;
His mouth he seldom shuts.
And some of them he illustrates
With unexpected cuts.

Mother (as they watched the hippopotamus) — Look, dear, he's gone completely under water.

Small Son—I would too if I had a face like that.

Doremifa — Is Silversmort smart?

Solasido — Yeah. He can speak Yiddish with only one hand.

"I want to take out some insurance."

"Fire or life?"

"Both, I have a wooden leg."

Jacob: Why did Ikey invite only married people to his wedding?

Abie: Well, in that way he figured that all present would be clear profit.

A colored woman went into a store to buy a collar for her husband.

"What size?" asked the clerk.

"I don forget de size," replied the woman "but ah kin jes' manage to reach around his throat wif bof hands."

"I say Chester. What explanation do you offer for the fact that you don't wear your overcoat you had cleaned?"

"Can't be bothered, Herman. I don't mind the wood across the shoulders, but that wire hook kept knocking my hat off."

BOOKS & BOOKMEN

Ian Glenn is the author of seven novels, most of them commercial successes which have also had favorable critical notice. It should now be possible to make some judgement, however inaccurate and subject to change, upon her value as an artist. With a limited knowledge of her work and the critical attention which it has received, I feel that, with "Mr. Darlington's Dangerous Age", Miss Glenn's virtues and faults as to creative talent and clearly visible. To me she is a writer who has ability and entertainment value of worth; but, as an artist, she does not write from necessity and she is great.

"Mr. Darlington's Dangerous Age" is full of good story as far as it goes. An American business man has heard of his younger brother's difficulties in the tropics. Sent by Mr. Stephen Darlington's firm to Manila, the younger brother, Dan, has fallen from business and social grace. Stephen Darlington, remembering the family honor, loving his younger brother who has always been his personal charge, moves forward to rescue both the family nameand Dan. The horror that has overtaken the family is unnamed far into the story which Miss Glenn has written, but it is brooding and ominous enough, even unnamed, to draw the reader into the heat and the passion which seems to envelop Mr. Darlington and all of his companions of the white, northern race. This sinister atmosphere is with us as soon as Mr. Darlington's ship is in the waters that wash toward hot and terrible countries. Women are the atmosphere Th·y are white women of no perfect reputations on shipboard, they are the same women in Manila, with a whole Walled City of Spanards, lost white Americans, and a general mixture of races strange to our tastes and understandings. Into this, into the heat, which Miss Glenn assures us is so devastating to the Puritan morals of the North American, goes Mr. Stephen Darlington. He discovers Dan by many roundabout efforts, Dan's mistress is seen, Dan's ways are viewed; and Mr. Stephen Darlington finds that he can only make an enormous confusion, where he had intended to be so sure of himself. In the final stage the story collapses on the ruin of Mr. Darlington's purposes and upon the failure of his sense of security and self respect.

With the best will possible, I turn from the book with dissatisfaction of all but ordinary entertainment senses. The art is faulty in that no character seems to breathe necessity for existence, in that no esthetic pattern has completed itself, in that no individual view of man, his morals, his loves, his projudices is clearly visible. Mr. Darlington has not won me to care whether or not he retains his self-respect nor the love of his brother. His temptations are not apparent to my emotions, nor his troubles to my soul. He is unconvincing in his passion as he is unimpressive in his code of manners and morals.

Miss Glenn is, in description, at times excellent. Her comments upon heat are physically effective. Only when she is in the external town, picturing the visible motion, the bodily behavior of men and women does she seem to be working in the medium where she approaches art.

In my anxiety to see Miss Glenn as an artist it is possible that I have overlooked what is virtue enough for any writer, the ability to write scenes and people and situations which will give us a few hours of diversion with at least that many moments of illusion of reality. If she in not one of our important writers, she is one of our popular and ensertaining writers. It would be false criticism to ask more of her. Perhaps other books will be more complete, even within her own powers, than Miss Glenn has made "Mr. Darlington's Dangerous Age"; but this book will be read by many people. and it will have its very worthwhile values to most of those many readers.

What is unsatisfactory about some of Miss Glenn's books from all points of view is the realization that the author has not really thought through her story nor her characters in the beginning, that there was no necessity about their creation, and that the whole matter, characters and all is dismissed as a casual lover about whom there remains no deep knowledge and little enough concern. This is possible of correction. Miss Glenn may decide in her next book to overcome this fault. If she does the novel will probably be a very good piece of creative writing.

The beautiful girl and the honorable man, sole survivors of a wreck: he had saved her, managed to get on a desert island and there for three long years they lived in hope—she growing daily more beautiful, he daily more honorable.

At last she could stand it no longer. "It looks like we are going to spend the rest of our lives here," she said coyly one day. "Don't you think we might—might be more friendly?"

"All right," he answered eagerly. "I've been longing to ask you if you'd care to play two-handed bridge with a set of cards I've made out of palm leaves."

Virginian Flattened, Squeezed and Broke by Taxes and Laws

Gordonsville—After finding several bills and courteous "please remit" notices to one of his debtors, a Gordonsville merchant was startled one morning when he found the following reply in his mail box:

"I am inclosing $4 on my account that is much past due, but wish to inform you that the present shattered condition of my bank account makes it impossible for me to send you my check in full in response to your request. My present financial condition is due to the effect of Federal laws, State laws, by-laws, brother-in-laws, mother-in-laws and outlaws that have been foisted upon an unsuspecting public. Through the various laws I have been held down, held up, sat upon, walked on, flattened, squeezed and broke until I do not know what I am, where I am or why I am.

"These laws compel me to pay a merchant's tax, capital tax, income tax, corporation tax, real estate tax, auto tax, property tax, gas tax, light tax, water tax, school tax, liquor tax and carpet tax.

"I am suspected, expected, inspected, disrespected, examined, reexamined, informed, required, commanded and compelled until all I know is that I am supposed to provide an inexhaustible supply of money for every known and unknown need, desire, or love of the human race, and because I refuse to donate to all and to go out and beg, borrow or steal the money to give away, I am ousted, cursed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied about, held up, held down and robbed until I am just about ruined. The only reason that I am still clinging to life is to see what is coming next."

Dickenson Lead Low Death Rate

The mortality rate of a county or community is often indicative of its health status, and so may prove or disprove the value of the health work being done there, as the ultimate aim of all such work is the prevention of disease and death. A study of the death rates of Dickenson, Wise, Scott, and Lee counties shows that the rate of deaths for every 1,000 persons was lower in Dickenson during the year 1932 than in any of the other three counties, the rate in this county being 7.08. Wise comes second with a rate of 9.90. The highest mortality rate in these counties occurred last year in Lee county and was 11.08 per 1,000 population. There was a rise indicated in all of the four counties in comparison with the mortality rates for the year 1931.

An examination of the birth rates in this group of counties shows that Dickenson is again ahead with a rate of 36 19 for every 1,000 persons. These rates range from this figure to 27.81 in Wise county.

A point which should challenge all individuals and organizations concerned with the welfare of the public is the general rise in the rate of infant deaths for every 1,000 live births. This rate has risen in all of these four counties, and indicate that greater emphasis should be placed on infant and maternal welfare.

Statistics are valuable only in so far as they are completed and accurate.

The Bureau of Vital Statistics, State Health Department urges that all births and deaths be promptly and correctly reported in order that this Bureau may render more efficient service to the public.

"You have a new treasurer?" inquiree the host.

"Yes," answered the minister.

"He writes a nice letter," remarked the host, "except that he can't spell."

"Is that so?"

"Yes, he ought to be corrected on that. He spelled 'skunk' with a 'c' and had two 's'' in 'lousy'."

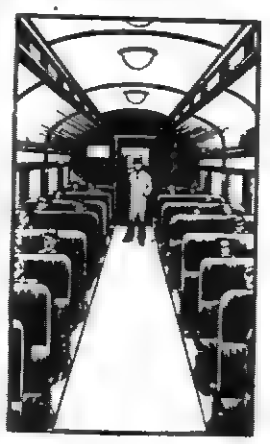
Nearly 1200 MORE PEOPLE PER DAY are Finding it CHEAPER, SAFER and MORE COMFORTABLE to Travel on L&N TRAINS



During the first 5 months that the new lowered fares have been in effect on the L. & N. system more than one million one hundred forty thousand people have realized how much more comfortable it is to travel in large roomy coaches and Pullman cars—where every convenience is provided and in which they are safe and will arrive at their destination without delays or fatigue.

They have compared the costs in dollars and cents as well as in comforts provided, and an average of approximately 1200 passengers per day more than the same days last year have returned to train travel by L. & N.

Remember that these rates apply any day, any train, anywhere on the entire L. & N. system, without limitation—and there is no surcharge in Pullmans.

Prices have been lowered on famous L. & N. dining service.

BUICK-PONTIAC dealership available for GOOD BUSINESS MAN

THERE is an opportunity right now for some man in this city to establish himself in a permanent and profitable business selling Buick and Pontiac cars . . . rendering the kind of service that will help Buick and Pontiac owners get the most pleasure, satisfaction and economy out of their cars.

The man we want may, or may not, be in the automotive business now. If he's a good business man . . . if he enjoys a sound reputation among his friends and neighbors . . . if he is ambitious, industrious and of the up-and-coming type that can sell, organize and direct the selling abilities of others . . . we want to hear from him.

On our part, we can give him two great cars to handle . . . Pontiac, the car that built and shipped more cars during the first five months of 1933 than during all of 1932; and Buick, for many years the sales leader in its price class . . . a car backed by a 29-year reputation for value second to none in the whole automobile field.

There should be a number of men in this city fully alive to this opportunity. So, if you have reason to believe that you are the man we want, we suggest that you write us at once for complete information. Your letter will be held in strict confidence.

The Book Sampler

Two more novels from the pens of Nobel Prize winners arise the claim attention, Sigrid Undset's "Ida Elizabeth" and John Ga'sworthy's "One More River". As in two preceding novels, Fru Undset is concerned with marriage as an inescapable sacapable sacrament rather than a fusion of badies and idea. She has claimed its permanency through religious teaching; now she shows that in purely personal feelings and emotions there is also no escape. Ida Elizab th is mated to a weakling of stunted spiritual growth. In spite of having fought her way to happiness in freedom, the bonds of the past reassert themselves and she returns to her husband. Those who have read others of her books need not be told that Fru Undset's work is sure and compelling, and also simple within the limits of Scandinavian psychology. And now to "One More River", that which Dinny Charwell was to cross before finding peace and understanding. It is a good title for the finish of the adventures of the girl who appeared in "Maid in Waiting" and carried on through "Flowering Wilderness", and it is a fitting title for the last work of the man whose many novels have been read with affection. Some may be irritated by Dinny's sureness in handling situations which arise from the contrasting romances of herself and her sister. But others will read with no sense of let-down the witty comment and finished situations in this truly Galsworthian book.

Dorothy Canfield's new novel portrays a quiet village in Vermont, just such a one as that from which Miss Canfield hails with its indigenous characters and customs. Then comes the "Bonfire" which Lixlee lights in the lives of everyone with whom she comes in contact. If such a good reading need prove anything, this proves that, North or South whatever happens, a poor white is a poor white.

These are among the outstanding novels which may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

The Best of Literature

The National Council of English has just issued a 54 page "Students' Guide to Good Reading". Nine hundred books, carefully winnowed from less valuable chaff, are classified in thirty sections covering every range of literary interest. Most of the recognized classics, the contributions of ancient civilizations, philosophy, science, foreign literatures, and books on the problems of the hour are represented for the serious minded. Yet books for entertainment, the best of the kind, are included, short stories, poetry, plays, travel and adventure, and even two score volumes of light fiction, recommended as an "excellent relaxation for busy minds."

Nearly all the books are available in inexpensive editions, and the "Guide" therefore will be especially serviceable to those who wish to have their own collections of literary masterpieces without making a large investment. It is also serviceable if one's time is too valuable to be spent on anything but the better books, and he wants to improve his borrowing from the public library.

A copy of "The Students' Guide" will be sent to readers of the News who apply to the Extension Division, University Virginia.

Rose Hill High School has lost a student but regained one in his place, Phillip Eblin has moved away and the new Methodist preacher, Rev. Myers has a son, Nestor, in the eighth grade who will take his place.

Irene Loftice is back at school this year taking some studies she did not get to take last year.

The third and fourth year gave two interesting dramas in chapel Wednesday before preacher Adkins talk.

The agricultural boys of Rose Hill High School have organized a chapter of the F. F. A. Future Farmers of America.

The officers are as follows:

President-Carl Maness.

Vice - President - Patton Giles.

Secretary-Earl Flanary.

Reporter-Robert Edens.

Treasurer-Hugh Chance.

Other members are Joe Debusk, Clande Davis and Henry Jones.

The purposes of the F. F. A. are:

1. For the farm boys to establish Confidence in himself and in his work.
2. To promote thrift.
3. To create and mature a love of country life.
4. To promote vocational agriculture.
5. To develop leadership.

The agricultural boys are going to hold chapel Wednesday and everyone expects a very interesting program.

Miss Thelma Turner went to Bristol last Friday to attend the Red Cross meeting. She went as a representative of the Junior Red Cross members of Rose Hill, because our school was the only one that answered 100 per cent to the roll call. She made a talk which will come out in the Red Cross Magazine.

Rose Hill and Ewing had a basket ball game last Thursday and the score was 20-12 in favor of Rose Hill.

The players were:

Nila Maness

Elizabeth Loftice

Patty Keys

Cornelia Hall

Aston Beatty

Ada Loftice

Belvia Hall.

The Blue Devils Beat the Yellow Jackets

By Edna Hale

Pennington was defeated by St. Charles rivals the first time in "Grid Iron" history by the score of 7 to 6, it was exciting through out the game.

St. Charles made their touchdown in the first part of the game, and then passed for the extra point. The touchdown was made by Kirk, when Captain Pannel threw him a pass and he ran it for a touchdown which was 18 yards, then Pannel threw a pass to cross for extra point.

Zion made the touchdown for Pennington but failed to make the extra point. The Pennington Yellow Jackets advanced the ball to the one yard line in the later part of the game but the St. Charles Blue Devils wouldn't let them cross the line. It is said to be the most exciting game this year so far.

Mary—Bob has asked me to marry him. What shall I do?

Mother — Consult Bradstreet's, your lawyer, and your heart.

Mr. Pester—I have entered the automobile races for novices.

Mrs. Pester—Very well but if you get killed remember I warned you and dont come around me for sympathy.

Joe—So you took that pippin home from the movies last night?

Jim—Yeh.

Joe—How far does she live from the theater?

Jim—Oh, three soda fountains and a candy store.

One rainey day recently a lady in silkan finery climbed aboard a street car in New York City, sniffed, and exclaimed: "This is the first time I've ridden on a street car in two year. I ride in my own car."

"You dont know how we've missed you," the conductor remarked.

Alice—Two is company.

Albert—And three's a mass meeting.

A motorist rattled into a garage in a very old car, and the following conversation took place.

Garageman—I'll have to ask you for a five spot in advance.

Motorist—A five spot in advance! But I'll come for the car in the morning.

Garageman—Ah, that's just it. Will you come?

Scot—Give me a penny's worth of poison.

Druggist—I can't put up that small a package.

Scot—Then I would rather live.

Movie Director—Now here's where you jump over the cliff.

Nervous Actor—But suppose I am killed or injured?

Director—Oh, that wont matter. This is the last scene in the picture, you know.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Something new under the Sun this winter will be the organization of one of the largest independent basketball leagues Southwest, Va., has ever known, it will take in practically the same territory as the Lonesome Pine baseball loop with the possibility of adding some Tennessee teams. The territory will extend throughout Harlan and Bell Counties in Kentucky and the entire portion of Southwest, Va., also covering a small portion of East Tennessee.

The loop will be organized in December with the official schedule starting off with all the other big ones, only teams with Gymnasiums will be accepted into the loop.

Lynch and Harlan, Ky., and Bonny Blue in Va., are practically ready with many other clubs busy on their plans.

Getting back to the most interesting grid battle of the season of 1933, you will find it Friday when the Gladiators and Midgets clash for their last meeting in Pennington Gap. These two elevens brought to the side lines two weeks ago the largest attendance that witnessed any football game in Lee County this year and with this final battle approaching even a much larger crowd is anticipated this week end.

Pennington will doubtless have hundreds of enthusiastic rooters on the side lines pulling their heart strings out for the Gladiators while the Midgets backers will come buzzing down from St. Charles using all available modes of transportation to encourage and boost their favorite eleven to victory again.

Both elevens have been put through the toughest of drills this week in preparation for the classic that means as much to Lee County grid enthusiast as the Kentucky - Tennessee battle on Thanksgiving does to their respective States and promoters.

ST. CHARLES WINS OVER HARLAN SUBS

The St. Charles Midgets defeated Harlan at St. Charles, Saturday by the score of 7 to 0. Kirk was the outstanding ball toter for the Midgets. Pannell with his splendid kicking kept the ball in Kentucky territory most of the game. Goins did excellent work receiving passes. Kirk made the only touchdown of the game.

Gabol was the star in the Harlan backfield.

St. Charles made six first downs to Harlans one.

"So that's your new tie. Why on earth did you select such a loud color?"

"I didn't select it, my brother did and he's rather deaf."

ST. CHARLES HERE FRIDAY

The St. Charles Midgets will meet the Pennington High Gladiatory in a football game here Friday at 2:00 p. m.

The Gladiators are out for revenge for the 7 to 6 defeat received at St. Charles, while the Midgets are going to try to make it another victory.

General Joe Wheeler Dam

Preliminary surveys for the construction of the General Joe Wheeler Dam has been completed by the Tennessee Valley Authority and a small construction camp will be erected on the site, announces Chairman Arthur E. Morgan.

The site of the Wheeler Dam, sometimes referred to as Dam No. 3, is about 15½ miles up the Tennessee River from Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals, Alabama. The Wheeler Dam will be approximately 50 feet high and 6,000 feet, more than a mile in length. Norris Dam, already under construction on the Clinch River near Knoxville, will be about 236 feet high and 2,000 feet long.

General Joe Wheeler Dam will provide a reservoir of approximately 100 square miles in area. The Norris Dam reservior will cover about 83½ square miles. The lake at General Joe Wheeler Dam will extend up the river some 80 miles to Buck Island. Buck Island is about five miles above Guntersville, Alabama.

Navigation locks at the Wheeler Dam are already under construction by Army Engineers. The war Department estimates the cost of this dam, without the power house, to be in the neighborhood of $15,000,000.

Construction of General Joe Wheeler will aid in flood control and navigation, in addition to providing a potenaial source of power when this is needed by the Authority.

Zone One of Big Stone Gap District W. M. S. Holds Meeting at Ewing

Ewing—Zone One of W. M. S. of the Big Stone Gap District of the M. E. Church, South, held the autumn meeting recently at Ewing, with the two auxiliaries on that charge acting as joint hostesses. The meeting opened with the singing of the hymn, "O Where Are The Reapers," following which Mrs. H. A. W. Skeen, of Big Stone Gap, who is district secretary conducted a very inspirational devotional service on the theme "Harvest." Mrs. H. T. Ritchie, the new Zone Leader, presided, and took charge of the program. Mrs. A. M. Carr, of Cumberland Gap, was chosen secretary. The guests were made welcome by Mrs. Dale Williott of the Marble Hill W. M. S. Reports from presidents of the societieties were very encouraging, and the reports of the vice presidents of the plans for the week of Prayer, showed that this would be observed generally. Mrs. M. S. Martin gave an interesting talk on the specials and the purpose of this observance. Mrs. Pearl Ewing, who was teacher for the Leadership Training course in Study, held at Big Stone Gap, gave a very helpful talk on the phrase of work. A poem "Harvest" was read by Mrs. Stella Thomas, of Cumberland Gap.

Two music numbers, furnished by the Pennington Gap society a piano solo, by Miss Anna Price Gibson and a violin solo, by Jackie Poore, accompanied by Miss Gibson, added to the pleasure of the day.

A special treat was enjoyed in having present Rev. and Mrs. S. C. Beard, from the Holston Orphanage at Greenville, Tenn., and five little girls from the home. The children gave some songs, accompanied by Mrs. Beard, and also recited. Rev. and Mrs. Beard told of the work and the needs of the home. A shower of wash cloths and a box of "all-day suckers" from Ewing, were presented by Mrs. H. C. T. Dean.

At noon a dainty and delicious plate lunch was served by the Ewing ladies.

Immediately after lunch a playlet "Miss Report" was given by the Dryden group, reminding officers of their duty in the line of reports. Mrs. Skeen gave a very interesting and helpful talk along the various departments of the work. Mrs. Mattie Hamilton, of the Cumberland Gap group, read two poems of "Stewardship." The work in the children's department was discussed.

A vote of thanks and appreciation was given by the entire body to the retiring Zone Leader, Miss Cora Hyatt, of Jonesville. She made a delightful response to this and to the welcome, in a fitting poem.

The meeting was dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Emma N. Edds.

Examination of Applicants for Marines

Examination of applicants for entrance in the U. S. Marine Corps from Virginia, North and South Carolina, Florida and Eastern Georgia will be held at the Marine Corps Headquarters, Post Office Building, Savannah, Ga., during the month of November it is announced by Lieut. Col. A. B. Drum.

Vacancies for November are alloted as follows: Virginia 10, North Carolina 10, South Carolina 10, Florida 15 and Eastern Georgia 5.

Applicants accepted are transferred to the Marine Base, Parris Island, S. C. After preliminary training for several weeks some will be assigned to duty aboard battle-ships or cruisers while others will be assigned to foreign service and stations in the United States.

The Marine Corps accepts only young men who are graduates of High Schools of approved standing. The educational, character, and physical requirements are rigid. The varied duties of Marines at foreign stations where they serve under situations of international importance, and also afloat ready to land to protect Americans in disturbed foreign areas require selections of capable and reliable men.

Young men in this vicinity who desire service in the Marine Corps should write the Savannah office for applications.

Mr. and Mrs Cecil Dunn and Mrs. Mason Dunn of Richmond, Ky., spent the past week end visiting relatives and friends at Rose Hill and Ewing.

Bride—You didn't talk that way before we were married!

Groom—What way?

Bride—You said you would go through fire and water for me, and now you refuse every time I ask you for money.

Groom—But I never said I'd go through bankruptcy for you.

Billie (who has eaten his apple)—Let's play Adam and Eve.

Pattie—How do we do that?

Billie—You tempt me to eat your apple and I'll give in.

Nuller—So your wife has gone masculine, eh?

Voider—Say, she's gone so masculine she doesn't even add a lot of postcrips to her letters any more.

Urey—Your absurdity would make a donkey laugh.

Faqua—Yeah, I noticed you was laughing.

"Darn it, dad", said son, "isn't there any way of borrowing a little money?"

"I'm afraid not, my boy", replied his dad. "What do you want it for now?"

"To get the blamed car fixed up," growled the son, "it's so bad now the only cars I can pass up is those that are parked."

His Rich Aunt—And what has brought you to town, Reginald?

Nephew—Just up to see the sights, Auntie, so I thought I'd call on you first.

"Was in New York yesterday and had a high old time last night," boasted Jones.

"Yeah? What'll your wife say?" asked Smith.

"No objection from her. I took the night plane home, you see," explained Jones.

Trolley Car Conductor—Madam, this transfer has expired.

Irate Lady—Well, what more could you expect with the cars so poorly ventilated.

She—Do you always make it a pratice to clear your walk of snow after a fall?

He—Yes, providing my neighbor is not using his snow-shovel.

A city girl visiting her uncle on the farm was watching a cow chewing her cud.

"Pretty fine cow, that," said her uncle as he came by.

Yes, said the girl, "but doesn't it cost a lot to keep her in chewing gum?"

"Daughter," said dad, sternly, "I hope when you are with that young man there is none of this petting and kissing foolishness."

"Oh, be yourself," retorted daughter, we're not married, and you won't expect us to spend all our time scrapping when we are together, the way you and mother do."

Two traveling men met each other in a smoking compartment on an eastbound train.

"What's your line?" asked the first one.

"I'm a pepper salesman."

"Shake," said the first, "I'm a salt seller."

BOOKS IN BRIEF

Chancellor Hitler's autobiography is best understood in the light of his chapter of "The Role of the Orator." There, in expressing his admiration for Lloyd George as a political leader, he declares that it is foolish to criticize Lloyd George's speeches as written documents, and that "their very primitiveness is proof of that Englishman's towering political capacity." Similarly, it is foolish to consider "My Battle" as written polemic; it is in fact frozen oratory. One can easily picture Hitler, in prison after the "beer hall putsch", writing "My Battle" as poor consolation for the loss of the thrill of a packed hall and a howling mob. That fancy aside, it should be remembered that "My Battle" is oratory designed for party consumption; more than that, it is oratory designed for party consumption; more than that, it is oratory designed to inspire a young and unsuccesful party to renewed endeavor. At the same time, although it may not be entirely fair to regard it as the matured programme of the Nazi Party in power, it remains a portrapal of the emotional forces which brought the Nazis into office. However much it may misrepresent Hitler as Chancellor, it accurately represents the state of mind in Hitler and his followers that gave him that position.

It is useless to dismiss as mere silliness the racial dogma that is the foundation stone of Nazi doctrine. It is much better to attempt to understand it, in the light of German history. Germany has existed for centuries as a civilization, and never quite completely as a nation. It achieved a partial national integratiou in 1870, and less than fifty years later suffered a crushing defeat, loss of empire, a humiliating peace treaty, and and an almost complete economic collapse. With all other hopes for salvation blasted, it is only natural that the German people now embrace with religious fervor the faith that dominated their political efforts for at least a century. The intelligent Southerner should be in a better position than anyone else in America to understand the recent history of Germany, for there exists in Southern history a fruitful, if not always precise, analogy between Germany from 1918 to 1933 and the South from 1865 to 1876. If the Naxi movement is more violent, it is because the German cultural tradition is more powerful; and if it represents a greater threat to world peace, it is because Germany is a first-class power, and cannot, for any length of time, be denied that position.

If the Hitler doctorine resembles, in its ethnological phases, the theories of the Ku Klux, its economic programme resembles President Roosevelt's "new deal." Both make use of the hortatory technique, but the big stick that General Johnson merely waves is actively used by the lieutenants of Chancellor Hitler. Hitler offers a racial brotherhood in the place of the class war; a leadership of individuals and not by nose counting; a self-sufficient Germany that will not be at the mercy of foreigh finance. He offers decent working conditions and "careers open to talent." Most of all, "My Battle" proclaims the "vigorous, direct action" about which President Roosevelt spoke last March. And Germans, who are racially proud and politically inexperienced, believe in that.

Using a much abridged translation as the basis for criticism, I would say the intellectual or artistic worth of "My Battle" approaches zero. That is not to say that Hitler is a numbskull. On the contrary, he gives evidence of being an extremely shrewd political leader. His chapters on propaganda, oratory, and the other technical phases of political leadership show that he knows about all there is to know about mass psychology. And, although his knowledge of general history is highly colored by emotion, some of his ideas about the past, present, and future foreign policies of Germany show a sound knowledge of real-politik. But "My Battle" is chiefly an evidence of the fanatical faith of its author and his followers of their belief in the divine truth of what Hitler calls his "world theory", in the heaven-appointed destiny of the German people, and in their own missions as the leaders of Germany.

What the responsibilities of office will do to Hitler and his doctrine remains to be seen. Ordinarily the exigencies of practical leadership tend to dissolve theory in expediency. Germany is certainly not in a position today to carry out the Nazi programme entirely, without the risk of a disasterous war or a dangerous isolation. Only the future can show that parts will be applied, what parts rejected, and what part will be allowed to fall into innocuous desuetude. But whatever happens, "My Battle" is of primary importance in understanding the emotional springs of the Nazi torrent.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

"I hereby sentence you to ninety-nine years in the state penitentiary. Have you anything to say to the court?"

"Well, I guess you're pretty liberal with another man's time."

What the Red Cross is Doing in Virginia

Red Cross chapters in Southwest Virginia obtained for needy families of 16 counties, 2 cities and one town a total of 36,328 barrels of flour—2,060 tons, 165 car loads—or 289,904 bags, which if placed in the highway, end to end, would reach 137 miles or from Bristol to Christianburg. Chapters also obtained 807,185 yards—187 miles—of cotton cloth. and 15,247 dozens of ready-made cotton garments,—enough to fill a clothesline 69 mile long. Needy families received 5,807 cotton blankets and comforters, —enough to cover 38 acres. The total value of these relief commodities in conservatively estimated at $259,581,00.

The Lee County Chapter obtained 3·320 barrels of flour; 24,272 yards of cotton cloth; 1,094 dozens of ready-made garments and 480 blankets and comforters, valued at $19,864,70.

In Virginia, 116 chapters obtained 1,615,520 yards—918 miles of cloth; 148,726 barrels of flour—561 car loads—921,462 ready-made garments, or relief worth $942,824 00.

The handling and distribution of this relief has been done by 70,000 volunteer workers, in reaching a total of 86,467 families. A better demonstration of the value of Red Cross chapter emergency relief work has never been made during the past thirty months, when 3,639 chapters with 700,000 volunteer workers served a total of 5,893,000 families in the United States with Red Cross flour, and 5,465,410 families with garments. The relief required an expenditure of $700,000.00 from the national Red Cross treasury.

Out of a population of 2,421,851 Virginia's 116 Red Cross chapters last year enrolled 70,193 members for Red Cross, or 2 9 percent. Of this membership, representing $70,193.-00 Virginia chapters retained $35,096.50 a like amount being contributed to the national funds for national and international work. More than this amount was spent this year in disaster work in Eastern Virginia, from national funds, in the counties affected by the August hurricane and tidal wave, while the chapters of the state have spent from their reserves $101,-897.00 in extending relief to needy families, in addition to the flour and cotton.

This money must be replaced, and Red Cross chapters are depending upon people's generous support during roll call this year, the only source of revenue that Red Cross chapters have.

The Lee County Chapter roll call will be conducted from November 11, to 30. The chairman for the roll call is Mrs. J. C. Wynn. To do its part the Lee County Chapter must enroll 800 members, and for its own program must raise a total of $400.00

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, says: "Many times in a year the people need their Red Cross; once in a year, At Roll Call, the Red Cross needs the people."

Henry I. Harriman, President, Chamber of Commerce of the United States, says; "During the three dark years behind us the American Red Cross rose to supreme heights of faith, courage and efficiency. It made every precious dollar do the largest amount of good."

William Green, President, American Federation of Labor, says: "The Red Cross merits the cordial, generous support of the American people. I suggest to every person with a job or an income, that a dollar contributed to the Red Cross will be put to useful purposes where it will earn large dividends in terms of human welfare and happiness."

The Book Sampler

So many worth while books have come out in the past few months that a more effort to keep up with them is likely to cause a slight shortness of breath.

"The Fault of Angels", heralded as the Harper Prize novel for 1933, has been adjudged worth of the honor bestowed upon it. It is a delightful satire on artistic and musical life typified by a group which revolves around Nina, a native angel of devastating charm. In spite of her weird accent made patent through equally weird spelling throughout, it is easy to believe that Nina, had she existed, would have created just about the furore with which Paul Horgan credits her in his book. Hugh Walpole doesn't need any press-agenting, especially when it comes to his adding another volume to the Herries saga. This social history of England since the Georges is brought to its conclusion in the love story of "Vanessa", great grand-daughter to the old Rogue, and of Benjie, the family scamp a story with all the romantic essences which are beloved of any age and time. And Roark Bradford tells us in "Kingdom Coming" a negro story of the Mississippie Delta in the days of the war between the States. Need it be mentioned that Roark Bradford knows his Negroes?

Not all of the season's books have lived up to expectations. The rarely mistaken English Book Club has endorsed E. Arnot Robertson's 'Ordinary Families". The best summarizing phrase has already been used: "ordinary only in a lunatic asylum."

Louis Bromfield's "The Farm" has achieved some success measured in current sales. It can hardly be called a novel, it is a family chronicle of two early settlers of the Mid-West, their children, grand-children, relations and relations' relations. It is to be heartily recommended to all who appreciate the soil, church suppers and the "Begat" chapter of the Bible.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

ROSE HILL HIGH

By Ferne Davis

Rose Hill High School had a very successful carnival last Monday night, October 30. One of the largest crowds ever present in the High School building came early and stayed late to enjoy a program in the auditorium, followed by the opening of various side shows and booths down stairs. Enjoyable numbers on the program were: Nephisto, the wonder horse, songs by the High School chorus with solo work by Charles Haws, a style show by boys and girls' clothing, and other musical and comical numbers, Mr. A. W. Haines singing and playing was an added outside attraction, following the program directly, were two walks for candy. After these, everyone came downstairs to visit the House of Terror, Faculty Graveyard, Candy Booth, Fishing Booth and other shows.

Mrs. Clark, fifth grade teacher, was in charge of the chapel program Wednesday, November 1. Rev. Neyers talked on the invited speaker.

Mr. Cale Gibson teacher of the sixth and seventh grades, went to the World's Fair at Chicago on the Excursion which left on Saturday and returned Tuesday. His sister, Miss Nannett Gibson taught while he was gone.

The Home Economic classes of last year and this year surely enjoyed their work Monday afternoon. They made candy to be sold at the Carnival, needless to say they had several visitors during the afternoon.

Miss Ada Loftice, who was absent from school a few days last week, is back again.

All pupils and teachers sympatoize with Laura Belle Smith, first year pupil, whose mother is critically ill.

Mr. W. H. Harnes agriculture teacher, was at V. P. I., Blacksburg, last Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Jack Thompson and little daughter, Eva, of Benedict, visited Mr. and Mrs. John W. Green and family here Sunday and also spent some time with Mrs. Thompson who is a patient at Lee General Hospital.

T. B. Quinley of this place was a visitor in Knoxville, Tenn., Thursday.

DIZZINESS

relieved by Black-Draught

"I decided to take Thedford's Black-Draught, as I had been having bilious spells," writes Mr. Chas. B. Stevens, of Columbus, Ind. "When I got bilious, I feel sleepy and tired and do not feel like doing my work. I get awfully dizzy. I know then that I had better take something. After I found how good Black-Draught is, that is what I have used. I guess it rids me of the bile, for I feel better — don't feel like I am dropping off to sleep every time I sit down. That, to me, is a very bad feeling. Now you can get Black-Draught in the form of a TEA, for Constipation.

St. Charles Beat Harlan 7 to 0

By Edna Hale

Coach Richmond's Midgets has done good work throughout the entire season so far, he seems to be very proud of them and they seem to be proud of themselves. This year they have lost three games and won three.

Lost to Appalachia, Norton and Big Stone. Won from St. Paul, Pennington and Harlan.

The defeated Harlan by the score of 7 to 0. The score was made in the first part of the game when the Midgets was near the touchdown line.

Barney Kirk made the touchdown and Captain Pannel threw a pass to Cross for the extra point.

Claude Goins, for the Midgets made a forty yard run in the last part of the game.

PLANE CRASH ON BLACK MOUNTAIN

Lynch — Hundreds of Lynch citizens watched a spinning, careening airplane hurled into the densely timbered mountainside above the Main Store, Saturday, October 14. The pilot W. T. Taylor, of Stone, Ky., was injured in the pelvis and sustained several broken ribs as well as lacerations of the body.

He was at first thought to be out of danger, but developments this week have taken a turn for the worse and it is expected that Mr. Taylor will have a hard fight ahead to recover. Shortly after the crash and while in a semiconcious state, Taylor asked "how his buddy was," causing Lynch officers to make e search for a companion plane, piloted by his brother who was carrying a pasenger. Together the two were distributing advertising in seeking to carry passengers for flights.

The brother flew ahead to the landing field at Big Stone Gap and then came across the mountain in a motor to visit his brother who was then in the hospital. Hundreds of kids pulled and stripped the canvas covering from the framework of the wrecked plane and carried off valuable parts. The plane, an expensive machine of thoroughly modern construction was powered with a Wright Whirlwind motor. It was later removed from the mountainside by the owners. The cause of the unfortunate accident is not known, the pilot making no exact statements. Witnesses observed that he turned his motor off a few seconds before the crash, undoubtedly preventing the plane from burning.

MUSCLE SHOALS NOW POWER "YARDSTICK"

Under Tennessee Valley Authority Big Plant Will Be Operated By and For The Public

Rates to encourage people to use more electricity and by so doing realize the leisure and comfort that are envisioned in President Roosevelt's "planned future" for the nation is the basis for the power policy formulated by the Tennessee Valley Authority. Under the new deal for Muscle Shoals announced by Director David E. Lilienthal, in charge of the Authority's power program, that mighty Tennessee River development takes its natural though long-delayed position as a self-supporting and self-liquidating business run by and for the public.

Under the act creating it, the Authority's favored customers are municipalities and cooperatives, with secondary consideration for private industries. Therefore, municipalities within transmission distance of Muscle Shoals, which own their own distribution systems, may obtain power from that source at an average cost of 7 mills a kilowatt hour half time use. In turn, the Authority proposes that these municipalities retail this power to individual residence consumers — rural and urban—at the following rates:

First 50 kilowatt hours—4 cents per kilowatt hour
Next 150 kilowatt hours—2 cents per kilowatt hour
Next 300 kilowatt hours—1 cent per kilowatt hour
Over 400 kilowatt hours—6 mills per kilowatt hour.

These schedules, both for town and farm, carry with them a requirement that the customer use a reasonable minimum amount each month. These minimum requirements vary, both in urban and rural territory, with the size of the customer's meter. Farm users will naturally have a larger minimum requirement wherever the greater distances between customers result in increased cost of service. The rates have been computed on a conservative basis. All costs of service are included. In addition, provision has been made for items of cost not actually incurred, such as taxes and interest, in order to make fair comparison with privately owned utilities.

Director Lilienthal believes that these very low rates will induce the people of the Valley "greatly to increase their use of electricity, with its attendant benefits—which is one of the objectives of the President and Congress." If this results, even lower rates are possible. "It is apparent," comments Mr. Lilienthal, "that the rates proposed are designed to encourage and make possible the widest use of electric service, with all the individual and community benefits which go with such service. We are at the very beginning of the power age."

The Authority holds that the interest of the public in the widest possible use of power is superior to any private interest.

On the other hand, the TVA does believe that where such conflict can be reconciled without injury to the public interest, such reconciliation should be made.

However, the new TVA doctrine of public rights goes on to say:

"The right of a community to own and operate its own electric plan is undeniable. This is one of the measures which the people may properly take to protect themselves against unreasonable rates. Such a course of action may take the form of acquiring the existing plant, or setting up a competing plant, as circumstances may dictate.

"The fact that action by the Authority may have an adverse economic effect upon a privately owned utility should be a matter for the serious consideration of the Board in framing and executing its power program. But it is not the dominating factor. The most important considerations are the furthering of the public interest in making power available at the lowest rate consistent with sound financial policy, and the accomplishment of the social objectives which low cost power makes possible. The Authority cannot decline to take action solely upon the ground that to do so would injure a privately owned utility."

To provide a workable and economic basis of operations, the TVA plans initial service in three areas: 1. The region immediately proximate to the route of the transmission line to connect Muscle Shoals with the Norris Dam at Cove Creek; 2. The region in proximity to Muscle Shoals, including northern Alabama and northeastern Mississippi; 3. The region in proximity to the Norris Dam, near Knoxville. At a later stage in the development it is contemplated to include, roughly, the drainage area of the Tennessee River in Kentucky, Alabama, Georgia and North Carolina, and that part of Tennessee which lies east of the west margin of the Tennessee drainage area.

While it is the TVA's present intention to develop its power program in this territory before considering going outside, the Authority may go outside the area "if there are substantial changes in general conditions, facts, or governmental policy which would necessarily require a change in this policy of regional development, or if the privately owned utilities in this area do not cooperate in the working out of the program." Among special considerations for going outside such area would be "unreasonably high rates for service and a failure or absence of public regulations to protect the public interest."

"And this is your bump of curiosity."

"Right, Professor. I got that by sticking my head in the elevator shaft to see if the elevator was going up. It was coming down."

e: "Well you women's clothes are getting fewer and fewer."

Sh "Yes, but I'll bet you men don't dread the zero hour like the boys of the A. E. F. did in the trenches.

CHESTERFIELD-CIGARETTES
ARE A BALANCED BLEND OF THE FINEST AROMATIC TURKISH TOBACCO AND THE CHOICEST OF SEVERAL AMERICAN VARIETIES BLENDED IN THE CORRECT PROPORTION TO BRING OUT THE FINER QUALITIES OF EACH TOBACCO

I keep coming back to that word "balanced" on the back of the Chesterfield package

YOU often hear the word balance—something is out of balance—top-heavy, not on an "even keel."

What you read, "Chesterfield Cigarettes are a balanced blend," means that the right amounts of the right kinds of tobacco are welded together; that is, home-grown tobaccos, the right kind, the right quantity—are blended and cross-blended with tobaccos from Turkey and Greece.

When these tobaccos are balanced one against the other, then you have a mild cigarette.

When they are in balance, then you have a better-tasting cigarette.

May we ask you to read again the statement on the back of the Chesterfield package?

May we ask you to try Chesterfield?

Improper Claims for Taxes on Wheat

Honorable Guy T. Helvering, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has issued the following statement with respect to efforts to secuse improper exemptions from the processing tax on wheat.

It has been brought to the attention of the Bureau of Internal Revenue that certain persons are taking unwarranted and unlawful advantage of that portion of section 15 (b) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act which provides that no tax shall be required to be paid on the processing of any commodity by or for the producer thereof for consumption by his own family, employees or household. Among the most noticeable violations which have come to the Bureau's attention is the fact that certain people are purchasing wheat from elevators and are taking such wheat to millers, having the wheat processed into flour and signing affidavits to the effect that they are producers. This is a glaring violation of the provisions contained in section 15 (b) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act and article 9 of Regulations 81, which clearly provide that the producer's affidavit must be signed by the farmer who actually produces the wheat. It has also come to the attention of the Bureau of Internal Revenue that farmers who actually produce wheat are taking their wheat to the mill, having it processed into flour and then selling the flour.

The affidavit which the producer signs contains a statement to the effect that the flour "so received by me from said processor is solely for consumption by my own family or my employes or my household; and that no part thereof will be sold or used for any other purpose." Section 1114 of the Revenue Act of 1926, made applicable to the taxes imposed under the provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act by section 19 (b) of such Act, imposes heavy penalties for violation of the Revenue laws in such cases and reads in part as follows:

"Any person who willfully aids or assists in, or procures, counsels, or advises, the preparation or presentation under, or in connection with any matter arising under, the Internal Revenue laws, of a false or fraudulent return, affidavit, claim or document, shall (whether or not such falsity or fraud is with the knowledge or consent of the person authorized or required to present such return, affidavit, claim, or document) be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both, together with the cost of prosecution."

The Agricultural Adjustment Act was designed to meet an acute economic emergency affecting all the people of the United States. Falsifying producers' affidavits is a flagrant violation of the law and tends to defeat the declared policy of the Act. Therefore, it will be the policy of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to take appropriate action in every case where the provisions of Section 1114 are violated. Every citizen should regard it as a patriotic duty to a sist in the program for economic recovery by reporting to the Collector of Internal Revenue of his district any violations of the processing tax law that come to his notice.

Drama in the New Leisure

A nation committed to a policy of reduced working hours is creating a tremendous new problem of what is to be done with the added leisure. Shortening hours gives the worker not only more time but more creative energy to expend in recreational activities, and it finds no outlet in entertainment on the absorption model. Many who cannot long be satisfied with forms of recreation which relegate them to the role of mere spectators, will turn to the play-producing groups, the amateur theatre There they will find a broad opportunity for practising the many and viried crafts that enter into production, with the added advanages of social followship, self expression and leadership in an organized, disciplined group.

In the great development of the amateur drama that will accompany the new leisure, the assistance of public agencies equipped to offer expert advise may be relied upon. Loans of plays organization of production groups, reference materials upon all probelms involved may be obtained by interested individuals. Full information will be furnished readers of The News who apply to the Extension Division University Virginia.

Good Government Through Education

Opportunity for studying civics duties and responsibilities open to Virginia citizens include not only the familiar extension classes and home study courses but also single lectures or short courses and directed reading courses in local, state and national government. Books for reference use by classes or individual readers are available for loan. Groupes planning progams for their meetings may obtain suggestions of outlines and reading lists to meet particular needs and interests.

One recently developed plan of citizenship education has expanded from the quite of academic halls into the turmoil of active politics. County government, for which optional forms of reorganization were adoptd by tne legislature, has been the subject of an education campain. In at least five counties were elections on the proposed change were ordered, literature and speakers were used to a very gratifying extent.

The whole purpose of the campain was to assure informed votes in the election's and not to advocate either form of government.

Readers of The News may obtain pescriptons of services offered to promote education in citizenship and government by applyto the Extension Divison, University, Virginia.

Every Family of Ewing Given A Fine Cut of Steak

Ewing—An old mountain ballad says, "The farmer feeds them all." That literally happened recently, in the bustling little town of Ewing, when W. E. Breeding, farmer and stock raiser, turned Santa Claus for a day and treated every family in Ewing to a choice cut of fine, grass-finished steer weighing a total of 1370 pounds.

Mr. Breeding decided that he would let all of his neighbors have a part in the feast of the choice animal which he had placed in the pink of condition by careful feeding. Accordingly, when the time came for slaughtering the animal, he enlisted the support of two neighbors, N. B. Richmond and H. C. T. Dean, who took the proposition in charge.

These two men divided the animal up into 120 cuts for the required number of families in Ewing, and each supply was about six pounds of extra quality meat. They distributed it according to instructions from Mr. Breeding, "slighting no family, neither white nor black." Some relatives and friends near Mulberry Gap also were allowed to share in the treat.

Everything was saved, the hide, which weighed 106 pounds, was sold for $3 18 and this amount was turned over to Mrs. R. D. Fugate, who used it to buy literature for the Baptist Sunday School in Ewing.

The whole Ewing community was made happy by the treat, and Mr. Breeding who has always been regarded as an extra good neighbor and friend is now more than ever Ewing's most appreciated citizen.

Pennington High Gladiators Defeat St. Charles Midgets

Pennington High Gladiators defeated St. Charles Midgets here Saturday by the score of 7 to 6. Altho Pennington High was outplayed, they owe the game to their star backfield man Howard Zion who made a 56 yard run in the fourth quarter for the touchdown that tied St. Charles who had scored early in the first quarter. Then Zion made the extra point to win the game, he faked a pass for the extra point and went through the middle of St. Charles line for the winning point. Keel and Zion were the only men on the Gladiators squad that looked like football players, the rest of the boys were either tired or didn't want to play.

The St. Charles Midgets went in the game fighting and outplayed the Gladiators and should have won the game but the score is what counts. The Midgets made 186 yards from scrimmage to the Gladiators 126, 8 first downs to 4 for the Gladiators and completed 4 out of 6 passes.

Grubb, Kirk and Pannell were the outstanding players on the St. Charles Midgets squad.

Hallowe'en Party

Re-opening of Assembly Plant Promised

Janesville—Re - opening of the assembly plant of the Chevrolet Motor company here in the near future was promised today by Ellery L. Wright, former Plant Manager.

Mr. Wright has been in the city for the past several days supervising painting and general reconditioning of the hugh plant on Industrial Avenue, which was by far the largest employer of local labor prior to its being closed in September of last year.

Mr. Wrignt warned that no employment is now available at the plant, and emphasized further that when operations resume here after more than a year of idleness only workers formerly on the rolls will be recalled.

With the assembly line in full operation, as well as the adjacent Fisher body plant, upwards of 1,500 local men again will find employment here with the largest division of General Motors, Mr. Wright estimated.

Mr. Wright let it be known that he will resume management of the local plant when production gets under way. He said he did not think this could take place for the next month or more. Meanwhile, the plant is being prepared, and new machinery installed for the assembly of the latest models of the company.

The plant here was taken over by Chevrolet from the old Sampson Tractor Company and placed in operation in February, 1923 From that date until the closing of the plant in September, 1932, more than 300,000 Chevrolets have been assembled here. This turned into local channels of trade many millions of dollars in payrolls, and sustained the bulk of the population of Janesville.

The plant, along with the Fisher Body operation and dockage area, has more than 660,000 square feet of floor space, and assembles both cars and trucks for a large area of the north-central west.

Weary Willie—Did you ever have all yer wanted of anything?

Tattering Tom—Yep, two things—advice and water.

Industrial Recovery

Richmond — Industrial Recovery is the theme of the Autumn Number of "Virginia, First in the Heart of the Nation, "the state advertising publication of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, which has just been mailed to approximately 8,000 prospective Virginians and interested individuals all over the world.

The publication is designed to show Virginia's assets of power, climate, natural resources, ports, both on Hampton Roads and inland, her commerce, her products that are outstanding, mines, transportation facilities and some of her citizens who are in the national industrial recovery picture.

The cover is devoted to the building of two airplane carriers under contract for the Navy at Newport News, a page shows an iron furnace at Richmond, another is devoted to industries in Giles County, two show outstanding electric power developments in various sections of the State, and air views show the ports of Norfolk and Newport News.

The merchandise terminals of Norfolk and Western at Norfolk are displayed with their products for export, including Virginia apples. The water facilities of Richmond, West Point, Fredericksburg and Petersburg are displayed and rail freight terminals at Alexander and Roanoke and rail facilities at Richmond and bus and air terminals are featured.

The revival of gold mining in Piedmont Virginia is the subject of a page, among the pictures being used are those of modern and ancient machinery, modern mining methods and ancient tools discovered in the shafts.

How the weather is foretold is the subject of a page and coal mining at Dante and other points in the Southwest, Coal Cleaning, coal mine villager, coal yards, coal dumping and coastal coal shipping from Norfolk and Newport News are subjects covered.

Two pages are devoted to the process of cotton manufacture at the Danville plants of the Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills, the C. C. C. Camps are shown at work and Richmond anique reproduction factories are illustrated. There are pictures of the Virginia Advisory Board of Public works and its engineering staff, of Mrs. Roosevelt's visits to Stratford and White Top Mountain, of the pilgrimage of the Future Farmers of America to Monticello, of the dedication of the birthplace markers of Commodore Matthew Fontaine Maury at Fredericksburg, of outstanding Virginians who have been recently honored for their service to the State, of Stephen T. Early, secretary to President Roosevelt, Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service, Paul H. Appleby, assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture, Secretary of the Navy Claude W. Swanson, (all Virginians) and the new presidents of Randolph Macon Women's College, Lynchburg, and Hollins, Roanoke and many others.

The magazine is distributed almost entirely outside of Virginia to advertise the state. It has a wide following and is distributed quarterly.

The Book Sampler

With the return of fashion to silhouette of the 1900's, perhaps literary profiles may also follow suit. The best - known "man-about-town" of that period was Richard Harding Davis, gentleman journalist extraordinary, known for his perfect grooming which dazzled Dana Gibson, his exploits on Broadway which impressed Bessie McCoy (she married him), his dashes over the face of the earth for newspaper copy, which may or may not have given us a rough-riding President, and his stories which amused even Queen Victoria. In fact, Mr. Van Bibber and other of Mr. Davis's heroes who delighted the hearts of finishing-school girls, might in any case have been R. H. D. himself. Fairfax Downey has done justice to "Richard Harding Davis: His Day" in a biography that is dated as a beg-top trousers, and a crisp as the brim of one of those impossible sailors.

There are hairbreadth escapes aplenty in "Memoirs of a Spy" the spy being Nicholas Snowden to English scholars, for the Hungarian name with which he was christened would be a bit difficult. This man served as an Austrian agent against Russia and Italy, then after the war served under cover for Czechoslovakia against Hungary. If you don't like the book, it won't be because it isn't straightforward and the author hasn't a lot to say; it will be because you just wouldn't like that sort of thing anyway.

The latest explanation of German spirit comes from Hitler himself. It was written while sitting in jail, longing for the roaring mob of the "beer-hall putsch".

While this autobiography with the very Hitlerish title of "My Battle" adds nothing to current knowledge about what our Jew-chasing friends across the water are doing, it does make clear the forces which urged them on, and as such should be taken into account.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Farm Butchering Will Pay Well

"There never was a time when the butchery of farm animals would pay bigger dividends than now," says George Herring, animal husbandman, Virginia extension division. "Low farm prices for beef cattle and hogs, and relatives high retail meat prices, have brought about this condition, and made it important not only to supply meat for winter use but also to cure and can an adequate supply for use next spring and summer. Conditions that may be expected to advance retail prices further next year are, somewhat decreased livestock supplies, improved demand for meat, higher cost of distribution, and a processing tax. Farmers can take advantage of this situation by preserving sufficient meat from the low priced animals they have on hand to carry them through the period when it is not practical to kill animals on the farm.

"Pork of course is the meat that lends itself best to curing and canning purposes. Hams, shoulders and sides may be cured and the remainder used fresh or canned. The latter method of preserving should not be overlooked for to often farmers have more fresh pork at killing time than they can use to advantage and too little meat later in the year. In addition to having an adequate supply of cured products for home use, many farmers use them in part payment for farm labor and others sell them. Hams in particular find a ready sale once a reputation for quality is established.

"While pork is most satisfactory for farm use beef, veal, mutton or lamb may be used fresh or canned to add variety to the meat supply. All animals should be well finished for this purpose. There is no method of preservation that will make well flavored and attractive meat from a low grade carcass.

"In order to encourage farm slaughter and assist in the better utilization of meat on the farm, county farm and home agents, with the assistance of animal husbandry and home economics specialists of the extension division, have already planned demonstrations in ten Virginia counties. Since pork is more widely used than other meats, some of the better methods of cutting and canning it will be emphasized. Demonstrations are planned as far as possible for the early part of the killing season in order to be of most benefit to farmers this year."

Mrs. Funk—How long can I live without brains.

Mr. Funk—That remains to be seen.

Give Your Heart To The Hawks

Like all of Robinson Jeffers' work, this poem is in a raw and violent genre. Beginning in fratricide and ending in suicide, it moves against a double background of Rocky seacoast and parched hayfields shadowed by the presences of flying hawks. It is here that Lance Fraser, at the height of a beech party, during the course of which much hard liquor has flowed and some nude bathing taken place, strikes down and kills his younger brother, Michael, in a fit of jealous rage. Lance's auborne haired wife, Fayne, over whom the difference has arisen, is the only witness to the crime. With a cunning and hardihood not a little reminiscent of the Thane of Cawdor's resourceful Lady, Fayne not only makes it appear to the remainder of the party that the death was accidental, but pressed the sullen and unwilling Lance to continue with the deception.

Yet Fraser's concience gives him no rest. He is time and again at the point of making a clean breast of everything, and is prevented from doing so only by his wife's inspired entreaty to bear his cross in silence, to give his heart to the wild hawks to eat rather than to man. In time, Lance falls a victim to his tormented conscience and in a fit of insanity confesses all to his father. The clan instinct is fierce in old Fraser, and rather yield up his son to the law, he orders Lance and his wife to leave the farm. It is while they are on their way to this new life, the unbound independant life which Fayne had always prayed might be theirs, that Lance finally summonds to destroy himself. He leape to his death from a clift.

This is the general direction of the poem. There is, however, at least one other clearly defined subplot and numerous lesser complications which need not cited here. The poem condenses within the space of ninety-eight pages the material for a good sized novel, and gains tremendously in vivinness of effect and solidarity of impact thereby. Several excellant portraits are realized in the process the most memorable of which is certainly that of the passionate and panther like Fayne. The blank verse line of Jeffers is in his most charactesistic manner, long, resonant, and rebounding, humming, with cumulative rythms, in a general pentametric score that rises and falls to the impetus of the poet's own emotian. The language of the poem is generally intense and charged with a warm, lyrical brilliance somewhat in contrast with the unlovely plot material. At its more ungarded moments, it is beneath such labored and highly congested similes: The sun of pain at her heart had rays like shewers of anguist, and speaking of Faynes disturbing hair, "It's like a burst blood vessel in the eye of thought."

At the moment, it is more or less fashionable to collate this poet's work with an impressive symbolic rubric, on the assumption that any piece of writing allowing of symbolic interpretation, was so inteeded by the author. However, a practice of this kind when grafted onto the work of so thoroughgoing a realist as Mr. Jeffers, is futile and irrelevant to the point of being incongruous Symbols are considerably farther from flesh and blood than are Robinson Jeffers' people; and it is perhaps less a flatters than an injustice to the poet to encumber his men and women with a system of abstract vices and virtues, like the actors in an old morality play.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Customer—Yes, but haven't you got a tight fitting gown than this?

Saleswoman (rather tired)—I'm sorry, madam. This is a costumier's—not a taxidermist's.

"Jack Huggins said at the dance last night that I reminded him of a dainty flower."

"A number of others spoke of you as a wall flower."

RUPTURE

OF CHICAGO HERE AGAIN

He will demonstrate the "Meinhardi Rupture Shield" privately in his rooms at the Bristol Hotel, Bristol, Va., on Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 11th and 12th, from 1:00 P. M. to 8:00 P. M. daily.

Ask the Hotel Clerk for the numbers of Mr. Meinhardi's rooms. Only men are invited.

Mr. Meinhardi says: "The Meinhardi Rupture Shield contracts the Opening in 10 days on the average case regardless of the size or location of the Rupture—no matter how much you exercise, lift, or strain." The Meinhardi Rupture Shield is skillfully molded to each individual as a Dentist makes false teeth. (No leg straps and no cumbersome arrangements).

It is waterproof, sanitary, practically indestructible, and may be worn while bathing or sleeping (continuously, day and night) until no longer necessary.

After twenty years of experience—seeing thousands of cases. Mr. Meinhardi will be glad to answer questions regarding all methods for Rupture.

Do not neglect to see him on the above date. There is no charge for demonstration. This visit is for white people only.

Service That Disturbs Competition

TWENTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY

This month marks the twenty-second anniversary of the formation of the company which to day is the largest producers of motor cars and trucks in the world.

On Nov. 3, 1911, the Chevrolet Motor Company of Michigan was organized, and production started on a modest scale, the output for the remainder of 1911 not exceeding five or six cars.

In the full year of 1912 production totaled 2,999 cars. This presents quite a contrast to production in 1933, which has already crossed the 600,000 mark.

During the first year of its existence, nearly the entire output of Chevrolet was sold through retail stores in Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston. With the opening of further retail outlets, the second year of the company's history found production close to 6,000 units. This comparative large volume for that day, necessities opening another plant in New York City.

That Chevrolet was destined to become a volume car was indicated as early as 1915. That year the famous "490" model, so named because it listed at $490, went into production and at the end of the year more than 69,000 units were produced. By this time the main plant of Chevrolet was located in Flint and its dealer organization covered the principal cities of the production facilities of the company. Additional plants were purchased and assembly plants started at Oakland, Cal, Fort Worth, Texas, and a general enlargement of the Flint operation took place.

In 1917 production for the first time exceeded the hundred thousand mark and on May 23, 1918, General Motors purchased all assets of the Chevrolet Motor Company. The history of the rise of Chevrolet in the last fifteen years is well known.

W. S. Knudsen came into the Chevrolet executive organization from General Motors in 1922 and became president and general manager of the company in 1924 Shortly after assuming this office, Mr. Knudsen, recognizing in Marvin E. Coyle, who has been comptroller of all Chevrolet operations since 1917, a man of managerial material, made Mr. Coyle assistant to the president. From this time he had worked quietly behind the scenes with Mr. Knudsen in shaping policies and administrative procedure of Chevrolet.

By co-incidence, Mr. Coyle was named general manager of Chevrolet almost on the eve of the company's twenty-second anniversary. He also entered the General Motors organization in the Fall of 1911, within a few week of the formation of the company which he now heads.

Speaking to a group of executives in his office on Chevrolet's birthday, Mr. Coyle reminded them that since the beginning of the company more that 9,000,000 passenger cars and trucks had been produced and sold, "It took the first 11 years" Mr. Coyle said, "to build the first million vehicles. In the 11 year period ending today, the eight million units were produced."

Chevrolet so far this year, Mr. Coyle pointed out, has obtained 45 per cent of all passenger car business in its price field and is continuing its position of leader in the automotive world, a position it has held for the last three consecutive years and for the last five out of seven years.

Nagging Pains are Warning Signals

TEMPORARY pain relief remedies may save you much suffering at the moment, but putting a mask over a warning signal does not clear up the condition it was telling you to avoid.

When periodic pains, due to a weak, run-down condition, distress you, treatment for the cause of the trouble should be started without delay. Take Cardui to build up against the nagging symptoms of ordinary womanly ailments. So many women praise CARDUI, it must be good to have the widespread use that it has today. Sold at drug stores. SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Now that all ends are even on football with both teams, namely the Gladiators and the Midgets since the bitter fought battle of last Saturday the fans are clamoring for a third game to be played to decide a champion of Lee County since neither of the two teams has anything to boost about.

In a recent conference with Coach Richmond of St. Charles, a third game will not be considered at all this year, so both elevens can go on shouting even honors until pig skin season next year.

The big basket ball loop which no doubt will be called the Mountain Empire Conference will be organized early in December with perhaps 16 teams in it and what a conference it will be. The towns entering will be considered from Wytheville, Virginia to Corbin Kentucky taking in East Tennessee.

The Bonny Blue Cardinals are getting set fast for their entrance into the loop according to Mr. Sye Thomas, the cards will present several new faces in the red bird uniforms this year which will offer a brand of entertainment that will enthuse any crowd. The Cardinals won 18 consecutive games last season without loosing a single game then came the Woco Peps and messed up a nice picture. The Cards only lost three games in the entire season.

In making a survey of sport snap shots this week, the following are the results; Clyde Maness, star back field man of the Virginia High football eleven this year is a former St. Charles lad.

Coach George Sewell Shanks discontinued his work at Benedict the past week end and will possible coach the Bonny Blue Cards again this year when the conference opens.

Buford Rhea, formerly of the Lee Smokies and the Dryden clubs in the Lonesome Pine League signed a professional contract with Toledo in the American Association last week.

Lefty Hobart Scott, star southpaw of the Lee Smokies is now working at Penn Lee according to recent reports.

Kermet Wacks has been selected as the most dangerous man at bat with men on base in the Lonesome Pine League.

Gene Kirk, outstanding back field man of the St. Charles Midgets is suffering a bad arm this week which resulted from practice Thursday.

Hook Zion has been regarded by opposing fans as the entire offensive strength of the Pennington Gladiator team.

Should the two new schools be constructed in St. Charles and Pennington which was approved by the board this week, each will be possessed with a Gymnasium which will be a wonderful asset to students and atheletes of both communities.

And now for the final shots, St. Charles Midgets will play St. Paul at St. Charles Saturday.

Do your part in boosting both elevens to victory.

JOIN TODAY

By Joe Gibbs Jr.

From Maine to California, from border to border and into the far reaches of the outposts of America, the American Red Cross has begun its annual drive for more members.

No one can possibly estimate the amount of noble deeds this worthy organization has accomplished in spreading relief to our nations needy, and yet in order to continue this relief work, the Red Cross must have money, to obtain money it must conduct extensive drives throughout the country to swell its ranks with new members who are eager to join a noble cause.

It is only through the American people that the Red Cross is able to survive, it is their own organization backed by their own money and efforts that enables the Red Cross to carry on. No wonder it is then that America is proud of the "Great Mother." Because it has not only served as an important factor in the relief of our unfortunate's but it has given to us an ideal of self sacrifice and first thought to human suffering as well.

It has thrived where other organizations similar to its type have failed. It has answered the call to far flung points of the globe where suffering is abundant and human needs are intense.

It matters not the distance may be great or the weather fair, but only that it may bring aid, which it is most capable to render when disaster strikes the Red Cross is first to arrive spreading cheer and comfort among panic stricken victims.

Even here in Lee County during the recent slack work period in our coalfield sections, her long arm was first to reach out with flour and Clothing material for the needy. This aid was continued until the funds and supplies were exhausted. This is not the stirring wartime days, but it is a battle equally as strong, the battle against depression. Join the Red Cross today and help America carry on the fight, your dollar may seem small to you, but t will help feed a hungry mouth, and spread a little sunshine where despair has entered and sunshine has fled.

Card of Thanks

We desire to express our thanks to every one of our friends for kindness, sympathy, service and the beautiful floral offerings given in the recent death and burial of our son and brother Palmer Pugh.

Tellit — Certainly! In our office is a stenographer who can run the typewriter, chew gum, hum the latest songs, and plan for a date with her boy friend, all at the same time.

Greenville Swamps Pennington Hi

The Pennington High Gladiators invaded Greenville Friday night with the intention of adding another victory to their string, but was very badly dissappointed. Greenville came out with one of the best teams that Pennington Hi has faced in the past two year. Although out weighed in every department the Gladiators put up a stubborn fight, including the lighest man on the squad who was run into the game during the last quarter

Dnring the last quarter Greenville had the Gladiators backed up to the five yard line and those little fellows, such as Joe (fullback) Farley, Clyde Fugate and Paul Myers who was playing in the line held Greenville for four downs and wouldn't let them gain an inch, well that is what I call fighting

Frederick Lunsford certainly made monkeys out of Greenville on several offensive plays as well as on defense, making yardage on almost every play.

Ralph Smith, Jack Stacy, Tom Tiller, Coy Pridemore, Smith Myers, Johnson Rasnic, Keel, Thompson H. Smith, Don Moore, and every one of the boys really fought, but all that can be said is that they bit off more than they could chew.

Caylor

Mrs. Abbie Chadwell returned home Sunday after spending last week with relatives at Baxter, Ky.

Mr. and Mrs. James Williams and son, Charlie, spent Sunday with relatives in Middlesboro, Ky.

Pat Rowland of Baxter, Ky., spent the week end here with homefolks.

Webb Spurrier, Elmer Walton, and Jack Jones were visiting in St. Charles Saturday night.

Bradley Barker was a caller in Bonny Blue, Sunday.

Robert Guy Pugh, Misses Kathleen Bays and Christine Adams from Pennington were visiting in St. Charles, Saturday night.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Bailey, a son.

Elmer Walton from Jonesville attended the football game here Saturday.

The St. Charles Midgets beat St. Paul in a football game here Saturday. The score was 13 7.

St. Paul made their touchdown in the first part of the game and also made the extra point. St. Charles made one of their touchdown in the middle part of the game, the other was made in the last part of the game but failed to make the extra point.

Eugene Kirk, of St Charles Hi, has been nominated as the best half back in Southwest, Virginia by sport writers.

Mr. Dexter Raines, a student of St. Charles Hi and one of the Midgets is now suffering with a broken arm.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS

The Red Cross has not only served an important factor in the relief of our nations needy, but it has given to us an ideal of self sacrifice and first thought to human suffering as well, it has thrived where other similar organizations have failed, it has answered the call for help at all points of the Globe where suffering is abundant and human needs are intense. To this worthy organization it matters not what the distance may be, but only that it may bring aid which it is most capable to render.

So with these facts in mind, and join the Red Cross today, help someone to help others, thus by doing this you may be assured of doing your bit toward the Golden Rule.

Bonny Blue

By Joe Gibbs Jr.

The yearly Red Cross drive has begun here, with Rev. E. L. Crump chairman of the Lee Conuty Chapter in charge, many new members are expected to be added to the Roll Call this year.

P. L. Barrow has returned from an extensive honey moon trip through the South. Mr. Barrow was recently married to Miss Anna Card, of Blue Diamond, Ky.

Misses Golden Kelly, Etta Rasnic and Rhea Grabeel were here over the week end.

Fred Wallen and Mrs. Conner of Knoxville, Tenn., and Rev. and Mrs. M. H. Carder of Pennington were visiting for a short time here Suuday afternoon.

Curtis Wilson of Retros, Tenn., formerly of this place, has returned again for a season. Mr. Wilson was a freshman last year at Carson Newman College.

Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Henderson are visiting their daughter Hazel, this week at Mary Baldwin College, Staunton.

Quite a number of friends and relatives attended the funeral here Saturday of Mr. Miquel who passed away early Saturday morning, the body was taken to Greenwood Cemetery for burial. Bonny Blue regrets deeply the passing of a good man.

The Cardinals have started practice again in preparation for another hard season no conclusions have been reached yet as to how good this years line up seems, anyway the boys realize they must step lively in order to excell last seasons record run.

Governor's Proclamation Asks Wholehearted Support of Red Cross Roll Call

Richmond — Governor Pollard today issued a proclamation calling upon the citizens of Virginia to join the Red Cross, an durging that the work of the orginization be stressed at public gatherings. The proclamation follows:

Whereas, the Seventeenth Annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross will be conducted from Armistice Day, November 11th, to Thanksgiving Day, November 30th.

Whereas, this period has been set aside to afford everyone an opportunity to enroll or renew membership in the American National Red Cross.

Whereas, The President of the United States, as President of the American National Red Cross, has issued a proclamation, calling upon the people to enroll as members in this legion of mercy.

The American National Red Cross is a national and worldwide instrumentality for relief and service of mankind when visited with elemental or other destruction, desolation or devastation, active to solve the problems of public health and to assist in all other humanitarian projects.

Now, therefore, I, Jno. Garland Pollard, Governor of Virginia urge upon the citizens of our State that they respond wholeheartedly to the Seventeenth Annual Roll Call by enrolling their names under the banner of the American National Red Cross, and suggest that the work of this organization be especially emphasized at all public gatherings to the end that this humanitarian service continue to enlarge its scope.

"Given under my hand and under the lesser seal of the Commonwealth, at Richmond, this eleventh day of November in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-three and in the one hundred and fifty-eighth year of the Commonwealth."

Soph—Will you give us ten cents to help the old ladies home?

Frosh—What! Are they out again?

Look Back to Glory

South Carolina has long awaited a champion to perpetuate the full blown civilization that was hers before the Civil War. Those who cherish her good name can not but have envied the better fortune of her sister state, Virginia, whose native born authors have perhaps too riotously strewn roses to the throng Out of neglect, however, has at last come fulfilment, for Herbert Ravenel Sass's "Look Back to Glory", a romantic novel of the highest type, proves ambily vindication. It is assuredly fitting that Charleston, the cradle of early Southern as well as early American letters, should achieve her heritage by the hands of a true son. The time is not far distant when a just and careful appreciation of South Carolina authors will be written, and when that time comes Sass will not be found missing from the list. Already he has achieved distinction by the moving spirit of his nature studies. His hand is somewhat new to fiction but it is none the less careful.

It is not within the reviewer's province to judge the merits of romantic fiction as a literary end. This book frankly proclaims its genre and may be discussed only in the light of what it attempts to do. It could have been fathered by no school but the romantic, since the very essence of life within the Charleston city-state of the 1860's was a chivalry and a code looking back to the days of knighthood. In the hurdy-gurdy civilization of today fine tenets of living are largely obsolescent and hence laughable. To read this book between a ham sandwich and a cup of coffee is to judge it melodrama. To enter it through the warmth of the fireside is to judge it vital and good.

The opening chapters present Richard Acton, expatriate from his ancestral home, returned from an unsuccessful diplomatic career with only the memory of a very beautiful and very heart-rending love affair to solace him. Possessing a wisdom denied his friends, he clearly sees the imminent collapse of South Carolina's magnificent feudal civilization. His reasoning is unconvincing and even traitorous to his hot blooded and gallant friends. Into this tense situation comes Diane Rowland, affianced of James Hail, a typical Southern knight with a finely spun sense of honor. Follows a dazzling moment of love at first sight, and close on the heels of it a duel and a tragic misunderstanding which ends only with the death of both Hail and Acton on the crumbling walls of Fort Sumpter. In any other field and in less capable hands these would be but stock situat ons, but Sass has blown into them the breath of reality and life.

This vivid story of a great love and a great hate moves against an important background of both history and description. Chroniclers of the Civil War have had little to say concerning the way in which South Carolina's living and thinking directed the course of a nation into confict. They have made little attempt to understand the immense implications residing in its civilization of democratic aristocrats, who divided their years between the drawing rooms of Charleston and the live oak forests and rice fields of their plantation homes in the Low Country. Both by instinct and affection Sass has the right to interpret here with authority. Not the least virtue of "Look Back to Glory" is the genuine feeling of emotion with the book evokes, not the emotion of sentiment but the emotion of understanding.

The earlier book and articles of Sass have been redolent with the beauty of the wild life of his native state. The present novel provides amble opportunity for a continued excellence of description. The flight of a curlew flock, wing to wing, is seen as "more beautiful by far than any wind-ruffled water, because there was life in it, and a wealth of warm color never found in any sea or lake, and because of a strange, faint, golden mistiness that seemed to glorify those shimmering wings." There are occasional moments, however, when the author lapses. Concerning the song of the mocking bird it is said: "The silver thread of sound snapped, obliterated by a storm of hand-clapping." There is something ludicrous about obliterating a thread, but, fortunately, these instances are too few to mar what seems to the reviewer one of the most sensitive pieces of literature that has come out of the Southland in many years.

The Book Sampler

To call "The Journey of the Fame" an historical novel of the California's in the 1800's is to do it injustice. To call it a picture of the Spanish feudal system which languished and died with the Gold Rush is to come nearer the truth. And to call it roving adventure with a Spanish-Irish called Jaun Colorago (Red John) is to state merely an earnest of the interest which this volume arouses. At the age of twelve the red-head joined the retinue of the Spanish Inspector General on his trip from Lower California to San Francisco. From then on life to this tough hombre was splendidly hazardous. Because of, or in spite of, his great courage ("We fear no king nor devil; only God when he is just"), he lived to tell of his adventures at one hundred years of age. Antonio de Fierro Blanco in his novel has set this down.

There has been an upset in the short story field. The favorite, Ernest Hemingway's "Winner Take Nothing", makes a mighty poor showing, in spite of the fact that Hamingway is recognized as the modern American master of this art, and his raw material is as raw as ever. Of fourteen stories in the volume, only one makes the grade. The O. Henry Memorial Award: Prize Stories of 1933 were chosen from 9552 considered by the editors. And be it said that most of them are good, though one or two of the selections would raise a whether the judges had not become wearied and chosen by the simple expedient of "Eenie-meenie-minie-mo". However, there are Marjorie Kinnan Rawling, Conrad Aiken, Pearl Buck. A collection of life stories from first hand experience or observation by twenty seven authors is just about the best of the lot. They range from "Muscadines for Pink Corsets" to "West of Omaha" and make a panorama of "Life in the States" which would be hard to beat.

IF HORSES COULD TALK

. . . . . Here's one that would tell you why you need a telephone on your farm!

A VALUABLE horse became dangerously sick. Something had to be done by the farmer at once.
Rushing to the telephone he called a veterinarian who arrived just in time to save the animal's life. And by bringing help so quickly the telephone paid for itself for many years to come.

The rates for telephone service are so low as to put it within reach of every farmer. Ask at our Business Office about them.

"This is GAS AND OIL MONEY —BELIEVE IT OR NOT!"

Sally: "Really? Tell me about it, Helen." Helen: "Well, as I use the car most of the time these days and actually buy the oil and gas, Dick thought it a good plan to turn the car budget over to me entirely." Sally: "How does that give you extra money?" Helen: "I have more time than Dick and have learned some surprising things about the cost of car operation. Dick thought all gas and oil sold at approximately the same price were of equal value. When the motor broke down, he considered it just hard luck and paid the repair bill." Sally: "Isn't it?" Helen: "No! It is poor motor protection. More than half the entire motor wear occurs during the few minutes of starting when the motor is cold. Only one brand of oil—Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil—penetrates the metal so that a portion of it, nearly a quart, stays up in your motor, greatly reducing the wear. So checking back on repair bills that were paid before I changed to Conoco, we've saved a lot of money this last year." Sally: "What about gasoline?" Helen: "To me that choice depended on quick starting —Dick used to choke the car until he was wild. It wasted so much gasoline in cold weather—ran the battery down and the nerves, too. With Conoco Bronze, the motor starts at the first turn and has power galore—goes further on each gallon and is anti-knock also. So you see how I did it?" Sally: "I certainly do, Helen—and I think you're a very clever girl!"

Full motor protection, especially in cold motor starting, can be found only in Conoco Germ Processed (Paraffin Base) Motor Oil because the penetrative oiliness, called "The Hidden Quart" stays up in your motor and never drains away.

Instant Starting and Lightning Pick-up can best be obtained with Conoco Bronze Gasoline, and highest sacrifice of Long Mileage, Greater Power and Anti-Knock advantages. For cold weather starting it cannot be excelled.

SPORT CHATTER
By Virgil Q. Wacks

Saturday afternoon marked the final dissolve of another interesting grid season with the St. Charles Midgets who finished their season schedule by defeating St. Paul the fifth consecutive time in three years by a score of 13 to 7. The seasons schedule complete yields four victories and four defeats for the St. Charles lads which is a very fine record when you take into consideration the strong competition they had to face throughout the entire circuit.

My nomination for the best half-back in Southwest Virginia, regardless of where you search in Lee, Wise or Scott Counties is Gene "Barney" Kirk. For the entire season this husky 191 pound pile driver has gained ground against all competition on most every attempt and has been the complete core of strength in keeping the Midgets up to where they stood in the wining column, he has made numerous touchdowns, adding two more to his list Saturday, the first one he ran 30 yards shaking half the St. Paul team ofi his back and kept going, the second he carried the ball and two men about six yards for a counter.

For the best quarter, I nominate Hook Zion of Pennington giving him the same honors for that position, a more complete story in detail will be given on the Gladiators when the season is finished.

By the way, this is not a want add column, but Roy Tomlinson and S. C. Yeary and their friends are in the market for a two seated buggy, if you know of one anywhere in Lee County, please drop these boys a card, Roy already has the horse, the hornets and the hay.

Basket ball season is pretty darn near and this season this game is going to bring more attraction and interest to fans of Lee County than ever before because fourteen times more effort is going to be put behind the cage loops which will guarantee valuable entertainment.

Miss Evelyn Williams and Miss Doll Payne who are members of the Bonny Blue girls basket ball team made a radio debut over WNOX in Knoxville, Tenn , Saturday afternoon singing a number of songs with their promoters, they also attended the U. T. Ole Miss foot ball game after the program, they received a return engagement to sing over the station of the Smokies WNOX. This station is also a member of the Columbia Net Work.

Another Lee Smoky signed a professional contract with the Knoxville Smokies of the Southern League last week, he will probably replace Pepper Rea since he is a dandy catcher and is known as "Soapy". He made a fine average as the season closed this fall and critics believe he will have a great chance to stick as second string catcher in the Southern loop.

Five men have already signed this year to enter professional ball from the Lonesome Pine Leagne. Soapy Wacks, Hobart Scott, Beuford Rhea, Clay Barker and Rudolph Parsons. Others will probably receive contracts before spring training gong begin to sound.

The Bonny Blue Cardinal basket ball team began practice last week and reported a good start as several new faces were out to try for the new Cardinal squad. If you think you can play basket ball and are really interested, come to Bonny Blue and make a try for the team, you will receive a fair chance as the Cards will be out for all there is in it this year to win the flag.

Use This Laxative made from plants

Thedford's BLACK-DRAUGHT is made from plants that grow in the ground, like the garden vegetables you eat at every meal. NATURE has put into these plants an active medicine that stimulates the bowels to act — just as Nature put the materials that sustain your body into the vegetable foods you eat.

F. F. A's. Meet

Ewing—The F. F. A's of Ewing met November 10, and gave the following program.

Opening ceremony by officers.

Reading of minutes and roll call by Secretary.

Tobacco Growers should try this—Willard Stanley.

Something Wrong—Walter Jenkins.

Dangers of R dical Inflation—Porter Richmond.

Willard Stanley in speaking of his subject said, "The tobacco growers should have some sort of a system in getting the tobacco on the market. Instead of everybody trying to be the first to get his tobacco on the floor consequently filling up all the warehouses the first day, the growers should have it so arranged and worked out that just enough tobacco comes in at a time to keep the market hungry. The farmer is always anxious to sell and especially does he try to sell before the other farmers can sell. This state of affairs will lend to low prices in any business and unless farmers learn to cooperate they can never hope to get their full value. They buy from an organized market and sell to an organized market and the only way they can hope to hold their own is to sell as an organized unit".

Walter Jenkins gave this to the group to think about. "The packer filled his packing houses with ten and twelve cent beef when cattle were high. Then came the slump and in order to move his beef he was forced to sell at a reduced price and no doubt even then made a fair profit. But now that business is picking up and the price of beef is advancing, he is replacing the beef he sold at reduced prices with cattle that are almost given him. The packers are right now growing rich at the expense of the cattle grower and unless the government can correct this situation most of the growers of Southwest Virginia, will not be able to restock this fall. Ask your Congressman to institute an investigation and see what's wrong. If the government can guarantee a fair price to industry and prohibit the sale of goods below the cost of production why not prohibit the farmer from selling his cattle below the cost of producing them?

Among the important points Porter Richmond brought out was this." Low prices are not due to a lack of money, but are due to a decline in exchange is due to a lack of confidence in investments and that a lack of confidence delays business recovery and keeping prices adnormally low.

The next regular monthly meeting will be devoted to thrift.

Bruce Crockett, Reporter.

There are 6 types of home-grown tobaccos that are best for cigarettes

BRIGHT TOBACCOS
U. S. Types 11, 12, 13, 14.
BURLEY TOBACCO
U. S. Type 31.
SOUTHERN MARYLAND TOBACCO
U. S. Type 32.

U. S. Type 11 is produced in the Piedmont Belt of Virginia and part of North Carolina.

U. S. Type 12 is produced in eastern North Carolina.

U. S. Type 13 grows in South Carolina.

U. S. Type 14 is produced mostly in southern Georgia—a few million pounds in northern Florida and Alabama.

U. S. Type 31 includes what is called White Burley tobacco. It was first produced by George Webb in 1864. It is light in color and body, and is milder than the Burley used for pipes.

U. S. Type 32, Maryland tobacco, is noted for its "burn". In this respect Maryland excels most other tobaccos.

Chesterfield ages these tobaccos for 30 months—2½ years—to make sure that they are milder and taste better.

Virginia, Economic And Civic

Governor Pollard summarizes well the excellence of this timely and useful book when he characterizes it as comprehensive, authoritative, scholarly, and skillfully prepared. It is conservative in detail and precise in statement, "presenting an exceptional basis for an understanding of the Virginia of today, and of the opportunities for material progress which are ahead of us." It is significant that this outstanding contribution to the knowledge on Virginia should appear at the time when the whole nation is engaging in a gigantic cooperative effort to initiate a new era of a sound and well founded prosperity. The Virginia Chamber of Commerce and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute deserve highest praise for this scientific stock-taking of the resources of Virginia at a time when it is of the greatest value in plotting the assuredly bright future of the economic life of the State. Every state in the Union man will follow this example in inventorying its resources as a scientific basis for its future economic activities. Indeed such a stock-taking is a national necessity as the basis for an enduring, well balanced rational future prosperity.

This book of 427 pages is divided into sixteen chapters, well indexed, printed with very readable type on good paper and well bound. The edition is limited to seven hundred copies. Approximately one hundred persons participated in the large labors of making the researches and editing the manuscript. In addition to the editorial staff, State and federal experts and officials collaborated in assuring a scientifically accurate and well rounded portrayal of the economic resources and governmental institutions of the State. The first two chapters are devoted to a brief but well written historical statement of the economic and industrial development of Virginia These are followed by chapters on climatic, topographical and geographical elements, mineral, forest and fish resources, agriculture, water supply and waste disposal, labor situation, transportation, Virginia market analysis, State and local governments, wealth, debt and taxation, financial institutions and education.

The book, though the work of many experts and collaborators, is so well edited as to style and sequence as to avoid all semblances of being a disjointed symposium. Nor do its authors laden it with dull statistics of doubtful value. It is not a rehash of governmental statistical abstracts. Statistical material has been judiciously chosen and presented in compact and clearly explained form. The explanatory text does not attempt to inflate the meaning of the quantitative data, nor to deduce unreasonable conclusions from it. On the other hand, the book is not solely descriptive nor academic in the unfortunate and customary use of the latter term. Brief but excellent bibliographies of sources accompany each chapter. The authors have studiously avoided special pleas for the exploitation of any particular industrial, commerical or other economic resources as great profit-making ventures, designed as shallow propaganda.

Naturally one does not find elaborated analyses of economic problems confronting Virginia in this book. The nature, purpose and scope of the book neither justify nor permit this. Yet, between the lines, the reader may find a few critical notes in such instances as the discussion of sewage disposal and the pollution of streams, lack of funds for forestry conservation, the conservation of oyster and fish resources, and the fact that the census average of Virginia wage earners is thirty per-cent lower than the rest of the United States. Except for the excellent treatise on the tax laws and their application, and a brief discussion of labor laws, scant attention is given to legislative regulation or laws touching on commercial, industrial, mining, banking public service corporation, and other types of business in Virginia. This is offset to a considerable extent by the remarkably clear and complete chapter on Virginia State and local government. There may also be criticism of the chapter on the market areas covered by various Virginia cities, through this data is based on researches of the United States Department of Commerce, and the boundaries of the areas of these city markets plotted by the Department of Commerce. This chapter gives little space to the markets for Virginia products outside of Virginia, that is, in other states and foreign countries. The study does not cover the tourist trade in Virginia nor the business of the beaches, resorting places, and hotels. No treatment of the historical background of Virginia, other than from an economic viewpoint, is attemped by the authors. The scope and nature of the book scarcely call for a sentimental presentation of the political, social and military history of the State.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Two outstanding coaches with two very noted grid elevens that doesn't know defeat or how it feels to be tied as they refer to their recently comp'eted schedule of 1933 are concentrating on one thought and one aim which one or the other will accomplish Saturday that will bring the championship flag of Western Virginia to their respective hanger when the most outstanding and interesting grid game of the State is over at Appalachia this week end.

The two mentors are Don Fletcher of the Appalachia Bulldogs and coach Porterfield of Virginia High at Bristol. Each have accomplished a perfect record this year with only one more tilt to play which will mean everything to the winner and a buggy load of alibis for the looser.

The Bonny Blue Cardinals have recently reorganized their basket ball team which will be piloted by Tyler Horton for the 1933-34 season. An exhibition game will be played probably so the new coach can feel out the new prospects and get a faint idea of what the new Cards are going to look like this year.

Any independant teams desiring a game with the Cardinals should consult Mr. Sye Thomas of Bonny Blue at once and arrange a date as the schedule of two games per week will soon be completed.

Lee County Students Making Good at Tennessee Wesleyan College

Lee County should be proud of her Boys and Girls who are attending Tennessee Wesleyan College, at Athens, Tenn. Lee County has six boys and two girls in school there. They are Tyrus and Tavis Marcum, Don Chance, Thomas and Lynette Edds from Hagan, Miss Grace Poulston formerly of Rose Hill, who recently moved to Hilton, where her father is pastor of the M. E. Church there. Fuston LaForce of Jonesville, and Clarence A. Carder from Pennington.

Each one of these are very popular members of student body. They are all members of the senior class. The Marcum brothers are known for their excellency in football, basketball and baseball. They are both members of the Eta Iota Tau Fraternity, Y., M. C. A Philomathean Literary Society and the Phiby Chem C'ub, also Populerina Dramatics.

Probably one of the best known in the football circle is Fuston LaForce from Jonesville. On November 4th, Wesleyan met Hiwassee College, it was the spectular running of LaForce which paved the way to victory for Wesleyan. LaForce made one of the nicest runs that was ever seen on a Wesleyan Football field. Taking the ball he ran 71 yards for a touchdown for Wesleyan. Before coming to Wesleyan, LaForce had never played a game of football, but he has turned out to be one of the best players at Wesleyan. He is a member of Phi Pi Delta Fraternity, Philomathean Literary Society and the Y. M. C. A.

Thomas Edds of Hagan, is Editor and Chief of the Nocatula, the school paper, a member of the Eta Iota Tau Fraternity, Phi-Bi Chem Club, Philomathean Literary Society, and the Y. M. C. A. and a member of the Student Council.

Don Chance of Hagan, is President of the Senior Class, and the Philomathean Literary Society. He has charge of the Lyceum Members of the College. He is also a member of the Y. M. C. A. Phi Pi Delta Fraternity, and the Phi-Bi Chem Club. He is one of the most popular students on the Wesleyan Campus.

Clarence A. Carder of Pennington Gap, is one of the most popular students on the Wesleyan Campus. He has served for two years as the College Cheer Leader. He is also a member of the Philomathean Literary Society, Y. M. C. A. He is also Vice-President of Brotherhood, and is a member of the Religious Council, Orchestra, Glee Club, Moffitt Music Club, and the Choir of the First M. E. Church. He has held offices in nearly all of the clubs and societies to which he belongs. He also plays basketball. He had the honor of leading the Grand March.

Miss Grace Poulston is one of the most popular girl at Wesleyan. She is a member of the Knightonian Literary Society, Y. W. C. A. Glee Club, Moffitt Music Club, and the Preachers Kids Club. She has held many responsible offices in the clubs to which she belongs.

Miss Lynette Edds of Hagan, is another popular student. She is a member of Knightonian Literary Society, and Home Economics Club.

EWING BOY IS BADLY INJURED

Ewing — Eugene Hall, about 17 years old of Ewing, is in the Evans Hospital, critically injured, as a result of a car wreck which occured early Monday night, near Rose Hill. Hall was in a car with several other people and were passing a truck of the Malone freight line, when a collision with the rear of the truck took place. The car was turned over and Hall seriously injured, the others escaping with minor bruises.

Hall suffered cuts about the face, a crushed chest, and possibly internal injuries. He is given only a slender chance to recover.

A fellow was met at the gate of heven by St. Peter and asked what he had done on earth willingly—something that he didn't have to do.

Whereup the stranger brought to mind the one occurrence of his life. "I remember one time I saw a poor boy on the corner selling papapers, and I bought one for a cent, gave the boy a dime, and told him to keep the change."

Then St. Peter told the stranger that he must take up the matter with Sar Gabriel. And after due explinations, Gabe replied, "Just give him the nine cents change back and tell him to go to hell."

Gene—Bill, has the depression hit you yet?

Bill—I'll say it has—first I lost mah job and went back to father's to live; sent my two chillun to de orphen's home; my wife went back to her mother an' I shot my dog.

Gene—That's bad.

Bill—Yes, if times gets any worse, I'se afraid I'll have to give up mah car.

Loyalty

If you work for a man, in heaven's name work for him. If he pays wages that supply you your bread and butter, work for him, speak well of him, think well of him, stand by him, and stand by the institution he represents. I think if I worked for a man I would work for him. I would not work for him part of his time but all of his time. I would give an undivided service or none. If put to a pinch, an ounce of loyalty is worth a pound of cleverness. If you must villify, condemn, and eternally disparage, why, resign your position, and when you are outside, damn to your heart's content. But I pray you, so long as you are a part of an institution, do not condemn it. Not that you will injure the institution—not that—but when you disparage the concern of which you are a part, you disparage yourself.

You Owe $2,000

You, the averge citizen, are in debt $2,000. So is your wife. So are each of your children and all other relatives. So is everyone else in the country.

A part of this debt you know about. You contracted it as a personal obligation. It's entirely your responsibility. But another-and larger part-was contracted for you. The chances are that you don't even realize you owe it-no one is dunning you for payment, and you aren't so much as paying the interest directly.

This latter is the public debt, which composes a substantial proportion of a total national debt in excess of $200,000,000,000. It's been growing at an accelerated rate during and since the war. You've permitted it to grow. You and your fellow citizens weren't sufficiently interested in government to work for policies standing for economy and efficiency. Or you voted for measures that increased the debt because it was easy to do, and didn't seem to effect you financially at all.

As a result we are paying one of the highest tax rates in history. Millions of our dollars go yearly to meet the interest on debt we permitted government to contract for us. Billions will be required to retire the public bonds we gave our debtors in exchange for their money. And every business, every individual, feels the burden.

Do your part as a voter and taxpayer, to reduce the national debt, by opposing projects that will increase it.

Chump—Yes, I take very naturally to dancing. My business has helped me a lot.

Dolly—What is your business?

Chump—Furnitute moving

The Edwardian Era

Writing in that same brilliant, incisive style which is distinctly French, Andre Maurois goes to the courts and parliaments of Edwardian Europe for nine chapters which are like as many groups of cleanly cut line engravings. Movements and characters are no mystery to him, as he directs his way through the first years of our century with beautifully executed strokes of his biographical scalpel.

For him the history of an era is in the least mutable characteristics of its great personalities, and in a few issues which can be expressed in terse and striking phrases. Maurois, like the traditional French mind, is a realist in an analytical way: he says, "These things are so, and here are the causes."

And it is not in his nature to let those causes become too complicated; he keeps them where he can see them, and where the reader can see them.

Where the French Maurois analyzes, a German would synthesize, starting with the causes and building up an immanent structure of results. An Englishman would be factual and very tiresome. Maurois is never that. He prefers to be penetrating rather than accurate.

Thus we learn that "Power is disputed in every parliamentary country by two great parties, disguised beneath transparent and conventinal masks. In the days of Louis-Philippe, France knew them as Resistance and Movement; under Loubet they were styled right and left. The England of 1830 called them Tories and Whigs; of 1870, Conservatives and Liberals. The names change; the contest goes on." This, though not so original as most of the matter in "The Edwardian Era", is a convenient example of Maurois' nice thinking. It is pleasant to see things as clearly as that, especially when in real life they are so confused that we cannot understand them until we invent terms to which we try to fit the entangled details by the dozen.

Likewise we read that "The desire to appear strong made William II assume theatrical and aggressive poses. If they made an impression he was childishly gleeful in his triumph, boasting so obstreperously of his skill that he seemed a simpleton. Resistance made him crumble and collapse into his natural weakness; he would become tearfully affectionate, begging to be rescued from his quandary. Thus his whole life was spent in alternating cycles of violence and depression."

And for countless other charreters he does the same. There is Victoria, of whom he says, "The virtues and taste of the middle classes were her own," and whom he somehow makes plausible to us; and he speaks of the "gentle tenacity" of Albert. There is Edward, who "like the Queen, looked for accuracy — rather than beauty in works of art." All the giants of the age, Disraeli, who "improvised on national pride," Gladstone, Salisbury, Balfour, Joseph Chamberlain, Rosebery, Harcourt, Sir Henry Campbell - Bannerman, "familiarly known as C. B.," who "seemed predestined to smooth ruffled self-esteems," down the list to Asquith, Lloyd George, and Sir Edward Grey, all of them appear before the reader for a brief space with their aims, their capacities and their foibles for a moment clarified.

This is Maurois at his best, the biographer with the eye to the more glittering of human talents and weaknesses, with a genius for seeing that which is most apt for expression in his sudject and that which will be most gratifying to the reader. Strange to say, the biographer whom Maurois most strongly resembles in this latest book of his is not a Frenchman, but an Englishman Macaulay. In facility, in aptness of selection, in choice of striking words, in his arresting antithetical style, in all his faults and virtues, the author of "The Edwardian Era" is the double and the beer of the one biographer who preened himself among the mangy literary birds of the past century.

Baggage Totters

They are "Red caps" no longer, they are "ushers." At least that is how the 25 baggage toters at Louisville Union Station are now styled, according to the November L&N Employes' Magazine. The ushers now work under the direction of a chief usher, William E. "Pink" Thompson, who has been recruited from their own ranks.

"The former red caps," says the L&N publication, "have fallen in with the idea body and soul and are putting forth a brand of service particularly satisfying to their customers."

Chief Usher Thompson has formed his men into a fraternity for the purpose of improving their own welfare.

Rose Hill

Dr. and Mrs. D E. Pierce recently entertained with a birthday party in honor of their son, John David's sixth birthday.

Miss Cornie Parrot spent the past week end as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Thomas at Norton.

J. B. Pierce returned Monday to his home in Norton after spending the week with friends at Rose Hill.

Mrs. Nan Lee Stickley is confined to her home by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Royal Fugate of Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. Nat Fugate of Middlesboro, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Colby Southern and Miss Lucy Bales spent last Sunday visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fugate.

Miss Lucy Bales has returned from a visit in Knoxville, Tenn.

Reading With a Purpose

The value of the personality of a great teacher cannot be gainsaid, yet the more the successful teacher becomes a middleman between his students and ideas in books. They are the principal instruments through which we gain a knowledge of the past achievements of the race and an insite into the highest thoughts and aspirations of man.

To extend the opportunity for knowing good books is the purpose of a battery of newly developed directed reading courses. They have been prepared by eminent scholars who supply supplementary discussions to illuminate the readings and exchange views with students undertaking independent work. The first offering of courses falls within such broad fields of human interest as literature, science, history and rural life. Typical subjects are modern biography and poetry, foreign literatures, the Tennessee Valley project, agriculture in the new deal, the new deal, the new leisure, home management and decoration, and home gardens.

High school graduates not in college, study clubs and individuals studying independently anywhere will find these courses profitable. As readers of The News may obtain complete information without charge from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

The Indians Gathered Barks From The Sacred Trees-And Trees of Life And Used Them For Many Ailments.

Seminole System Regulator is a powerful, Invigorating Tonic.

Be yourself again. Enjoy life at its best. Eat with a hearty appetite, sleep and rest as Nature intended, through the aid of this marvelous remedy. Thousands of run down men and women have stated that the very first few doses seems to pick them right up and put them on their feet.

It is not only a powerful reconstructive tonic, designed to impart tone and strength to the entire system, but it is a constitutional treatment as well and exerts a tremendous influence upon the processes of assimilation and elimination. It also contains other ingredients of recognized therapeutic value which are valuable for their influences upon the appetite and indigestion.

If you do not wake up in the morning feeling rested and refreshed and ready for a good hearty breakfast; if you are not brim full of energy and ready for a good day's work you are not enjoying the blessings of health that should be yours.

It is not natural for people to simply drag through life, never knowing what it is to enjoy a well day. Nature never intended it, so profit by the experience of others—increase your body vigor, eat with a keen, hearty appetite, enjoy a new kind of sound, refreshing sleep and get a new grip on life through the aid of THE WONDER MEDICINE OF THE AGE.

SCOTT CO. SLAYER IS REFUSED BOND

Pending a preliminary hearing, an application for bond Tuesday was denied John Bishop, 60-year old Scott countian who is charged with fatally wounding Eugene Clark, 33-year-old Bloomingdale Tenn, man, in an altercation at Bishop's home near Gate City Monday night.

No date has been set for Bishop's preliminary hearing and he is in jail at Gate City.

Clark died at 12:30 a. m; Tuesday at a Kingsport hospital, six honrs after Bishop sent the full lot of a 12-guage shotgun into his stomach.

"John did me dirty, were among the last words of the gunshot victim, who could assign no reason for Bishop's act.

"We were not mad" before the shooting, Clark told officers. "Me and Ottway (Bishop's son) were sitting in one room talking about getting some wood and Ottway said he'd haul the wood for me tomorrow. Then John came through the door with the shotgun in his hand and shot me."

"Did Bishop say anything to you before he pulled the trigger?" Clark was asked.

"No, he didn't say a word."

"Was John Drunk?"

"Yes."

"Were you drunk?"

"I had had several drinks and I was feeling pretty good, but I knew what I was doing."

Was there anyone else in the room other than you and Bishop's son?"

"No, the rest of the family was in another room."

"Did you make any move toward Bishop or did you have anything in your hands when Bishop came in with the gun?"

"No."

"Where did you get the liquor?"

"John and me and the two boys bought it over on the Island, (at Kingsport)"

"How long had you been together?"

"Since 4 o'clock."

After the shooting an ambulance was called but persons at the Bishop home would not allow Clark to be moved until the arrival of Sheriff Darnell of Scott county. The ambulance men were ordered at the point of a gun to leave Clark alone when they started to place him on a stretcher. J. B. Weaver and J. M. Hamlett told officers.

Bishop told Sheriff Darnell he shot Clark in self defense as the latter menaced him with a knife.

Past Causes of Present Troubles

Because of its free land, wages in America down to 1885 had been higher, working conditions better, and hope for advancement more abundant for the worker than in any other part of the world. But when the land had been appropriated, the natural resources seized, and large-scale manufacturing begun, there arose the dispossessed and hopeless proletariat feared by Jefferson. Cleveland, honest, able and fearless, had no social policy. On the threshold of the Age of Big Business he held fast to doctorines applied by Jefferson to a nation of four million republican farmers. He had neither understanding nor sympathy for the new social forces. Labor unrest he would put down by armed force, while the predatory barons who were plundering the country with ruthless might be considered good Americans making work for thousands.

Here follow an evaluation of books explaining the background of recent history, and an organization of the readings into fundamental topics. The whole is a sample of a variety of directed reading courses. Readers of The News may obtain full information about them from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

L. & N. Passenger Increase Over Year Ago

L&N passenger traffic revenue for September 1933 exceeded that of September 1932 by 11 2 per cent, the first achievement of its kind since 1926, according to the L&N Employes' Magazine for November.

Since April 1, 1933, the L&N has operated under a rate of two cents a mile for all travel except one-way tickets good in Pullmans for which three cents a mile is charged, and with the Pullman surcharge eliminated. Since that time its passenger business has steadily climed. The recent action of all railroads west of the Mississippi to adopt similar passenger fares should serve as a further stimulus to the L&N's business, it is thought. After December 1, a coach passenger may buy a two-cents-a-mile ticket at any L&N station that will be good all the way to the Pacific Coast.

ROSE HILL HIGH

By Ferne Davis

Rose Hill High has decided to forego the pleasure of having a literary society on Friday because of their tests which are keeping them busy this week.

Miss Laura Belle Smith who has been absent a few days on account of the extreme illness of her mother is in school again this week.

Miss Gertrude Wells, formerly of Ewing and Appalachia, has entered Rose Hill High School as a junior. She started to school here November 9.

Rose Hill is making a valiant effort to answer one hundred per cent to the Red Cross Roll Call again this year. It was the only school last year to answer one hundred per cent to the roll call.

Mrs. Olie Anderson held Chapel on Wednesday, November 15, and gave a talk enjoyed by all. Her visits to the school are always appreciated. She has been a frequent visitor to the sixth and seventh grade room this year.

Mr. Fallbride—Come on dear, I can carry you across that little stream easy enough.

Mas. Fallbride—But you can't carry both me and the lunch basket. We'll make too heavy a load. Let me carry the basket.

The Book Sampler

Flush was Elizabeth Barrett Browning's beloved Crocker Spaniel, a little, curly brown dog with the luminous brown eyes of his breed. Besides his devotion to his invalid mistress, which was repaid with a lifetime of adoration and a couple of poems, Flush possessed other qualities, a fastidious taste perhaps, which caused him violent nausea at the sight of Mr. Carlyle, and which surely led him to recognize in Mr. Browning another fastidious rival to be routed if possible. Virginia Woolf calls his story "Flush: a Biography", but that is somewhat overstating the case, since what she thinks Flush thought could hardly be vouched for no matter how satisfied we may be with it. However, this is a charming volume both for its subject and its prose, and in addition is undoubtedly one of the most lucid creative efforts of Miss Woolf up to date.

A striking and sincere work deriving from the World War has just come out in the form of Vera Brittain's "Testament of Youth." It is the biography of young England in all its hope and ambition, crushed by circumstances over which it had no control. The beginning of hostilities found Miss Brittain studying at Oxford. Her brother, her fiancee and her best friends marched away, and she, not to be behind them, became a V. A. D. in an English hospital. Then came the long struggle which obliterated them and crushed others at home. Miss Brittain's solution to this dreadful futility came only after a period of years: to leave the past behind and build for the future.

One very tiny volume of verse completes the works of Sara Teasdale. Though shot with glimmerings of hope and courage, it is preoccupied with death and change. Something of its nature may be found in the title, taken from one of the verses itself, "Strange Victory".

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University Virginia.

Chevrolet Sales Increase in October

Retail sales reported by Chevrolet dealers for the first ten months of the year exceeded all estimates and projections made by executives of the company, W. E. Holler, General sales manager, announced today.

Sales for the month just ended reached 50,988 new cars and trucks, by far the best October since 1926. The figure compares with 58,000 in September and 18,547 in October last year, Mr. Holler stated. This October was 175 per cent better than last.

Ten months' sales this year dealers reported as totaling 550,816 new cars and trucks, compared with 354,517 in the comparable period last year, a gain of 55 4 per cent, Mr. Holler announced.

At this time last year, Mr. Holler stated, we set a quota of 450,000 new cars and trucks for 1933. We felt at that time that the quota if anything, was on the liberal side, because we sold only about 378,000 units in 1932.

But our 1933 quota was met in mid-summer, and on August 1 we moved it to 508,000 cars and trucks. This figure was so far exceeded by the end of October that we stand an excellent chance of selling close to 600,000 units before the end of 1933.

October sales showed surprising strength in all parts of the country, and went considerably ahead of our projection for the month. Field stocks of new cars are now at a low point, and used stocks also were reduced in October.

A CENTURY OF SERVICE

It is unusual, but nevertheless true, that one of the finest passenger trains on one of the nation's largest railroads is in charge, during a part of its run, of two brothers whose years of service with the railroad aggregated almost a century. An engineer and conductor, Bill and Joe Hockersmith put the Pan-American over the rails, Louisville & Nashville every day between Bowling Green, Ky., and Paris, Tenn., it is learned from the November L&N Employes' Magazine.

Now, Engineer Bill has been decorated with the L&N's diamond 50-year service button. Conductor Joe Will get one in two years. The Hockersmith brothers respectively head the engineer's and conductors' seniority lists on the Memphis Division of the L&N, and for many years have worked together on the same runs. They live in Bowling Green, Ky.

Passengers That Did Not Appreciate Service

Most of the stories having to do with L&N service to the public that reach the columns of the Louisville & Nashville Employes' Magazine point pridefully to the fact that such service was enjoyable and duly appreciated, but here's one from the November issue of that publication concerning three passengers who did not appreciate the service.

Last winter 16 prisoners made their escape from a prison camp six miles from Montgomery, Ala. Soon the manhunt was on, with all available guards and bloodhounds from the prisons at Montgomery and Speigener, Ala., participating. Three of the convicts made their way to the Alabama River near Montgomery, swam across it, then crept into the L&N yards and concealed themselves in an empty box car in a northbound train.

The train soon started and the escaped men sighed with relief. They believed themselves bound for the North and freedom. But they were the unknowing victims of a "believe it or not" coincidence. When the train reached Speigener, 16 miles north of Montgomery, this car was set off in the cotton mill yards of Speigener prison to be loaded the following day.

The question as to who were the more surprised when the car was opened, the prison guards or the escaped convict passengers, has never been settled, but the guards were the quicker to recover and the extremely dirty and half-frozen prisoners were soon on their way back to the prison camp from which they had escaped.

Pi Gomma Mu Honors Lee County Girl

Miss Alice Roop, Jonesville is a member of the Virginia Epsilon Chapter of Pi Gomma Mu of the State Teachers College at East Radford which denotes honorable achievement and scholorship.

Pi Gomma Mu is a National social science honor society that was organized in 1924 at Southwestern College, Kansas, by Dean Leroy Allen. The purpose of Pi Gomma Mu is the formation of the ideals of scholarship, scientific attitude, and social service in all social problems. It aims to install in the mind of the individual a scientific attitude toward life. Its particular purpose is to send out from our colleges and Universities young men and women imbued with social idealism, trained with scientific thought and encouraged to help others in the struggle for a better associated living.

The building of society is a fine art, and such deserves all the devotion, time, energy and love it demands. Pi Gomma Mu stimulates and encourages the interest of college students to arise and face life with all its problems.

Through the application of science to the more intimate problems of human relationships, we learn to live. In these studies we acquire the attitude of tolerance, sympathy, and broadness which enables men and women of many differences to work together for the common good of all.

Richard Holliburton was the guest of Pi Gomma Mu October 30. After his address, the fraternity gave a reception in his honor.

The officers of Pi Gomma Mu are:

President-Miss Ercelle Bennett, Rocky Mountain, Va.; Vice-President-Miss Nancy Hines, Roanoke; Secretary-Miss Anita Durham, Dublin; Treasurer Miss Elizabeth Parker, Enfield; Faculty advisor, Miss Mary Ealian Coppedge. Other student members are: Misses Missoreni Divers, Roanoke; Virginia Gofarth, Wytheville; Octavia King, Henry; Alice Roop, Jonesville; and Martha Tomlinson, East Radford.

Improvements Don't Just Happen

"Improvements do not just happen," says a catalogue issued by one of the old makers of standard fire engines. "They are the result of experimental research. In the case of fire apparatus and equipment there is probably more need for study and research and test than with any other type of manufactured product. Study first, to determine the needs of an ever-advancing civilization with its different and more dangerous fire risk. Next, intelligent research to find out how best to control the fire risks. And last, test upon test to fix the limits of the apparatus and methods involved."

You never see the real quality of a fire engineers who designed it and the workmen who made it, do. What you see are the non-essentials, steel and brass and wood and paint. The innate values of the product are forever invisible.

They are the result of endless, tireless efforts to make the machine better, stronger, more durable, more efficient, a finer and surer weapon in the war against fire.

It is that which has put the standard makers in a class by themselves. Other makers could doubtless use equally expensive materials. Even those who assemble engines could buy the best of parts and have them properly put together. And the finished engine would look well. It would, for a time, probably even act well. But there would come a day when something failed at the wrong moment, because the invisible value wasn't there. And property, perhaps lives would be destroyed as the result.

These invisible values, unseen as they are, constitute the greatest value to be sought by a community in maintaining its fire protection.

We read in an English magazine "good anti-cold remedy," called the Scotchman's cure. Go to bed with a bottle of whisky, a jar of hot water and a silk hat. Place the silk hat on one of the bed posts at the foot. Drink the whiskey and water until you can see three hats, by which time all danger will have been averted.

Spinster—So the waiter says to me, "How would you like your rice?"

Friend—Yes, dearie, go on.

Spinster—So I says wistfully, "thrown at me."

"No, Sir," said the clerk, "we can't let you have a room unless you take half of a private dining room. There's a screen across it and a young lady has the other half of the room, but I guess she won't bother you."

The salesman agreed that it would do in a pinch.

A half hour later he ran into the corridor wide eyed and pale.

"Hey," he yelled to the clerk, "that woman's dead."

"I know it," said the clerk, "but how did you find out?"

A Good Resolution For 1934

It's a little early yet for New Year's resolutions, but here's one worth considering, "I'll do my part to reduce fire waste in 1934."

If a hundred million Americans did resolve that, and didn't drop it along about the second week of January with the resolution concerning smoking, the nation would have a splendid start toward winning a difficult and ancient fight. We have long been the most prodigal of people when it comes to fire. We've sacrificed thousands of lives and millions of dollars to it, preci ely as the people of the pre-christian era sacrificed their victims to the god of flame. In those days the reason was superstition in ours it is a combination of ignorance and laziness. And one is as reprehensible as the other.

Fires mean high tax rates. They mean destroyed jobs and opportunities. They mean bankruptcy and privation and want. They mean terror and misery and disaster. They mean stultification and despair. They've ruined whole communities. Their total economic waste can't be expressed accurately in figures, the direct loss comes to between four hundred and five hundred million a year, and the indirect waste is several times as great.

Conquering fire in 1934 would give recovery a might impetus. It would save jobs and payrolls and homes and farms and producing industries. It would keep money at work that would otherwise be destroyed and made useless. Make that resolution!

ARE YOU LUCKY

If you think so, buy yourself a chance to win the one hundred dollars which will be given away by the American Legion in St. Charles on the night of December 23, 1933. A twenty-five cent donation to the Legion Cabin Fund carries with it an opportunity to win the hundred dollars. And would'nt the winning of this amount make Christmas a whole lot Merrier? Here is an opportunity to help the World War Veterans Finance the Legion Cabin and at the same time find out just how lucky you are. Donations will be received at practically every business place in the County.

Dont Fail to obtain a chance to win the One Hundred Dollars Christmas gift which will be given away at St. Charles, December 23, 1933.

Joint

Urging support of the American Red Cross Roll Call for members, President Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "We must do our part to keep the Red Cross ready, day or night, for service. TLis great National Agency is our representation in the hour of need, and to which the suffering have never looked in vain."

Every adult citizen of Lee County is supposed to give his or her support to Red Cross service through individual membership.

In just a little more than a week the drive will be over. Let's all stop and think-are we doing our part to help with this great humanitarian service? Is the "Point" of the great Southwest, Lee County, Va., going over the top in the annual Red Cross Roll Call for 1933.

Come on let's go.

A banner is offered the Chapter, making the largest gain in persentage of membership, according to population in the eastern area. We ought to win the Banner. "G" Bye, as Scattergood Baines would say, and "Let's do it."

Joe Wheeles Dam

Construction of the Joe Wheeler Dam, 15½ miles up the Tennessee river from Muscle Shoals, was started yesterday by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

An initial crew of laborers was put to work trimming timbers for the first of the coffer dams on the south side of the river. Near here the TVA soon will erect a small construction camp to house 150 workmen. Most of the workers, however, will live in their own homes in the area adjacent to the site of the new dam.

For transportain of employees living on the north side of the river the TVA will establish a ferry at or near the dam site.

Most of the material for the dam will be conveyed by water from the railroad spur tracks at Wilson dam. For this purpose the U. S. Engineers Corps already has furnished the Authority two derrick boats and three barges.

Wheeler dam will be approximately 6,000 feet long and 50 feet high.

"How did the Smith wedding go?"

"Fine, until the preacher asked the bride if she'd obey her husband."

"What happened then?"

"She replied: Do you think I'm crazy?"

The groom, who was in a daze, replied, I do.

Hubby—Don't you think your gown is cut a little too low, my dear?

Wifey—Not at all. Why, it's made in the height of fashion.

Lawyer—Then you admit that you struck the plaintiff with malice aforethought?

Defendant, indignantly—You can't mix me up like that. I've told you twice I hit him with a brick, and done it on purpose. There wasn't no mallets nor nothin' of the kind about it—just a plain brick like any gentleman would use.

Percy—Oh, hello, May! I wonder where all the pretty girls are today.

May—Oh, away somewhere with all the handsome men, I suppose.

And now we hear about the street car motorman who, after clanging his bell irately behind an obstinate coal truck for two blocks, finally managed to get up alongside the driver, leaned out of his window, and just looked. The truck driver brazenly asked, "Well?" Wherrupon the motorman said, "I know what you are. I just wanted to see what you look like."

Mrs. Heck: "I wonder, Mrs. Peck. if I could borrow your rug-beater."

Mrs. Peck: "I'm sorry, Mrs. Heck, but he doesn't get home till five o'clock."

"NECESSITY IS THE MOTHER OF INVENTION"

Every farmer knows he must keep his produce dry on the way to market. But a good canvas cover costs money and Mr. J. T. Koonce of Kinston, N. C., has found a way to save this expense. He uses the moisture-proof bags in which Arcadian Nitrate of Soda is packed to make a sturdy, protective "canvas" as shown in the above picture.

He says: "In addition to getting better crops from Arcadian Nitrate of Soda, by using the bags, I get a good, serviceable truck cover which costs me nothing."

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q Wacks

Of all sad things of tongue or pen, the saddest are these, it might have been entitled John and Don as they repeated their dreams of the Saturday grid classic at Appalachia against Virginians how foot ball was really played presenting a preformance which was practically perfect, cinching the championship of the Western half of Virginia with practical ease by a 34 to 13 score.

Two of the best backs that I have cast my peepers on in any high school contest this year is none other than Clarence Barker and Clyde Maness of the Virginia high eleven. Barker is a line plunger in anybodys language and can pick up yradage on some of the most difficult plays. Maness is sensational in returning punts and in open field running, being successful in stepping off more than one hundred yards throughout the Saturdays battle and has boosted a simular record throughout the entire season against the toughest of competition. Regardless of how hard an opponent brings him down Clyde always gets up with a broad pleasant smile which is rather unusual on the gridiron, especially in high school circles.

Rumors are circulating now that Gene Kirk, the husky outstanding back of the St. Charles eleven will probably be given a fine opportunity to enter Virginia High at Bristol next season for three years in the Virginia back field since Gene will be a sophmore next year. With this opportunity it would be a good bet that Gene would certainly make the fiffle in great style.

Some difficulty have mingled the plans of the Bonny Blue Cards recently since some of their better players have been released from their jobs, although recent reports reveal that they will be returned which will assist greatly in rebuilding the new Card Cage crew which made considerable history last year.

And by the way, before I sign off, as you're thinging of Turkey and Thanksgiving, have you purchased a cupon from the American Legion on the $100.00 cash prize to be given away for Christmas? If not Why not?

More River Craft For Joe Wheeler Dam

In addition to the river craft already received, the Tennessee Valley has arranged with the corps of Engineers of the U. S. Army for the use of four steel barges, a derrick boat, a dipper dredge boat, a Diesel electric power tow boat, a smaller boat of the pusher type, two small launches and a fuel barge, W. M. Hall, engineer in charge of the construction of the General Joe Wheeler Dam, said.

This river craft, which supplements the two derrick boats and three barges recently received, has arrived at Lake Wilson and will be used in construction work and the transportation of supplies for the General Joe Wheeler Dam, which the Tennessee Valley Authority is building across the Tennessee River at a point approximately fifteen and one half miles upstream from the Wilson Dam.

Future Farmers Attends Kansas City Convention

By Carter W. Wortley

Richmond — Eight Virginia farm boys, students of vocational Agriculture in various high schools in the State, accompanied by Mr. Fred R. Kirby, instructor in vocational Agriculture, Hillsville High School, Carroll County, Virginia, have just returned from attending the National Congress of Future Farmers of America, which was held at Kansas City, Missouri, November 20th to 23rd.

At this meeting, which was attended by representatives of Future Farmer organizations from practically all states on the mainland and the Territory of Hawaii, one of the most interesting events was the judging contest participated in by livestock judging teams from the various states. Monday and Tuesday, November 20th and 21st, were devoted to these contests and teams representing the various states competed in judging horses, sheep, hogs, and beef cattle. Another interesting contest was the meats indentification contest.

Albert Hall and Brooks Hicks of Hillsville High School, Charles Wampler of Dayton and Cletus Houff of Weyer's Cave made up the judging team representing the Virginia Association of Future Farmers, in the above-mentioned contests. These boys were selected for this honor because of the excellent record they made in the annual Rally held at Blacksburg, Virginia, last June. Mr. Fred R. Kirby, of Hillsville, was selected coach of his team because of the high preformance rendered by his judging team at the Blacksburg contest.

The deliberative and business sessions of the National Congress consumed the better part of Tuesday afternoon and evening and extended through Thursday noon. One of the most interesting and instructive was the session devoted to the election of National officers and the conferring of the Fourth or American Farmer Degree upon outstanding members of the various State organizations. This is the highest degree that can be conferred by the National organization, and it is a much sought after reward. The Virginia Association was proud to be able to nominate five outstanding farm boys, who had met the rigid qualifications necessary for this recognition, and whose preformance in Agricultural work has been outstanding.

Billy Brooks of Stuart's Draft, Augusta County; Ashby Brumback of Middleton, Frederick County; Hilton Rector of Chilhowie, Smythe County; Thornton Oliver of Holland, Nansemond County and J. Sam Buchanan of Rich Valley, Smythe County were the individuals nominated by the Virginia organization to receive this degree. Ashby Brumback was unable to make the trip, but all of the other young men made arrangements to be present for the meeting and receive the coveted honor. William Brooks and J. Sam Buchanan were designated as the official delegates to represent the Virginia Association in the business sessions of the National Congress.

The entire party assembled at Christianburg, Virginia, on November 15th and made the trip as a group by way of Chicago where a brief stop-over was arranged for in order that the party might have an opportunity for a sight-seeing trip through that city. Practically all of the expenses of the trip were borne by the State organization as another recognition and reward for the splendid work done by these eight young men and Mr. Kirby, the teacher of Vocational Agriculture, in charge of the group.

Mrs. George Smith

Rose Hill—Mrs. George Smith 35, died at her home here Monday at 10:59 p. m. after an illness of six weeks. Rev. Frank Green of Cumberland Gap, Tenn., conducted the funeral Wednesday at 10 a m. at the M. E Church and burial followed in the McLin cemetary.

She is survived by her husband, two sons, Roy Lee and R. B., and four daughters, Laura Bell, Janelle, Maxine and Charline, and five brothers and five sisters. She was a good neighbor and will be greatly missed, especially by the sick and needy in the community.

Entered at the Postoffice at Pennington Gap, Virginia, as mail matter of the second-class.

A farmer living near town owned a goat that made frequent trips down main street butting against everyone and everything that came within sight. When the tax bill appeared the owner found the goat assessed $20.

Upon being indignantly berated by the farmer, the assessor took down a well worn copy of the town ordinance and read as follows:

"Property abutting on main street shall be assessed at $10 per front foot."

Seminole

Seminole System Regulator is a powerful, Invigorating Tonic.

Be yourself again. Enjoy life at its best. Eat with a hearty appetite, sleep and rest as Nature intended, through the aid of this marvelous remedy. Thousands of run down men and women have stated that the very first few doses seems to piek them right up and put them on their feet.

It is not only a powerful reconstructive tonic, designed to impart tone and strength to the entire system, but it is a constitutional treatment as well and exerts a tremendous influence upon the processes of assimilation and elimination. It also contains other ingredients of recognized therapeutic value which are valuable for their influences upon the appetite and indigestion.

If you do not wake up in the morning feeling rested and refreshed and ready for a good hearty breakfast; if you are not brim full of energy and ready for a good day's work you are not enjoying the blessings of health that should be yours.

It is not natural for people to simply drag through life, never knowing what it is to enjoy a well day. Nature never intended it, so profit by the experience of others—increase your body vigor, eat with a keen, hearty appetite, enjoy a new kind of sound, refreshing sleep and get a new grip on life through the aid of THE WONDER MEDICINE OF THE AGE.

Football Champions

By Joe Gibbs Jr.

Quite a discussion has arose among football fans in this section as to the team considered eligible to participate as representative of the east, in the annual tournament of roses, held at the rose Bowl Stadium in Pasadena, California, New Years day.

It is regarded as an exceptionally honor in football circles for any team East or South to be extended an invitation to play at this colorful event. Not only does it indicate that the team selected is good, but that they are capable to play against any opposition the West can produce.

Since 1902 when the first game of roses was played, the South has been represented by three prominent teams in the pasadena classic, in 1929 Georgia Tech, then a great power in the Southern conference, defeated California by one point 8-7. In 1932 Tulane clashed with Southern California loosing to the Western eleven by a 21-12 score. Wallace Wade when coach of Alabama's crimson tide made three invasions of the rose bowl, and the first year beat Washington by a small margin of 20-19, that was in 1926. He returned again the following year to tie with Stanford University 7-7. Back again in 1921 Alabama ran away with Washington State 24-0.

Wade has made a record during his coaching career that does credit to any man in the game. Since 1902 there have been 17 games played in the rose bowl, exclusive of the war-time tilts of 1918-19 which featured service teams, of these 17 alabama has won two, Georgia Tech one, three have been ties, the Mid-West won two, the East one.

Bob Wilson in a recent sport column, said he believed that Wade would not accept an invitation to the rose bowl if an invitation was extended to Duke. Wilson maintains that Duke is not prepared to face the stiff opposit on they will encounter at the bowl.

Stanford has been chosen to represent the West after their win over California Saturday, and any team that battles Stanford will have a real scrap, ond only Wade himself, vetearn of many gridiron tilts knows what it will take to win.

In the East, Army and Princeton continue along the glory road, they too are logical contenders for the new year game, it is more than likely than one of the splendid teams will receive the bid. Whoever goes it promises to a spectacular event, and national honors for the lucky team.

Mrs. Bernice Cooper is on the sick list this week.

An English temperance lecturer was concluding his address. "Friends," he said, "I have lived here all my life. In this town there are fifty taverns, and I am proud to say I have never been in one of them."

From the back of the hall came the question, "And which one is that?"

Boss—Rastus, why are you so late this morning?

Rastus—Well, boss, it was dis way. When ah looked into de glass dis mawnin' ah couldn't see mahself. Ah figgers ah must hab gone to wuk. Dog-gone eff'n it warn't hours before ah found out de glass had dropped out ob dat frame. He-he!

$100.00 FOR CHRISTMAS

Someone hereabouts is going to have $100 (one hundred dollars) extra for Christmas. The American Legion will give this amount away in St. Charles on the night of December 23, 1933. With each twenty-five cent donation to the Legion Cabin Fund, the donator receives a chance to win the $100. Practically every business place in the County will receive donations. Here is an opportunity to help the Soldiers Boys Finance their Cabin in the Gap of the Mountains. The Legion Cabin is actually a Community building. It is not for rent but is placed at the disposal of organizations aiming at civic and Community improvements.

Why Europe is Troubled

The peace treaties which created present day Europe are based on the assumed war-guilt of the Central Powers. Yet unbiased historians hold that no European Power can escape responsibility.

Conditions in Post-War Europe can best be understood from six books, original and scholarly: Langsam, "The World Since 1914"-a new book of basic importance; Dickinson, "The International Anarchy, 1904-14"-one of the most penetrating and fascinating accounts; Fay, "The Orgins of the World War," Vol. II-the best comprehensive treatment in any language; Scott, "Five Weeks: The Surge of Public opinion on the Eve of the World War" the most satisfactory brief military history; and Lasswell, "Propaganda Technin the World War"-e scientific analysis of methods employed by the Powers.

These references constitutes part of a new directed reading course so flexible as to serve almost any interested person, whether casual reader or serious student. Many other subjects are represented among these courses, Readers of the NEWS are invited to apply for information about to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Junior came home from his first day at school. "Well; son," greeted his father, "how did you like it?"

"Aw, they ask me too many questions," replied the young edition. "First they asked me my name, and I told them. Then they asked me your name, and I told them. Then they asked me where I was born. I didn't want to be a sissy and say it was in a maternity ward, so I just told-'em Yankee Stadium."

Nolle—How did you get out of admitting that your father was electrocuted?

Prosse—I said he occupied the chair of applied electricity at one of our public institutions.

ANN GAUJOT WINS WATCH

Small attendance was reported at both church services Sunday due to the extreme cold weather.

"Wives are sold in the Fiji Island for $5 each."

"Shame isn't it?"

"Yep," growled the grouchy bachelor, "more profiteering!"

First Student: I see you're getting better marks lately. How's that?"

Second Student: "My dad's on a trip so I do all my work myself."

W. M. U. Group Meeting

Rose Hill—The Woman's Missionary Union of Powell River Association held their annual group meeting with Silverleaf Baptist Church, November 11. A very interesting program was rendered. The theme for the day was "The Quest." Miss Louise Fletcher from the Good Will Center of Norton gave the Missionary address. Lunch was served at the Church and in the afternoon, Hardy's Creek Baptist W. M. U. presented the playet "We Must not Fail." After the program Mrs. J. C. Garrett of Silverleaf Church invited the Association W. M. U. to her home for a social hour and a surprise shower which was planned by the W. M. U. of Powell River for their Superintendent, Mrs. Mae Tomlinson Shackleford who is a recent bride.

The lovely country home of Mrs. Garret was beautifully decorated in fall flowers and immediately after the bride entered (not knowing the social hour was in her honor) Miss Rhee Grabeel sang, "I Love You." Little Wyonna Edds, two years old, came in dressed in a lovely whith dress carrying a little basket of white flowers scattering rose petals as she came following came the little bride, Virginia Lee Grabeel, on the arm of Master George Garrett. The little bride wore a lovely white dress with the long veil carrying the brides bouquet and a they came they kneeled in front of Mrs. Shackleford and the gifts were showered around them. The little bridal party assisted Mrs. Shackleford in opening the gifts.

Future Farmers

Rose Hill—The Rose Hill Chapter of the Future Farmers of America met Friday, November 17th, 1933 with all members present. The president called the meeting to order and the opening ceremony was given. The meeting was devoted entirely to thrift. The following program was presented:

Devotionals-Julian Saylor.

F. F. A. Song-By Chapter.

"I Am Thrift" - Earl Flanary.

B "Five Cents A Day"-Bruce Harber

Discussion of Thrift-Robert Edens.

"How We Can Make Our Program Better"-Joe Debusk.

Music-Ralph Hobbs.

Closing Ceremony-Chapter Officers.

"What terrible crime has this man committed?"

"He has done nothing. He was merely an innocent bystander when Tough Jim tried to kill a man, and we are holding him as a witness."

"And where's tough Jim?"

"He's out on bail."

"I WOULDN'T FARM WITHOUT A TELEPHONE!"

"My telephone saves me lots of time, labor and money", one farmer said. "I buy, sell and get the markets over the telephone. It has been very useful in calling the doctor. There is never a day goes by that we don't use the telephone to some advantage."

In a single emergency, your telephone may be worth more than it costs in a lifetime.

The Book Sampler

William McFee, who gave us "Casuals of the Sea" and "The Harbourmaster" to our everlasting gratitude, has turned out another novel, "No Castle in Spain." "No Castle in Spain" isn't a bad novel, for Mr. McFee cannot hide the light of his understanding of life even under a bushel of a plot which might be mistaken for movie clap-trap. A business girl called Yvonne elopes to South America with a scion of the de Manningbury family and finds it little to her liking, so the hero, you can imagine the sort of thing. On the other hand, the pictured contrast between North and South America civilizations gives color and value. If this were someone else's we'd enjoy it; it is only in comparison with the author's previous work that the book suffers.

At the age of forty-five, Mr. Darlington thought he was safely past certain follies of youth, and perhaps he might have been if he had stayed in his accustomed circles in New York. But younger brother Dan got himself into a mess somewhere out Manila way, and Mr. Darlington set out to rescue him. He found that West was West, but that the East was bad medicine for a white man's fibre. "Mr. Darlington's Dangerous Age" by Isa Glenn has its points.

Our poets are at it again: Edwin Arlington Robinson handles the triangle of "Talifer" with his head instead of his heart, but with his usual competent versification; and Robinson Jeffers in "Give Your Heart to the Hawks" manages to get his characters into another sonorously phrased mess, this time a little matter of fratricide and other unpleasant complicatians. And Virginia - born Abe Craddock Edmunds, who raised our hopes with "The Renaissance", dashes them by dwelling long and lovingly upon grotesque travesties of humanity, "Five Men at the Battle of Rheims."

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University Virginia.

"Not like others"

"I HUNTED all day long... and just knocked 'em cold.
"I smoke Chesterfields all the time and I'll tell the world... they're milder!"

Feared an Operation

Cincinnati Woman Rejoices Over Results of Scalf's Indian River Tonic.

Mrs. George Jefferson, 4510 LaFayette Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio, says:

"About three years ago I was in very poor health. I suffered such dreadful misery in my sides and back I was unable to do my housework. I went to four different doctors, and each of them advised me that an operation would be my only means of relief.

I dreaded an operation so much that I hesitated until I hardly knew what to do, but was about to make up my mind to go to a hospital and undergo an opgeation when I was advised to try Scalf's Indian River Tonic. I must admit that it was like grasping at a straw, for I had little hope of it or any other medicine helping me. By the time I had used one bottle I had improved in health and I kept on the treatment until I felt as well as I ever did in my life."

Scalf's Indian River Tonic is sold by leading stores, or write to New Scalf Medicine Co., Lafolette, Tenn. Price, $1 per bottle.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q Wacka

Now that the final curtain has been drawn on the 1933 football season, lets talk basket ball awhile. The Lonesome Pine League. This time a basket ball league will be organized Thursday night in Appalachia by Frank Callaway, Fred Rule and this writer at the Appalachian Hotel, quite a large number of Southwest Virginia and Eastern Kentucky teams are expected to have represenatives present at the meeting to discuss their possible entry.

A pennant and a playoff series will be arranged for the champion at the close of the season, the loop will be made up of independent teams, although high school teams will be admitted provided they are able to provide they are able to produce an extra good aggregation.

Well, since the rambling wreck from Georgia Tech gave Wallace Wades Duke Bluedevils a few points in how to play defensive football and handed them a defeat that was the most costly upset in the entire Southland and Notre Dame sent Army into a tail spin which was indeed another upset which sent both Duke and Army out of the picture as far as the Rose Bowl invitation was concerned, we will have the opportunity of hearing and reading about one of the bummest, uninteresting New Years Day classics the Rose Bowl authorities have ever produced since Columbia got the invitation to make the west coast trip. In my estimation, which agrees with thousands of others throughout the Southland, the New Years Day classic at Knoxville will be much more interesting and will be attended by hundreds from Virginia including many from Lee County.

Are you an outstanding baseball prospect? And have you made an outstanding record in the Lonesome Pine? Many feel that they have from the way they are writing in to R. P. Stewart asking his personal assistance for a tryout in professional ball next spring. Mr. Stewart represents at least three professional clubs in serving as a scout and has successfully landed jobs for five Lonesome Piners already.

Cake Walk

There will be a cake walk at Smith's Chapel Church Saturday, December 9th at 6:30 p. m. Chances on quilt top, for the benefit of the Missionary Society.

Everybody is invited.

Father—Has this fiance of yours any ability whatever in any direction?

Daughter—Oh, father, he proposes most beautifully.

ANNUAL XMAS SEAL CAMPAIGN

The annual sale of Tuberculosis Christmas seals began in Lee County Monday December 4th.

Tuberculosis is being slowly conquered and the more optimistic of our health leaders are predicting that this great scourge of mankind will eventually be extinct.

Some of our own Lee Countians have been directly helped by this Seal Campaign and all citizens are earnestly requested to donate as much as possible when approached by solicitors.

Wipe out the white plague.

Officers are as follows:

Mrs. W. R. Pennington, Chairman of Lee County.
W. B. Moore Treasurer.
Mrs. S. G. Hill, Chairman of St. Charles.
Mrs. E. E. Skaggs, Chairman of Pennington Gap.
Mrs. W. L. Davidson, Chairman of Jonesville.
Mrs. R. L. Rosenbaum, Chairman of White Shoals.
Mrs. Emma Edds, Chairman of Rose Hill
Mrs. Elizabeth Yeary, Chairman of Ewing.

Card of Thanks

We wish to take this method of thanking the many friends for their kindness and sympathy during the sickness and death of our daughter Dorothy Mae.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Parsons.

"Just as soon as Allen recovered from his injury to his head he came around and proposed."

"I understand he's acted queerly since he got well."

The Great Offensive

In his book "The Great Offensive", Maurice Hindus, the author of "Humanity Uprooted" and "Red Bread", has again given us a timely and impartial view of the contemporary Russian scene. The present volume is concerned mainly with the successes and failures of the first Five Year Plan which was inaugurated by the Soviets. Carefully, and in detail, Mr. Hindus shows us just where the Russians have fallen short, and where they have exceed the mark, in their colossal plan to make Russia a self supporting nation. In his treatment of the subject Mr. Hindus has escaped the bane of most writers upon the Russian situation. In short, he has obtained an objective attitude, from which he is equally willing to dam the blunders of the Soviets, and to praise the good points of their regime; whereas other writers have either been strongly for, or strongly against, Stalin and the Communist Party.

"The Great Offensive" is written in a clear and simple style that is easy to understand. The human point of view is stressed to the exclusion of dry-as-dust statistics. The author attempts to let us see the various aspects of Red Russia as if through our eyes. The quality of his prose is at times pictorial. We are made to see the long queues of people who wait in line for supplies of sugar, bread and meat. The picture of hungry peasants of the Ukraine, who have killed their livestock to prevent it from falling into the hands of the Collectives, is brought to us; and we see the book starved people swarming into shops to buy up the little bits of literature which are allowed them. We see cattle and pigs starving from the lack of food caused by the blunders of foolish officials. But on the other hand, we see great foundaries at work, and Soiet built automobiles, farm machinery, and aeroplanes everywhere.

Hindus shows us that Russia has made great strid in the development of our natural resources. The government has conducted geological surveys which have resulted in the discovery of vast supplies of coal and iron, sulphur and copper, and silver and platinum. There are chemical, matallurgical, and textile industries of tremendous power and scope. The struggle for a new industrial machine has changed the very face of Russia, has converted her into a land of steel and iron and motors and engines and smokestacks and aeroplanes.

But side by side with tremendous advancement in industry, and the imense capacity which Russia has acquired for the production of machines ane goods, we find a deplorable lack of organization which permits people in one section of the country to starve while in other localities there is an abundance of foodstuffs. A search for the cause of this condition leads to the discovery of the fact that transportational facilities are utterly inadequate.

Significant as are the great strides which Russia has made with the machine, those strides become feeble when compared with the great advances, or changes in human physchology which the Soviet has effected. It has been said that the leopard cannot change its spots, but, however that may be, the human beast has certainly changed his ways in Russia.

The U. S. S. R. is a county without God, without religion, and without morality (in the sense that the western world conceives the word.) Bolshevism rejects all forms of mysticism. Strange as it may seem the new man in Russia has lost all faith in God and all fear of God. The very idea or concept of God has no place in his counciousness. Sex has ceased to be a problem in Russia, because all obstacles to marriage and divorce have been remover. Prostitution has become a memory because the cause of prostitution has been removed. The removal of the chief cause of crime, the possession of private property, has cut crime to the bone. Punishment for criminals is extremely light with the exception of political offenders.

"The Great Offensive" is a complete and thorough portrayal of Russia as she is today. It is packed from cover to cover with interesting details of the Soviet System on many fronts, and it will gain for Russia, if read and understood, a certain amount of sympathy and admiration even from the most ardent and insistent believer in capitalism, provided that the believer in capitalism be fair minded.

Sells $91.00 Worth Beans and Potatoes

Ewing — Hubert Baily, agricultural student Ewing High School, grew forty six bushels Irish Cobbler potatoes and sixty bushel string beans from one-fourth acre. The total cost of producing and marketing these crops was $26 82 and the total receipts were $91.00 leaving a net profit of $64.18 or a labor income of forty-five cents per hour. A regular potato fertilizer was used at the rate of 800 pounds per acre. The potatoes were treated for scab by using formaldehyde, one pint to thirty gallons of water and soaking the uncut seed for one and one-half hours. The potatoes were graded and sold as U. S. No. one, to the Harlan Fruit Company, Middlesboro, Ky. Two varieties of beans were grown, Kentucky Wonder and Stringless Green Pod. The beans were planted as soon as the potatoes were dug and were sprayed twice for the control of Mexican Bean beetle.

Hubert was unable to return to school this year, but he has joined the Part Time class which meets twice each month in order that he may continue his study of vocational agriculture.

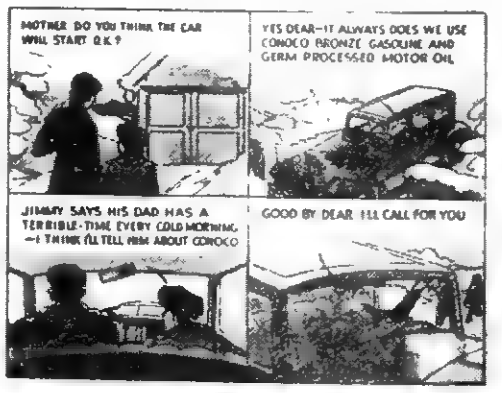
"Bitter Cold

TODAY, SON SO I'LL DRIVE YOU TO SCHOOL"

Donald: "Mother, it is cold—nearly half of my class was not there yesterday." Mother: "Cold weather does interfere with school, Donald, but I'm glad you can get there—thanks to our car." Donald: "But, mother, nearly all the other boys who were absent could come in cars but their folks don't even try to use them in cold weather—'cause they can't get them started." Mother: "Maybe, dear, they don't use the right gas and oil—that's practically the only difference between our car and many others. Understand, Donald, people are careless—they fail to get penetrative oil—found only in Germ Processed Motor Oil made by Conoco. Cold oil, even winter grade, unless it is right, makes it hard for the starter to revolve the motor. Conoco Oil helps motors turn over easily and then the Conoco Bronze Gasoline acts at the first spark and the motor starts at once."



MOTHER DO YOU THINK THE CAR WILL START O.K.?
YES DEAR—IT ALWAYS DOES WE USE CONOCO BRONZE GASOLINE AND GERM PROCESSED MOTOR OIL
JIMMY SAYS HIS DAD HAS A TERRIBLE TIME EVERY COLD MORNING —I THINK I'LL TELL HIM ABOUT CONOCO
GOOD BY DEAR I'LL CALL FOR YOU

Donald: "Mother, I should think the school board would make all parents use Conoco." Mother: "They couldn't do that, Donald, but it would be a good idea if the parents themselves would find out why their cars wouldn't start and buy Conoco. And I imagine they would if they knew it would save them money also."

CONOCO NRA

Full motor protection, especially in cold motor starting, can be found only in Conoco Germ Processed (Paraffin Base) Motor Oil because the penetrative oiliness, called "The Hidden Quart" stays up in your motor and never drains away.

Instant Starting and Lightning Pick-up can best be obtained with Conoco Bronze Gasoline, and without sacrifice of Long Mileage, Greater Power and Anti-Knock advantages. For cold weather starting it cannot be excelled.

If planning a trip for business or vacation, write the Conoco Travel Bureau, Denver, Colo., America's largest Free Travel Bureau.

A Group of Books For Children

There are several distinguished books for children in the list which I have just read. And the rest of them are not bad.

Work for children in this country has been increasingly formed by good taste and beautiful craftsmanship. Printing and bookmaking and taking the important share that they should have always taken in the production of a piece of art that will affect spirits and minds in the tenderest ages. Good artists have been drawn to this work because of their love of it; or they have been turned from more mature efforts because of no economic return and have found among the children who read an appreciative audience and one from which a small living may possible be earned.

My list of books includes: "The Happy Grove", by Younghill Kang, with illustrations by Leroy Baldridge; "An Elephant Up a Tree", with text and drawings by Hendrik Willem Van Loon: and "The Train Book", with text and splendid photographs by William Clayton Pryor. The first is issued in excellent format by Charles Scribner's Sons; the second, equally well done, by Simon and Schuster; the third, more simple, but very impressive with its good, clear protography, by Harcourt, Brace. All three are good books for children.

In "An Elephant Up a Tree" Van Loon becomes an author in whom I am interested. Here is satire which derives from Swift, but which has its own modern touch and a deep-bellied laughter and a lovely irony. It is not a "Gulliver's Travels". It is the story of Sir John Elephant that is to say, Bobby Jones, or Colonel Lindbergh, or the Prince of Wales, or any other celebrity who comes to America for a visit or simply to meet the American demand that it have heroes upon which to shower torn telephone books and other forms of Broadway confetti. If your child will let you have it, "An Elephant Up a Tree" is the book for you. I didn't truly, think that Mr. Van Loon had it in him.

"The Train Book" is thrilling to a special group, but a very large group of small boys, and some girls, who are fascinated by engines, and all forms of railroads, including pullman porters. Of course there are a few engineers and conductors, but they are just scattered around. It is the little boy in the photograph, the pullman porter, and the engines who really give the fresh delight to "The Train Book". It is really the most "modern" one of the books.

A book about which I feel entirely serious is "The Happy Grove" by Younghill Kang. Mr. Kang (or, isn't it Mr. Younghill?) has written the courageous and beautiful story of his childhood in Korea, when the old order was forced to give up its great beauty, its poetic superstition, for the modern ways of the invading, pressing, crowding Japanese. Through the eyes of a lovely, small Korean boy and girl we see the life of a world that is unbelievable beautiful. We meet people which I am afraid will never come closer to us than in the pages of "The Happy Grove". This book, with Korean stories in it, with Baldridge's lovely illustration, is perhaps the sincerest and most beautiful that you and your children will come upon for a long while. It is for those of your children who are going to be more deeply guided by the spirit and the soul than are the multitude of children who mgst grow up. It will move you, too, as you read it.

The remaining books are of the more familiar types, though they, too, offer much that is good. There is "Nicodemus and the Houn' Dog", by Inez Hogan, a good story of the small Southern Negro boy and his family and his dog. The illustrations are distinguished in their early Southern appeal. E. P. Dutton has also issued another good dog book for children. This is the story of a little Scottie, by Marion Bullard. It is called "Mr. M'Tavish". Children who like little dogs will like most of the illustrations nnd all of the story of "Mr. M'Tavish".

"Marty and Company" (Doubleday) is a Southern story written by Rose B. Knox, again about the life of modern young Carolinians on a farm. It is a good story, and only its too frequent use of dialect halts the tale.

"Dark Circles of Branches" is a rather poetic and beautiful story of the Navahos and the war with Kit Carson, the loss of their lands, the sorrows of their people, done by Laura Adams Armer, published by Longmans, Green. This book will appeal to the child who likes "The Happy Grove" and is only a little less worthwhile than Younghill Kang's moving story.

Entertain With Turkey Dinner

Ewing—Mr. and Mrs. H. C. T. Richmond entertained last Tuesday with a delicious turkey dinner. The guests were Rev. J. E. Adkins of Rose Hill, Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Evans and son, Bill, Dr. J. P. Edmonds, Mrs. Delia Richmond, and H T. Ritchie.

Rose Hill and Ewing Students Present Play

Ewing—The students of the home economics and agriculture departments of the Ewing and Rose Hill high schools, under the direction of the teachers of those departments, Miss Anne Gibson and Prof. W. H. Starnes, gave a very interesting play last week. "The Comic Characters Convention," on Monday evening at Ewing and on Tuesday evening at Rose Hill. They were assisted by several people of the two communities, who took part in the play. Quite a neat sum was realized for the two departments.

"What's the idea of raising the price of shaves?"

"Theesa depression she makes the faces longe."

Ewing W. M. S. Meets With Mrs. Hamilton

Ewing—Mrs. W. S. Hamilton was hostess to the November meeting of the Ewing W. M. S. of the M. E. Church, South. Mrs. A. D. Yeary was the leader for the afternoon, and presented a most interesting program on the themes of the week of Prayer, Armistice Day and Thanksgiving. The meeting was opened by the singing of America, followed by the scripture lesson and remarks by the leader. Mrs. T. S. Gibson led in prayer. Mrs. T. L. McDaniel gave a reading, "Meditation on the Unknown Soldier." An interesting story, "Wait a Minute, God is Love" was told by Mrs. W. H. Starnes. The leaflet topic, "Social Movements in Japan," was discussed by Mesdames H. T. Ritchie, H. C. T. Dean, J. M. Gibson, W. S. Morley, Robert Stewart, W. E Blessing, R. N. Russell and W. H. Starnes, led by Mrs. Yeary, who used the question method. "Social Evangelist Work" was discussed by Mrs. D. V. Richmond, superintendent of social service work in the society. Rev. W. T. Evans gave a talk on Stewardship.

The W. M. S. News was presented by Mrs. H. T. Ritchie. The business session was a very busy one, and several matters were taken up and disposed of. During the social hour at the close of the afternoon the hostess served a delicious plate lunch consisting of chicken salad and brown bread sandwiches, potato chips, pickles, pumpkin tarts, whipped cream and hot chocolate. The name of Mrs. W. T. Evans was added to the list of members. Other visitors for for the afternoon were Mesdames R. N. Russell, W. C. Fugate, Lucy Ayers, Rev. W. T. Evans, and John Morgan.

Mother was trying to arrange a marriage between her daughter and the wealthy bachelor. "Helen," she said to the young daughter, "if Harold asks you tonight to be his wife, tell him to speak to me."

Helen noded and then asked: "And if he doesn't ask me?"

"In that case," said the mother, "I will speak to him."

She woke up in the early hours of the morning and nudged her sleeping husband.

"Wilfred," she said in a hoarse whisper, "Wilfred wake up! There's a mouse in the bedroom!"

Hubby unwillingly sat up. Well what about it?" he groaned.

"I can hear it squeaking," she said fearfully.

"Well, d'you want me to get out and oil it or something?" he snapped.

Weather Man—Put down rain for a certainty this afternoon.

Assistant—Are you positive, sir?

Weather Man—Yes indeed. I've lost my umbrella, I'm planning to play golf, and my wife is giving a lawn party.

Entertain With Turkey Dinner

Ewing—Miss Bashie Kincaid and B. F. Kincaid, entertained Saturday with a turkey dinner at their home in East Ewing. Those invited for this occasion were Rev. and Mrs. Evans and son, Bill, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Fugate, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Breeding, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Fugate, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hamilton, Mrs. B. F. Cole, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Ritchie, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Stickley, Miss Kathleen Yeary, John Morgan, Mr. Gardner, Olivia and Fred Franklin Stickley.

A negro had lost a bout with John Barleycorn, and a policeman asked him what kind of liquor he had been drinking.

"Block-and-tackle booze," was the reply.

"That's a new brand to me. What's it like?"

"Well, sah, you take two drinks, staggers a block, and de law tackles you."

Kidney Trouble Yields to Seminole

Says Mrs. Horace Troutt Route 1, Mascott, Tenn. "I had suffered for a number of years with kidney trouble and at times I could hardly go. My back and limbs would ache and hurt so it seemed like I couldn't stand it; my feet would swell until I could hardly get my shoes on. I would have to get up through the night and I had to be careful about the things I ate.

After taking two bottles of Seminole System Regulator I feel like a different person. I can eat meats or anything I want now and I don't have to get up through the night. Friends, I am glad to recomend Seminole to anyone who is suffering with kidney trouble."

Side Quit Hurting, Got Stronger, Well; CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntsville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am very cheerful when I am well and don't easily get nervous. I knew I ought to take something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well."

Cardui is sold at drug stores here.

Nurse, Mother Happy

"I Especially Urge Prospective Mothers To Take Scalf's Indian River Tonic"

Mrs. B. L. Pelfrey, Kimberly, W. Va., writes: "I am the mother of three children and always before the birth of a child I would feel dizzy, have sour stomache and was unable to do my housework. Before the birth of my last child, I was in a critical condition. My limbs were swollen, I was nervous and weak and unable to work and was in bed most of the time. I began the use of Scalf's Indian River Tonic and soon I was feeling fine and dismissed my house servant and did my own work. I had to feed my second baby from a bottle, but my third one is doing fine on the breast. I had three years of training as a nurse in a prominent hospital which is a help to me in caring for my family. I advise all weak and rundown women and especially prospective mothers to take Scalf's Indian River Tonic."

Scalf's Indian River Tonic is sold by leading stores, or write New Scalf Medicine Co., Lafollette, Tenn. Price $1.00 per bottle.

Tobacco Growers

Neal-Dixon & Bane's Warehouse in Abingdon Virginia is now open and receiving tobacco for the opening sale which is December the 12th. Bring us your first load of tobacco and we will leave nothing undone to make you a satisfied customer.

When we built our warehouse in Abingdon two years ago we told you that it was our aim to help build the market to a high class market center and we feel sure that great results have been accomplished as the Adingdon tobacco market now ranks as one of the leading markets in the Virginia-Tennessee burley belt. We feel sure the tobacco growers fully appreciate our work to this end as they have patronized Dixon-Bane and Anderson in a big way which we point to with pride and gratitude. We again bid for your patronage knowing that we are in a position to get you prices equal to the very best.

All three of us started handling burley tobacco in Kentucky more than fifteen years ago and our combined experience in the burley game places us in a position to meet any competition in the burley tobacco belt on a high plane. We invite the tobacco growers to watch our sales and our method of running the sale and then you be Judge and Jury as to the best place to sell. Neal-Dixon & Bane's warehouse is recognized as being one of the best lighted houses in this district. This you would notice at sight.

Owing to the financial condition of the country we will say that Dixon, Bane and Anderson have strong financial backing and their warehouse business will not suffer for any lack of money. We wish to extend thanks to the tobacco growers of Virginia and Tennessee for the big patronage given us in the past and we hope to merit even a larger patronage in the future. Come to see us with your first load.

The Book Sampler

November's book offerings include three publications of undoubted but widely differing charm.

John Masefield, the Poet Laureate whose best work has had to do with the sea, tells in lovely, swift prose of a clipper ship, "The Bird of Dawning", in the days when the last of the graceful venturers were racing, laden to their goals across more than half a world. The story begins with the sinking of the Blackgauntets, of which "Cruiser" Trewsbury was second mate, and the vicissitude of himself and his fellows in a small boat upon the open ocean. Then comes the loveliest of these tall ships, whose story this is though the mate is the centralizing figure, and the tale gets under way. There if enough of excitement in this grand yarn, even in its description, to persuade any stay-at-home adventurer that he has smelled salt and felt its sting.

Perhaps you have read "I Cover the Waterfront" or seen the picture. Well, "The Beginning of a Mortal" is a West Coast town childhood which produced such a reporter. By means of isolated incidents, each complete in itself, the story is told, and with the same lack of pose which has made Max Miller's work liked in many quarters.

And now to come to "An Elephant Up a Tree", which is called "a book for children and very intelligent grown-ups". The children will be interested in Sir John Elephant who comes to America to view life and customs of the human race, and the adventures with which he and his friends meet during his stay. But the grown-ups (intelligent, remember) will find a satire which places Sir John among visiting celebrities of the moment, and Hendrik W. Van Loon in a category with Dean Swift.

It all depends on what you wish: the race of the waves, homely quietude, or deeply rocking amusement.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, Universaty Virginia.

PENNINGTON HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Miss Martha Gibson and Miss Janey Fugate of the High School faculty spent Thanksgiving in Richmond attending the State Teachers Meeting.

Rev. M. H. Carder conducted chapel Tuesday morning, using as his subject "Whatsoever thy have to do, do it with all thy might," Rev. Carder gave a very interesting talk urging the pupils to work hard and take advantage of all their opportunities, an added subject of the program was a special song by the Senior class, dedicated to Miss Gibson.

Mr. Kilday spent the Thanksgiving holidays at his home in Greenville, Tenn., visiting his parents.

The Seniors are more or less excited these days, they have been very busy this week placing orders for their rings, and working on a play which will be given before the Christmas holidays. Wait for the date.

Frank Thompson, member of the Freshman class has moved with his parents to Atlanta, Georgia. We hate to see Frank go as he was making the highest grades of any student in school at the time of his departure.

Miss Young was absent from school last Wednesday on account of sickness. Rev. Watkins substituted for her.

Friday morning the grammar grades will begin a series of chapel programs Rev. Carder will conduct the program Friday morning. Parents are cordially invited to attend all programs.

All pupils and teachers are busy just now trying to make our school one hundred per cent members of the Junior Red Cross. In the grades, Miss Beeler's room. Miss Johnson's room, Miss Kings room, Miss Denny's room, Miss McNiel's room and Miss Myers room now have 100 per cent member ship.

In the High School the Senior class, Sophmore class, and Freshman class under Miss Sewell, Practically have one hundred per cent membership.

All the other grades are near the goal of 100 per cent membership.

Prof. and Mrs. Bradbury and family spent Thanksgiving in Rogersville, Tenn., visiting Mrs. Bradbury's mother.

The Senior Literary Club will give a playlet in chapel Thursday morning entitled "The Postmans Visit" The purpose of the playlet is to encourage sale of T. B Seals.

"My boy has a wonderful ear for music,"

"Perhaps, but he doesn't play music with his ears."

Working for the Schools

Announcement in dispatches from Richmond that the Cooperative Educational Association is being merged with the Virginia Congress of Parents and Teachers is a real cause for thanksgiving on the part of the state's educational forces. The new organization will start with the advantages of the name and thirty-years' history of the Cooperative and the educational principals and activities that feature the national parent - teachers program. Forty - seven states are represented by branches in the national Congress of Parents and Teachers, and the membership has expanded to a total of over a million The whole purpose of its work is to promote child welfare through bringing about a sounder understanding of a fuller contribution to education by the public.

Published proceedings of thirty-seven annual conferences, of handbooks, manuals, leaflets and program aids, describe the activities of the national, state and local organizations. They are collected in professional libraries for the use of teachers and lay workers. Much of this literature is available for loan to readers of the News upon application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

Universal Bible Sunday

Richmond — Governor Jno. Garland Pollard commends to the churches of Virginia the observance on next Sunday, December 10, of Universal Bible Sunday.

Thousands of Churches in America and many abroad will stress on Universal Bible Sunday the place and importance of the Bible in the life of Churchgoing Christians and in the promotion of missionary work. Universal Bible Sunday originated about fifteen years ago and is directed by the American Bible Society an interdenominational and international organization circulating the Scriptures annually in 200 languages and in more than forty countries.

In urging the observance of Universal Bible Sunday Governor Pollard says: "I have been a Bible Teacher for many years, and I am more and more impressive as the days go by with the value of the Bible to the world. I wish to acknowledge my own personal debit of gratitude for the great help and inspiration I have received from study of the Bible.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q Wacks

The Bonny Blue Cards are stepping out again this year, at least their first efforts were very commenting, the first tilt netted a victory over Rose Hill by a score of 45 to 34 which showed some great fight, and spirits of last season when the flashing five rambled to eighteen consecutive victories before they were taken down for a defeat, they only suffered three defeats throughout the whole season.

The possibilities this year reports, Coach Tyler Horton and manager Sye Thomas the first exhibition are that the Cards should boost an equal record to that of last season without much difficulty although the 1934 schedule will be a bit tougher.

The St. Charles high football boys who made their letters and who have a promise of sweaters for the past season are making straneous efforts to raise sufficient cash to buy them since it seems to be left up to the boys to make the riffle instead of the business houses as in previous years. A fair sum has already been reported in the treasury.

The new public works donation which is responsible for the progress of the new 42nd street in St. Charles brought into action a number of Lonesome Piners. Add Rogers and Toy Haynes were seen in action Monday with the possibilities of others of the horse hide field to appear later.

Quite a number of Knoxville Smoky fans down in Knoxville were asking visitors from St. Charles a few days ago how the boys in Lee County that belongs in the Southern loop were getting along, and if they expected to come down in shape and do great things next spring, the Virginia visitors were amazed at the interest taken in the Lonesome Pine prospects by the enthusiastic Tennessee and assured them that the Lee County boys would be O. K.

The Knoxvillians were especially interested in the condition of Hobart Scott the boy they are really counting on next year.

Mrs. Grieve—John, I found this letter I gave you to mail a month ago still in your overcoat pocket.

Mr. Grieve—I remember, I took off that coat at the time so you could sew on a button, and it isn't on yet.

Mars—Aunty, did you ever get a proposal?

Aunty—Once, dear, a gentleman asked me to marry him over the telephone, but he had the wrong number.

Hubby—How was the show, dear?

Wifey—I never before enjoyed a play so much. Just look at my handkerchief It's soaked with tears.

L. & N. Passengers Steadily Increasing

Advance figures on the passenger revenue of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in October 1933 indicate that there was an increase of approximately 19 per cent over October 1932, according to the L&N Employes' Magazine for December. This is the second consecutive month in which L&N passenger revenues have exceeded those of the corresponding month of the previous year.

It is also stated that preliminary reports for November indicate a further improvement in the L&N's passenger business. This reversal of a trend that has heretofore shown a steady decline for many months is attributed to the reduction of passenger fares that went into effect on the L&N in April 1933.

Battling Lion

"Tis seldom that a lion, monarch of the jungle, contests the supremacy of a locomotive on its own rails", but according to the December L&N Employes' Magazine a six-year-old lioness tried her strength against an 80 ton locomotive at Gulfport, Miss., recently. Reports of the encounter by railroad employees' describe the results rather succintly: The lion was badly mutilated and was buried.

The locomotive-battling lioness and her mate, so the story goes, escaped unnoticed fro n a circus that was exhibiting at Gulfport. Shortly thereafter Sonny File, whose residence is adjacent to the circus grounds, heard a saratching and snuffling at his front door. Sonny wasn't afraid of the "big, bad wolf" so he opened the door. Then he shut it quickly-two "big, bad lions" were different-and "scrammed" out the back way.

A few seconds later Sonny was breathless spreading the news to the circus people. If he had tossed a bombshell into the "big top" he couldn't have caused a greater commotion. Soon, however, order came out of chase and a cage wagon was rolled down to Sonny's house where the male lion was still in possession. Eventually he was coaxed back into the cage and the search for the female began, a search that ended only when the reports of the fatal encounter with the locomotive were received.

Pan-American Has New Day Coaches

The Pan-American, crack passenger train of the Louisville & Nashville, has recently put into service as standard equipment day coaches which the December L&N Employes' Magazine describes as "coaches of which even the Pan-American be proud and which its passengers will thoroughly enjoy."

The cars, rimed in light green with cream ceilings, are equipped with rotating and reclining seats said to be of the very latest design. Upholstered in green frieze plush over soft springs and sponge rubber, with form fitting adjustable backs, these chairs permit the passenger to sit or recline in restful posure. On one side of the aisle the chairs are double, with a disappearing arm between; on the other side they are single, but all of them may be turned at the will of the passenger to face in any direction except towards the aisle. and there is plenty of leg room in any position.

Each car has a comfortable smoking compartment upholstered in soft leather, also toilet facilities which include a vendor of soap and towels.

The Book Sampler

With the near advent of the bewhiskered gentleman whose jolly laugh and bag of gifts typifies the season the world over, it is time for elders to take a back seat and give way to the children who are his friends, even in respect to books.

Begining with the tiniest, there is "Beast, Bird and Fish", and animal alphabet by Elizabeth Morrow and Rene d'Harnoncourt, with jolly jingles about impossible animals set to simple tunes, and a "Play-Book of Words" by Prescott Lecky, which makes a fascinating game. Then Inez Hogan's Nicodemus and the Houn' Dog" is ideal reading, for the adventures of two picaninnies and the dog are illustrated in such a way as to tell the story in itself.

"Mr. M'Tavish" by Marian Bullard is a slightly more complicated story about an appealing Scottie, therefore for children a bit older. Then William C. Pryor's "The Train Book", with its good, clear photography, is the very thing for those of the younger set who have an instinctive love for trains. And, blessed relief to parents, Gertrude Hartman's "The United States" is a broadly outlined history which does not require strenuous measures "to get it down." "Marty and Company" by Rose B. Knox is a tale of a Carolina farm either boys or girls of intermediate ages should like it, while "Ritchie of the News" is distinctly an older boys' book written by William Hoyliger who specializes in that sort of thing.

Lastly, there are two beautiful books about stranger people, "Dark Circles of Branches", a poetic tale of the Navahos and Kit Carson by Laura Adam Armer, and "The Happy Grove", the story of his Korean boyhood by Younghill Kang. These are just about the loveliest volums which a developing youngster could have at his command.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

FURTHER VIRGINIA CWA WORK ORDERED

Richmond—While the Virginia Civil Works Administration gave its approval today to 105 additional projects, the public works advisor board for Virginia received word from Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, to go right ahead with its public works program.

Col. James A. Anderson, engineer of the state advisory board, immediately took steps to pass the news on to localities which have hesitated to apply for loans for fear of being turned down.

Twelve Virginia towns and cities have applied to the Civil Works Administration for funds for the construction or improvement of airports. Improvement of existing airports are sought by Winchester, Bristol, Waynesboro, Waverly, Richmond, Lynchburg, Danville, Martinsville and Emporia.

The projects included:

Lee—repairs poor farm, $4,624, 4,660 man hours.

Tazewell—CWA set-up, $225, 360 man hours.

Washington — school grounds, $5 009, 7,970 man hours.

Bonny Blue

By Joe Gibbs Jr.

Miss Pauline Cross was host to a number of friends at her party Saturday night, everyone enjoyed the games and refreshments immensly.

Miss Mary Galbraith entertained with a party last Saturday night.

Rev. W. P. Castrwood of Big Stone, Gap was here Sunday night, to preside over the quarterly conference of the local Church.

Rev. E. L. Crump has returned from a short vacation at his home in Memphis, Tenn.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Barrow have decided to make their permanent home here.

The Young Ladies Bible Class held their monthly meeting Monday night.

At the present writing the school here is closed because of slight defects in the heating arrangement.

Rev. Robert McCulley of Hamilton, Miss., is visiting relatives here.

Miss Helen Bryson was the week end guests of Miss Kathleen Bays of Pennington Gap.

Francis Holmes and John Slover were visiting in St. Charles Sunday night.

At the Young people's Service Sunday night Paul Barrow and Curtis Wilson, discussed the influence of literature, both topics were well delivered, outlining facts that all well read persons should consider. Mr. Barrow said: Literature in itself if the proper sort, is culture and refinement, throughout the well read person you may be assured of finding one who is properly informed on the leading issues of the day, economical and otherwise. Good literature he said, consitutes the principals of good morals and sound thinking, only through clean literature is it possible to provide the essential basis of good education and promote the correct channel necessary for the right expressions to flow.

Mr. Wilson spoke at length on the type of reading best suitable for young people, he named several selections of extreme value as good reading material.

Bonny Blue is busy preparing for old Santa Claus again, and with that event comes the same old story "what shall I buy for Christmas presents?"

I hope no serious cases of brain fever develops this year, but who knows? Well have to admit it certainly is a great worry.

Announcing

NEW FORD V·8 for 1934

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The New Ford V-8 for 1934 is now on display at the showrooms of Ford dealers. Surpassing even the great Ford of 1933 in economy, beauty and comfort, it is truly the car of this modern age—the culmination of thirty years Ford progress. It combines the proved performance of the V-8 cylinder engine with two important new features—Dual Carburetion and perfected Clear-vision Ventilation. See this car today and drive it at the first opportunity.

OUTSTANDING IMPROVEMENTS IN THE NEW FORD V-8

BETTER PERFORMANCE. Greater power, new speed, quicker acceleration, smoother performance, more miles per gallon especially at higher speeds, and quicker starting in cold weather—all these result from the new dual carburetor and dual intake manifold. New waterline thermostats enable the engine to warm up more quickly and to maintain an efficient operating temperature. Added engine refinements reduce oil consumption, further improve operating economy and reduce maintenance costs.

NEW VENTILATION SYSTEM permits clear vision, prevents drafts and provides desired amount of fresh air in any weather. Individual control for front and rear side windows. When ventilation is desired the window glass is raised to the top. Then the handle is given an additional half-turn. This slides the glass back horizontally to form a narrow slot. Through this slot air is drawn out by the forward motion of the car. This simple ventilation system maintains draft-free circulation, insures passenger comfort, prevents fogging windshield in cold or stormy weather. Both windshield and cowl ventilator can be opened to supply additional air needed for comfortable warm-weather driving.

DISTINCTIVE NEW APPEARANCE enhanced by the newly designed chromium-plated radiator shell and grille, new hood louvres, new hub caps. Interiors are attractive, with new tufted upholstery, new mouldings, new cove-type headlining, new instrument panel, new arm rests, new hardware. Swivel-type sun visors in De Luxe bodies prevent glare from front or side.

FENDERS IN COLOR. On De Luxe cars fenders are in color to harmonize with body colors—wheel colors optional. New enamel finish on all bodies and fenders has greater wearing quality and more enduring luster.

GREATER RIDING COMFORT results from increased spring flexibility. The spring leaves are newly designed for quieter and easier action. Shock absorbers are improved. Seat cushions are deeper, with new, softer springs. New type, individual bucket seats provide increased comfort for front-seat passengers in the Tudor Sedan. Adding to comfort is the new driving ease of the 15-to-1 steering gear ratio.

PRICES REMAIN LOW—Tudor Sedan, $525. Coupe, $515. Fordor Sedan, $585. De Luxe Tudor, $575. De Luxe Fordor, $625. De Luxe Coupe (5 windows), $555. De Luxe Coupe (3 windows), $555. De Luxe Roadster, $525. De Luxe Phaeton, $550. Cabriolet, $590. Victoria, $610. (All prices f. o. b. Detroit.)

A Guide to Good Reading

There are two sound principles to observe as a guide for one's reading and for building up a personal library: first, any book one hasn't read is a new book; second, the best books are generally the least expensive. The books one wants to keep always ready to hand, to seek as old friends again and again, are usually those that have served these purposes for thousands before this day and generation.

Lists of outstanding books begin with Aristophanes, Enripides, Sophocles, Homer, Vergil, Plato, Plutarch; come through the Middle Ages with Dante, Chaucer, "The Arabians Nights", Marco Polo, Rabelais, Charles Reade; include Bacon, Marlowe, Shakespeare, Milton, Moliere, Dumas, DeEoe, Fielding, Smollett, Goldsmith, Thackeray, Dickens and Voltaire; and extend to Hardy, Hawthorne, Melville, Poe, Mark Twain, Victor Hugh, Goethe, Tolstoi, O'Neill, Steffens, Cather and Galsworthy.

Such a list of 900 books, "well worth knowing, enjoyable to read", nearly all costing a dollar or less, is the "Students Guide to Good Reading" prepared by the National Council of Teachers of English. Readers of the News may obtain a free copy by application to the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

JONESVILLE MAN HURT MONDAY

George Harver of Jonesville, suffered a fractured skull and other injuries when he fell from a tobacco laden truck as it was passing through Kingsport, Tenn.

Mrs. Ida Petty Died Sunday

Rose Hill—Mrs. Ida Petty, 50, Rose Hill, died Sunday morning. She is survived by six children, Mrs. Ray Johnson, Middlesboro, Ky., Mrs. Effie Stanley, Stonega, Mrs. Mary Fee, Rose Hill, Miss Viola Petty, Rose Hill, Herbert and Ralph Petty, Rose Hill.

The funeral services were held Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the Christain Church at Rose Hill with Rev. Prader in charge. Burial was one mile south of Rose Hill, near McLin's.

That's the second time today I've seen that man following that woman in another car, yelling at her all the time.

"Yes, that's old Johnson. He's teaching his wife to drive, but he's not taking any risks himself!"

Out of The Silence

A productive life must be run on the budget plan. The budget may include time for measure, play, and frivolity, but also ample time for study, and for study, and for time alone with your thoughts.

The mind is like a mill. It grinds the grist you feed it. From rubbish comes rubbish. Eight hours a day may hold down the job but well-directed study and thought made a job grow into a position, and converts drudgery in to success.

What goes into your mind is the raw materials. Then much time alone with your thoughts is the manufacturing process, and the products are the original ideas that come out of the silence.

Black-Draught Clears Up Sluggish Feeling

"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for constipation for a long time," writes Mrs. Frank Champion, of Wynne, Ark. "If I get up in the morning feeling dull and sluggish, a dose of Black-Draught taken three times a day will cause the feeling to pass away, and in a day or two I feel like a new person. After many years of use we would not exchange Black-Draught for any medicine." P. S.—If you have CHILDREN, give them the new, pleasant-tasting SYRUP of Thedford's Black-Draught.

Less Injuries on L. & N. This Year

In 1932 there were 418 injuries suffered by employes of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, an average of 7.65 injuries per million man-hours worked. The first ten months of 1933 shows a 33 per cent reduction under the same period of 1932, or an average of 5.15 injuries per million man-hours. The L&N Employes' Magazine for December, although urging future improvements, points to this record as quite an achievement in comparison to the L&N's employe's accident record of ten years ago when 60 were killed and 4,303 injured in 1928, an average of 33 casualties per million man-hours worked.

Cronic Kidney Trouble Relieved

Seminole has been giving wonderful relief to many suffering people. Read this letter sent in by Miss Eula Knight, 1604 Clifford St., Knoxville, Tenn. "I am writing to thank you for the wonderful relief I have received from your medicine, Seminole System Regulator. I had been suffering for years with gas and constipation, also cronic kidney trouble and had been treated by doctors without much benefit. A friend recommended Seminole and after taking one bottle I felt much improved. I slept well and my kidneys began to act normally; now I am taking my third bottle and I feel assured that by the time I finish the treatment of six bottles I will be entirely well. When I commenced to take Seminole I weighed 112 pounds and now I weigh 128. My mother was also benefitted greatly by taking Seminole. You may use my name and picture in your advertising in any way you think best to help others."

Over Here, 1914-1918.

There is naturally not much in the way of critical comment to be made about this latest volume of Mark Sullivan's popular history of recent times beyond that which has already been made concerning the other sections, except to remind readers of the details which Sullivan has at his disposal for the period of the present book. It does seem as if the style of this volume's body as well as that of the notes which introduce the chapters were a little scrappy and would profit by some polishing, but that is an unimportant circumstance in a chronicle which follows the American tendency to pile up paragraphs charged with the weight of actual happenings. The reading matter of "Our Times" is as pictorial as the photographs and reproductions with pepper the pages.

The matter in the book, as the illustrations, is selected with a view to presenting the times to us the as they appeared to contemporaries, though of course we are not prevented from exercising for ourselves and to our delight the perspective which the passage of the years affords. This, I think, is the chief charm of the "Our Times" series; the thrill of looking back with superior knowledge and polishing our mentality on the foibles of days not long enough gone to seem unreal, taken from us by the analytical historian, is amply provided us in the meaty offerings of Sullivan. The sort of thinking which accompanies a perusal of "Our Times" can adjust itself to the reader's fancy, and having thus the quality of a fisherman's afternoon it is more pleasant than any amount of thinking done for us, however brilliantly.

Sullivan's object is accomplished by recounting in a reportorial manner the actual facts of what occurred by the selection of newspaper accounts and extracts from speeches, by quotations and stories of occasions which show the color the bare events generated in the live mass of the people.

Thus the sailing of the Ford "Peace Ship", to take the example most typical of both the times and the book, becomes in Sullivan's hands not merely a complex network of purposes and results, or the lack of them but a welter of shouting and praying and idealistic conception and personal display, of cheering and cartoon, of bishops and weddings and reporters and photographers and song writers and bandage-tearers and anticlimactic events, concluded by Mr. Ford's own comment that he discovered on the trip a coming market for tractors in Russia.

Everywhere it is the mass of detail which counts --details which stirs nightmare memories or forgotten thrills. The first part of the narrative is naturally not so gripping as the latter portions, for the episode which occupies the period in history from 1614 to 1918 did not become an American episode until some months after its inception. So Sullivan has to deal for a while with the newspaper headlines which created a vague flavor of excitement in the American public mind, and then with the maps which hung on office walls and were stuck with lines of pins to show the advancing or receding battle front, and corner talk and the words whose pronunciation puzzled the man in American streets and caught his fancy--Przemsl, Mons, Aisne, Oise, Oreq, and that classic, Ypres.

After that comes the series of newspapes accounts of submarines sinkings, with the famous German advertisement warning Americans not to sail on the Lusitonia, and of course the cartoons, and selected gems from the controversy over preparedness which became a watchword, with Roosevelt and Wilson as the prime movers and Bryan as a satellite forced out of its orbit and bumping around among the heavenly bodies.

The discovery of the first German system of sabotage plots in the United States occupies an exciting narrative chapter of its own, as does Creel and the spreading of American propaganda. There is a great deal to be said about slackers, and the arch slacker, and "Hinkey Dinkey, Parley-Vous?" and other songs, wheatless and meatless days and rationed sugar, saving peach stones gas masks, war hysteria with poisoned bandages and bomb scaras and hints of deadly germs in water supplies, and in other words all the details which made up the body of the reveriah period and bring back the illusion of it with powerful effect on the minds of those who went through it--over here.

3 about Cigarettes

Not so long ago practically all cigarettes were made by hand

Now, Chesterfields are made by high-speed machines that turn out 750 cigarettes a minute, and the cigarettes are practically not touched by hand.

BY the use of long steel ovens —drying machines of the most modern type—and by ageing the leaf tobacco for 30 months—like wine is aged—Chesterfield tobacco is milder and tastes better.

Only pure cigarette paper—the best made—is used for Chesterfield.

And to make sure that everything that goes into Chesterfield is just right, expert chemists test all materials that are used in any way in the manufacture.

Chesterfields are made and packed in clean, up-to-date factories, where the air is changed every 4½ minutes. The moisture-proof package, wrapped in Du Pont's No. 300 Cellophane —the best made—reaches you just as if you went by the factory door.

In a letter to us, an eminent scientist says:

"Chesterfield Cigarettes are just as pure as the water you drink."

"Chesterfield cigarettes are just as pure as the water you drink"

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

Inspired with a fine start of two victories and no defeats and a fine showing that reveals possibilities of repeating a similar record of last year, the Bonny Blue Cards are smiling widely and inviting some mighty strong competition for near future games, on their tentative schedule are Tab Strechi's Athletic House all stars of Knoxville, Johnson City Independents, Lincoln Memorial Varsity, Norton, Pound and possible Emory and Henry College with the mighty Glenn Roberts, the star basket shooter of the Nation to stop. Is this going to offer fans of Lee County entertainment in the Cage game, I'll tell them all there will be plenty to see in these games.

After a short visit over in the Pound section over the past week where a certain basketball team known as the Christopher Gist High who recently won the State championship of Virginia two weeks ago, I find that they don't even know what a defeat looks like, they haven't lost a game in so long. They run up as high as 70 to 90 points in most of their games against most any kind of high school competion and believe me they know they are good, and will even tell you that they are plenty good and fear no competition. They grow basketball players over there, they enter the court at the age of 7 and at the age of 17 many of them are college stars, and the others are too good for high school competition in any portion of the state. They are angling for a game with Bonny Blue, I certainly want a ring side seat when that contest is played.

The grape vine circuits are still ringing occasionally I understand with discussions of the ups and downs of the Lonesome Pine league of the past season, well, your guess is as good as mine, but I would say we had about six teams in the loop last season that was plenty good for the neck of the woods and any one of these six, if they should enter the same teams next year will have a good chance to cinch the pennant.

Have you bought your American Legion chances on the 100 bucks that will be given away in St. Charles Saturday night? If not, why not?

So long until after Xmas, wishing everyone a Merry-Merry Christmas and a greater and happier new year.

Tom Sims of Emory and Henry college is spending the Christmas holidays with Tye and Walter Harber.

SOUTHERN METHODISTS CELEBRATES CHRISTMAS

Christmas will be observed at the local Southern Methodist Church with appropriate exercises Sunday, December 24.

The Sunday School will have a Christmas lesson and Christmas worship at 9:30 o'clock. At 10:45 a. m. the pastor will preach a sermon in keeping with the spirit of the season. The church choir will sing carols and Miss Ida Gish will offer a solo.

At 6:30 p. m., the Sunday School will present a program of plays and music, Mrs. Boatright, guest artist, will sing a solo, Christmas treats will be provided for all members of the Sunday School regardless of age.

An invitation is extended to everybody to attend.

Shower

Rose Hill— Mrs. Robert Smith and Mrs. Oscar Smith gave a miscellaneous shower for Mrs. Carter Cawood at the home of Mrs. Henry Smith Wednesday from 2 to 4 p. m. After an hour of games, Mrs. Cawood was presented with a number of useful and beautiful gifts. Delicious refreshments consisting of chicken salad, cake and hot chocolate were served.

Those present were Mesdames: Jimmy Seale, Van Grabeel, D. T. Smith, Bell Tyler, Emma Edds, Ray DeBusk, Dolly Ely, Lester Ely, Armour Rowlett, D. L. Bayless, D. E. Pierce, C. A. Bales, Robert Smith, Leonard Bales, Oscar Smith; Mrs. John Gibson and Mrs. Mary Frazier, Ewing; Mrs. Tom King and Mrs. Dave Chance, Hagan; Mrs. Tom Carrol, Cincinnati.

Music was rendered by Mrs Oscar Smith and Mrs. Cawood and little Robert and Gene Smith.

Clarence Carder Has Broken Nose

Clarence A. Carder, son of the Rev. and Mrs. M. H. Carder of Pennington Gap, is suffering from a badly broken nose, received in the annual Junior-Senior football game at Tennessee Wesleyan College, Athens, Tenn. Mr. Carder is a Senior and was playing right half for the Seniors. He was injured early in the first quarter, but kept on playing until the painful injury finally forced him to leave the game in the first quarter.

The Legion Cabin, home of Chester Haburn Post No. 33 American Legion, located in the gap of the mountain, midway between St. Charles and Pennington Gap. At St. Charles on Saturday night, December 23rd, the Post is giving away $100 00. Donations of twenty-five cents to the Legion Cabin Fund entitles the donor to a chance to win a real Christmas gift.

P. H. S.

The students of Pennington High answered the Junior Roll Call one hundred per cent strong. A total of $6 64 was collected for this worthy cause.

Thursday morning at chapel exercise the Senior Literary Club presented a playlet which told the origin of the christmas seal After the play the students unaminously decided to go out and tell the story to at least two people and in this way help with the sale of the seals. At the close of the exercise Mrs. Walter Pennington urged the students to help in the sale of the seals and told the students about the free passes to the show that would be given by the Lee Theatre for the students in the school and county that sold the most seals.

The new song books for the school have arrived, from now on we guess the air will be filled with music.

Rev. C. F. Watkins conducted chapel Tuesday morning. In his talk he urged the pupils to develop spirits of giving rather than getting.

Even around school we can tell that Christmas is not far of. Most of the rooms are decorated in keeping with the season.

All Alumni of Pennington High School are not only invited but urged to attend the Alumni Banquet to be held Saturday night December 23rd, in the basement of the Southern Methodist Church.

Miss Fugate and her Home Economics classes are planning a turkey dinner for all. An interesting and entertaining program is being worked up, including a visiting speaker. A permanent organization will be duly received into the organization. A good time for all who attend is waiting with special honor for the class that has the largest attendance.

Rose Hill

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Grabeel, Perryton, Tex., arrived here Wednesday to spend the Christmas holidays with relatives.

A special meeting of the Ladies Aid of the M. E. Church will be held Tuesday at 2:30 p. m.

A Christmas program will be given at the school building Friday at 10 a m. At 7 p. m. the Seniors will present "Aunt Jerushy on the War Path."

Jail Break Prevented

By Joe Gibbs Jr.

But for the close observation of Sheriff Giles, several men would have probably been well on their way to freedom by now, from the county jail at Jonesville. The attempted break occurred in the cell occupied by prisoners, awaiting terms in prison. It seems that someone from the outside, had slipped hacksaws into the jail, with these, they had hoped to saw through the bars, and escape.

They had selected an appriopate time for their get-a-way. The time selected was last Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock, under cover of darkness, the prisoners presumed they would have a good start, before jail officials were aware of their absence, however the sheriff stepped in just a bit to soon, and the plans were shortlived. The men are now, once again safe behind the bars, which to be sure, will be guarded very carefully in the future, to insure against another attempt. Mr. Giles told me Sunday afternoon he was in the bath room Thursday evening when he heard the sawing from up stairs, he immediately called his son, Marshal Giles, the jailer to join him. Running hurriedly up the stairs, Mr. Giles arrived to the discovery that one bar was completely sawed out, and another would have been out in ten or fifteen minutes, he said His son joined him a second later at the cell, and they investigated the plot. The sheriff declined at present to give the names of anyone connected in smuggling the saws into the jail. He did state however, that he knew directly all persons implicated in the affair, and hoped to gain additional imformation later on. Marshal Giles said this was a second attempt to break jail in the last two years. The other being unsuccessful too. Both the jailer and the sheriff, were glad to give me any information I requested for the News. The affair seemed to be just an everday routine for them, of course jail breaks are not everyday affairs. Even the present time of overflowing jails and prison institutions, neverless the sheriff was there on the job. His work was done admirably and he deserved considerable credit.

How Some Schools Cut Costs

The typical American high school, if there were such a thing, has about one hundred pupils and a teaching staff of three or four members. Only a minimum of courses, little or no training in manual or vocational or fine arts, can be offered. Even the academic subjects are limited; hardly ever can there be more than two years, instruction in mathematics or a foreign language.

Small high schools in increasing numbers are learning from the depression the possibilities of eliminating small classes are providing a richer educational opportunity by utilizing correspondence courses from 24 states universities and land-grant colleges. When several groups of five or six pupils following separate studies are supervised by one teacher, the cost of instruction is cut. Instead of being confined to about 20 different subjects, the pupils may elect according to their interests and needs from courses offered by correspondence.

In almost every known subject courses taught by correspondence are offered for adults as well as for high school pupils and graduates. Information about any course may be obtained from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

"Like Rubbing Aladdin's Lamp" Says Pleased User

Arkansas Man who called Family in Smithfield, Va. Praises Phone

Mr. A. R. Coleman of Little Rock, Ark., made a long distance call to his mother and father in Smithfield, Va., recently.

So pleased was he with the result that he wrote the Telephone Company this letter:

"I had been away from home over three months, so I decided to call them up. Priceless are the voices of those we love. Through Chicago, Philadelphia and finally to my mother and dad in Smithfield, Va., went my request—and I talked with them, heard their voices. Afterwards, reflecting on the call, one of the most marvelous things to me was this—that out of 120,000,000 people in this country (like a big crowd) you reached out and tapped just two on the shoulder for me, and then granted me the means of talking to them. Surely I rubbed Aladdin's lamp!"

Make out-of-town calls by number after 8:30 p. m. and you can talk as far as 135 miles for 45c.

$73,000.00 Per Year Saving In Operation Of State Institution Power Plants

Richmond — Under the direction of the Supervisor of State Power Plants, Mr. Adolph Wagner, economies have been effected in the saving of fuel amounting to $73,000.00 per year, or over 37 per cent.

Believing that substantial reductions in fuel costs were possible, a survey of the heating plants of the State institutions was made in 1926 by Mr. Wagner, at the request of Mr. J. H. Bradford, Director of the Division of the Budget. The survey disclosed that the plants were operated as efficiently as private plants of similar character, considering the available facilities. Some of the equipment used was obsolete and boiler settings too low, resulting in incomplete combustion and the loss of heat units. Furnace capacities were also inadequate for the burning of High Volatile Virginia Coal. Only Low Volatile Pocahuntas and West Virginia Coal was used.

Mr. Wagner estimated at that time a yearly saving of $80,000.00 by the replacement of obsolete equipment, proper furnace construction and changes in methods of firing.

Between the years 1927 and 1931 seven plants were improved, resulting in a yearly saving of $48,000.00.

Up to July 1, 1933, a total of eleven institutional power plants have been improved, resulting in a yearly saving of $73,000.00.

In 1927 the total connected radiation in these institutions was 465,258 square feet. In July 1933 the connected radiation was 656,840 square feet, an increase of 29 1 per cent; yet, actually 2253 tons less coal was consumed in 1932 than was consumed in 1927. Based on old methods of operation, over 15,000 tons of coal were saved, or over 29 per cent of the total tonnage used in these plants.

Savings affected paid for the improvements in less than two years; in addition the plant capacities have been increased, resulting in better service. Boiler furnaces have been changed, so that Virginia mined coal can be used, and the installation of Underfeed Stokers made possible the burning of cheaper grades of coal and better operation is now had by the use of control instruments.

A total of approximately 73,000 tons of coal per year is used in the 27 State institutional heating plants. 3600 tons of coal were consumed in the eleven plants covered by Mr. Wagner's report. The results accomplished ind cate a substantial reduction possible in the total State fuel bill of approximately $300,000.00 when all plants will have been improved.

ROSE HILL HIGH

By Ferne Davis

Rev. Evans, the new Pastor of the Northern Methodist Church in Ewing held chapel for us on Wednesday at the invitation of Miss Sloane. He gave a very interesting talk and was cordially invited back again.

Miss Irene Loft ce has been absent from school for a few days

Alma Maness has been absent from school because of the illness of her mother.

Miss Laura Keys has been absent from school for a few days.

Jim Bales has not been at school for a day or two. He has gone to Abingdon to take his tobacco.

Rose Hill High has been having a mock trial this and last week. This has proved both instructive and interesting. A new one was brought up today. These trials are being conducted during the exercise period while the weather is inclement.

The Seniors are very busy giving rehearsals for their play, Aunt Jerushy on the Warpath. It is to be given on December 22, at 7:00 in the High School Auditorium. The cast contains Nila Maness. Hessie Osborne, Fern Davis, Thelma Turner, Gladys Shackleford, Earl Flanary, Neale Keys, Charles Haws and Carl Maness.

The students and teachers of Rose Hill High sympathize with Robert Edens because of the death of his grandfather.

The first semester exams are begining on Wednesday of this week.

The Seniors have ordered their rings and are looking for them in a few days.

The agriculture boys of Rose Hill and Ewing are giving a father and son banquet Thursday evening at Ewing. This banquet is an annual affair and is being given jointly this year by the two chapters of the future farmers of America at Rose Hill and Ewing.

A Christmas program will be given on Friday December 22, by members of the Freshman and Sophomore classes.

Appreciation

To all who solicited, and all those who enrolled as as members of the American Red Cross, we want to express our appreciation for their fine work and support of this worthy cause, and for the willingness they have kindly shown in assisting to put over the drive. We thank every one who assisted in any way.

Combs Advance To High Federal Office

Richmond — E. R. Combs, state comptroller, today took over his new duties as Reconstruction Finance Corporation manager of the Richmond district, which includes Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, with headquarters in this city. Mr. Combs succeeds to a vacancy occasioned by the resignation of J. K. Doughton, who is to become coordinator of farm credit agencies for the Baltimore district. Mr. Combs' new salary will be $8,400 a year.

Acting promptly, Governor Pollard issued a commission to A B. Gathright to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Combs, whose vacancy will be filled by Governor-elect Peery upon his assumption of office Mr. Gathright is regarded as a most efficient official He has been long with the state and has been assistant comptroller under the Combs management of fiscal affairs at the seat of government here.

Mr. Combs, who was almost a life long political and personal friend of the late Henry C. Stuart, is a native of Russell county and an outstanding political leader in Virginia. No man in the state is closer to Senator Harry F. Byrd, and no man in public life enjoys a wider or more richly deserved popularity in Virginia.

Beginning life as a school teacher Mr. Combs became clerk of Russell county. In 1925 he was elected president of the Virginia Court Clerks' Association. He resigned his Russell county office in 1927 to accept that of state comptroller at Richmond. He is a member of the state finance board and of the board of sinking fund commissioners of Virginia. Before coming with the state he was a director in the First National Bank of Lebanon and vice-president and director of the People's Bank of Cleveland.

In the advancement of Mr. Combs to federal office Virginia loses a tireless, efficient and highly honored servant. No man in the service of the state is more popular. He is regarded as one who would lend dignity to any office,

Junior Class to Hold Exhibit

On Friday night December 22, the Junior History class of Pennington High School, under the direction of Miss Martha Gibson, will hold an exhibit of the work completed in the study of Lee county. The exhibit room will be open one hour before and after the Senior play.

Poor Married Man Friday, December 22

Friday night December 22nd, the Seniors will present a three act comedy entitled The "Poor Married Man" by Walter Ben Harr. The poor married man is played by Ralph Resnic.

A professor has married a charming young lady whose mother insists on accompanying the pair to their new home, much to to the disgust of the groom. His friends mistake the mother for the bride and relate to the professor sundry escapades of the mother's husbands and her daughter. Professor Wise naturally thinks they are referring to his wife instead of her mother. A dashing college boy and a pretty reporter add to the professor's growing suspicion. Finally he becomes convinced that his wife mean to poison him. The bride, who has married the professor at her mother's instigation, learns that she really loves Billy, and when the mother learns that Billy is wealthy and that he is in love with her daughter, she determines to divorce the professor from Zoie. She is successful in this and in the first instance marriage is proved to be a failure.

The professor marries again after a year and he selects a girl who will not encumber him with a mother-in-law, but to his horror her innocent old father is trapped into a marriage with the woman who caused all his former trouble, and Mrs Iona Ford once more becomes the professor's mother-in-law. But Billy, who has been on a trip around the world, has located Mrs. Ford's original husband in China. All ends happily and all pronounce marriage a distinct success.

Watt—Your wife is independent, isn't she?

Witt—Yes, she goes her own way, and I go hers.

REDUCED PASSENGER FARES
Between All Points on THE LOUISVILLE L&N & NASHVILLE R.R.
HAVE BEEN IN EFFECT SINCE LAST APRIL

This railroad, joined by several of the more progressive shorter lines in the southeastern territory, was the first major trunk line in America to materially reduce its fares over its entire system and to abolish the Pullman surcharge. Now, since similar reductions are being made by other railroads in the north, the south and the west, tickets can be sold to those sections of the country at greatly reduced fares. Generally, the basis is the same as on this railroad.

3¢ A MILE... for transportation one way in Pullmans with the addition of only the berth or seat cost and no surcharge. Not over...

2¢ A MILE... in coaches. Round trip tickets in Pullmans at from 2 to 2½¢ per mile traveled. Liberal return limits.

Corn-Hog Reduction Plan Offered Virginia Farmers

Because motor cars won't eat corn and greater farm efficiency requires less feed, because European prefer their own hogs to ours and consumer buying power has taken a vacation, a plan to reduce the production of corn and hogs in this country is being offered to farmers in all areas where these products are raised. Just how much Virginia farmers will receive of the $350,000,000 to be put into the Agricultural Adjustment Administration economists have not yet estimated. But both products are widely produced in this state, and many farmers will doubtless avail themselves of the opportunity to cut production under this plan.

Cooperation by the farmer is purely voluntary, just as it has been in other reduction programs, for the government is willing to gamble on the farmer's willingness to take another step toward regaining prosperity. Any farmer who grows as much as 10 acres of corn and 2 litters of pigs may join the movement. He may sign up on more corn and fewer pigs, or more pigs and less corn; but he must reduce the one crop for which he signs and further agree not to increase production in the other.

The plan calls for a reduction of 20 to 30 percent below the average number of acres planted to corn on the signer's farm during the last two years, 1932 and 1933; and a reduction in the size of the brood-sow herd so that not more than 3-4 as many litters will be farrowed and marketed next year. A signer also agrees not to increase in 1934 the number of hogs bought and fed for market above that of the 1932, 1933 average.

Making these adjustments will make it possible for each cooperating farmer to share in the following benefits: A payment of 30 cents a bushel on the amount corn is reduced. That is, if the five-year average of corn production for the farm shows 20 bushels to the acre, the signer gets $6 for each acre taken out of production. Half of this will be made as soon as possible after the Secretary of Agriculture accepts the contract. The rest, minus local administrative expenses, will be paid after November 15, 1934, and after evidence is given that the contract has been fulfilled. The hog adjustment payment will be $5 a head on hogs produced from litters farrowed by the farmer's own sows, provided, of course, the farmer has cut his hog production to 3-4 of what he averaged in 1932 and 1933. If a farmer produced an average of 40 hogs in the last two years, he agrees to produce only 30 next year, and will receive $5 a head on this number, or $150, less expenses of his part in the association. Two-fifths of this payment will be made with the first part of the corn payment and the rest about February 1, 1935. For each hog over the allotted number, the grower will stand for a reduction of $20 from his hog payments.

As with wheat, cotton and some tobacco programs, community committees and county production control associations made up of farmers themselves will administer the program.

The idea of reduction in all major commodities is incorporated in this plan, just as it is in all others. In other words, the cooperating farmer agrees not to use the acres rented by the government, or any part of the land he rents or controls, for growing crops such as wheat, rice, cotton, tobacco, dairy animals or livestock, except for home use, or except in qualities as contracted for in government reduction programs or in qualities normally produced.

Entertained at Bridge

Gibson Station—Mr. and Mrs. White Dean and Mr. and Mrs. Z. S. Humphreys entertained with a bridge party on Wednesday evening at the home of the latter, honoring Mr. and Mrs. James Wood of Roanoke who are making their home here this winter.

High score prize was won by Mrs. Nat Fugate, low by Bob Robertson. Mr. and Mrs. Wood were given guest prizes.

Late in the evening a delicious plate lunch was served. The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. Ray Fugate, Mr. and Mrs. James Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Alva Yeary, Mr. and Mrs. Nat Fugate, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Malone, Mary Vivian Haines, Rob Robertson and Ben Richmond.

Gibson Station

Mary Vivian Haines, Mary Jess Richmond and Bob Robertson spent the day in Knoxville, Tenn., Saturday.

Frazier Collingsworth spent the week end in Middlesboro, Ky., visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Wheeler and family attended the picture show in Middlesboro, Ky., Sunday.

H. I. Willis made a business trip to Richmond, Ky., last week.

The Book Sampler

A widely diverse field of biography and history presents itself for those who insist on the interesting, but that that interesting be true. "Crowded Hours", the reminiscences of Alice Roosevelt Longworth, will doubtless have the widest appeal for the casual reader—it tells a little about the rough-riding President with the prominent smile, but a whole lot more about a girl who titillated Washington, visited Hawaii, where she learned the hula, and called upon the Empress of China in state. The book will also have charm for those who "remember when", as will "Over Here: 1914-1918", volume V of the popular "Our Times" series, in which Mark Sullivan brings back thrills and absurdities of American war days.

To go back a little, Andre Maurois gives a full length view of "The Edwardian Era", which, though it characterizes other famous figures with unusual aptness of phrase, is really a biography of Edward VII. The playboy Prince, generally viewed in his mother's impressive shadow, becomes an individual under Maurois' sparkling treatment. Then quite a while back, there is "The Man of the Renaissance", a composite picture of Savonarala, Machiavelli, L'Aretino, and castiglione, the four men whose faiths, sacred and profane, were typical of Italy's Golden Age. There is a deal of color in this four-biography volume by Ralph Reader, which is the December choice of the Book-of-the month Club.

"Behind the Doctor" is a history of medical knowledge by Logan Clendening. Though it is too much to expect that this book equal the author's "The Human Body", it has points for both doctor and layman, and reads like a splendid, thought at times confusing, romance From first quaint superstitions to discoveries which revolutionized medical conceptions, here is much for your inspection, and approbation.

Every Move I Made Caused Me Torture

Says Mr. N. W. Lakey, Maryville, Tenn., to the Seminole Drug & Chemicle Co. "I have been bothered with Stomache trouble for over 25 years. Nearly everything I ate soured on my stomach which caused bloating and belching and my food would not digest. I would have to get up several times through the night on account of bad kidneys and have been bothered for several years with rheumatism. I had taken several different kinds of patent medicines and lots of doctor's prescriptions and I had almost given up hopes of relief. I felt that I had endured about all the pain that anyone could stand, but friends don't give up until you have tried Seminole System Regulator.

I have taken 10 bottles and I feel better than I have in 20 years. I can eat what I want at any time. I go to bed about my usual bed time and never have to get up until morning. I think Seminole is the best medicine I have ever known. My wife and two daughters have both used Seminole and have gotten wonderful results from it."

Bonny Blue

By Joe Gibbs Jr.

Virgil Wacks and J. C. Yeary of St. Charles attended church here Sunday night.

As Christmas looms near the prospects are that Bonny Blue citizens plan to be any where but here for the holidays. Curtis Wilson, Erwin Henson and the writer will be in Tennessee. Paul Barrow and wife will invade Kentucky, and many others plan to spend Christmas around the native home fireplace.

Rumors that Edd Manning and Opal Fleenor are engaged, have proven to be true. No definate date has been set for the wedding at the present they are too busy accepting congratulations to set a date.

West Virginia Woman Terms Christmas Call "End of Perfect Day"

Mrs. G. W. Lowe of Parkersburg Visited Son in Fort Worth, Texas, by Telephone

Mrs. G. W. Lowe of Parkersburg, W. Va., was lonely. Her son was in Fort Worth, Texas, and she had not seen him for four years. Each year the ache of loneliness grew keener at Christmas, as memories of that happiest of occasions grew more poignant.

Then she thought of the telephone. To think was to act, and in a few [illegible] she was talking to him. The thousand miles which separated them were completely erased as the magic wires linked them together across half the country.

For ten minutes they talked—and when the conversation was over two hearts were full to overflowing. To quote Mrs. Lowe, "it was the end of a perfect day."

Mothers, fathers, sons and daughters, relatives and friends find in the telephone the perfect way to keep family ties unbroken. Place your calls after 8:30 p. m. and you can talk as far as 135 miles for 45c

RULES OF FAIR PRACTICE

For Banks of Southwest Virginia Regional Clearing House Association

It is apparent that a large number of the patrons of the banks of Southwest Virginia do not understand the regulations recently adopted by the banks as a part of the National organization.

Under the NRA code for the bankers of the United States it is necessary that all banks comply with the provisions as set forth in the bankers' code and approved by President Roosevelt.

Quite a few of the regulations are hard to understand by the public. It is mandatory, however, that no bank shall carry an account that results in a loss to the bank or at the expense of other customers. THAT IS A FAIR PRACTICE.

The following regulations will be effective as of January 1, 1934:

1. Banking hours—a maximum of 36 hours per week.
2. Checks returned on account of "Insufficient Funds"—charge of 25c each.
3. Collection of notes, drafts, and coupons—minimum of 15c plus postage on all out of town collections.
4. Minimum discount charge on all notes—$1.00.
5. Charge made for cashing all out of town checks except Government Relief Fund checks.
6. Issuing cashiers' checks—minimum charge of 10c with charge of 1-10 of 1% over $100.00.
7. The maximum rate of interest to be 3% on all Savings Accounts and all certificates of deposits as per Federal Reserve regulations.
8. On accounts under $50.00 average daily balance will be allowed 5 debits items for each month. If the number exceeds 5 there will be a charge of 50c plus 3c for each additional debit item above 5.
9. All accounts between $50.00 and $100.00 daily balance will be allowed 5 debit items each month. If the number exceeds 5 there will be a charge of 3c each for excess items. There will be no 50c charge.
10. All accounts between $100.00 and $200.00 the average daily balance will be allowed 10 debit items with a charge of 3c for each excess item.
11. Number of debit items allowed increase by 10 for each $100.00 increase in the average daily balance.
12. Safe deposit boxes minimum rental of $2.00 per year plus federal tax.

SPORT CHATTER

By Virgil Q. Wacks

From all observations, most every body enjoyed a very merry Christmas, but without a single basket ball game of any kind anywhere. As for the basketball chatter, plans and arrangements for the future games, nothing definite can be said at this time since most all schedules, both independent and high school will begin the first week in January after everybody has enjoyed the football thrills of the newyears day classics both on the west coast and in the smoky city of Knoxville and will have the grid fever and tremors completely off their mind so they can begin to realize some real interest in the cage contests that is fast becoming one of the foremost leading winter sports.

Clay "Cowboy" Barker, one of the Lonesome Pine Leagues' leading sluggers who will join the Southern league club in Knoxville this spring is planning to begin his training some time next week in order to get in real condition for the spring practice which will give him quite an edge on rookie competitors for the left field position as a regular Smoky.

Hobart Scott, the wrong arm lad who has made the greatest record in independant baseball of any young pitcher ever to enter the mound in southwest Virginia in a decade of years is making it regular time conditioning, but the kind which he has selected is perhaps not the best kind for a baseball player since working in the mines has a tendency to create awkardness rather than building up excess strength, although Scotty is expected to take quite an extended period off before training season in order to get in condition.

Beauford Rhea, who will journey to Toledo to join the Toledo MudHens of the American Association this spring is taking things as they come as a lineman and a telephone repairman and who is also expected to be in fine condition when the training camp gong sounds in March.

Rudolpn Parsons and Carl Doyle are doing a good job of keeping themselves hid away in their winter quarters until spring when they too will pack up for the Knoxville Smoky training quarters and to hear their new boss storm out a command; Alright boys, ten laps around the park and make it snappy, well lets hope Doyle gets around.

William—Aapa, what is meant by the law of nature selection?

Pay Your 1933 Taxes Now and Save Penalty and Interest if Paid Before February 28th, 1934

At a Meeting of the Board of Supervisors, continued and held for Lee County, at the Courthouse thereof, on Tuesday, the 5th day of December, 1933.

Whereas, it has been brought to the attention of the Board of Supervisors that there has been approximately only about 40 per cent of the taxes collected for 1933; and

Whereas, they feel that with possibility of work beginning soon in the County as well as the sale of tobacco soon to start, that the people should be granted to February 28th, 1934, to pay their taxes for the year 1933. Should the Treasurer feel that he is responsible for the penalty due on December 5th, the Board agrees to re-imburse him for any loss substained therein. The Board further requests our Senator and Representative to secure a release through an act of Legislature in regard to extending the time for additional penalty.

Whereas, the Acts of the General Assembly in Special Session passes House Bill 10 which is as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Virginia, that the Board of Supervisors in each County in this State may, by resolution or ordinance spread upon its minute book release all persons, firms, associations and corporations from all liabilities for interest, penalties and accrued costs on any taxes due such county or districts of such county for any year or years prior to and including the yoar nineteen hundred and thirty two, that are unpaid at the time the resolution or ordinance of the Board of Supervisors releasing the same becomes effective, provided such taxes are paid prior to June 15, nineteen hundred and thirty four; provided that such Boards may, in their discretion, fix earlier dates for such payments and extend the same from time to time in the same manner. The Treasurer or Clerk of the court of any county in which such action has been taken by the Board of Supervisors, who does not collect any such interest, penalties and costs upon such county and district taxes for such year or years which are paid prior to June fifteenth, nineteen hundred and thirty four, shall be relieved from all liability therefor.

Nothing in this act shall be construed to empower such Board of Supervisors to release any libility for interest, penalties and accrued costs on such unpaid taxes as are not paid to June fifteenth, nineteen hundred and thirty four.

At a Meeting of the Board of Supervisors continued and held for Lee County, at the Court house thereof, on Tuesday, the 5th day of December, 1933.

It is ordered by the Board of Supervisors, all members voting in the affirmative, that all penalties, interest and costs be taken off all taxes prior to 1933, which have not been paid, if paid before June 15, 1934, and that the sale of delinquent land for taxes due for the year 1932, be postponed until after June 15th, 1934.

Christmas Drama at Bonny Blue

Bonny Blue—The most interesting high-light in the weekly program here was the Christmas drama, "Christmas in a Blizzard," given at the church Sunday night, the plot represented a number of passengers on a west-bound train being trapped in a blizzard, miles short of their destination. The story of the method they used in playing Santa Claus to some small children on the train was quite interesting.

Members of the cast were:

Geraldine Bryson-a lively college girl.

Carl Copeland-a serious minded college boy.

Roy Myers-the colored porter.

Irvin Russell-father of the children.

Charles Russell-the business man.

Bill Nightee - traveling salesman.

Edith Barwick - dissapointed in love.

Jeanita Holmes - quite young lady.

Carson Rogerts-conducter.

Helen Benton and Amiel Onkts-the children.

Mrs. Tiltnose—Poor Archibald has been kicked by a horse.

Mrs. Putton-Ayers — How dreadfully obsolete!

Laurel—What is the matter with you; been run over by a truck or something?

Hardy—My osteopath owed me $300, and I let him take it out in trade.

Unwed—A bachelor has nobody to share his troubles.

Beenwed—Why should a batchelor have any troubles?

Union Veteran Recalls Battle Of Jonesville Fought January 3, 1864

Ivory H. Pike Remembers Abraham Lincoln as Lank, Struggling Lawyer Lacking in Glamor

Ivory H. Pike, who often played marbles with Abraham Lincoln, has just penned a letter from his home in Illinois recounting incidents of the Battle of Jonesville, fought January 3, 1864.

In that engagement Pike, a member of the 16th Illinois Cavalry Company M. sent fatal pistol balls through Lieutenant Samuels and a Confederate private.

Said the 89 year-old veteran in his letter to Arthur W. Sword, of Jonesville. "The face of Lieutenant Samuels is before me at this moment-a bright fine looking young man with dashing black mustache. I will wear the scar he gave me with his sword before he fell."

Later in the fight Pike observed that one of the Confederate privates was about to strike a Union lieutenant with a sword, and another ball from Pike's revolver saved the officer, completing Pike's death toll of two Confederates for that day.

"Would that I could withdraw changing the result of the Civil War!" he wrote.

Following the battle in which all federal forces participating were taken captive. "We started the next morning for Bristol, Lynchburg, Richmond, Belle Isle and Anderson prison where I lay a little over seven months," Pike said in his letter.

"The rest of the time, up to about eleven months, I spent in other prisons, among them Milan. There were three hundred twenty of us in the battle of Jonesville. All but the ones killed were taken prisoners, Eighty returned alive from prison, and only nine returned to the regiment for duty. I was one of those nine."

Mr. Pike celebrated his 89th birthday on August 26. His health has been bad, demanding a doctor and a nurse regularly. He dedicates his letters, but says he would enjoy exchanging reminiscences, pictures or letters, particularly of the Battle of Jonesville, with those interested. His address is 204 East Grantly Avenue, Elmhurst, Ill.

Abraham Lincoln was known to him as a lank, struggling lawyer, looking more like a farmer starting to feed his hogs, than anything else."

As a boy, Pike said he would be engaged in a game of marbles, when Abe Lincoln would come swaggering along, would swing his long legs over the fence, and would shoot a few. Then Abe would say, "Oh, yes—you are Walley Pike's boy—how's yer father?"

There was no glamor about Lincoln, according to the grizzled old warrior who now approaching the setting of his sun, gets much consolation in the contemplation of "Forty-eight United States," and and entire South appreciative of "What we did to save the Union and abolish slavery."

St. Charles Christmas Fire Lasts Three Hours Amid Down Pour Of Rain

Amid a down pour of rain, firemen, town Councilmen, Merchants and all comers alike took part in one of the worst fires to halt that has taken place here in several years Monday night about thirty minutes after Christmas which was brought to a halt about three o'clock in the morning. The tremendous flames gutted the whole enterior of the two story frame building which was occupied down stairs by Hall and Myers billard hall and barber shop and in the right wing by Clarence Taylors Cafe. The upstairs was unoccupied, the building was located opposite the postoffice.

The fire was discovered by Alfred Greene who was working late at the theatre and who immediately turned in the alarm. The local fire dept. did very great work in halting the very difficult flames that had a very big start when discovered, for a time it seemed as if it would be impossible to check and too, the local fire truck was giving bits of trouble at the beginning but was never forced to stop, although a fear of doubt led to a call for the Big Stone fire dept. who responded as early as possible but did not arrive in time to do any necessary work.

Very remarkable work was rendered by a number of the local firemen, many of them fighting without ceasing for very long periods amid a sizzling down pour of rain that made the present fire the most difficult to handle of any previous ones and too, more difficulty was continally faced throughout the battle because of the impossibility to enter the building with the hose and quite a number of rooms and petitions and a hall way up stairs would not permit water to enter the center of the building for quite a time.

The building was owned by S. G. Hill and previously since the same house caught fire about three months ago, had been criticised for condemnment by many neighboring citizens declaring it a fire trap. The previous fire in the building was discovered early and was put out before it got much headway.

The total losses of the owner and the occupants will not exceed more than two thousand dollars estimations reveal.

Many fighters the next morning reported cuts, bruises, burns, sore throats,

FIRE CONTROL FOR 1934

Locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen is a common human weakness. And one wonders how many communities have done this in the case of fire. Hundreds of them have undoubtedly permitted to sink below the point of efficiency until a major fire distroyed irreplaceable lives and property.

Any time is a good time to rehabilitate the fire department. But the best time is always "before" the potential great fire occurs That's especially true in small towns and rural areas, where fire loss tends to be abnormally high. Worn-out apparatus, sub-standard apparatus, a poorly trained personnel, these are the friends of conflagration, the enemies of security and prosperity.

Every commun ty should make a new year's resolution to modernize the fire department, provide it with the best of apparatus, and make 1934 a banner "fire control" year.

Bonny Blue

By Joe Gibbs Jr.

Leaving behind a huge collection of empty packages, flat pocketbooks and stomache aches, the good old Christmas season passed quitely away, until another year.

Most everyone here seemed to have enjoyed a jolly Christmas, old Santa Claus was quite generous in leaving them many beautiful presents, before returning to the North Pole.

But alas! Every good thing must end. The holiday is over, so with pleasant memories of a happy Christmas, we plunge into the cares and worries of other things.

Revs. E. L. Crump and C. F. Watkins attended the Wise County Young Peoples meeting at Coeburn, Frida night.

Miss Dorotha Everage Entertains

Several games were enjoyed, and refreshments were served, every one reported a nice time.

The house was beautifully decorated with Christmas colors in keeping with the season.

Van Gogh

In his biography of Vincent Van Gogh, translated from the German by Mr. Holroyd-Reece, Julius Meier-Graefe has given us an extremely sympathetic and penetrating study. His sources were mainly letters from the artist to his brother Theo and to his fellow artists of the Impressionistic and Neo-Impressionistic schools of painting. By means of these he had traced the spiritual development of Van Gogh during his apprenticeship to an art dealer, his service as lay preaching in a mining camp and his career as a drawer and painter. The nature of the documents used by the biographer explains both the short space devoted to the early years of Van Gogh and the reality of the secceeds in creating. Meier-Graefe has given a unified form to the story which Van Gogh himself had told in a disconnected manner, serving thus as an exceedingly capable amanuensis to an unsuspecting patron.

If the sources of the biography have contributed to its intimacy, so also has the easy conversational style of the author. The dramatic qualities of the life of Van Gogh proved too tempting an occasion to present it in any other fashion than the one Meier-Graefe chose. Adapting his style to his needs, he has employed a simple diction and short, well-balanced phrases throughout. If, as the translator insists, the author depended upon slang for effect in the original, this characteristic has disappeared so completely in the English version as to give no grounds for criticism. In the process by which it lost what might have been a defect, the book has retained a vigor of expression that derives from it.

The key to Vincent's character was his capacity for feeling intense love. As a youth he had pledged to strive for the good and never during his later years did he stray from his original purpose. Love to meant service, and what better service could he perform than carrying the message of Christ to the miners in the Borinage? It was not a chilling of his ardor that led him to abandon this career, but complications caused by his too eager championing of the rights of his chosen class. Denied by action of his superiors the right to preach the doctrine of Christ, he attempted a new way of service to his people. He would point them the way to finding beauty in its most unsuspected sources, themselves and their surroundings. This was the second and final form of his expression of love for them.

The transition from Von Gogh preacher to Von Gogh artist was gradual. Deaf to pleas from his family, he remained among his miners and began to draw. Just as limitless as his affection was his need for a reciprocal feeling. This drove him to art, for art to him was the highest incarnation of love. The desire to be the apostle of this creed to the lowly determined his early choice of subjects. Jules Breton, Millet, and other painters of scenes of toil were his first models, and, to show the permancy of their influence, we find him in his closing years turning again to the model of "The Sower", the essence of his painting and life.

Van. Gogh did not remain too long in the Borinage, however. Shortly after undertaking his new career he related himself to the painters of the new schools in Paris. As Meier-Graefe traces Vincent's first contracts with them, he renders us another service in baring the secrets of their art. Impressionism and Neo-Impressionism, the latter school to which Van Gogh adhered, become not just names for new schools of art but movements which the reader is able to understand. In like manner the biographer teaches us to see behind the somewhat awkward figures of Van Gogh's painting's the ever recognizable ideal of former years.

It is not for his skill in the mechanics of his art nor for his ability as a critic of art that we are most indebted to Meier-Graefe, however. He performs his most useful task in interpreting an individual who, judged by his deeds alone, would have repelled us The biographer assumes the character of that strange genius and reveals his actions with such human insight and sympathy that he makes him not only understandable, but even a little lovable.

Burley Tobacco Growers To Receive Aid

On the heels of adjustment programs for cigar and bright tobacco comes a similar plan to aid growers of burley types. Again the Agricultural Adjustment Administration promises adequate rentals and payments to those who contract to reduce production.

Growers may agree to cut their 1934 production by either 33 1-3 per cent or 50 per cent. Those who cut a third will get a payment of 10 per cent of the value of this year's crop; those who cut half, 15 per cent of the 1933 market returns.

A similar second payment will be made on the 1934 crop. It will not be less than 15 per cent if the producer has cut his 1934 crop. For those who cut half, it will be 35 per cent of the sale value of the 1934 crop. This payment, from which is deducted the cost of operating the County Tobacco Production Control Associations, will be made after the grower has performed his part of the contract and has marketed and given proof of returns for the 1934 crop. This should be not later than July 1, 1935. The first adjustment payment will be made not later than September 15, 1934.

In addition, all producers who sign, regardless of the amount of reduction, will receive a rental payment of $20 for each acre taken out of 1934 production. This is to be made available to farmers not later than thirty days after the agreement is accepted by the Secretary of Agriculture.

The plan for selecting base acreage allows any grower who produced burley tobacco in 1931, 1932 or 1933 to come into an association. As a base, from which the one-third or one-half reduction is to be taken, a grower may select one of the following; The average acreage and production for 1932 and 1933; 80 per cent of the average acreage and production for 1931, 1932, and 1933; 80 per cent of the acreage and production for 1932; or 75 per cent of the acreage and production for 1933.

If for any reason a farmer who joins in growa less than his allotment for 1934 he will receive in addition to the above payments, 2 cents a pound on the amount of shortage. Surplus will be disposed of at the direction of the Secretary. The Secretary, may, as needed, adjust initial allotments up or down, according to the estimated yield. This will be uniform for all farms under agreement.

Furthermore, growers must keep tobacco marketing cards; must agree to cut 1935 production, if necessary, by not more than 50 per cent; and must conform to certain provisions about land taken out of production, which provisions are designed to keep idle acres out of competition with crops already burdened with surpluses.

RULES OF FAIR PRACTICE

For Banks of Southwest Virginia Regional Clearing House Association

It is apparent that a large number of the patrons of the banks of Southwest Virginia do not understand the regulations recently adopted by the banks as a part of the National organization.

Under the NRA code for the bankers of the United States it is necessary that all banks comply with the provisions as set forth in the bankers' code and approved by President Roosevelt.

Quite a few of the regulations are hard to understand by the public. It is mandatory, however, that no bank shall carry an account that results in a loss to the bank or at the expense of other customers. THAT IS A FAIR PRACTICE.

The following regulations will be effective as of January 1, 1934:

1. Banking hours—a maximum of 36 hours per week.
2. Checks returned on account of "Insufficient Funds"—charge of 25c each.
3. Collection of notes, drafts, and coupons—minimum of 15c plus postage on all out of town collections.
4. Minimum discount charge on all notes—$1.00.
5. Charge made for cashing all out of town checks except Government Relief Fund checks.
6. Issuing cashiers' checks—minimum charge of 10c with charge of 1-10 of 1% over $100.00.
7. The maximum rate of interest to be 3% on all Savings Accounts and all certificates of deposits as per Federal Reserve regulations.
8. On accounts under $50.00 average daily balance will be allowed 5 debits items for each month. If the number exceeds 5 there will be a charge of 50c plus 3c for each additional debit item above 5.
9. All accounts between $50.00 and $100.00 daily balance will be allowed 5 debit items each month. If the number exceeds 5 there will be a charge of 3c each for excess items. There will be no 50c charge.
10. All accounts between $100.00 and $200.00 the average daily balance will be allowed 10 debit items with a charge of 3c for each excess item.
11. Number of debit items allowed increase by 10 for each $100.00 increase in the average daily balance.
12. Safe deposit boxes minimum rental of $2.00 per year plus federal tax.

Let the car speak for itself

HUNDREDS of thousands of people now own and drive Ford V-8 cars. Some neighbor or friend of yours has one. If we told you what we think of the car, you might say we are prejudiced, so we let the car and its owner tell you.

Economy of operation is one of the first points they will emphasize—the owner will boast of it and the car will prove it.

The 1934 car is even better than the 1933—and that was our best car up to its time. The new car is more beautiful—faster—more powerful—gives more miles to the gallon—better oil economy—is easier riding—cheaper to own and operate than any car we ever built.

You owe it to yourself and your pocketbook to ask our Ford Dealer to let you see this car, and let you drive it for yourself. At the wheel of the car you will be sure to reach a right decision. The Ford V-8 will tell you its own story.

Three Century Old Crop Making New History

Three hundred and fifteen years ago colonial farmers of the Old Dominion eagerly planted in the open field tobacco seed that grew to three-foot plants with short, thick leaves. The yearly export to England had mounted to 20,000 pounds and tobacco had become the money crops of Virginia colonies. Feverish efforts were bent on increasing production. All available land, to the exclusion of food production and including the streets of villages, was used for tobacco cultivation. History in a new world was being made.

Then followed the years of extensive colonization, revolution, the founding of a new nation, peaceful developments and new frontiers, and finally a world divided. Through it all tobacco held its place as a cash crop of no little importance.

From the time of its discovery by the Spaniards in 1492 to its introduction to England in 1565 by Sir John Hawkins, its popularity among white races grew slowly. Accusate history disproves that Sir Walter Raleigh was the first to introduce tobacco to England. He was only thirteen at the time Sir Hawkins made his introduction. By 1570, when Raleigh was eighteen, tobacco was being grown in England.

For fifty years tobacco was used mostly in pipes, and a medicinal value was attributed to it. The London Society of Tobacco Pipe Makers was organized in 1620. But the use of tobacco in pipes fell into decadence in the latter years of the seventeenth century and a social ban was placed upon it in Queen Ann's reign. By 1759 snuff taking had replaced pipe smoking and and the custom became all powerful by 1820. Meanwhile cigars and cigarettes had been introduced and by 1830 were freely used. The paper wrapping of cigarettes appeared in Philadelphia in 1876. On this foundation the industry has since flourished throughout the rest of the nineteenth and the early decades of the twentieth century. Chewing has never been popular except in this country and among sailors.

After "the first world war" tobacco in this country lost its prestige as a money crop, chiefly because the export trade collapsed. When Depression shook man's world asunder the golden weed suffered even more than other crops. Now the great movement for recovery, which has for its aim recapturing ideals of a decade or more ago has set about to remake history; tobacco is taking its place in this new history.

Today Virginia tobacco farmers market the fruits of modern practices: Plant-bed seeding, transplanting, fertilization. And though for years the product has been far superior to the crops of the early seventeenth century, profits to growers have gone down by big steps each year since the world war, until the government intervened this season. Now efforts are bent on decreasing production by tremendous amounts.

The total export in 1918 20,000 pounds. In 1934 a total of about thirteen million pounds, 30 per cent of flue-cured tobacco produced in 1931, 32, and 33, may not be grown on Virginia soil. Nearly 9,000 growers have agreed with the federal government and fellow farmers to reduce production by retiring approximately 80,000 acres from tobacco production in 1934.

Work for Citizens

When the depression struck bottom early in the year there was, through the fault of no one in particular, rush and excitement in cutting governmental expenditures to fit declining revenues. Departments of government that could exert least pressure were cut first and most heavily; schools, health units, hospitals, welfare services and libraries suffered drastic loss.

The great pity is that there was no necessity for all this. Most American communities have sufficient resources to support essential governmental services, provided only that intelligent consideration is given to the problem in time. By means of foundation support, the National Municipal League is encouraging formation of local citizens' councils to cooperate with public officials in uniting the entire community to devise constructive policies of eliminating waste and preserving the most essential activities of government. Suggestions for study of sources of revenue, tax collection, debts, expenses of operation, budget-making and possible reorganizations, and numerous examples of effective work are stated in two intensely interesting bulletins.

Readers of The News may obtain free copies of these bulletins on citizens' councils by request addressed to the Extension Division, Uuiversity, Virginia.

The Book Sampler

Now's the time for foolishness, which the publishers are nothing loth to supply. Archy, the literary cockroach who has written Don Marquis's stuff for lo, these many years, has decided to do a biography of Methiabel, the cat with the soul of Cleopatre. Archy doesn't strictly confine himself to the lady who goes to Hollywood and returns with nothing to show for it but seven platinum blond kittens; it seems that he also wishes to express his soul. Just listen: a good many failures are happy because they dont realize it many a cockroach believes himself himself as beautiful as a butterfly have a heart o have a heart and and let them dream on—archy's life of mehitabel.

There is the "Sixth New Yorker Album" whose contents vie in funniness with the plush one in the parlor. Have no hesitation in laughing, for the cartoons, unlike the gentleman with duck-blind whiskers, aren't related to you anyway. But they are a whale of a sight more sophisticated. Also from the New Yorker comes "My Life and Hard times". It is hard to tell Just what is so funny about the slightly mad people of whom James Thurber writes, but Grandfather, who goes off on a twig whenever he s excited and thinks he is still fighting the Rebels, is one of the loudest laughs since the last white-washing of Huey Long. Other foolish books might be mentioned, but for the fact that the authors intend them seriously.

"Albert Goes Through" is J. B Priestley's satire on the movie-mad. It is a clever little stary, with Albert precipitated into a picture opposite his favorite star, only to find that she has too many brothers to be rescued, and that she has false eyelashes to boot. So Albert seeks solace from a brotherless individual with freckles on her nose. Its slightly pathetic and very human.

They have all been bound over to court to answer indictment.

Storekeeper Kills Scott County Boy

Elmore Anderson, a 12 year old boy who a witness said "goosed" an elderly Fort Blackmore merchant Thursday, died Friday and the store keeper, Emory Brickey, was arrested by Sheriff O. B. Darnell on a murder charge.

The Anderson boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Anderson, died at Kingsport general hospital at 4 p. m., of a bullet wound in the side.

Roe Bagley, who was at the store at the time, told Sheriff Darnell that the boy "goosed" or prodded Mr. Brickey in the ribs and that the merchant then "hauled out his pistol and shot."

The bullet passed through the boy's arm and into his side. He was taken to Kingsport late Wednesday, and he died Thursday.

Sheriff Darnell arrested Brickey at Kingsport, the merchant was brought back here and jailed. No hearing had been arranged Thursday.

Jonathan Bishop

The glory and pomp that was the last French Empire, intrigues and espionage and war with Germany, the heart-rending siege of Paris ending with defeat and the horror of bloody revolution, and counter-revolution, the great momentary figures of the time standing out against tne bloody sky France in 1871, in panorama and vignette, all seen through the eyes of a twenty year old American youth: thus Herbert Gorman's new historical novel, "Jonathan Bishop".

This is a book that grows on the reader. It is a romantic narrative based on actual events of the past and well fills the first requisite for the success of such things-that is, the events themselves were deeply dramatic. It is clear that Gorman took a great deal of pains with "Jonathan Bishop"; the historical details are correct, only slip occasionally through the exercising of necessary dramatic license; the delineation of the actual figures, Napoleon III, Empress Eugenie, Saint-Just the fanatic, the American Ambassador and all the rest-is in general so well done as to make them real people, people that you have eaten steak with or watched march down the avenue or heard speak over the sound news. But it is in his choice of the point of view that the author especially has excelled. The tale is unfolded in its entirety through the eyes and mind of Jonathan, an outwardly commonplace young Bostonian, but one with both a sense of humor and the capability of having ideas. The boy is in the process of climbing out of adolescence, is in that stage of human growth when the sense perceptions are most acute, when the old traditional modes of thinking implated by parents and environment are on embattled ground.

For the construction of a gripping yet entertaining novel no more fortunate protagonist could have been selected. Jonathan Bishop leads the reader through all the chaos that was Paris, makes him sometimes even merge into tne book as a part of Jonathan himself.

Gorman has constructed a many faceted story. It is written in what might be called the motion picture technique, in a series of sharply defined and well-etched scenes, ranging from a close-up of a tall silk hat bottom up in a puddle of blood to the night panorama of the city in flames from the very top of the Hotel de Ville. Some of these scenes are stark and unforgettable. A handful of mad members of the Commune surrounded in a cemetery, making their last stand against the victorious counter-revolution forces. Half-naked women handing out wine. Graves split asunder by shells. Smoke, bullets, death flying above the paceful spot. Mme. Zinh, the woman of mystery, in her moment of surrender to Jonathan in the upper room of a little inn as street crowds without bellow their approval of the proclamation of war with Germany. The Empress Eugenie fleeing Paris in an ancient carriage, the while munching bologna sausage-and many, many more. These sharp pictures drift out of the whole, making "Jonathan Bishop", in spite of spots of unnecessarily ornate writing, in spite of occasional unnatural conversational sallies and empty verbiage, a book of real and moving power-one comparable with its publishers' predecessor, "Anthony Adverse".

As in most historical novels there are two distinct themes, that of fact and that of the author's imagination, or the human. Jonathan's affair with Mme. Zinh, courtesan, spy, woman who is all woman, comprises the latter. This and other strictly fictional touches are woven deftly into the fabric so that the book approaches the ideal to which playwrights handling similar material aspire that of dramatizing actual happenings to such a degree that they capture the audience and make it forget for a few moments that it is in a theatre at all.

After the fifty pages or so that are required to get into the swing of the thing, that are required to take the reader back sixty years and across an ocean, "Jonatham Bishop" becomes an absorbing story that we wager will at times profonndly touch nearly everyone who delves between its covers.

These books may be borrowed from the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

60 UNEMPLOYED MEN GIVEN RELIEF

Employment of 60 men in the town of Pennington Gap, on different street projects was made possible by the Civil Works Administration. Work has been going on a week today, and the streets are already looking better. And the unemployed men are feeling better.

The men are working six hours each day and receive 45 cents per hour.

Mrs. Grinnell—Where is the lemon creme that I used for my complexion?

Cook—Goodness, mum! I must have made a mistake! I just made a lemon cream pie out of it!

He—When I dance with you I feel as if I am treading on clouds.

She—Don't kid yourself; those are my feet.

Pish — We'll miss Smith when he moves.

Tish—Yes, he has the only lawn mower in the neighborhood that's any good.

Watt--How are those two flapper daughters of the Smiths getting along in school?

Wenn—I hear they are running neck and neck.

Enter 1934 On Roller Skates

Having hooted out minature golf and Eugenie hats, the country has been ripe for a new fad. The palm of popular acclaim is placed upon the sport of roller skating. In small and large cities, from coast to coast, adult men and women as well as boys and girls of all sizes have been rolling about at a great rate on eight little wheels. Parks, playgrounds and sidewalks have swarmed with enthusiasts. Operators of commercial rinks report a bonanza crop, and such games as "snap the whip," imported from the ice ponds, are returning to popularity. Fashion magazines have ever seen fit to create modish costumes for the fair female skaters.

Skaters have spilled over into the streets, choosing the well-paved arterial highways which seem as well adapted to the sport as the arenas. This has led to trouble, and accidents have increased seriously. The sport has not only become a new peril to pedestrians, but is a constantly increasing hazard to motorists.

According to a survey of the situation made by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, accidents due to roller skating are from two to five times more frequent now than a year ago. In New York City the mishaps are nearly double; in St. Louis there have been 5 times as many; Baltimore reports a 233 per cent increase; Detroit recorded 122 accidents in a few months. Fatalities have occurred in nearly every one of the cities surveyed.

Although they were caught unprepared by the rapid spread of the crage, many cities are attempting to cope with the problems by forbidding skaters to use main streets and thoroughfares. Some are barricading infrequently used streets in residential districts and creating "play streets" for skaters. These are being supervised by the police or by squads of unemyloyed men. Curfew hours are rigidly enforced Adaptable sections of parks and playgrounds are also in use as rinks. School authorities are cooperating by discouraging children from skating to and from school.

Winter will doubtless but a crimp in the sport for the next few months, but since roller skating is an excellent and economical exercise, it may in the spring become even more popular. Authorities should be on guard.

Mrs. Jones—She thinks her husband perfection and yet she watches him like a hawk.

Mrs. Smith—I reckon she thinks he's too good to be true.

"Why didn't you tell me When he kissed you?" mother hissed.

"Why, maw, I didn't know you wanted to be kissed."

GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAIN CLASSIC

Players from 13 schools in the Southeastern Conference will file into Knoxville, Tenn., this week for the great all star Charity Classic at the University of Tennessee Stadium New Years day.

Many former All-Americans who supplied the football thrills, and filled the sport pages in past seasons, will be on hand to lend an added attraction to the contest. Notable among the former stars will be; Johnny Cain, of Alabama, Don Zimmerman, Tulane's All-American, Bobby Dodd and Gene McEver, Tennessee. Perhaps this will be the last time fans will witness these mighty men of the gridiron in action, especially in another All Star game.

Bobby Dodd will return to his Coaching position at Georgia Tech, McEver to Davidson. Ralph Kerchevial, Kentucky's great and Beattie Feathers, Tennessee's All-American will bid farewell to college football after the New Years game. Several other graduating stars of Tennessee and other schools will follow the same trail. Feathers will not play in the Smoky Mountain game, having agreed to represent his Alma Mater in the East-West battle in San Francisco, California on the same date.

Quite an outstanding array of Coaches will be present to help whip the teams into shape. Frank Thomas of Alabama, Walker of Ole Miss, Stanley of Floriday will direct the Northern Division. Chet Wynn of Auburn, Bobby Dodd, of Georgia Tech, Gene McEver of Davidson, and Buddy Hackman, high school coach at Lakeland, Fla , will have charge of the South.

Once again the North and South will meet on the field of battle, when the smoke clears away the curtains will be drawn on the 1933 football season, and the greatest collection of touchdown hero's ever assembled in the sunny south. Hail to the great Smoky Mountain Classic! May the best team win.

Mississippi Counties to Get T. V. A. Power

Organization of farmers of six northeast Mississippi counties into rural electric power associations, to buy current at wholesale from the Tennessee Valley Authority, will be conducted by the agricultural extension service of Missi-sippi State College, Starkville, it was announced Wednesday by the T. V. A.

The extension service has assigned M. M. Bedenbaugh to his work. Mr. Bedenbaugh is a native of Mississippi, a graduate of Mississippi State College, and has been agricultural agent for Prentiss county in that state. He was district agricultural agent in Mississippi. and has lately had charge of the 4 H club work of the Mississippi extension service. He has also conduced extensive farming operations on his own account.

Rural electric transmission lines are now being built in Mississippi, CWA funds being used for labor and TVA money for the purchase of poles, transformers, wire and other transmission line equipment. The county associations, incorporated under Mississippi laws, will retail TVA power to their members on a no-profit basis. Resale rates, however, will provide for repayment of the Authority's cash outlay in constructing the lines

Inauguration of service is expected as soon as lines are finished and TVA power becomes available. At present, approximately 100 miles of rural power lines, none of which duplicates existing facilities, are being laid out in each of the six Mississippi counties.

A similar plan for rural electrification is being worked out by the Tennessee Valley Authority in several northwest Alabama counties as rapidly as the proper cooperation can be obtained.

bad colds and many other ailments that were derived from the battle with the hose. The town councilmen are making speedy efforts now to purchase fire suits for the department which will be quite an asset to the town and which will be highly appreciated by the boys on the fire department.

The management of the Leecova Hotel rushed a cook to the kitchen and prepared hot coffee and sandwiches for the cold, wet, frozen fire fighters which she heartily donated very freely and which was greatly appreciated.

The St. Charles Supply store was also damaged slightly with one large door broken out and a small blaze that did some damage in the rear room. The town council have ask that the remains be moved from the present location at once as there remains only a wrecked hull.

NEW CLERK AT POSTOFFICE

Fred Robinette, formerly with the U-Tote-Um Grocery of this place has resigned his position with the U-Tote-Um to accept a job as Clerk at the local Postoffice.

Patton Kelly of this place was recently appointed Postmaster, with C. F. McPhearson as assistant.

The new Postmaster says he likes the work fine.

The Tennessee Valley Authority will buy up to 2 million split oak boards for roofing. Bids are to be delivered for inspection and count at the field office at the bunkhouses, town of Norris, Tennessee. Boards must be split and stacked for drying at least sixty days before delivered. Boards shall be delivered by the maker at his own cost and risk. Complete specifications may be obtained by applying to the office of the Director of Purchases, Tennessee, Valley Authority, New Sprankle Building, Knoxville, Tennessee, or to any local postoffice.

Young Southern Farmer Wins Again!

This photograph shows Dan Bickley, 4-H Club Member of Lexington, S. C., with his 10-ear corn exhibits which won sweepstakes honors over all corn exhibited at the South Carolina State Fair, 1933. Second prize also was awarded to this young farmer.

Both of his samples were of Belmont White-Dent corn and taken from one of his club acres on which he averaged a yield of 54 bushels. Mr. Bickley used 350 lbs of 8-4-4 mixed fertilizer at planting time, and side-dressed his prize producing field with 100 lbs of ARCADIAN Nitrate of Soda per acre.

This is the sixth time in seven years he has taken first prize, while in 1927 and again in 1930 he was also awarded the handsome trophies presented by the Southern Railway for the best corn produced in eight southern states- Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, and Tennessee. Since Mr. Bickley first started to use ARCADIAN Nitrate of Soda for side-dressing, his average yield through good seasons and bad seasons is over 52 bushels per acre, a highly creditable record for this young Southern farmer.

Mr. Bickley knows the value of fertilization and gives full credit to the American-made Nitrate of Soda for its part in producing his year-after-year prize winners.
